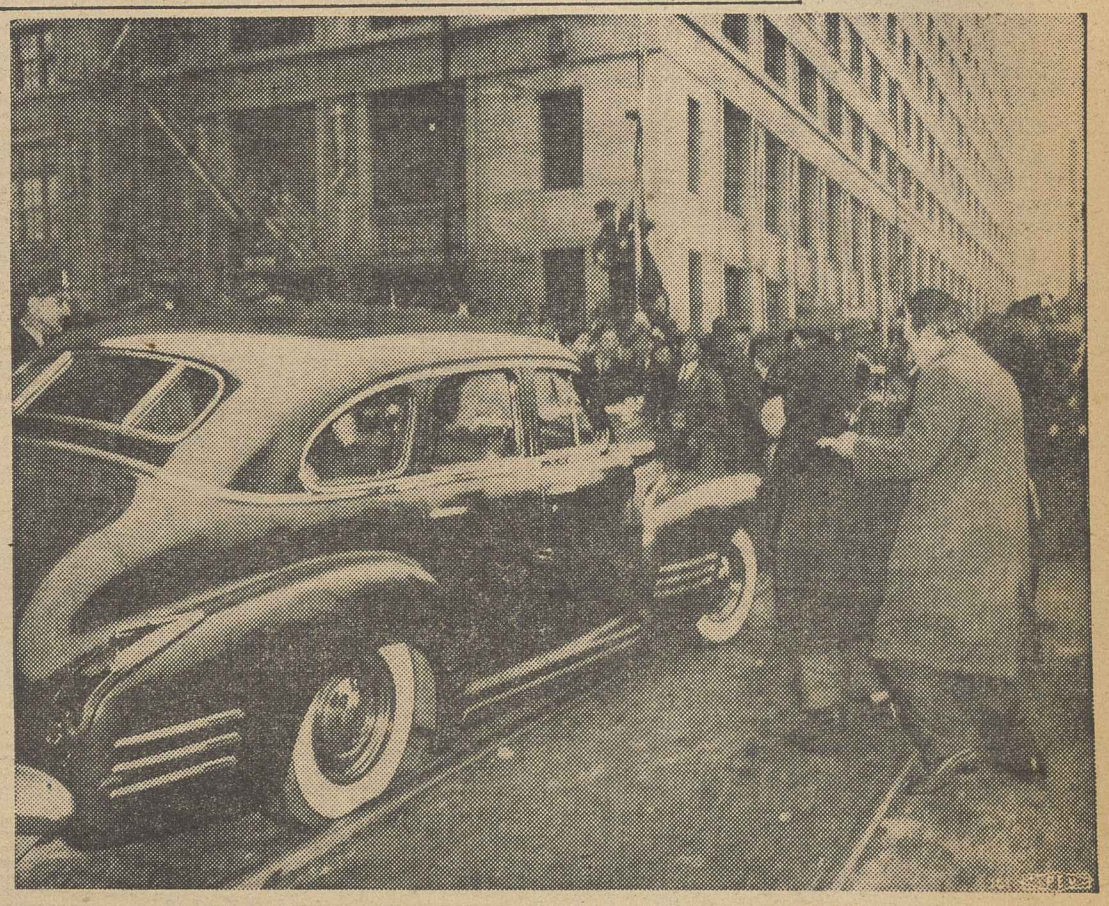
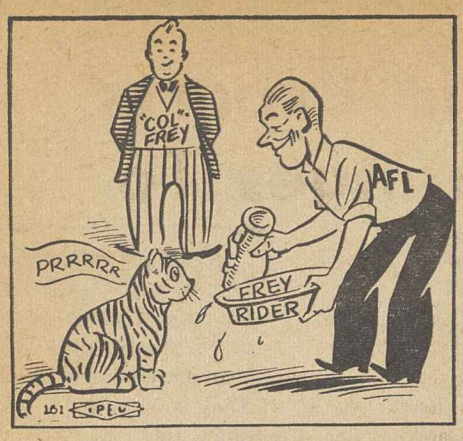
Labor recognizes, as CIO Secretary-Treasurer James B. Carey pointed out, that all the recent trouble was caused by Montgomery Ward "going on strike against the government" through its brazen defiance of the government authority set up to decide war labor disputes.

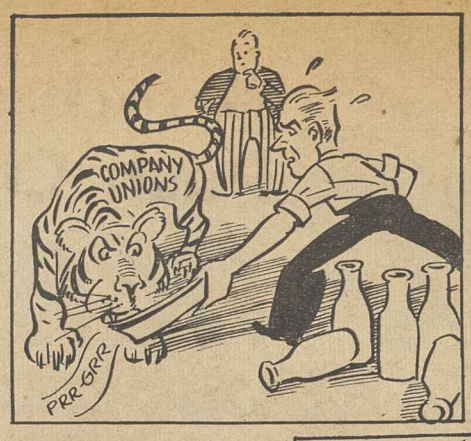
The Chicago employes of Montgomery Ward have a golden opportunity this Tuesday to strike a blow, not only for the improvement of their own conditions, but also for all labor and for united war effort, by casting their ballots for the CIO.

OUSTED last week for defying the war authority of the U. S. Government was Sewell Avery, head of Montgomery Ward, shown above being carried from his office in somewhat less than the stately glory to which he is accustomed.



SWANKY is the word for the car that was driven by $100,000-a-year Montgomery Ward Board Chairman Sewell Avery, as the law-defying corporation head left company property after being ejected by U. S. Soldiers. The Army was carrying out an order from the Commander-in-Chief to take over Montgomery Ward property because of Avery's refusal to obey a Natl. War Labor Board order.





CIO Hits Frey Rider As Co. Union Aid

WASHINGTON, May 6—CIO witnesses arguing against the Frey rider to the NLRB appropriation were heard this week in executive session by a House Appropriations sub-committee.

The Frey rider, passed at the demand of "Colonel" John P. Frey of the AFL Metal Trades, legalizes company unions by freezing all union-management contracts, no matter how arrived at. It has been used to protect back-door agreements as in the Kaiser shipyards on the west coast and in Basic Magnesium in Nevada.

The AFL, which is extremely anxious to get the rider fastened onto the appropriation again this year, is reported to have prepared a "compromise" which, it is said, removes some of the evils but which also perpetuates many of them.

The House sub-committee, headed by Rep. Hare (D., S. C.) is expected to report on the rider fairly quickly to the full Appropriations Body, which is headed by Rep. Cannon (D., Mo.). After that it goes to the House floor, and then to the Senate.

The rider can be stopped if we act quickly. Wire your Representative to talk with the committee members against the rider, to vote against it on the floor, and write to your Senators to vote against it when it reaches them.

Meantime, CIO is publishing a new leaflet, "Company Unions Ride Again," which explains the rider and what to do about it. Order from Publicity Dept., CIO, 718 Jackson Pl., NW, Washington 6, D. C.

Montana CIO Parley Backs Fourth Term

MISSOULA, Mont., May 6—Delegates to the Montana State CIO convention held here this week urged Pres. Roosevelt to run for a fourth term, pledged strong support to the Administration's war program, and commended CIO Pres. Philip Murray for his leadership of the organization.

Among the delegates at the convention were representatives from the Smeltermen at Anaconda, Great Falls and East Helena; Brewery Workers and Miners from Butte, Oil Workers, Woodworkers, Typographical Union and various other unions throughout the State.

Guests and fraternal representatives who attended the convention included members of the Ladies Auxiliaries, Farmers Union and the AFL.

Resolutions were passed supporting price control, urging improvements in the Workmens Compensation Act, and asking for repeal of the Smith-Connally bill and for passage of the Anti-Polltax Bill.

Polltax Repeal to Senate May 9—Mead, Barkley

WASHINGTON, May 6—With a definite public promise from both Sen. Mead (D., N.Y.) and Sen. Barkley (D., Ky.), the debate on the polltax repeal bill (HR 7) is set to start on the Senate floor this week—May 9.

The promises were made during debate on another measure earlier this week, and were nailed down by Sen. Mead with a statement that the nation has waited 20 months already for action on the bill, and doesn't want to wait any more.

The polltax Senators are busy preparing their filibuster. Bilbo (Miss.) has boasted that he'll talk "for 18 months" if necessary to kill HR 7. Eastland (also of Miss.) is ready to take up where Bilbo falters.

Action on this long-awaited war measure is now on deck. A last push to get Senators to vote for cloture (motion to end debate and kill the filibuster), kill all amendments and insist on passage of the bill, will put it over.

Republican Senators, who like to pose as enemies of the polltax and then forget to vote for repeal, must get special attention. Don't neglect the Democrats either—no matter how many times you've wired them.

Ask Probe Of Grt. Lakes Shipping

Detroit, May 6—Vice Admiral R. R. Waesche, U. S. Coast Guard commandant, was called upon this week by the Natl. Maritime Union to conduct an immediate investigation on the filing of waivers by Great Lakes masters.

The NMU pressed its demand as an outgrowth of the Lakes tragedy, last April 27, when ten men lost their lives as a result of a collision that sent the freighters James H. Reed and Frank E. Vigor to the bottom of Lake Erie.

"We have reason to believe," said a telegram sent to Waesche by NMU Cleveland Port Agent Frank Jones, "that these vessels were not crewed with qualified seamen and that substitions were made with inexperienced seamen."

Pitt School Workers Win $135,000 Gain

Pittsburgh, May 6 — An impartial arbitration committee this week awarded 1,150 custodial workers of the Pittsburgh Board of Education organized into the CIO State, County and Municipal Workers, $135,000 in salary increases. All women custodial workers will get an increase of 40c a day; men will get 50c, 55c and 60c depending on the type of work performed.

In the three years since the SCMWA was organized the union has gained for 715 out of the 1100 employees wage increases ranging from 20 to 41%. This April award was the largest award gained thus far.

Murphy to Talk On Jews' Plight

New York, May 6—Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy, of the Natl. Committee Against Nazi Persecution and Extermination of the Jews, will make his initial speech in his capacity as chairman of the organization this Monday night, May 8, at Carnegie Hall here. The speech will be carried at various times during the evening by transcription through 108 cooperating radiio stations in 42 states.

CIO Members Defy Death To Save War Plant

WASHINGTON, May 6—The home front heroism of eight members of the CIO United Auto Workers Union, who defied the danger of a blazing boxcar filled with explosive magnesium, drew praise this week from Chairman Donald Nelson of the War Production Board. The quick, fearless action of the eight workers — seven men and a woman — probably saved from destruction the aircraft engine building of the Ford Motor Co. Rouge plant, at Dearborn, Mich. The plant was damaged and 11 union members were seriously injured by the fire.

Had the magnesium in the car exploded, scores might have been killed, according to officials of UAW-CIO Ford Local 600.

Two of the seven men, members of a train crew, coupled a locomotive to the blazing box car and hauled it outside the plant. The two were Harry Springer, conductor, and George Fedraw, yardmaster, who were assisted by Norman Gidday, Harry Nelson, Milton Jamieson, Alfred Hall, William Hopkins and Virginia Allsteadt, a clerk in the aircraft unit, who not only sounded the alarm but suggested the idea of pulling the blazing car out of the plant.

In reply to a letter from the Local stating that "all members of the crew knowingly risked their lives since at any point the boxcar might have exploded and killed all of them," WPB Chairman Nelson wrote:

"Courageous acts, such as those performed by members of your union, in this instance, are truly indicative of the patriotic spirit of American workers and their determination to let nothing stand in the way of complete victory over the Axis."

'That Man' Book OK, Says Hillman

New York, May 6—"I'd like to tell you how much I enjoyed reading Dr. Kingdon's book 'That Man in the White House.' There's every reason for it to be a best seller and I feel its message should be brought to the largest possible number of Americans."

That's what Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee, said of the book on President Roosevelt published at $1.00 by Arco Publishing Co., New York. You can buy it at drugstores and newsstands as well as bookstores.

Women's Job Future Told By Labor Dept.

Washington, May 6—What will happen to women workers after the war? Will their employment in the shipbuilding, aircraft and munitions plants come to a sudden end when peace is declared? Will employers continue to employ women in jobs formerly considered for men only?

These and other important questions are taken up in special bulletin soon to be issued by the Women's Bureau, U. S. Dept. of Labor, under the title, A Preview as to Women Workers in Transition from War to Peace, by Mary Elizabeth Pidgeon.

"Employment and satisfactory conditions of work for women are part and parcel of sound economic conditions for the welfare of the whole people," states the pamphlet, "and hence not to be overlooked or neglected in a time when every effort is to be devoted toward creating a better society.

"In regard to women workers, as well as to other elements in American life, what is done now, decided now, and planned now will determine to a large extent what can be expected tomorrow."

'March of Time' Films UAW Meet

Atlanta, May 6—The "March of Time"—monthly news feature of the Time-Life-Fortune group—spent a recent Sunday night in Atlanta, taking pictures of a meeting of Local 10, UAW-CIO, Bell Bomber plant workers.

It was a special meeting, of Negro workers who had assembled to hear wounded Negro veterans tell of the part that Negroes have been playing in the war, and to see Army and Navy films from the war fronts that showed, too, how Negroes are fighting side by side with their white brothers all over the world. The film will be released in approximately 60 days.

WLB, in Split Decision, Upholds Maintenance Of Membership Clause

WASHINGTON, May 6—War Labor Board policy on maintenance of membership is the best means of keeping up war production through stable labor-industry relations, labor and public members of the WLB said this week in their decision on a CIO Oil Workers case involving the Humble Oil Co.

The decision, granting maintenance of membership protection took the Montgomery Ward-Westbrook Pegler line that workers mustn't be "forced" to pay dues to the union if they don't want to.

Completely reflecting the anti-union line of the most unreconstructed of employers, the industry members waved the flag, shouted about democracy and claimed to be the sole defenders of freedom—the freedom from joining a union—that the men in the armed forces are supposedly defending.

The public members, led by Dr. Frank P. Graham, declared in their statement that maintenance of membership has become "the equitable and stable foundation for cooperative industrial relations and stands justified by the American record of production for the war, unmatched anywhere else in the world."

The labor members, led by John Brophy and Carl Shipley for the CIO, took issue with the industry opinion, which, they said, "is a plea for reconversion of the government's labor relations policy to an open shop, non-union basis." They declared that "support and encouragement for responsible, disciplined labor organizations is one of the most effective contributions this Board can make."

Steel Hearing Adjourns; To Renew May 16

Washington, May 6 — Demands of the CIO United Steelworkers for a 17 cents an hour raise, an annual wage and other gains marked time this week as the Natl. War Labor Board panel hearing the USA-CIO's case adjourned until May 16 because of the union's convention.

At that time, the steel employers are expected to continue the presentation of their side of the case, marked so far by pleas of poverty despite financial reports showing that the industry is in the strongest position ever.

Meanwhile, the WLB announced that it will appoinnt two additional six-man panels to hear related cases of the union, which is seekng increases from 44 iron ore companies in the Lake Superior region and from 350 processing and miscellaneous companies as well as from the "basic steel" firms.

Annual Pay Big CIO Goal, Murray Says

Washington, May 6—One of the main items on CIO's legislative program is passage of a resolution in Congress endorsing the annual guaranteed wage plan.

Testifying on this at a Senate sub-Committee on postwar planning and reconversion, Pres. Murray said:

"We have the type of economy that can make a guaranteed annual wage possible. It is a problem of planning.

"Congress has passed laws and instituted procedures to guarantee the farmers' income. Corporations are protected from all possible dangers for a period of two years after the war.

"We have no criticism of Congress for this. But if farmers and business can get these guarantees, why in the name of common sense cannot Congress by a declaration of national policy encourage the annual wage to protect workers and their children from the miseries of unemployment and partial employment?"

Congress, of course, can't pass a law requiring the annual wage. But it can give the plan a real boost by endorsing it. A resolution supporting the guaranteed wage will be coming up soon. Start writing your Congressman now!

UE Pushes 17c An Hour Wage Hike Demands

New York, May 6 — A special joint conference of representatives of 225,000 war production workers in General Electric and Westinghouse plants throughout the nation has instructed the national officers of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers to take their case for a 17-cent-an-hour wage adjustment before the War Labor Board.

New York, May 6—White collar workers still getting less than $100 a month—and there are thousands of them in this city alone—are especially appreciative of the Pepper Committee report issued last week, CIO Office Workers leaders said here.

Speaking for Local 16, UOPWA's largest general office local, President Lucy Altschuler said: "Yet these employes are still limited to the 15 percent Little Steel formula basd on 1941 when their substandard salaries were even smaller.

"Removal of government restrictions on salary increases within the $150 and $200 bracket would alleviate present economic hardships. Our war effort would benefit through decreased turnover in employment and by greatly increased efficiency".

Back the invasion! Keep on buying War Bonds to the limit of your ability!

Armchair 'Experts' Push Changes To Wreck Price Control

WASHINGTON, May 6—The Smith (polltaxer, Va.) amendments to the Price Control Act were written by "arm-chair experts" that obviously never had anything to do with industry and will "produce chaos in the U. S." if they are tacked onto the act, CIO General Counsel Lee Pressman told the House Banking Committee here this week.

Pressman led off CIO's House testimony for renewal of the act without amendments, and was followed by Don Montgomery, UAW consumer counsel, John Edelman, Textile Workers, and Annie Stein, CIO Auxiliaries. Statements were filed for the Shoe Workers and the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers.

Pressman said CIO asks "only that the price control law be extended in its present terms, without amendments, and that the ratio between wages and prices be held as was originally intended."

Taking up the Smith proposals, hatched out of the Smith smear committee set up last year to probe all U.S. government agencies, Pressman concentrated principally on the first one, which would freeze all wages and salaries regardless of what happens to prices.

REVERSAL OF POLICY

"This would be a complete reversal of the policy of national economic stabilization laid down by the act of Oct., 1942," he said. It would prevent the War Labor Board from making any wage adjustments, no matter how great wage inequalities might be, would completely freeze the Little Steel formula into law, and would knock out collective bargaining.

Pressman's testimony was frequently interrupted by Republican members of the committee, who showed a burning anxiety to talk about the Montgomery Ward case, the national debt, deficit financing and postwar policy—in fact almost anything but price control.

This constant wandering from the point finally brought a mild rebuke from the chairman, Rep. Brent Spence (D., Ky.), who said in a resigned tone that "this committee always wanders from the point, and probably always will."

Spence made an important commitment, however, when he said that the committee didn't think the Smith amendments were "germane"—that is, they didn't apply to the Price Control Act—and that the committee would not report them when it reported a renewal bill to the House.

BLAST HECKLERS

Spence was joined by other Democrats, apparently encouraged by successes of administration supporters in this week's primaries, who also talked back to the hecklers and who tried to insist on staying on the subject.

Turning to another Smith proposal, which would prohibit the WLB from ordering an employer to sign any contract he didn't feel like signing, Pressman pointed out that this one would completely set the clock back to the days before collective bargaining was the law of the land and when industrial chaos was the rule.

Back on the wage question again, Rep. Kunkel (R., Pa.) wanted to know if the CIO would favor wage reductions if "wages outstripped the cost of living." Quite what the Congressman meant by wages outstripping the cost of living was not made clear, but Pressman replied:

"If you mean are we in favor of wage cuts, the answer of course is no. May I ask the Congressman if he would favor wage cuts?" There was no answer.

Consumer Goods Firms Reap Rich War Profits Harvest

WASHINGTON, May 6—Staggering war profits by manufacturers of consumer goods, retail stores and food corporations clinch the need for price control renewal, Don Montgomery, UAW-CIO consumers counsel, told the House Banking Committee here this week. Montgomery's testimony was part of the CIO presentation of the case for renewal of the price control act, led off two weeks ago by CIO Pres. Murray and other CIO leaders in the Senate. Other witnesses for CIO at the House nearing included John Edelman for Textile, Mrs. Annie Stein for the CIO Auxiliaries, and Jack Zucker for the Shoe Workers.

Criticizing proposed price control amendments that would increase even the present swollen figures, Montgomery showed that consumers goods manufacturers were making three times their pre-war rates, wholesalers four times, meatpackers five-and-a-half times and department stores eight times.

Textile testimony by Edelman emphasized the enforcement angle, pointing out labor's real stake in the operation of price control as well as its effects on the workers' budgets.

He showed that 4,500 labor people are members of local price control boards, one third of them CIO, that more than 1,000 labor people are on price panels in their communities, and that 40,000 union members are on local transportation boards.

This, he said, gave them a "professional" interest in seeing that enforcement was maintained, as well as their interest as people who have to get along on none too adequate wages.

Mrs. Stein, a member of the CIO Congress of Womens Auxiliaries, drew praise from the Congressmen for her testimony on the amount of time spent on local control and on the need for avoiding any hamstringing amendments.

Montgomery also revealed a "slow-down" by manufacturers that tnreatens serious shortages of work clothes which in turn "may slow down the war and delay the peace," unless stopped.

He filed a statement by Walter P. Reuther, a vice-president of UAW-CIO, which showed that even with price concessions the manufacturers were not producing the lost-cost items that are needed, but are trying to hijack more increases and are still putting materials and man-hours into luxury lines.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

Something new is coming into Congress very soon—and something that must be supported. This is a resolution endorsing CIO's annual guaranteed wage plan. Proposed by Pres. Murray last week, the idea was approved by Sen. George (D., Ga.) with indications that he would push it. Watch for developments.

The campaign for planned, orderly reconversion of war industry got a setback when the Senate blitzed through the Murray Bill (S 1718) without the Kilgore Bill (S 1823), which was urged as an amendment by CIO, AFL and RR Brotherhoods. The Murray Bill is inadequate, has no unemployment compensation or other features protecting workers.

Price control renewal is getting closer to the stage of an actual bill. Polltax repeal (HR. 7) is still set for Senate debate beginning May 9.

Rumors of a compromise on the "GI" bill for aid to veterans (S. 1767) suitable to Rep. Rankin (polltaxer, Miss.) may indicate a watering-down of the unemployment compensation features of the bill. Write to protest any downward revisions.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Reconversion (S 1823)	Aids demobilized war workers and servicemen in reconversion of war industry as well as aiding business. Only bill that does so.	In sub-committee of Sen. Military Affairs. S 1718 passed by Senate does not aid workers.	Urge Senators to work for re-offering of S 1718 with S 1823 as amendment. Ask Representatives to work for both bills.
Price Control Act	Renewal of act due to expire June 30.	Senate Banking Committee now writing bill; House to start this week.	Keep urging renewal without any crippling amendments, especially Smith's.
Polltax repeal (HR 7)	Ends reactionary rule of polltax Congressmen.	Senate debate begins May 9.	Keep urging cloture to kill filibuster.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

SEWELL AVERY evidently thinks a big businessman is not only entitled to be "carried back and carried forward" by Uncle Sam but also to be carried out.

Countless unionists have been hustled off company premises on their own feet, or slugged and removed limp and prostrate.

But Big-Shot Avery got de luxe transportation when he defied the law, maintaining his swivel-chair posture all the way to the sidewalk.

Avery is an extremist. Few employers would go the personal lengths he has gone in thumbing his nose at the United States.

But he is a "hero" to many union-hating despisers of democracy, who see in him the expression of their own suppressed desires—just as a notorious gangster is admired by lesser crooks who wish they had his daring.

Congressman Howard Smith is another extremist, for all his veneer of beady-eyed, wing-collar respectability. He introduces bills to smash unions and to rob the public wholesale for the benefit of profiteers.

Many of Smith's tory colleagues think he "goes too far." But still he's their hero, for he comes right out with what they'd like to get away with if they could.

Both Avery and Smith serve a useful purpose, however, as a warning to decent Americans of the anarchy, exploitation, inflation and war disruptions that would result from the law of the jungle which their crowd advocate.

Both of them have found common ground at the present time in their efforts to smash the War Labor Board.

While Avery takes direct action in defiance of the Board to promote industrial disorder, Smith introduces so-called amendments to the price control law to make the WLB powerless to preserve industrial peace.

Here are some of Smith's brazen proposals:

(1) He would freeze starvation, by forbidding the WLB to make any upward adjustments of even substantandard wages, regardless of increases in living costs.

(2) He would deprive the WLB of authority to insist on employer observance of its decisions—thus leaving union-busters like Avery free to disrupt industrial relations.

(3) At the same time, the Smith amendments would push living costs higher and higher by crippling OPA's enforcement powers on violators of rationing and price ceilings; by requiring OPA to lift prices to guarantee profits; and by breaking through present rent controls.

If characters like Smith and Avery should be allowed to have their way, America would be threatened with industrial chaos and inflation on the eve of our country's greatest war test, the invasion of Europe.

Union-busting employers would not have to wait for the war's end to start their open-shop drive, but could begin with impunity right now to break off union relations and lock out their employes.

War workers, already caught between frozen wage rates and sky-high living costs, would be weakened in health and morale, if not actually starved, by the removal of present price controls, as proposed by Smith.

It is unthinkable that the American people should tolerate this kind of Avery-Smith program.

Pres. Roosevelt has acted firmly against the provocations of outlaw Avery, to the applause of every patriotic American.

The House committee is unlikely to report out Smith's outrageous amendments, and he will probably have to bring them up on the floor of the House.

But even if the full program of these extremists is not adopted, there are many threatening steps in the same direction which will be much hearder to prevent.

In fighting to uphold the orderly procedures of the War Labor Board, against the freezing of insufficient wages, and for the strengthening of present price controls, the CIO and labor generally are fighting for interests much wider than those of the union membership.

They are fighting for some 20-million largely unorganized Americans, white-collar workers, professional folk, teachers, government employes, pensioners, servicemen's families and others, who also suffer from fixed incomes and soaring prices.

They are fighting to back up our fighting men with uninterrupted production and a solid home front, and to prevent them from coming back to the horrors of inflation.

In a word, labor is waging this fight for our whole country and for victory.

Labor's Claims Upheld

The dispute between labor and the Bureau of Labor Statistics over the extent of increases in living costs is no mere statistical argument.

It involves the livelihood of millions of Americans and how much they should be paid to make ends meet, with prices what they are.

It is therefore encouraging to find that a Senate committee has shown due appreciation of the bread-and-butter issues involved and has reached conclusions that are substantially similar to those of the CIO and the AFL.

The committee headed by Senator Pepper, which has been investigating the plight of white collar and fixed income groups in the war economy, has found that the BLS living cost index is inadequate and misleading and should not be used by the War Labor Board as a basis for determining the workers' ability to cope with rising costs.

The Senate committee notes, as labor has done, that the BLS index fails to take into account "deterioration in quality of goods, disappearance from the market of cheaper grades of goods, new types of expenditures incurred by workers who migrate to war jobs, black market operations which are hidden from view, and differences between prices in various types of communities and geographic regions."

The committee concludes that "there is in this country today no official agency capable of supplying adequate information on the relationship between price and income increases and the resulting effect on the standard of living."

It joins with CIO Pres. Murray in recommending that adequate funds should be given the BLS to prepare a real living-cost index that will adequately reflect current relationships between prices and income and take into account wartime factors.

The Senate committee also recommends that the War Labor Board cease applying the Little Steel formula to substandard wages and salaries and work out a sound procedure for raising such wages and salaries.

Industrial war workers and millions of other Americans from white collar and fixed income groups are suffering gross injustice from the present wage freeze and from BLS misrepresentations of the extent of increases in living costs.

The impartial findings of this eminent Senate committee vindicate labor's demand that this injustice should be remedied without delay.

Planned Reconversion

The CIO, the AFL and the Railroad Brotherhoods have joined in an urgent appeal to Congress on behalf of the millions of workers and ex-servicemen whose livelihood will depend on the orderly and planned reconversion of industry as war contracts terminate.

The Senate has rushed to enactment a bill bill which protects only the investments of businessmen.

Labor insists that this is setting property rights ahead of more important human rights and that an integrated program should be adopted covering all phases of demobilization, as provided in the Kilgore bill.

Special unemployment compensation for workers and ex-servicemen in the transition period is one of labor's demands, which must not be neglected in the rush to protect the monied classes.

Further, a National Production-Employment Board should be immediately established to protect all interests and to promote full production and full employment after the war.

Let's have legislation for all the people and not just for a favored few.

Progress In Primaries

To listen to some of the folks in Congress you would think the American people were in revolt against the administration's progressive domestic policies and in a mood to eat labor alive.

But the recent primaries tell a totally different story.

Opponents of Senators Claude Pepper and Lister Hill attacked them as "New Dealers" because of their support of progressive and win-the-war domestic policies. But the voters renominated both Senators and seemed to like the very things for which they were attacked.

At the same time Congressman Joseph Starnes, anti-New Deal labor-baiter and active member of the notorious Dies committee was defeated by the voters of his district of Alabama.

The primary results should lend courage to progressive Congressmen to carry on the fight with renewed vigor against the combination of polltax Democrats and tory Republicans that has been responsible for so much reaction and obstruction in Congress.

They will also encourage labor to work harder than ever to get out the vote in the coming elections.

Steel Meet Opens; Story Next Week

Cleveland, May 6—One of the world's largest unions, the CIO United Steelworkers of America, was scheduled to open its second constitutional convention here May 9, with Philip Murray, president of the union and of the CIO, as chairman. The parley, which will be held at the Public Auditorium, will last until May 13 inclusive.

A complete report on the deliberations and decisions of the several thousand delegates, from all over the country, will be carried in next week's CIO NEWS.

Unions Ask:

Unified Postwar Job Plan

BULETIN!

Acting with extreme haste, a Senate majority today blitzed the Murray Bill (S 1718) through without a roll call vote. The bill now goes to the House, where the Kilgore Bill (S 1823), which CIO favors, may be offered as an amendment.

Washington, May 6 — Piecemeal action on the problem of reconversion of war industry won't do the postwar job and won't help war output either, the heads of the three U. S. labor bodies told the Senate this week.

The telling was done in a joint letter to all Senators signed by Philip Murray for CIO, William Green for AFL, and Julius Luhrsen for Railway Labor Executives Assn., top body of the Railroad Brotherhoods.

The joint letter was sent as a result of hasty Senate Military Affairs Committee action in approving one bill, the Murray contracts termination bill (S 1718), which carries no provisions to take care of the problems of demobilized servicemen and war workers.

The three labor leaders approved Sen. Kilgore's (D., W. Va.) bill (S 1823) which does carry unemployment compensation and other features that will help war workers as well as war industries in getting back to full and orderly peacetime production.

"We especially regret the voting out at this time by the Senate Military Affairs Committee of the Murray-George contract termination bill (S 1718) divorced from legislation dealing with the human side of demobilization, and without adequate hearings on so serious a problem," they said.

ASK UNEMPLOYMENT AID

"Emergency unemployment compensation for demobilized workers and servicemen in the reconversion period is an indispensable part of any overall legislation and should not be sidetracked to another committee for separate consideration."

The letter made the same point that Pres. Murray made in his testimony before Sen. Murray's sub-committee last week—that any program for reconversion of war industry must take in not only industry's needs but also the needs of the demobilized war workers.

Murray pointed out at that time that reconversion was not alone a postwar problem, but also a problem that affected present war output, since uncertainty about future plans was visibly affecting workers and industry alike.

HUMAN PROBLEMS

"Every consideration of equity and sound economics demands a single integrated piece of legislation which will take care of the human probems of demobilization at the same time that it provides for the security of business enterprise," the joint letter said.

"There is great danger that contract termination legislation will be passed and the Congress adjourn before any comprehensive legislation is considered to deal adequately with the more pressing human and organizational problems of reconversion."

To take care of this gap in the Murray-George bill, the CIO-AFL-RRB letter urged that it be amended "to include the Kilgore bill, thus providing a well-rounded program."

In a detailed program to cope with the whole problem of reconversion—which affects many sectious of industry and labor even while the war continues—the joint letter urged a program to:

1. Provide special unemployment compensation benefits "in the transition period to take care of unemployed workers as well as discharged servicemen."

2. Set up an "Office of War Mobilization and Adjustment" (as in the Kilgore bill) to coordinate "all Federal activities during the reconversion period."

3. Set up a "National Production-Employment Board of industry, labor, agriculture and the general public" as a part of the mobilization office.

4. Set up a "Bureau of Programs" to review and develop projects dealing with reconversion and production, with an eye to encouraging private and local plans for increased output and employment.

5. Protect and provide incentives to small business in converting to peacetime work.

Pepper, Hill Win Primaries; Starnes Licked

WASHINGTON, May 6—Labor and the Roosevelt Administration won three resounding victories this week as Democratic primary election returns from Florida and Alabama guaranteed the return to the Senate of two FDR-stalwarts and the elimination from the House of Representatives of one of the worst labor-baiters in Congress.

Winning out over anti-Administration, anti-Negro and anti-labor baiting were Senators Claude Pepper of Florida and Lister Hill of Alabama. In the latter state voters turned a big thumbs down on Rep. Joseph Starnes, a leading member of the Dies Committee, who had dedicated his career to sniping at FDR and at trade unions.

Pepper, with a 5,000 vote margin, appeared a cinch for re-election (nomination on the Democratic ticket being the equivalent to election in Florida) with absentee ballots not yet counted.

Pepper won out over a field of four anti-Administration men, carefully hand picked for their strength against the incumbent in areas where his support was strongest. By this method, Pepper's opponents hoped to force a runoff election by preventing Pepper from receiving the 51 per cent of the vote needed for nomination.

Senator Hill rolled up an impressive 25,000 majority in Alabama in a bitter fight with State Senator James A. Simpson, an outspoken critic of the Administration. As in Florida, Democratic nomination is tantamount to election.

Starnes, whose defeat was not expected, was replaced by Albert Rains, who has represented CIO unions in a legal capacity. Starnes has represented the fifth district in Alabama for the last 10 years and has served on the Dies Committee since its organization six years ago.

Sign 'Em Up On the Curb

Maywood, Cal., May 6—Here's how one local union (Local 1845 of USA-CIO) handled the problem of registering workers to vote in '44 and how they met with stiff opposition from management.

A deputy from the office of the Registrar of Voters came down to the plant and was doing a land office business until the personnel man of the plant told her she couldn't continue. She moved out to the sidewalk, got a chair and a desk, and carried on until she had registered over 200 workers in five hours.

Urge 4th Term

Detroit—Local 155, UAW-CIO, has started a petition campaign to "draft Roosevelt for a fourth term."

Representing over 14,000 UAW-CIO members in 140 shops in Detroit, Local 155 is combining this drive with an all-out campaign to secure the voting regisration of every member by the close of the primary registration period, June 21, 1944.

CIO Political Action OK, Says U. S.

Washington, May 6—New clearance on the legality of CIO political action—in case anybody had any doubts left—came this week in a report from U.S. Justice Dept. officials to the Senate Committee on Campaign Practices.

According to the latest bill of health, rendering by two aides of U.S. Attorney-General Biddle, the CIO Political Action Committee is guiltless of violating either the Hatch Act, the Corrupt Practices Act or the Smith-Connally Act.

The new report backed up earlier findings of the Justice Dept., resulting from a request by Rep. Howard Smith (polltaxer, Va.) to look into the PAC.

In the words of one member of the Senate Campaign Committee, Sen. Green (D., R.I.); "The CIO is concentrating on issues rather than candidates."

This double check by the Justice Dept., whose FBI investigation received the utmost cooperation by the CIO political group, did not satisfy Rep. Martin ('Call 'em Red') Dies, who announced that he would subpena the PAC's records in the effort to find something wrong with workers taking an interest in politics.

PAC circles in New York remained calm, pointing out the verdict of the Attorney General and the FBI was enough for everybody except Dies.

Thomas to Senate

U. S. Can Provide Jobs! Will It?

WASHINGTON, May 6—Nobody questions America's ability to run a war and a postwar economy full blast; the only question is, are we willing to do it?

With this statement, R. J. Thomas, president of the UAW-CIO, opened testimony before a Senate sub-Committee on reconversion last week. Thomas urged passage of a bill combining the three reconversion measures now up, plus additions.

"Reconversion must be so planned as to maintain and raise purchasing power?" he said. "There is no question whatever of raising the volume of output and of purchasing power to the levels necessary to maintain full employment. The only question is: are we willing to take the steps needed?"

URGES PLANNING NOW

Pleading for planning now, which need not interfere at all with war output even on the eve of the invasion, Thomas said: "Besides the need for planning and coordination, the war has taught us that labor participation is essential to the orderly conduct of a production program."

The whole question of reconversion from war to peace production breaks down into four main points, Thomas stated:

"1) Reconversion in the limited engineering sense; 2) disposition or utilization of war property; 3) contract termination, and 4) demobilization, or what some call the 'human side'."

Reconversion should be handled as outlined in the Baruch-Hancock report, Thomas said, with special care to "estimate cancellations in advance, the industries affected, and the resources likely to be released."

This can be done without interrupting war production—in fact, would help it by eliminating "uncertainty about procedure and policy for resumption of civilian production (which) is at present a factor in causing an unnecessary case of jitters." These jitters, Thomas said, are present dangers to war output, worrying both industry and labor.

NO PLOUGHING UNDER

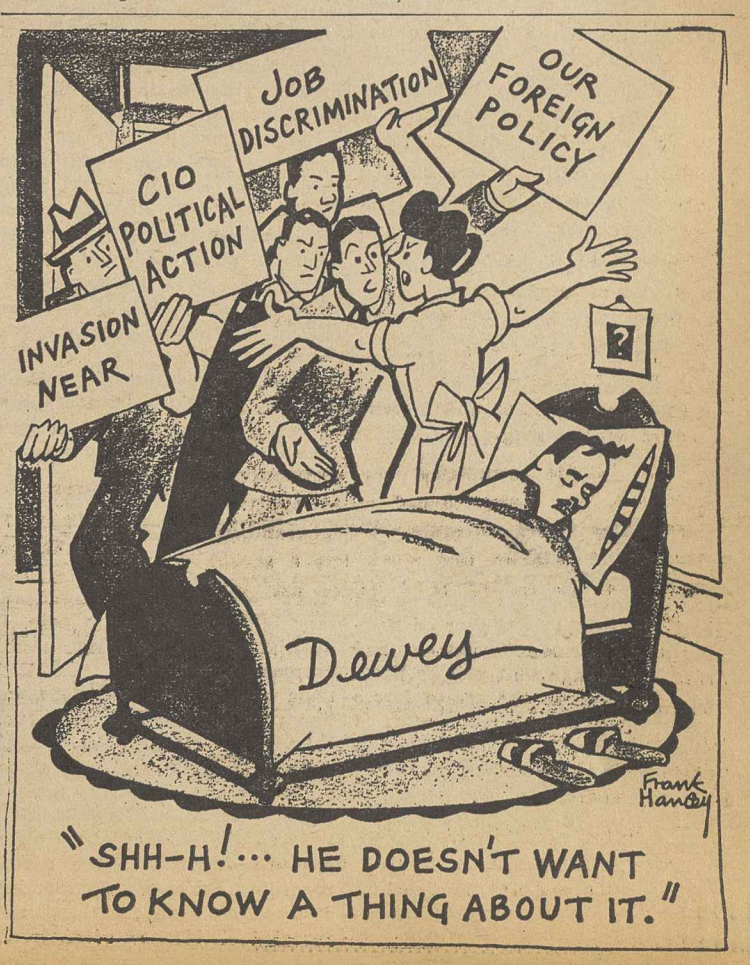
All war property must be fully used, including government owned plants as well as supplies and equipment. "We are unalterably opposed to plowing under or scrapping whether it takes place openly or covertly." he said. Auto workers have an especial interest in this, since the U. S. has billions in aircraft plants, machine tools, and other automotive industry equipment.

Winding up of war contracts must be handled "only as one segment of a larger whole." An over-all bill should be written to protect not only business but also to include "provisions safeguarding labor."

On the "human side" of demobilization, Thomas posed the problem of 9.3 million munitions workers most of whom will have to shift jobs, 7.5 million "new" workers, not previously employed in industry but who would like to stay, the 11 million in the armed forces, etc.

"We must be vigilant to prevent our workers, who answered their country's call by entering the armed forces or by taking war jobs from becoming depression 'Joads'," he said. "Workers want jobs first. But lacking jobs they must have security."

For security, workers must have adequate social insurance—as in the Murray-Wagner-Dingell bill—aid in retraining, in transit to new jobs, an annual guaranteed wage, and other protections.



Social Security Bill Wins United Backing

WASHINGTON, May 6—Full backing for improved social security and health aid came in a joint labor, agriculture and industry report issued here this week by the Natl. Planning Assn. The report, signed for CIO by Clinton S. Golden, assistant to Pres. Murray of USA-CIO, said: "The provisions of the present social security laws are, however, far from adequate. It is a shocking fact that the most important group of workers whose rights to social insurance benefits are threatened by absence from covered employment should be the very men and women who, as members of the armed forces, are risking their lives for their country."

This was a reference to the fact that men and women in the armed forces are losing out under the present law, which does not carry them on its books while they're away from their peacetime jobs. The proposed Murray-Wagner-Dingell bill (S 1161, HR 2861) would remedy this to protect the servicemen.

The program recommended in the joint report calls for expansion of old age and survivors' insurance; sickness insurance; unemployment benefits for a minimum of 26 weeks, and inclusion of seamen, agricultural workers, etc.; greater public assistance; more public health services, medical and hospital care and the like, and special provisions for servicemen personnel returning from the war.

In urging quick action on the program, the joint report concludes: "Thousands, and at times millions, of the people of America do not know the meaning of the words 'Freedom from Want'."

School Meal Plan Wins In Senate

Washington, May 6—The nation's kids and their war working parents won a victory in Congress this week, with Senate passage of a program to continue hot school lunches the children have been getting.

The program, pushed through with CIO and CIO Auxiliary support, authorizes the Dept. of Agriculture to continue the program for two years. An appropriation still is needed.

The program now goes back to the House, which threw it out of the Agriculture Dept. appropriation a few weeks ago with loud outcries that hot lunches were expensive and pampered the children besides.

The program cost $50,000,000 last year, and fed an average of 5,000,000 kids a day. It helped war production by enabling their parents to stay on war jobs without worrying about how the children were getting a noon-day meal—which was a boost to the war effort in addition to the good nutritious meal it gave to future citizens.

Write your Representative to OK the Senate program, vote for enough funds to keep it going.

CIO Plugs Maternity Care Bill

Washington, May 6 — CIO and its Womens Auxiliaries this week rallied to support a program of maternity and infant care that has already helped wives and babies of 250,000 servicemen when they supported the "Emergency Maternity and Infant Care" program before the House Appropriation Committee.

The support came in hearings on a deficiency appropriation of $6,000,000 to carry the program through to the end of the fiscal year, June 30. The program gives complete coverage from pregnancy through birth to the end of the first year of infancy.

Opposing the CIO and the Auxiliaries—and the welfare of the serviceman's wives and babies—is the American Medical Assn., trade association of the higher priced doctors which also fights the extension of social security and all plans for more aid to public health. The AMA wants straight cash benefits—which it will grab in fees.

The plan, known as "EMIC", will have spent about $30,000,000 by the end of the 1943 fiscal year on helping soldiers' and sailors' wives and kids. More than that will be needed next year, as the armed forces grow in size and more married men are inducted. Write your Representative now to support this program as one of the measures that make for good morale and a healthy crop of American citizens.

Law Guild Urges Security Bill Support

NEW YORK, May 6—Proposed social security improvements in the Murray-Wagner-Dingell bill will meet the needs of the men in the armed forces and the millions more in industry at home, the Natl. Lawyers Guild says in a recent issue of its "Review."

"The enactment of such a program would be a magnificent demonstration of the vitality of our democracy and of its ability to provide for the needs of our people," the article says.

"Its enactment would inspire all Americans on the war fronts and at home. It would be a vital weapon for winning the war."

The new bill (S 1161, HR 2861) "is a concrete and detailed legislative proposal to meet this need," the Guild article adds. "It would extend the social security system to include virtually the entire working population of the country. It would substantially increase present benefits and would introduce new benefits which Americans have never had before and badly need.

"Its enactment would be so enormous an improvement over our present social security provisions that no responsible person, deeply concerned with the welfare of our country, can fail to support it."

Clauses in the bill cover new and greatly improved plans for health, disability insurance, maternity aid, public assistance and employment, standardization of unemployment benefits and special aid to veterans.

(S 1161 and HR 2861 are currently waiting hearings in the Senate and House. Letters from the voters will help them toward enactment.)

Labor, Management Join Fight on VD

By WALTER CLARKE, M.D.

(Last of a series of articles on venereal disease by the Executive Director, American Social Hygiene Association, a national voluntary health agency closely teamed up with the Army and Navy in the wartime campaign to combat syphilis and gonorrhea and all conditions favoring their spread.

A growing number of joint labor-management general health and venereal disease control programs are now in operation and working out well. Some of these programs got under way through the initiative of organized labor.

This is a step forward that is well worth mentioning. Even greater progress in this direction might be made if it were not more widely known that:

1. The laws of most States provide that results of all blood tests be kept absolutely confidential between the individual and the physician.

2. There is no justification for using blood testing of employes as an instrument of discrimination.

3. Where industrial controls are now operating in organized plants, unions take all precautions deemed necessary to keep information confidential between the doctor and the individual.

EVERYONE BENEFITS

Employes and employers have been able to get together on joint efforts, because both groups realize they have something to gain. Industrial workers benefit because untreated venereal disease keeps them away from their jobs, cuts into their earnings, shortens their lives, and often injuries their families. Employers benefit from more efficient, stronger, healthier working crews.

As in the case of other serious contagious diseases, the decision regarding an employe's remaining at work after an examination has revealed evidence of infectious syphilis or gonorrhea should not rest with the employer but with the company physician in consultation with the health authorities. The following considerations should govern the employment of persons known to be infected:

1. The employee should agree to take such treatment as may be indicated.

2. Whenever the stage of the disease is infectious, employment should be delayed or interrupted until such time as a temporary non-infectious state is established through treatment. This state is usually established after two or three treatments in the case of syphilis, but may take longer both in syphilis and gonorrhea.

3. When syphilis exists in a latent stage, employment should not be delayed or interrupted.

DANGER SIGNALS

4. When disabling manifestations exist which render such persons industrial hazards to themselves, other employes, or to the public, employment may be deferred or denied.

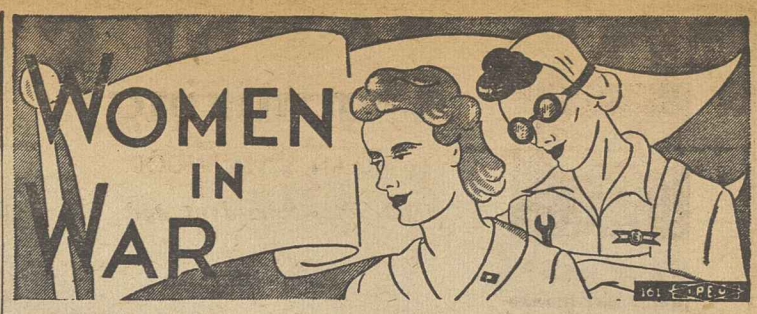
5. Provision should be made possible for occupational readjustment of employes who develop disabling manifestations that do not render them incapable of performing some useful type of work.

6. Workers with syphilis in any of its stages, regardless of past or present treatment status, should not be employed in areas where capable of producing toxic manifestations.

7. Workers having gonorrhea and under treatment with a sulfa drug should not be employed unless they are under special medical observation.

The above considerations were formulated by the Advisory Committee on the Control of Veneral Diseases in Industry appointed by Suregon General Thomas Parran.

This series of articles has stressed the point that the battle against VD will be on the way to victory when people learn to to avoid infection and when ways are found to locate and treat all those who are infected. Even though trade unions may elect to put programs into effect independent of employers, they can benefit from joint labor-management experiences in preventing, finding and treating VD.



Child Care Vital To U. S. Welfare

By FAYE STEPHENSON
President, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

"How Much Do We Care For Our Children" is the title of a city-wide child care week proclaimed by the local mayors in the Detroit area beginning May 1, national Child Health Day.

They're having radio broadcasts, open house at nursery schools and canteens, exhibits at the Belle Isle casino and in store windows, and a model nursery school trailer on view at Grand Circus Park and at plants. And the initiative for all this came from the CIO.

It's high time we sat down to think how much we care for our children not only in Detroit, but all over the United States.

As a member of the Children's Bureau Commission on Children in Wartime, I spent two days in Washington a month or so ago participating in a discussion of child welfare in all its aspects. The most interesting part of the Conference to me was the session during which teen age boys and girls from all over the United States discussed "Next Steps in Planning for Children and Youth as seen by Youth."

ADULT FAILURE

That session brought statistics to life. We all know that now thousands of young people have left school to take jobs in this period. We've all heard talk of increased juvenile delinquency.

The discussion of these young people pointed out very forcefully the failure of our adult communities to avail themselves of the real contribution to solving these problems which could be made by the young people themselves. They wanted to participate in the Boards and Committees that organize community youth activities. They wanted more community programs in which youth can participate and feel themselves needed by the community.

The thing that disturbed me about that Children's Bureau Conference was that, although the objectives agreed on were excellent, there was very little discussion of how to accomplish them.

ACTION NEEDED

It seems to me that the time for general statements on the need for children's services is past. The need now is for action — and the plain truth is that right now we need action to save what little we already have.

This very week the fate of two programs affecting children is being discussed in Congress. The Senate has just reversed the House action of March 7, and voted to authorize extension of the school lunch program for two more years. Our immediate job is to see that thir action is supported in the House.

The Children's Bureau program for maternity care of the wives of our servicemen and medical care for their infants for the first year of life is threatened. The American Medical Assn. wants the women just to get a cash grant to use as they see fit, instead of having all necessary medical services taken care of regardless of cost, as under the present program.

Here again we must let our representatives in Congress know that we support wholeheartedly the present Maternity and Infant Care program for service families, and that we oppose changing that program to a cash grant basis.

Rankin Tries Phoney On Vets' Aid Bill

WASHINGTON, May 6—The old Rankin trick of "compromising" the soldiers and sailors out of their rights is up again in Congress this week—this time on the GI Bill (S 1767) for aid to veterans.

Here's the pitch: Rep. Rankin (polltaxer, Miss.) has been stalling on the GI bill for weeks. The CIO is in favor of it— because among other reasons it gives the veteran a good break on unemployment compensation in case he can't find a job right away. As passed by the Senate with CIO support a month ago, he could get up to 52 weeks unemployment benefits, plus allowances for dependents with the total going up to $25 a week.

This is what Rankin doesn't like; in fact, he's said publicly that benefits at $25 a week would "encourage idlenesss." So now Rankin's newest "compromise," reported set for early House action, cuts this in half to 26 weeks, cuts off the dependents' allowances and cuts the payment to a flat $20 a week.

"GROSS INSULT"

This plan, CIO said this week in a letter from Pres. Murray to all Congressmen, is "a gross insult to our servicemen, and certainly to act in that spirit would be unworthy of Congress."

The Rankin "compromise" means more than just a cut in the amount a veteran can count on from the GI bill in case he's unemployed, since the flat $20 a week would be below the amount the veteran would be entitled to under the present social security system in the larger and more industrial states.

Actually what Rankin is trying to do is not only to hand a royal beating to the veterans, but also to undermine present—and admittedly inadequate — social security standards. It fits in perfectly with the polltaxer "dime an hour" bloc that has tried to snafu the soldiers' vote, and that stands against any kind of social progress.

This anti-veteran scheme can be stopped, if enough people follow Pres. Murray's lead and wire Congress "to brush aside these downward revisions and pass S 1767 as quickly as possible."

As Murray points out, the CIO has 1,250,000 members in the armed forces—and has the welfare of all GI's at heart, as it has shown in the fight to increase base pay, to get bigger dependents' allotments, and to provide a workable soldiers' ballot.

British Labor Urges US-USSR-British Unity In Postwar

LONDON, May 6 (ALN)—The "closest possible Anglo-American-Russian cooperation" was urged this week by the national executive committee of the British Labor party in its report on international post-war settlement, to be submitted to the party's annual conference opening May 29. The report has particular significance in view of the strong possibility of the election of a Labor government after the war.

At its 1943 conference, the Labor party revealed a membership of two and a half million, of whom 2,225,000 were trade unionists "contracting-in" to pay dues to the party.

The central aims of the post-war settlement, the report states, must be: first, to prevent future wars by removing their causes and organizing preventive action against aggression; second, to achieve a high and ever-rising level of economic well-being in all lands, ending mass unemployment, poverty and malnutrition; third, to promote the spread of democracy and political freedom througout the world.

NAZI WAR GUILT

Declaring that "we must take all possible steps to prevent any repetition of German aggression," the report calls for plain talking about German war guilt, and supports the Soviet plan for the trial of war criminals in the areas where they committed their crimes.

Regarding Japan, the report calls for similar drastic action "so that no more risks will be run from the Japanese." Occupation of enemy territory by Allied armed forces after the war is urged, together with complete disarmament of Germany and Japan and the strict control of their economic and financial systems.

REPARATIONS

Germany, the report adds, must pay full reparations, including restoration of all loot, payment of the local costs of Allied armies of occupation, and provision of labor for the devastated areas of Europe. In this connection, the report recommends the use of Gestapo agents, Storm Troopers and other Nazi party members for reparation work in the Soviet Union and occupied countries, but not in Britain.

To implement its post-war plan, the Labor party executive proposes:

1. The setting up of an international political organization, the "nucleus of which will be Britain, the U. S. and the USSR," but which must not be exclusive.

2. Establishment of new international organizations for relief, food, trade, currency, air and rail transport, the policies of which must be "for expansion and not restriction."

3. Continued cooperation among the Allied armed forces, with Britain extending its leases of bases in the western hemisphere to the U. S., while the USSR and Britain hold bases in Europe on behalf of the United Nations.

Stating that "pacificism is unworkable," the report calls for the eventual development of a single United Nations armed force. It also recommends the transference of national minorities in the redrawing of European frontiers, and the sending of all Germans back to Germany.

HOME FRONT MISSION: Staff Sgt. Nat Kosdan, member of CIO Wholesale & Warehouse Workers Local 65, comes back to New York City to cast his ballot in a union election. Kosdan, with three major decorations to his credit, participated as a Flying Fortress gunner on raids over Berlin, Schweinfurt, Munich and other Nazi centers. The 4,000 other members of the local in the armed forces got mail ballots.

Settle Canada Stoppage

Ottawa, May 6—A nine-day stoppage at the Windsor Ford plants which was caused by the company's termination of a 28-month-old contract was satisfactorily settled by Canada's new Wartime Labor Relations Board this week in favor of Local 200, CIO United Auto Workers Union.

The dispute had the support of UAW-CIO Pres. R. J. Thomas because of its nature. When four stewards were suspended as the outcome of new grievance procedure rules initiated by the management, the workers left for a mass meeting. Half an hour later the company cancelled the contract before the meeting was held to decide what action would be taken.

The Board recommendations, accepted by both union and management, provided that the workers would return under the old contract. Stewards were reinstated, Local 200 was certified as collective bargaining agency under the new Labor Code, and several clauses in the old contract were eliminated because they were superfluous in view of the Labor Code provisions. The Board also set forth temporary grievance and representation procedure.

This was the first major decision by the new Board. The Board will also deal with matters unresolved by the company and union after a month's negotiation of a new contract.

Paper Drops Pegler

Chicago, May 6—Westbrook Pegler, anti-labor Scripps Howard columnist, had his daily column dropped by the Chicago Daily NEWS this week, after Pegler had written a piece attacking the late Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox. Knox, who died last week, was owner of the paper.

Bare Walsh's Stand On Polltax

Newark, N. J., May 6—The old trick of being for polltax repeal but against HR 7, trotted out of the museum again by Sen. Walsh (D., Mass.), got a thorough exposure this week by Sol Stetin, N. J. Textile Workers Union regional director.

Replying to a letter from Walsh saying that he was against the polltax but "would not favor curtailing debate in the U. S. Senate, except in some grave national emergency where a filibuster threatened our very existence," Stetin said:

"In the midst of a global war, if we are not now in a 'grave national emergency where a filibuster threatened our very national existence,' I cannot imagine what meaning you attach to the words."

A guaranteed annual wage, proposed by the CIO United Steelworkers of America, is one of the major answers to the problem of recurring depressions. Have you written your Congressman yet telling him what you think of the plan?

CIO Teachers Honor Warner Bros. Films

New York, May 6—Annual award of the CIO Teachers' Union for Outstanding Service in the Cause of Education, was presented last week to Warner Bros. Pictures, producers of outstanding anti-Nazi and other thoughtful and entertaining motion pictures of the American way of life.

The award was made to Jesse L. Lasky of Warner Bros. at the eighth annual educational conference of the Teachers' Union, Local 555, State, County & Municipal Workers, held here last Saturday, with some 2,500 teachers and school leaders in attendance. In accepting the award, Lasky said:

"I am firmly convinced that the way to greater achievement in education and greater understanding of democracy is through the medium of the motion picture." Pledging that Warner Bros. would continue "to present motion pictures that entertain and at the same time offer a profound experience in the American way of life," Lasky predicted the coming of a new era in which the movie would become "one of the foremost instruments of education."

Speakers at the luncheon meeting where the award was made included the chairman, Dr. Bella V. Dodd, the union's legislative representative for the past eight years; Union Pres. Charles J. Hendley; Vice Pres. Dorothy Bellanca, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and Secy.-Treas. Henry W. Wenning, State, County & Municipal Workers.

Petitions Back FDR

St. Louis, May 6—A petition campaign to urge Uresident Roosevelt to run for a fourth term was launched this week by the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers Union, with W. A. Holloway, local regional CIO Political Action director, the first signer.

We'll Back Invasion, Say Britishers

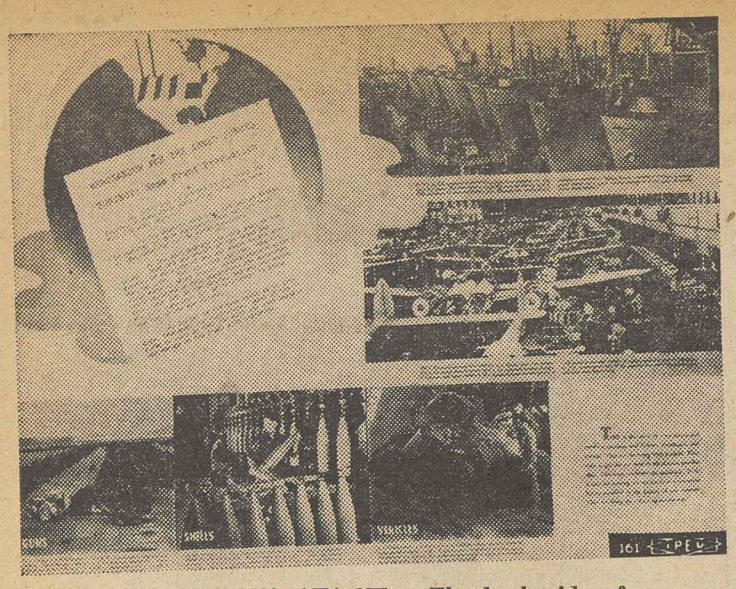
London, May 6—A pledge "to maintain under all conditions the necessary supply of war materials to the fighting fronts" was made this week by the British Engineering & Allied Trades Shop Stewards' National Council, in a May Day message of greetings to U. S. workers.

Pointing out that "together we have built arms and ships that soon our united armies will be using to invade Western Europe," the message said:

"Many trade unionists of both our countries will be fighting side by side in battles which, coinciding with the blows of our Allies in the east, will accomplish the final destruction of the Nazis."

"Many years ago Lincoln led you in the fight to abolish slavery in your country," the message continued. "Today we are defeating an attempt to enslave all mankind. The workers of all nations can look with confidence to the future.

"Unity is the watchword. We look to the forthcoming international trade union conference to strengthen still further the bonds of unity between the workers of all lands for the fulfillment of the Teheran conference decisions."



GI ENLIGHTMENT: The back side of a current war newsmap published by the Army is devoted to telling the story of American workers' production record. One of the captions from the production layout, reproduced above, says that American workers "are doing their share to win the war" by "turning out equipment at a rate never before equalled in the history of any country." Unions, however, are not mentioned.

Big CIO Union Puts 75% In War Bonds

NEW YORK, May 6—More than 75 percent of the funds of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America are in U. S. and Canadian War Bonds, according to an annual financial report issued by the union this week. The audit showed assets of $4,750,892 and liabilities of $410,778, leaving a balance of $4,340,113.

In a covering statement issued by Pres. Sidney Hillman and Secy-Treas. Jacob S. Potofsky, the ACWA points out that the audited report is that of the Amalgamated's General Office and does not reflect the financial position or the operations of the joint boards and local union affiliates.

More than 90 percent of the total income of the General Office was deprived during the past year from per capita payments. In addition, $1 initiation fee for each new member of every local was received. Present membership of the Amalgamated is 325,000. The constitution of the union limits local initiation fees to a maximum of $10 a member.

More than 50 per cent of the G.O's. expenses were incurred in organizational activities. Some 170 organizers are at present working in 34 states, three Canadian provinces and the District of Columbia, covering about 400 communities.

A total of $950,000 was expended and earmarked during 1943 for domestic and foreign war relief and other relief purposes, the union stated, compared to $735,000 total contributions for 1942.

The Amalgamated's income for the year ending Jan. 31, 1944 was $2,183,304, and expenses for the year totalled $1,533,083. Excess of income and other credits over expense and other deductions for the year totalled $708,108. A contribution of $100,000 was made to the CIO Political Action Committee.

Blast Avery

New York—Agents of the Metropolitan, John Hancock, and Prudential Life Insurance Companies at a meeting held at the CIO union's offices, condemned the un-American activities of Sewell Avery and Montgomery Ward officials, which was characterized as defiance of the Government and "open insurrection" in a resolution unanimously adopted at the meeting. A telegram of the resolution was forwarded to President Roosevelt. The agents pledged they would bring the facts of the case to the attention of their many thousands of policyholders.

Murray, in Movie, Tells Why We Fight

NEW YORK, May 6—Movie-goers have a chance to see and hear CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week in the current RKO news reel release, in which Murray and Royal Arch Gunnison, his interviewer, talk about "What Are We Fighting For?"

The movie deals mainly with postwar programs and im-mediate war aims. As Murray says in the reel:

"As I see it, we have two jobs. One of these jobs will be to guarantee that another Hitler, Mussolini or Hirohito or any coalition of even 10 percent dictators can never threaten the peace of the world again. We must have genuine realistic international cooperation built around active participation between the U.S., Britain, the Soviet Union and China."

The second job, Murray says, is "to create an economy of abundance at home. By that I mean full production and full employment." Pointing out that the Natl. Manufacturers Assn. scheme of a $100 billion dollar output after the war is not enough, he adds:

"We know now, as some doubted it before, how potentially rich this country is. Any country that can display such an outpouring of productivity with 10 million of its most vigorous workers in the armed forces, is not going to accept a return to an era of widespread unemployment. We should not be satisfied with less than $200 billion in national income."

As some of the nation's postwar needs whose satisfaction will lead to full production and employment, Murray cited the one million new houses needed each year, the new schools, hospitals, greatly increased food diets, and the like as examples of what could be done with a full national economy.

All that is needed, he said, is complete national unity of labor, business, farmers, churches and government to provide "through orderly discussion a postwar plan to guarantee a complete realization of the things our sons and daughters of the U. S. are fighting for."

secretary-treasurer, issued a statement which said in part:

"The condition existing at the Chicago plants of Montgomery Ward & Co. is due solely to the persistent and deliberate refusal of the company to comply with the directives of the National War Labor Board . . . The company is striking against the government.

"A government tribunal to resolve wartime labor disputes is necessary for the maintenance of labor's no-strike pledge, to which the CIO is firmly committed. The National War Labor Board was set up for this purpose. Responsibility for any interruption of production clearly rests with the party which defies this board's orders."

UNITED SUPPORT

The Chicago Industrial Union Council and the Illinois State Industrial Union Council are pitching in to insure a decisive election victory.

Independent and AFL unions are contributing support. The Railroad Brotherhoods have assigned some of their representatives to assist Local 20 in the election campaign.

NLRB JUMPS GUN

The need for concentrated and intensive activity in the few days left before the election is accentuated by the fact that the NLRB, in setting the date for the election, disregarded its customary procedure of allowing the union at least 21 days to prepare for a vote. In spite of strong protests from Local 20, the NLRB allowed the union only seven days.

By the time the election is held, Federal Judge William H. Holly will probably have rendered his decision on the question of the President's wartime power to seize the Montgomery Ward properties in Chicago to compel compliance with a Natl. War Labor Board directive.

In presenting the Government's case, Attorney General Francis Biddle showed clearly the importance of Montgomery Ward to the wartime economy, and the need and legality of the presidential seizure.

WAR BUSINESS

Piling up overwhelming proof, the Attorney General submitted affidavits showing:

(a) That if the Montgomery Ward labor problems are not settled in Chicago, they would spread to the company's facilities in other parts of the country engaged in the highly essential production of war materials.

(b) That any reduction in the flow of farm machinery (which is one of the chief Montgomery-Ward items) would seriously curtail food production.

(c) That government agencies have recognized the importance of the company to the war effort by granting priority ratings.

(d) That the company itself has filed over 30,000 applications for priority assistance from the War Production Board, thus admitting the essential wartime nature of its activities.

To all of this, the company, which has at least four times been found guilty of violating the Wagner Act, which has systematically and viciously discriminated against its employes, which has wantonly defied necessary wartime measures enacted by Congress, could only make the ridiculous comparison between a $600,000,000 corporation and a "little general store" on "Main Street in Burlington, Wis.," and raise a phoney cry that every "corner grocery" was threatened by governmental seizure.

STILL DEFIANT

Meanwhile Montgomery-Ward officials continued their active defiance of the government, following the pattern laid down by Sewell L. Avery, labor-hating, anti-Administration chairman of the company.

FBI agents, a few days ago, arrested Paul D. Sowell, assistant to the operating manager, for tearing down a government notice in the plant reinstating workers who had been illegally discharged by plant officials even after the government took over.

The deliberate attempt by the company to further aggravate the situation at Montgomery-Ward dovetails with the attempted actions of certain poll-tax Congressmen and anti-Administration Senators to force through a loaded investigation of the Montgomery-Ward dispute.

BROADEN PROBE

But the attempt to investigate only the legality of President Roosevelt's actions, which is purely a matter for the courts to decide, was successfully combatted in the Senate by Administration leaders led by Democratic Leader Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky.

Senator Barkley, pointing out the one-sided nature of Senator Harry Byrd's (Virginia poll-taxer) investigation resolution, convinced the Senate that the investigation should be broadened so as to bring to full public light the sordid, anti-war, anti-labor actions of Sewell Avery in his fight against the union and the government.

WOLCHOK STATEMENT

Samuel Wolchok, president of the United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes of America (CIO), inmmediately sent a message to Senator Pat McCarran, who is directing the investigation, pledging every assistance to the investigators.

Wolchok said:

"This situation has been created by Montgomery Ward's stubborn and arrogant refusal to accept the Directives of the War Labor Board and the President of the United States.

"The local union has a record of consistent acceptance of all War Labor Board Directives and of the President's request that the union terminate a strike at the Montgomery Ward Company.

"We are anxious to provide your committee with an accurate picture of those events which led to seizure."

Big Shots Fat In War & Peace

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

NEW YORK, May 6—Salary grabs by big shots in business are going on at an amazing rate despite the war, and far out of proportion to actual services rendered. Results of a survey published recently by the American Investors Union gives a long list of staggering salaries and other renumeration paid in 1943 to the top officials of some of the country's big corporations. Some of these officials receive huge salaries from each of two or more companies with which they are associated.

There's Tom Girdler who receives $137,500 from Republic Steel and the same amount from the Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corp. And B. Dahlberg who receives $111,831 from Certain-Teed Products Corp. and $71,800 from Celotex Corp.

Salaries in the motion picture and radio industry top the lot, according to the Investors Union report. L. B. Mayer of Loew's Inc. receives $1,138,992. He and the other two officials, N. M. Schenk and E. J. Mannix, together, pull down $3,051,039.

INDUSTRIAL FIELD

In the industrial field, says the Investors Union, "far too many corporate officers and directors receive compensation that is based on the false assumption that they are solely responsible for the record-breaking volume of business that is being handled.

"It is amazing but true that in 1943 large salaries and bonuses and costly pension schemes were still the rule rather than the exception despite the war, government orders and the nation's economic stabilization program."

The corporate compensation rocket was an old and painful story long before the war, but it is far worse today under war conditions.

NO FACT STRETCHING

"By no stretching of facts can it be maintained that managements are personally responsible for the level of war production and war profits," say the Investors Union. "Companies are doing capacity business because of the war and not because of their management."

Here are just a few of the big incomes some company big shots get:

J. H. Rand, Jr.,
Remington Rand $255,278
W. S. Gifford,
Amer. Tel. & Tel. $210,350
R. R. Deupree,
Procter & Gamble $200,000
E. G. Grace,
Bethlehem Steel $221,645
G. W. Hill,
American Tobacco $257,276

The report, which is well worth reading, appears in the April issue of "Your Investments," monthly publication of the American Investors Union, 10 East 40th St., New York, a non-profit organization "formed for the protection of the Investing Public." Single copies of the magazine are 50 cents, a year's subscription is $5.

See Delay Of London Parley

Washington, May 6—Postponement of the London world labor conference, or at least a shifting of the place, appears definite, what with travel restrictions to and from England and the imminent invasion of Europe.

In London, the General Council of the British Trades Union Congress has already voted to postpone the meeting due to travel restrictions. In Philadelphia, Sir Walter Citrine, TUC head, told the workers' section of the Intl. Labor Organization conference that the meeting would probably be held in Canada.

In Washington, indications were that the CIO would have no objection to meeting in Canada, provided travel facilities could be arranged for overseas delegates. A meeting there, it was indicated, would be preferred to any lengthy postponement of the conference.

Speaking in Philadelphia, Lombardo Toledano, head of the Confederation of Latin-American Labor (CTAL), indicated that the CTAL also would have no objection to Canada, but would object to a long postponement.

Further confirmation came in an Allied Labor News story from Toronto, which said that the Trades and Labor Congress, AFL, had welcomed the idea of holding the meeting in Canada and had designated Pat Sullivan, head of the Canadian Seamens Union as a delegate.

100% SUPPORT for a fourth term for President Roosevelt was voted this week by the CIO United Steelworkers of America, one of the largest unions in the world.

Steelworkers Back 4th Term For Roosevelt

Hailing FDR's leadership in war and peace, the CIO United Steelworkers' second constitutional convention this week enthusiastically endorsed a resolution urging President Roosevelt to continue serving the nation as Commander-in-Chief.

Ward Workers Vote CIO; Avery Still Blocks Peace

Montgomery Ward workers turned a big thumbs down on Boss Sewell Avery's anti-labor, anti-war antics this week to vote overwhelmingly for CIO. Avery, however, still continued his disruption by refusing to sign a union contract.

Eisenhower To CIO—'We Trust Your Weapons'

CLEVELAND, May 13—CIO's pledge to back the invasion with everything its five million members can deliver this week drew from General Dwight D. Eisenhower the statement that his armies poised for the invasion of Europe "will enter the battles ahead full of trust and confidence in the weapons that have been forged by American workers."

The Eisenhower message was in response to a pledge of support sent by Philip Murray, president of CIO and of the CIO United Steelworkers of America. Murray revealed the message here at the second constitutional convention of the union.

CIO TO EISENHOWER

The CIO cable to General Eisenhower said:

"More than five million CIO members and their families join with other Americans in heartfelt hope for overwhelming success in the coming attack by American and British forces on Fortress Europe.

"We trust that you and your men will find that the weapons hammered out by American workers will prove equal to your difficult task, and superior to those in the hands of the enemy.

"We pledge that the all-out production record which has made these American weapons possible will be continued wholeheartedly in complete support of the invasion and the mighty battles that will follow it until the Nazis are completely crushed."

EISENHOWER TO CIO

General Eisenhower replied:

"Please accept for yourself and convey to the five million CIO workers and their families my sincere appreciation and that of the men under my command for your heart-warming message."

"Rest assured that all of us will enter the battles ahead full of trust and confidence in the weapons that have been forged by American workers and we also look forwerd to the days when those same workers will again forge the tools of peace."

GI Blasts Army-Labor Unity Splitters

Washington, May 13—"There seems to be a subversive clique at work in America today, trying to arouse a revolt between soldier and worker," Pfc. Thomas E. Coll this week wrote from "'somewhere in Italy" to CIO Pres. Philip Murray. Coll sharply criticized American magazines and newspapers for distorting labor news, declaring that:

"Almost every magazine we pick up in our Day Rooms, or anywhere we can find them, contains either a picture story or an editorial telling us how the CIO or the AFL is helping the enemy.

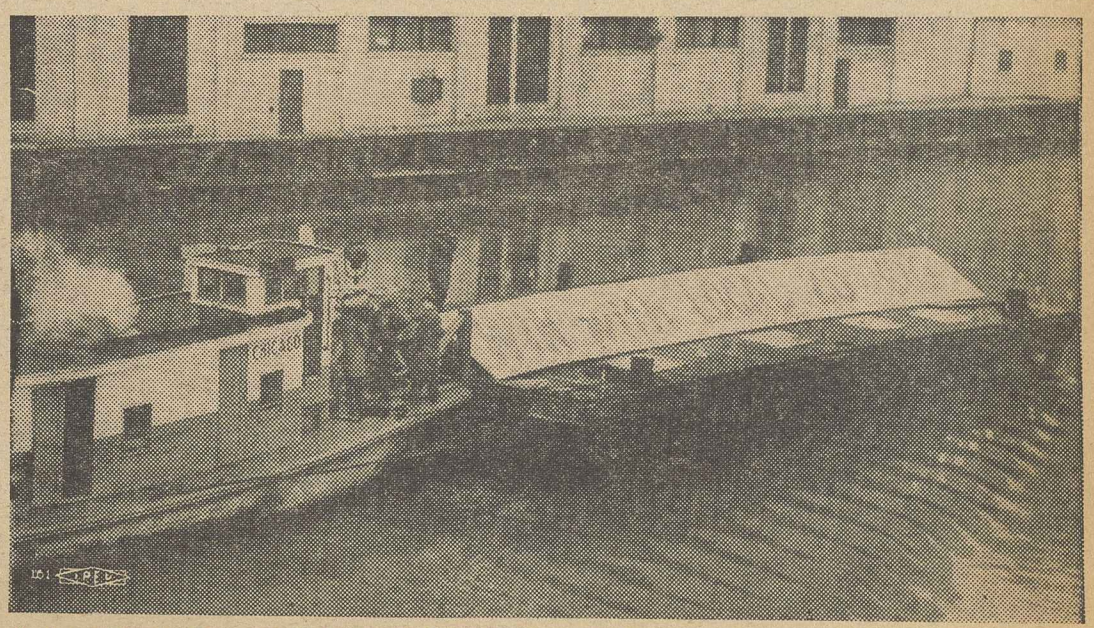
"We are led to believe that labor unions are tools of Hitler and Tojo. If we believe what we read, we would think that the American working men and women—our own families and friends—stay up nights figuring out ways to lose the war.

"Personally, I think the news we get and the pictures they send us, are downright insults to our intelligence. Thinking men are infuriated with the bunk that is cooked up for our benefit.'"

Flash— Dies to Quit Congress

WASHINGTON, May 15—Congressman Martin Dies, Texas labor baiter and chairman of the notorious Dies Committee, today announced that he will not be a candidate for re-election.

Dies ascribed his action to ill health and a desire to return to private business, although it was known that he probably would be faced for the first time in several years with a serious opposition to his renomination in the Democratic primary election.



MARITIME ELECTIONEERING featured the Montgomery Ward contest, won this week by the CIO United Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes. The union, prohibited from campaigning on the streets near the company's plant, claimed that the Chicago River, which flows directly past the plant's windows, is federal property. The barge and sign above helped win the election.

Two More Pro-FDR Men Win Primaries

WASHINGTON, May 13—Labor-endorsed candidates in primary elections held this week in Ohio and West Virginia scored decisive victories that gives great encouragement for further campaigns ahead.

In Ohio, Mayor Frank L. Lausche of Cleveland, endorsed by the Ohio CIO Council and CIO Political Action Committee, and backed by a joint labor political campaign, won the Democratic nomination for governor by an unprecedented majority over the total votes of his four opponents.

Mayor Lausche rolled up 178,561 votes to 63,440 for his closest opponent, the tory ex-congressman, Martin L. Sweeney. Lausche's statewide popularity with labor is based on his hard-hitting win-the-war policies and his strong support of labor-management committees in Cleveland war plants.

In West Virginia Rush D. Holt, defeatist ex-senator trying to stage a comeback to the Senate in the Democratic primaries, went down to defeat before Circuit Judge Clarence W. Meadows, strong supporter of President Roosevelt's policies. Holt carried only 34,965 votes to 85,509 for Meadows.

Va. CIO Meet Urges FDR to Run Again

By JACQUELINE BROPHY

DANVILLE, Va., May 13—Emil Rieve, president of the Textile Workers Union of America, this week told nearly 200 delegates assembled at Danville for the CIO Virginia State Industrial Union Council convention that "the United States will have private enterprise after the war, but not free enterprise." "Free enterprise without a considerable amount of help from government and workers' organizations cannot provide full production of goods and services after the war or, for that matter, at any time in the future," he added.

The convention adopted resolution urging President Roosevelt to run again, supporting his action in the Montgomery-Ward case, and urging continuance of OPA without restricting amendments. It laid plans for intensive political action.

Remarks by returned war veterans at an Army-Navy show that there is no time and one-half for men in foxholes and that the war isn't postponed if a soldier has a headache and doesn't feel like doing his bit, brought forth a resolution protesting anti-labor propaganda circulated among the armed forces.

Boyd Payton, regional director of the Textile Workers at Lynchburg, was elected president of the Council, with J. K. Lombard re-elected as secretary-treasurer.

Among the speakers were Director of Industrial Union Councils John Brophy who discussed the work of the War Labor Board, and declared that "the rise in cost of living has resulted from the failure to control farm and industrial prices and corporate profits," and Frank Bender, Maryland regional CIO director, who emphasized the importance of organizing so that the postwar economy will guarantee jobs for everyone able to work.

Council Pres. Ernest B. Pugh reported that organizational gains had been made in the food and tobacco processing industry, and plans are laid for an organizing campaign among the Newport News workers.

Highlander Folk School Gets ABC of Politics

MONTEAGLE, Tenn., May 13—Political action is the CIO's No. 1 job between now and November, Paul R. Christopher, Tennessee CIO regional director, this week told the CIO leaders attending the special one-month union training course in session at the Highlander Folk School.

Select CIO union leaders from Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, and Texas are at the school for an intensive course in advanced union organizational and administrative technique which will end May 28. Christopher delivered the opening address as the spokesman for the CIO southern regional directors who sponsored the course.

Christopher stressed the CIO's non-discrimination policy in his remarks on its clear-cut organization policy.

"The 6,000,000 workers who have joined the CIO attest to the wisdom of our policy for organizing the unorganized, regardless of race, creed or color," he said, "and this applies to the South as well as any other section of the country."

A course in CIO policy conducted by the southern CIO regional directors and other CIO officials is part of the training program. L. S. Buckmaster, vice-president and director of organization, United Rubber Workers, will conduct this class for one week.

Dr. George S. Mitchell, Southeastern regional director of the CIO Political Action Committee, and members of his staff will be in charge during the last two weeks, when emphasis will be given to the CIO's program of political and legislative action.

May 21 a special week-end conference on farm-labor problems and cooperation will be addressed by Paul Sifton of the National Farmers Union.

Southern CIO members unable to attend the full four-week session will be accepted for the last two weeks beginning May 15, for the special political action subjects and studies of labor-management problems.

Hit Congress Record At ACW Parley

Chicago, May 13—The record of the 78th Congress for the past two years is indicted in the bluntest possible terms in the report of the General Executive Board to the 14th biennial convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America which opens here Monday. The Convention will last one week.

Charging that Congress has scuttled President Roosevelt's program for economic stabilization, the union report declares that a majority of Republicans in Congress, together with anti-Administration Democrats, "have spared no effort to make partisan political capital of the difficulties and dislocations which the nation has faced in this period of crisis."

The report states that "outright defeatists and appeasers" are mainly represented among reactionary Republican forces. It charges that the anti-Administration combination has defaulted on every vital need for the establishment of a secure and unified home front "which will give maximum support to our armed forces on the battle-front."

Listing the gains made by the Amalgamated during the past four years, the report states that 60,000 new members have brought the membership total to 325,000. Some 10,000 members are in the armed forces.

Two joint boards and 116 new locals have been charted during this four year period.

Due to emergency conditions, no convention was held in 1942.

Blast Stalling

Newark, N. J., May 13—Bethlehem Steel should stop stalling on wage demands of the CIO United Office & Professional Workers Union, which represents office workers at the company's Hoboken plant, the union said this week in an open letter to the Natl. War Labor Board. The WLB Shipbuilding Commission currently is considering the UOPWA's case.

POLITICAL PUNCH of the Los Angeles Newspaper Guild is packed into papers, like the one reproduced above, which are circulated in Congressional districts to support pro-labor candidates. (See story below).

L. A. Guild Political Papers Scorch Hides Of Reactionaries

LOS ANGELES, May 13—Direct political action through a project best suited to the needs of the union involved has been undertaken by the Los Angeles Newspaper Guild—the writing and editing of campaign newspapers for labor's candidates.

These papers have created a sensation in all Los Angeles political circles, and are creating consternation in the ranks of labor's political and economic enemies.

The newspapers present factual material only (no smears) and cover the complete records of the candidates involved. They also include plenty of pictures, cartoons and, in one case, a district map.

Lead stories in the papers are the platforms of labor's candidates. Points of attack on labor's enemies stem from people of the district in directly quoted stories; yarns on servicemen's objection to votes on a phoney state's rights bill come from servicemen themselves.

The papers are entirely a volunteer project of members of the Guild's political action department, Don Kirby, director. They are edited by Guild Administrative Officer G. K. Williams, formerly on the news desk of the Los Angeles Daily News.

The Guild was the first CIO local in California to subscribe one hundred per cent of its quota to the state political action fund, and the first Newspaper Guild local to subscribe 100 per cent of its quota to the American Newspaper Guild's national CIO political action fund.

'Why Women Cry' Author With UAW

Detroit, May 13—Elizabeth Hawes, author of the best-seller, "Why Women Cry," famous fashion designer, leader in the child care movement, and a member of the CIO United Automobile Workers, is now working for the UAW as a representative in the Education Dept.

Miss Hawes, who was one of the world's foremost fashion designers, in 1942 went to work at Wright Aeronautics, Patterson, N. J., as a grinder, and joined the UAW-CIO. Since then she has been active in child care work and working women's groups.

Fur Workers Meet This Week

Atlantic City, N. J., May 13—Delegates to the 15th biennial convention of the CIO Intl. Fur & Leather Workers Union, scheduled to be held here May 14-20, are arriving from the fur centers of the United States and Canada.

The convention, second since the war, will be the first joint convention of the fur and leather workers. Pres. Ben Gold will review the union's war and organizational activities for the past two years and chart a program for the crucial two years ahead.

Steel Parley Backs Fourth Term for FDR

CLEVELAND, May 13—Full CIO backing for a fourth term for Pres. Roosevelt was assured this week, when the million-strong United Steelworkers of America, responding to a fervent plea from CIO Pres. Philip Murray, pledged its unqualified support for the President's re-election. The union also urged the re-nomination and re-election of Vice-Pres. Henry A. Wallace.

The 2,300 delegates to the convention of the USA-CIO, repreesenting an enrolled membership of 949,938 steelworkers, also heard Chairman Sidney Hillman of the CIO Political Action Committee hail FDR as "the only leader we can trust on his record."

With the national leadership of the CIO and all of its major unions on record for a fourth term, the full weight of the movement will now be thrown behind the campaign to retain Roosevelt at the nation's helm.

HIT STEEL FORMULA

Spearheading the drive for revision of the Little Steel formula and for a stabilized war economy, the convention called upon all organized labor and all other public-spirited Americans to support the Steelworkers' program for strengthening the home front.

Besides adjustment of wages to increased living costs, this program includes a guaranteed annual wage, vigorous price control, overall rationing and "a firm taxation policy calculated to raise the funds necessary for victory out of the luxury living levels reflected in corporate profits and high income brackets, and not out of the food budgets of workers."

Denouncing any interruptions of production as aid to the enemy, and hitting at employers who take advantage of labor's patriotism to provoke or exploit it, the convention enthusiastically renewed the union's no-strike pledge by an all-out unanimous vote.

A few dissenters, who urged withdrawal of the pledge, were roundly rebuked by Pres. Murray.

"What sort of letter would you send to your boy overseas explaining such action?" he asked them.

"Victory must come first. For without victory, you'll have fascism—and with fascism, you'll have no labor unions and no liberty. We're fighting Nazi tyranny to a finish. That's why we gave our no-strike commitment."

Other major convention actions included full support for the CIO Political Action Committee, an urgent demand that Congress pass the anti-poll-tax bill, strong support for international labor unity inclusive of all the United Nations, and the adoption of comprehensive programs on behalf of servicemen, for better housing and for post-war planning generally.

MURRAY ON FDR

The reasons for a fourth term for Pres. Roosevelt, as expressed in Murray's opening speech and in the resolution finally adopted, were stated as follows:

"Unity among the people at home and unity among the United Nations are the foundation for an early and decisive defeat of the Axis forces and for the establishment of a durable and just peace.

"Our Commander-in-Chief, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, is the man who through his policies and action has demonstrated the will, courage and statesmanship to forge the unshakable unity among the peace-loving common people for victory.

"In the interest of national unity to bring speedy victory to our cause and to assure the realization for the people of the Four Freedoms, we express for ourselves, our membership, and the American people, regardless of political affiliation, the firm conviction that Franklin Delano Roosevelt must be a candidate for re-election for the Presidency of the United States in November of this year and that he shall be overwhelmingly re-elected."

FDR Hails Job Done By U. S. Workers

CLEVELAND, May 13—Pres. Roosevelt paid high tribute to American labor's contribution to victory in his message this week to the United Steelworkers' convention.

"It is a source of satisfaction to the nation that the work performed by American wage earners in the manufacture and delivery of munitions and implements of war is having such a vital effect on every sector of the far-flung battlefront," he said.

"The effort has been splendid and the skill, speed and capacity for cooperation have made an industrial output which has never been equaled before.

"I am appreciative also of the American workers in every aspect of the war effort as well as in that most important part which they take on the production lines.

"They have made a splendid contribution through purchases of war bonds, both out of their union treasury and by their individual purchases. They have made an adaptation of civilian life to the needs of war with sincere determination to endure in good spirit the inconveniences made necessary by the war.

"The morale of American workers has been good. To you and your fellow officers and members who have contributed to this good performance and this high morale, I wish to express my thanks and at the same time to urge the continuation of the drive to maintain and, if possible, increase our production levels.

"We are approaching the decisive period in our great struggle against the enemies of mankind. I know that American labor will continue its active support and cooperation in the tremendous effort that must be made to mobilize our maximum strength for the early and decisive defeat of our nation's enemies."

Full Text of Murray Statement on FDR 4th Term

(Full text of statement backing fourth term for President Roosevelt, made by Philip Murray, president of CIO and of CIO United Steelworkers of America, at union's second constitutional convention in Cleveland this week).

I desire to submit to the delegates assembled here in Convention my own judgment concerning internal economic and political conditions in the United States. This is predicated upon experiences which all of us have had in the past few years.

During the fall of 1932, I had the honor to call upon Franklin D. Roosevelt at the Executive Mansion in Albany, New York, whilst he was Governor of that great State, and pledged, on behalf of the labor group which I was privileged to represent, our wholesome support of his candidacy for the Presidency of the United States.

ECONOMIC DEPRESSION

Our country was then in the throes of economic despair. Mass unemployment trailed in the wake of the Nation. Poverty was rampant. The country suffered from national impoverishment. Almost every segment of our population felt the heavy impact of bad political and industrial leadership. The Nation then had poverty and disease in a land of plenty.

History will record that period as one of the most dangerous to the security of our country and to the permanency of our democratic institutions.

Then came the election of Mr. Roosevelt, and later the lifting of the people from the mire of despondency to a better day and a fuller life. Much needed social legislation was enacted to advance the interests of the underprivileged, and provide greater security for the Nation. Industry, business and the common people went through a period of economic and political resurrection.

It required great statesmanship to steer this Nation through that crisis. With Mr. Roosevelt at the helm, the country was again restored to a position where the people could enjoy its bounties.

It is needless for me to enumerate here the manifold improvements that have been brought into the lives of the people, due entirely to the noble instincts and great leadership of the world's outstanding statesman and humanitarian.

Today our Nation is again passing through another major crisis, and with it all of the universe. Never has there been a time in our national history when the people needed leadership and unity as they do today. The enemies of the common man seek the complete overthrow of democracy, and with it the freedoms of the people.

Millions of our young men and women are today in global hellholes fighting and dying for our right to enjoy the blessings that God, in His Infinite Wisdom, decreed human beings should enjoy. In the midst of this world carnage people are again praying for guidance to deliver them from the terrors of destruction.

We here in the United States have a solemn duty to provide inspiration to our people at home and to all mankind. That duty can best be fulfilled by a declaration of unity in support of our Commander-in-Chief.

Unity among the people at home and unity among the United Nations are the foundation for an early and decisive defeat of the Axis forces, and for the establishment of a durable and just peace.

FORGES UNITY

Our Commander-in-Chief, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, is the man who through his policies and action has demonstrated the will, courage and statesmanship to forge the unshakeable unity among the peace-loving common people for victory.

It is, therefore, my earnest belief and firm conviction that in the interest of national unity to bring speedy victory to our cause and to assure the realization for the people of the Four Freedoms, Franklin D. Roosevelt must be a candidate for reelection to the Presidency of the United States and that the overwhelming majority of the people of this Nation, regardless of political affiliation demand his reelection.

Murray Wants 'Invite' to Steel Formula's Wake

Cleveland, May 13 — CIO Pres. Philip Murray put his feelings about the Little Steel formula in a nutshell at the USA-CIO convention.

"I have never liked the Little Steel formula," he said. "As a matter of fact, I have detested it since its origin.

"I attended its baptism; I participated in its confirmation; and, by the grace of God, I hope to be at its wake."

For A Fourth Term For FDR

"Never has there been a time in our national history when the people needed leadership and unity as they do today . . . We here in the United States have a solemn duty to provide inspiration to our people at home and to all mankind. That duty can best be fulfilled by a declaration of unity in support of our Commander-in-Chief."

That is how CIO Pres. Philip Murray led up to his stirring call for a fourth term for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The whole American people know Pres. Roosevelt's magnificent record of national leadership—how he lifted the country out of the quagmire of depression and despair and led it to the solid ground of economic and social progress.

Labor in particular owes him a debt of undying gratitude. It suffered most of all from the poverty and unemployment which preceded the New Deal.

It gained most of all from the progressive social legislation which Roosevelt promoted—laws guaranteeing the right to organize and affording a greater measure of security and opportunity to the working people.

But the world war has furnished an even greater test of Roosevelt's leadership. He has met this test magnificently. He has mobilized the nation for victory as no other leader could have done. He has been truly a people's leader in a people's war.

Roosevelt is the symbol and inspirer of national unity for victory. He has also won world renown as the most consistent, effective and aggressive advocate of the closest United Nations unity for victory over fascism and to lay the groundwork for enduring peace and postwar prosperity.

America cannot dispense with such leadership in this most critical year of world history.

Murray's call for a fourth term for Pres. Roosevelt therefore expresses the heartfelt desire of nearly every CIO member and of all other thoughtful and patriotic Americans who set their country's interests ahead of petty partisan political considerations.

Human 'Machines' and the Annual Wage

Philip Murray has expressed the case for a guaranteed annual wage far more eloquently than we could do. So this editorial is ready-made, culled from his remarks to the recent Steelworkers' convention:

"Isn't it reasonable, isn't it fair that consideration should be given to the fact that the American wage earner, who is now working more than 40 hours a week, possibly up to 48, 50 or 54 hours, is expending more energy, is burning up more of his human machine, is investing more of his body in the work he is doing at his particular job?

"Isn't it therefore true that this individual, who may have a bigger take-home earning this year by dint of the greater effort he is putting into his work, will have this frame of his exhausted and worn out a few years sooner than ordinarily would be the case?

"American employers, and employers all over the world, charge depreciation against a machine going down, wearing out. They set aside contingent funds to protect the interests of their investment against the wearing out of a machine.

"Why not have something done to protect the interests of the individual members of your families against the loss of this human machine?

"Why don't our American industrialists recognize the almost superhuman sacrifices that American workers are making today to win this war?

"What are our men of might and influence and power going to do to protect the interests of American wage earners against poverty, disease and death, if mass unemployment should again gain control in the wake of the present war?

"An answer to all that is America's universal recognition of the establishment of a minimum annual wage for all American wage earners.

"It is my candid and conscientious conviction that all of American labor, and even those who may not be placed in the category of so-called labor, should join in the national crusade for the establishment of a minimum weekly and guaranteed annual wage for all workers.

"It is economically possible. The nation will save money. Industry will save money. It is cheaper to keep a nation at work than to try to keep a nation that is idle.

"The development of the annual wage in the United States will stimulate the industrial ingenuity of our great industrials and manufacturers to the point where they will want to provide fuller employment to protect themselves against what they contend (untruly, however) to be the uneconomical aspect of the annual wage itself."

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

IT IS hard to think of the United Steelworkers of America as a young union.

It has so many of the qualities of its members' production—strength, toughness of fibre, permanence, backbone.

Just as steel is the basic fabric of modern industry, in peace and still more in war, so the USA-CIO seems to furnish the foundation, the basic structure and pattern of the modern labor movement.

Yet this union, with its mature leadership and its staunch and steady rank and file, is younger than the Roosevelt New Deal.

In his eloquent appeal for a fourth term endorsement of Roosevelt, Pres. Philip Murray did not have to argue with the steel convention delegates.

He had only to remind them that Roosevelt was responsible for the laws that made it possible for their union to grow, and they were with him to a man.

* * *

Starting from scratch on June 17, 1936, when the Steel Workers Organizing Committee was formed, the steelworkers' union now has a total enrolled membership of 949,938—making it a close second to the country's largest union, the UAW-CIO.

This total includes 712,699 dues-paying members, as of March, and 201,605 members in the armed armed forces.

This amazing growth was made possible by laws that came with the Roosevelt administration, guaranteeing the right to organize, restraining employers from violence and discrimination, requiring reinstatement with back pay for workers unfairly discharged.

Once freed from company domination by such laws and by the organizing efforts of the CIO, the steelworkers quickly became the staunchest supporters of FDR and his progressive policies.

* * *

But the USA-CIO had even more compelling reasons than these for its convention call for a fourth term.

This union is not only the backbone of the modern labor movement, it is also the backbone of our war production.

The union's production plans, finally adopted in substance by the government, the determination and unremitting effort of its members, have so boosted the production of steel and other war materials that there was actually an excess of steel capacity in 1943.

True to their countless buddies and relatives in the armed forces, true to the cause of labor, and true to their country, the steelworkers have set an example to all of single-minded devotion to victory.

They have rallied behind Pres. Roosevelt, not only as the greatest friend labor has had in the White House, but also as the Commander-in-Chief who has demonstrated "the will, courage and statesmanship to forge unshakable unity" at home and among the United Nations for early victory and enduring peace.

* * *

One of the most moving convention impressions was the warmth and deep human sympathy and understanding of Philip Murray, which stirred the delegates again and again.

No one can marshall statistics and logic better than he, as he develops the overwhelming case of the Steelworkers against the Little Steel formula, for a square deal and for real economic stabilization.

But time and again, Murray would clothe figures and arguments with living human warmth and emotion, as when he demanded to know why companies which can set aside money for machine deprication cannot also set aside money for human depreciation, to furnish an annual wage to workers wearing themselves out in their service.

On occassions like these—as when he translates living cost figures into terms of the human experience of a worker's family—Murray seems to become the living voice of the millions of workers whose cause he pleads.

Outstanding in the officers' report and in Murray's keynote speech, besides the union's growth, war contributions and wage case, was the emphasis on observance of the no-strike pledge, on international labor unity and on labor political action.

Pointing to all the benefits that should flow from international labor cooperation, as consistantly advocated by the CIO, Murray declared that one consideration alone should be decisive for American labor—namely, the power of an international mechanism uniting labor in all countries to prevent future wars.

Warns Against Anti-Semitism

New York, May 13—A warning that the extension of anti-Semitism would be a major factor in the campaign of anti-American elements to destroy democratic freedom was sounded this week by an outstanding Catholic layman, Associate Justice Frank Murphy of the U. S. Supreme Court.

Speaking at an interfaith unity session of the B'nai B'rith national war service convention here, Justice Murphy said:

"Intolerance may first wreak its vengeance on the Jews but it will not stop there.

"Anti-Semitism as well as other racial hatreds have never contributed in the slightest to the solution of any problem, economic, social or political. On the contrary, racism hinders the solution of such matters by diverting our efforts from finding a solution to finding a scapegoat."

Murphy characterized anti-Semitism as "not only un-American but anti-Christian," declaring that "the very basis of the Christian faith is a belief in the essential equality and dignity of the individual man."

"Christianity," Murphy pointed out, "further teaches all human beings are neighbors, whatever their race, color or beliefs. To love one neighbor and not another, to hate and persecute our Jewish neighbors, is simply un-Christian."

Ward's Avery Licked; Workers Vote CIO

CHICAGO, May 13—Montgomery Ward workers this week hurled back in the face of Sewell Avery, the company's malice-poisoned chairman of the board, the charge that they did not want the CIO Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes Union to represent them, by voting for it 2,440 to 1,593 in an election held here by the Natl. Labor Relations Board.

Some 4,800 eligible employes, voting in two units, returned a sweeping three-to-two victory for Local 20 of the CIO retail union. In the larger of the two units, the vote was 2340 for the union to 1565 against, and in the other unit, composed of administrative employes, the vote was 100 for to 28 against.

At the conclusion of the election, the business was turned back to the owners by the U. S. Government which had taken over April 27 when Pres. Avery was removed bodily from the building by two soldiers.

A hint that the concern was to be turned back to the owners had been given in an authorized comment made earlier by President Roosevelt in which he stated: "If the election shows that the union does not have a majority of the employes, that will end the case. On the other hand, if the election shows that the union has a majority, then the management has declared that it is willing to continue its contract and that will end the case."

Avery later denied that he had any intention of continuing the present contract, renewal of which precipitated the battle and reiterated his refusal to sign any contract containing a maintenance of membership clause. He was quoted as saying the election was "of no consequence, except that it shows the dominance of racketeering methods."

Court action was taken by the Government to obtain an injunction to restrain company officials from interfering while the business was under government control was dropped when Federal Judge William H. Holly refused to rule on the constitutional aspects of the case, and tore up his decision without making it public, after he learned that the plant had been returned to private management.

Meanwhile the Natl. War Labor Board has taken further action against Montgomery-Ward in two other cases. It has directed that a maintenance of membership clause be included in a contract with Local 25 of the CIO Retail Union at the mail order house in St. Paul, Minn., and has referred to Pres. Roosevelt a dispute with the Hummer Mfg. Co., Monty-Ward subsidiary, in Springfield, Ill., for refusing to comply with a maintenance of membership clause. This case, which has been pending two years, involves the AFL Machinists Union.

and other miners' leaders—"not all of them, because there was one man missing" (an obvious reference to John L. Lewis)—had gone to Roosevelt and asked him to run for President.

CREDIT TO ROOSEVELT

At that time "the miners were eating garbage," he said, "and getting $1.50 for a ten-hour day." The nation was "economically bankrupt, there was no industrial leadership, and labor unions for all practical purposes were destroyed."

Murray gave full credit to Roosevelt for the rehabilitation of the country, and for the laws guaranteeing the right to organize and restraining employers from anti-union discrimination, which made it possible for the Steelworkers and other unions to grow to their present strength.

"The President," he said, "is still America's outstanding leader."

Hillman declared that "to win victory and eradicate fascism we must have a leadership that on its record can be trusted not to fall for some new form of appeasement.

INTL. COOPERATION

"We must have leadership in the White House and in Congress that will not look toward imperialism but toward international cooperation.

"In these days of selective service a person, regardless of his own desires, must and will be selected. We must make sure that Franklin Roosevelt is re-elected. The only leader we can trust on his record is FDR."

Hillman said those who had hoped for the reform of the Republican party were disappointed, and that "the real forces in control of that party are making no mistake in the choice of their candidate." He denounced Thomas Dewey as responsible for one of the worst laws to make it impossible for most servicemen to vote.

The convention called for a post-war housing program to erect 50,000 new homes each year for five years at an average cost of $5,000 per house. It pointed out that many houses in steel towns are not fit for use, 30% of them having no inside baths and 15% no inside running water.

Noting that the Steelworkers' executive board has already provided that returning servicemen need pay no union initiation fees, the convention authorized special union machinery for safeguarding the interests of servicemen, called for a special fund for their benefit, and asked Congress to adopt generous measures for their relief, education and rehabilitation.

Murray was enthusiastically hailed for his "statesmanlike leadership of American labor", in a resolution thanking him for his "outstanding services to his union, to labor and to the war effort."

In other convention actions, the Steelworkers praised the War Labor Board and the President for their firm action in the Montgomery Ward case; assailed Howard Smith and other enemies of the Board; opposed national service legislation; denounced the Dies committee as seeking to disunite the American people and disrupt the war effort; and assailed the Frey amendment to the Natl. Labor Relations Act.

80,000 Girls In Steel Union!

Cleveland, May 13—Steel, once looked upon as man's industry, now has many women engaged in some of the hardest production jobs.

The number of women members of the United Steelworkers has increased from 20,000 to as many as 80,000 since the war, according to the officers' report to the union's convention.

The union has welcomed them with open arms, insisting on equal pay for equal work and other rights. Some 478 women now hold union office, as local officers, shop stewards, committee members, etc.

Equally welcome to equal union rights have been many Negro workers who have entered the steel industry since the war.

The number of Negro members of the USA-CIO has doubled, increasing from 35,000 in 1940 to 70,000 at the end of 1943.

Other new members of the United Steelworkers include 10,000 white-collar workers in the offices of some 50 organized steel companies.

Soviet Labor Heads Greet Steelworkers

Moscow, May 12 (ALN)—A joint message of greetings was cabled this week to the second constitutional convention of the CIO United Steelworkers of America, meeting in Cleveland, by Mikhail Ievgrafov, president of the Soviet Steel and Ironworkers Union, and Roman Grankin, president of the Union of Heavy Machine Building Workers of the USSR.

Addressing their message to USA-CIO president Philip Murray, who is also president of the CIO, the Soviet trade union leaders said:

"Through you, we send to all the members of your union—a militant section of the U. S. working-class—our heartiest greetings and best wishes for further achievements in the production of armaments and strengthening the military might of the United States in order to hasten the defeat of Hitlerite Germany and her accomplices.

"Soviet steel workers, undaunted by difficulties, are working heroically and selflessly for the sake of victory. We are watching with closest attention the war effort of American workers, firmly convinced that the hour is close at hand when the USSR, U. S. and Great Britian will deliver simultaneous blows from west to east that will smash Hitler's war machine.

"We express our conviction that the militant cooperation established during this war will be maintained after victory is won and will be strengthened in our common struggle for a better future for all mankind."

Urge 4th Term

New York, May 13—The drafting of President Roosevelt for a fourth term and the formulation of plans for an international peace organization and for a United States planning board to prepare a program which will guarantee full employment after the war were endorsed this week by the Executive Committee of the American Labor Party.

Legion Labor Meet

Chicago, May 3—A national conference of trade union members who also are members of the American Legion will be held here June 3 and 4 at the Hotel Sherman, according to George C. Danfield, secretary of the Natl. Conference of Union Labor Legionnaires.

Annual Wage Good For U. S.—McDonald

CLEVELAND, May 13—A guaranteed annual wage, requested by the CIO United Steelworkers of America, would be good for the workers, good for the nation, and can easily be met by the profit-swollen steel corporations. That was the message brought to the American people by David J. McDonald, secretary-treasurer of the union, in a nation-wide broadcast last Sunday over CIO's Labor for Victory Program.

Speaking just prior to the opening of the USA-CIO's second constitutional convention here, McDonald pointed out that while the steel workers are faced with insecurity, living from depression to depression, the steel companies have been guaranteed fat profits.

"The U. S. Steel Corp., the largest steel corporation in the world, had average net earnings after taxes for the period 1936 through 1939 of $44,732,000," he said.

"Assuming that this company breaks even in 1944, which means operating at less than 50 percent of capacity, it will be entitled to a check from the U. S. through 1939 of $44,732,000," he said.

"In the event the U. S. Steel Corp. incurs a loss in 1944 equal to its loss in 1938 when its annual operations were 40 percent, it will receive a check from the U. S. Treasury of $55,451,000. Not bad!"

McDonald pointed out that the steel workers have suffered long, lean years interspersed with only comparatively short periods of earnings that could assure them a minimum standard of living.

"It is axiomatic that where workers are assured full employment and economic security, they then furnish the backbone for the mass purchasing power so essential for the continued turning of the wheels of industry," he declared.

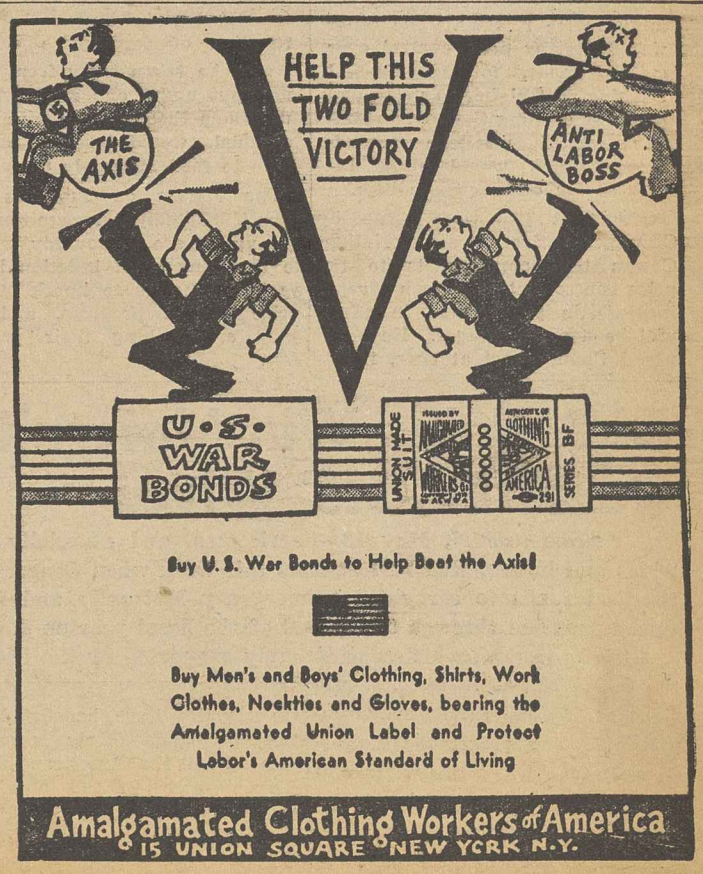
"If the steel workers are guaranteed an annual wage, thereby assuring continuity of employment, they will have the security which will permit them to purchase automobiles, refrigerators and the thousand and one other articles which require steel. This very demand is what creates the consequent demand in the industries that in turn require steel."

McDonald said that the steel industry is in a peculiarly fortunate position so far as guaranteeing an annual wage is concerned, for the industry can plan in advance much of its output, producing a substantial percentage of its product for anticipated sales, rather than having to wait to produce on the basis of available orders.

Brophy, Gompers' Kin Are Married

Klamath Falls, Ore., May 13—Lieutenant Philip N. Brophy of the U. S. Naval Reserve, son of John Brophy, director of CIO Industrial Union Councils, was married here recently to Beryl May Gompers, great granddaughter of Samuel Gompers.

The wedding took place at Sacred Heart Church. The young couple will make their home in this city for the time being.



Polltaxers' Filibuster Blocks Repeal Bill

WASHINGTON, May 13—The long-awaited Senate debate on the polltax repeal bill (HR 7) began as scheduled on May 9. As the CIO NEWS went to press, the polltaxers were whipping up their filibuster and were openly defying the patriotic majority in the Senate that wanted to vote for the bill and get on with other war business.

A filibuster can be defeated only by cloture (motion to end debate) and cloture takes a two-thirds majority—64 votes of the 96. The polltaxers and some of their more faint-hearted friends from non-polltax states have been predicting that the first cloture vote, which is set for May 15, will be defeated and then the bill will be shelved.

The real issue, however, is on the merits of the bill itself—not on the question of cloture. Cloture is simply a means of speeding passage of the bill. If, by the time you read this, cloture has been defeated, it doesn't mean that HR 7 has been defeated on its merits.

Two new developments late this week were the exposure of New York Governor Thomas E. Dewey's weak stand against repeal of the polltax and the filing of a petition in the Senate, bearing the names of 29 members, and seeking to close debate so that the Senate could declare itself one way or the other on the repeal issue.

The exposure of Dewey came via a telegram sent by Walter White, executive secretary of the Natl. Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, who asked the probable Republican Presidential candidate to take a definite stand for the repeal bill and for a cloture vote to stop the filibuster of Southern Senators against it. White asked Dewey to urge Republican members of the Senate to vote for cloture.

Dewey's reply was weak. He said: "My views on this subject are well known. I have always fought against the polltax and every other device to deprive free people of their votes."

White's reply said: "To say one is against the polltax but refrain from advocating specific steps to abolish it is not enough."

The 29 Senators who signed the petition for a cloture vote so that a decision could be reached on the repeal bill included:

Republicans—Ball of Minnesota, Brooks of Illinois, Burton of Ohio, Capper of Kansas, Cordon of Oregon, Davis of Pennsylvania Ferguson of Michigan Langer of North Dakota Taft of Ohio, Vandenburg of Michigan and Wherry of Nebraska.

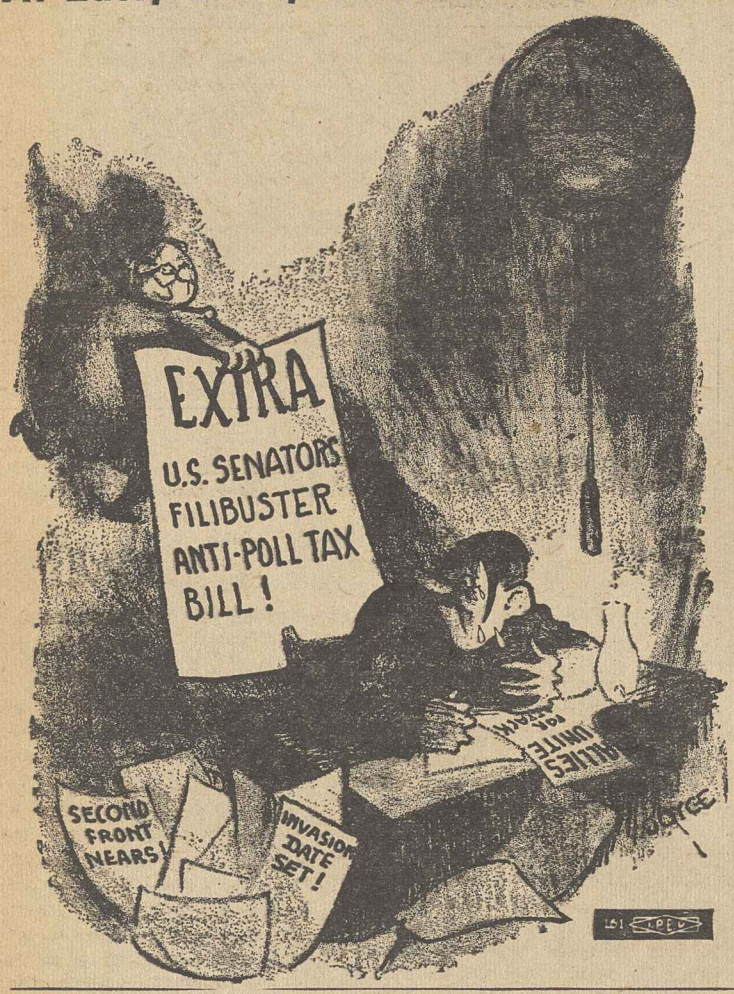
Progressive—La Follette of Wisconsin.

Repeal of the undemocratic polltax which keeps ten million Americans from voting and fastens polltax Congressmen on the backs of 130 million Americans still stands as a major task before all Americans.

Typical of the tirades used against HR 7 by the polltaxers is the false statement that repeal is an "insult to the South." It is nothing of the kind. Southern citizens, when they can vote in any numbers, vote the way their fellow-citizens from the North do—on the issues and for the men who are pledged to carry out a progressive, win-the-war program.

If HR 7 is blocked by a polltax filibuster, it simply means that we have to start over again—as we did in 1942, as we will do until repeal is won.

At Last, Adolf, Some Good News!



Price Control Bill Ready for Action

WASHINGTON, May 13—Price control renewal moved into the final stages this week, with both Senate and House Banking Committees settling down to write their bills after lengthy hearings in which CIO wound up its testimony a week ago.

As the public debate momentarily quieted down on Capitol Hill, out in the field the workers, farmers, merchants and consumers of every kind mobilized for "Price Control Week," set for May 17-24.

Meanwhile, two additional threats to price control effectiveness developed late this week in the form of new amendments prepared for presentation to the Senate Banking and Currency Committee.

One amendment would emasculate triple damage penalties assessed against OPA price regulation violators and would harrass OPA through time-consuming administrative reviews. The other would destroy price control over cotton goods, forcing low-cost clothing still higher in price, and probably opening the door to similar special privilege amendments which would allow increases for other commodities.

CIO locals again were warned by CIO Legislative Director Nathan Cowan that amendments to the price control act will mean a rapid increase in prices that, in effect, will be a cut in wages. He again urged them to act at once, insisting that the act be renewed without amendments.

INFLATIONISTS RETREAT

The inflation crew retreated on at least one front with a grudging announcement by some Republicans that they were halting the anti-food-subsidy campaign. This however, was not a retreat in depth, since it was also announced from the Republican side that the fight for a "single food administrator" or "czar" would be continued.

Under this scheme, dug up out of last year's ashes, the whole function of food price control would be taken away from OPA and put under one man, on the unspoken theory that such an individual would be more amenable to food monopoly pressure.

The retreat on subsidies was, even if belatedly, a recognition that the voters are thoroughly aroused to the dangers of inflation in the various schemes to knock out the price control program, and that they are making their pressure felt.

CIO Helps Win Maternity Care for GIs' Wives

WASHINGTON, May 13—Servicemen, and especially their wives and babies, won real benefits this week when Congress authorized funds to carry the "Emergency Maternity and Infant Care" program through to the end of the fiscal year on June 30.

The program, which was strongly supported by the CIO and the CIO Women's Auxiliaries, provides a $6,700,000 deficiency appropriation. The program gives assistance to servicemen's wives and babies from pregnancy through the first year of infancy.

Already more than 250,000 service families have benefitted from the program. Only opposition came from the American Medical Assn., which wanted a straight cash subsidy that could be tapped for high individual fees in each case.

Auxiliaries Do Swell Job with Servicemen

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

As the day of the final all-out United Nations attack on Hitler's force comes closer and closer, all of us are thinking about ways in which we can help our boys in the armed forces. The CIO Textile Auxiliary in Cumberland, Md., has been doing a remarkably effective job. Three months ago they started to issue a mimeographed monthly newsletter to the boys from their union in the armed services. They send messages from some of the mothers, news about where their servicemen are and what they're doing, as well as union and home town news.

It's a big success. In fact, many union members wanted to help, too, so the auxiliary has organized a "letter league" with 25 cents monthly dues to finance the project which anyone can join who wants to work on it. And the boys love it.

A special service to prisoners of war is the latest undertaking of the National Maritime Union Auxiliary. They've just heard that their first package, sent last November, to a brother imprisoned in Germany, got through. His thank-you letter concludes: "I wish to thank you for the interest you have shown in my mother."

We often wonder what the boys themselves want from us at home. Hazel Gray of Los Angeles Transport Service Auxiliary is willing to share with us an interesting letter from her son.

"First of all," he says, "I think there must be realization that talking about war experiences is out. A man can't tell you how it feels to jump in a fox hole when planes come strafing over. You have no knowledge of the experience he went through to learn to build it and use it.

"A natural feeling of reticence overcomes most of us, even in jobs like mine. If we say that what we are doing is the thing that won the war, we exaggerate our own importance. On the other hand, if we pass it over lightly we are apt to make it look as though we wanted some one to gush and say, 'You're too modest.' So let us alone. The things that we want to come out will come out in spite of us, and the others are probably best left unsaid.

"Next must come the realization that we are not children any more. Some of us will make the worst kind of errors, financial and romantic, but they are our errors and must not be too strongly criticized. Say to us that you think we may be making a mistake; don't say, 'You're all wrong' and 'Don't do it'."

Keep Your Eye On Congress

The campaign to free American democracy of the polltax is on this week with the Senate debate on the repeal bill (HR 7) opened May 9. Key test is the cloture (end-of-debate) motion now set for May 15, and subsequent motions. Success of repeal or failure again depends on how often and how earnestly we tell our Senators to vote cloture, block the filibuster.

Orderly reconversion of war to peace production, some of it necessary even while the war goes on, is being pushed in Senator Kilgore's (D., W. Va.) new and improved bill (S 1893) which has the backing of CIO, AFL and Brotherhoods. S 1893 provides protection for workers as well as for property; is now before the Senate Military Affairs Committee, waiting assignment to a sub-committee.

Price control act renewal moved toward Senate and House debate with executive (secret) sessions in both Senate and Housse Banking Committee to draw up a bill. CIO testimony for renewal without crippling amendments wound up last week. Letters and wires from CIO members and their friends should keep coming in; "Price Control Week," May 17-24, should be marked by united community action everywhere.

Representative Rankin ((polltaxer, Miss.) and other phoney "friends" of the serviceman are trying to water down the "GI Bill" (S 1767), should be resisted with pleas to Representatives to pass the measure as passed in the Senate.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Polltax repeal (HR 77)	Ends reactionary rule of polltax Congressmen.	On Senate floor; cloture vote key to passage.	Wire Senators to vote cloture as often as needed to pass bill.
Reconversion (S 1893)	Aids demobilized war workers and vets in reconversion as well as protecting property. New and improved form of Kilgore bill.	To Senate Military Committee, waiting assignment to subcommittee. Hearings promised.	Wire Senators to support.
Price control act	Renewal of act due to expire June 30.	Senate and House Banking Committee now preparing bills.	Keep urging renewal without any crippling amendments, especially Smith's.
"GI" Bill (S 1767)	Aids veterans with education, unemployment insurance, etc.	Rankin and his gang trying to water down benefits, especially unemployment aid.	Urge Representative to pass without downward revisions, vote for same bill as passed in Senate.

(NOTE: CIO chalked up a substantial victory this week when Congress passed the "Emergency Maternity and Infant Care" program to aid servicemen's wives and babies, as recommended by CIO and CIO Auxiliaries.)

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

S. L. Avery of Montgomery Ward was repudiated by those who know him best—the workers at his enterprise. Results of the vote are as follows: (Big Unit) for CIO 2340, against 1565; (Small Unit) CIO 100, no union 28. This would-be union busting champion received the setback of his career and the workers gave the answer to those reactionary Congressmen and other forces who attempted to capitalize on Avery's disunity program in their effort to smear organized labor.

The eyes of the nation were upon the election. The victory sustains every claim made by the Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes. The public will not be fooled and it is expected that Avery will continue his belligerent attitude and refuse to demonstrate industrial statesmanship. But the answer of he CIO will be to organize every worker in his domain. Congratulations to all those who took part in this election. This is another domain of anti-unionism toppled over by the CIO.

The United Steelworkers assembled in their second constitutional convention with some 2500 delegates representing the workers in this great basic industry. The gathering proves what a splendid job has been done in organizing and administering the affairs of this union. Questions of tremendous importance will be passed upon affecting not only the Steelworkers, but the labor movement in general and the entire nation.

USA-CIO Backs 4th Term

The convention, upon recommendation of President Murray, called upon President Roosevelt to accept nomination for a fourth term in order that the fight against the Nazi forces will be continued to the point of absolute and unconditional surrender and a victorious people's peace will be obtained. The Steelworkers Union is the second largest in the world today and is spearheading the fight against the unjust and outworn "Little Steel Formula."

How Fascists Took Control Of Japan

By ISRAEL EPSTEIN

(In his previous series of exclusive Allied Labor News articles, published last December Mr. Epstein told of the formation of the Japanese Anti-War League in China. In this latest article, first of a new series of six, he reveals how the League has since developed its plan of action.)

CHUNGKING, May 13 (ALN)—The Japanese Anti-War League in China, composed of Japanese anti-fascists and prisoners of war, has just changed its name to the Japanese People's Liberation Alliance. This is more than a substitution of words. It means that its members consider that while formerly the consciousness of the Japanese was not sufficiently advanced for appeals to be made to them on any other basis than the stopping of a war of which everyone was tired, they have now suffered enough and understand enough to be receptive to a program calling for the complete overthrow of their rulers and the establishment of a democratic peoples' government.

Japanese Fascism

To conclude this series, I asked Wataru Kaji, Japanese revolutionary writer and a member of the executive committee of the new Alliance, to describe the fascist-imposed organization of Japanese labor since the collapse of the old trade unions and the fight waged against it by the revolutionary workers underground. Kaji said:

"Wherever it arises, fascism uses the name of 'the whole nation' to hide the reactionary drive of the ruling groups to enslave the workers and the people generally. The Japanese militarists have had long experience in this. As far back as the Russo-Japanese war they had used the high tide of reactionary chauvinism to smash working-class bodies.

"Having finally destroyed the unions in the thirties, one of their preparations for Pearl Harbor was to clamp down a fascist 'labor system' from which the workers could not escape.

Labor 'Raw Material'

"More than a year before the war with Britain and America, fascist theoreticians were laying the basis for such a system. An article published in the Nihon Hydron for September, 1940, was typical. It said: 'It is necessary to recognize that the working class belongs to the nation. The labor problem is not one of exploitation by the capitalists, or of distribution of benefits between capital and labor. It is the problem of the continuity, cultivation and training of labor power for the state—as part of the nationalization of labor we must organize a system of national service and organize labor only as a part of the national organization."

"In other words," Kaji continued, "labor had no right to opinions and activities on its own behalf, but was to be treated simply as one of the raw materials of production.

"This was the ideological basis not only for the dissolution of the trade unions, but also for the Sanyo Hokokai (Society for National Industrial Service)—established only two months later, in November, 1940. Like the Nazi Labor Front, the Sanyo Hokokai now controls all working men and women in the country.

Aid by Appeasers

"This Sanyo Hokokai did not spring full grown from the brains of the fascist pen-pushers. Like the step-by-step drive to military-fascist domination of the country as a whole, it was built up gradually—not only by the repressions of the ruling groups, but also by the cowardice, muddle-headedness and treason of so-called trade union leaders, who, owing to their position to police removal of militant rivals, always accommodated themselves to the reaction, but never thought of fighting it.

"The history of the Sanyo Hokokai really begins before the militarists loosed the war against China in 1937," Watru Kaji went on. "One of the best proofs that this war was not started by an 'incident,' but was carefully prepared on the home front as well as in the field, was the drive for 'national unity' before it began.

"The Social Masses party, the notorious Rodo Sodomei, which lost so many causes for Japanese labor, and some other legal unions 'voluntarily' dissolved themselves with loud protestations of patriotism. Out of the murk of history there reappeared some renegade police-sponsored members of the Japanese Fabian Society, which had ended its life in 1921. They took the name of the 'Reconciliation Society.'

"These reconciliationists proposed formation of a 'National Industrial Service Federation,' an idea immediately welcomed by the government. A preparatory committee was organized with Kewarde, a fascist agent, as chairman.

"The program they drew up began with this preamble: 'We, the people of industry, believe that capital, management and labor are an organic body, integral and indivisible. Industrialists should lead the workers with honesty and consider their welfare, and the workers should do their job, so that labor and capital may be one family for healthy development.' "

CIO, AFL, Farmers Hit Land Grab

Washington, May 13—The two main branches of organized labor were lined up with organizzed farmers this week in opposition to a land grab in California that would benefit large property holders at the expense of small farmers and demobilized servicemen who want to return to the soil for a living.

The big farming interests are seeking to amend the operation of the Federal Reclamation Law in connection with land available in Central Valley due to extension of irrigation projects, according to Robert K. Lamb, legislative representative of the United Steelworkers, who filed a statement against the amendment proposal with a Senate sub-committee this week.

The law now limits individual holders of such irrigated land to 160 acres. Lamb said that the number of individuals who would benefit by lifting the limitation is less than 5 per cent of all those holding title to irrigated farms, since the remaining 95 per cent have less than 160 acres of irrigated land.

Lamb pointed out that the state and local granges of California are lined up with the CIO and the AFL in opposition to the amendment, which he said would be "a blow against the hopes of war workers and returning veterans that they may secure small farms in reclamation projects during the demobilization period."

Shoe Workers Win

Washington, May 13—The NLRB May 10 certified the CIO United Shoe Workers as collective bargaining agency for employes of the United Wood Heel Co., St. Louis, Mo. The CIO union polled 93 votes to 40 for District 50, United Mine Workers. Another 42 votes were cast for neither union.

It Sure Pays To Send GIs Labor Papers!

Washington, May 13—It sure pays to circulate the labor press among the armed forces! Proof positive this week was the aid provided by a single copy of the CIO NEWS in straightening out the thinking of the members of a WAC orientation class, who had received a distorted impression of the CIO-Montgomery Ward dispute.

One of the class members, in a letter to The CIO NEWS, wrote that the teacher used Chicago daily papers in explaining the dispute, and added that is was impossible to contradict her at the time because no other facts were available.

"I left the meeting feeling pretty down in the dumps," the WAC wrote, "because I didn't have labor's viewpoint and couldn't contradict those Chicago newspapers.

"Later, I went to get my mail, and sure enough I found the story in The CIO NEWS. That was the most welcome newspaper, especially at that particular moment.

"I practically studied your story about it, and then passed it around to some of the girls. They said it sounded like an entirely different case now."

Don't Be One Arm Batter, Auxiliaries' Plea

Washington, May 13.—"Are You a One Arm Batter?"is is the title of a new organizational pamphlet just issued by the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries. It's addressed to a union brother and appeals to him to realize that he's stepping up to the plate as a one arm batter unless his wife is organized in the union auxiliary.

"Your blood boils, doesn't it," the pamphet asks, "when you read the anti-union slanders many newspapers print. Did you ever stop to wonder how much of that poison your own family swallows because they don't understand the union problems and the union program?"

The Pamphlet costs 2c a copy, $1.50 per 100, $12 per 1000. Order from CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries, 1019 15th St., N. W., Washington 5, D. C.

Honor Kroll For Work Against Bias

Washington, May 13—An award of merit from the National CIO Committee to Abolish Racial Discrimination will be presented to Pres. Jack Kroll of the Ohio State CIO Council by CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey at the convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers which opens Monday in Chicago. Carey heads the Committee.

JACK KROLL

George L-P Weaver, director of the committee, said that Kroll was being honored in recognition of "the farsighted and courageous stand" he has taken as president of the Ohio CIO Council, in building a strong anti-discrimination committee in that state.

SOME DIFFERENCE: The chart above, from CIO's Economic Outlook, indicates that wages in the aircraft industry ran a poor "show" to profits and executive salaries' "wins" and "places." Profits after taxes zoomed 1051 per cent, executives' salary payments 183 per cent, and average weekly wages 66 per cent.

WASHINGTON, May 13—Profits after taxes of the seven largest aircraft companies in 1942 were $1.79 for each $1.00 of stockholders' adjusted investment, according to the current issue of the CIO's Economic Outlook.

The Outlook reports that profits after taxes of these companies in 1942 were ten times the 1937 level, and that dividends were six and a half times larger. The three highest-paid officers of each company received average salary payment increases of $48,200 in the same period, it adds. Average weekly wages, however, rose by only two-thirds.

"Workers have thus been treated most unfairly during the war as compared with owners and management. Their wage rates have been frozen while the income of the other groups has soared," states the Outlook.

The article, in reporting on a study made by the CIO Dept. of Research and Education, emphasizes that the figures of profits equal to a 56% return on net worth in 1941, and a 36% return in 1942, greatly understate the real return on the investment of the stockholders.

This return was calculated by a new method as 179 per cent in 1942. The method separated net worth since 1936 into two components—stockholders' adjusted investment and excessive earnings plowed back into the companies since 1936.

"The basic idea in this approach is to allow stockholders a reasonable rate of return (8%) each year on the money that has actually been put into the business," declared the Outlook. "Earnings above that rate are considered excessive, a result of paying workers too low wages or charging consumers too high prices."

The Outlook states the 8% figure was used for the purposes of this study only and does not reflect CIO policy.

"By the end of 1942," the article says, "only 18 cents out of every dollar invested in the business rightfully belonged to the stockholders if they are permitted an 8 percent profit each year. The other 82 cents came from excess profits kept in the business." The Outlook warns that "huge wartime profits permit owners to pyramid their claims to a fantastic degree."

The companies studied were Boeing, Consolidated, Curtiss-Wright, Douglas, Lockheed, Glenn Martin, and United. The study found that 75% of the net worth at the end of 1942 of all companies except Boeing was the result of excessive earnings.

CIO Union Charges

Low Textile Pay Cause Of Huge Labor Turnover

BY E. M. SCHOFFSTALL

BOSTON, Mass., May 13—By driving tens of thousands of workers from American cotton mills and causing an estimated deficit of four billion yards of fabric in 1944, substandard wages in the cotton textile industry are a serious threat to the war effort, Emil Rieve, general president of the CIO Textile Workers Union of America, this week told a special War Labor Board panel. The panel is hearing testimony in the northern section of the union's offensive to drive textile wages up to a decent level.

Throughout the North, textile workers are abandoning their jobs in cotton mills for higher-paid jobs in war industries, Rieve declared. Cutbacks in other industries do not help textiles, he said, citing U. S. Employment Service figures to show that out of 3,200 workers laid off their war-plant jobs in one western Massachusetts community, only eight workers took textile jobs.

Out of 550 men and women laid off in a New Bedford mill, only 100 went into textile mills, the union's brief showed. In Fall River, Mass., only five out of every 100 workers can be persuaded to take textile jobs, according to the USES. A mill at West Warwick, R. I., has suffered an employment reduction of 18 per cent in one year, in spite of a standing order with the USES for workers.

Solomon Barkin, the union's research director, piled fact upon astounding fact to prove to the panel that the low wages in cotton textile mills, averaging 67c an hour in the North on a straight-time basis, are not sufficient attraction for workers who can go into shipyards, munition plants, and other war industries and get starting rates ranging from 75c to 80c an hour.

The union said that mill owners can amply afford to pay the requested 60c minimum wage, the 10c an hour general increase, and minimum rates for specific jobs.

"Northern cotton textile mills," Barkin told the panel, "made 600 per cent profit, before taxes, in the first half of 1943. Moreover, a sampling of 17 of these mills shows that the mills profited to the extent of $810 a year for every worker on their payrolls. Cotton textile mills generally are now making more profits than they ever made in the history of the industry."

The record was completed in the cotton cases the week of May 8, when employers presented their arguments. After the panel, which is not empowered to make recommendations, finds the facts and presents them to the NRLB, there will be hearings before the "Big Board."

Meanwhile, wage demands by the TWUA in the wool and worsted, rayon weaving, and synthetic yarn industries are being prepared.

'American' Day to Honor New Citizens

Washington, May 15—Some 2,470,000 men and women who have reached voting age during the past year, plus a record number of new naturalized citizens, will be honored on I Am An American Day, May 21, according to the Dept. of Justice and Census Bureau.

A record in naturalizations was set in 1943, when 400,000 persons took the oath of allegiance. The Dept. of Justice expects an even greater number to be naturalized this year.

Of the 400,000 naturalized last year, 65,000 are members of the armed forces. Many of them acquired their citizenship in ceremonies conducted in the Pacific and European war theaters.

Negro Rights Upheld

Washington, May 13—The U. S. Supreme Court this week upheld an April 3 decision which established the right of Negroes to vote in Texas Democratic party primaries. The court denied a petition for a rehearing of the earlier decision.

Honor Seamen, Ship Workers on National Maritime Day

WASHINGTON, May 13—The nation this week prepared to honor its heroic merchant seamen, 5,565 of whom have given their lives in the struggle to defeat fascism. Occasion for the honor will be National Maritime Day, May 22, which also marks the historic date in 1819 when the S. S. Savannah left the United States for England as the first vessel to use steam propulsion on an ocean voyage.

In calling for public commendation of the thousands of workers who have labored long hours to turn out America's great Victory Fleet and for honoring of courageous merchant seamen, President Roosevelt said in a Maritime Day proclamation:

"Many men have already given their lives, and thousands of others are daily risking their lives, on our ships traversing dangerous seas to carry men and materials to the far-flung battlefields."

The heroic accomplishments of individual seamen have not gone unrecognized. Congress has authorized a medal to be awarded in the name of the President to merchant seamen for outstanding feats of heroism.

SERVICE MEDAL

The Merchant Marine Distinguished Service Medal, a decoration comparable to high military decorations, has been awarded—several posthumously—for many fully-authenticated acts of heroism performed above and beyond the call of duty. Three examples cited by the U.S. Maritime Commission were:

A young cadet aboard a stricken ship rushed to a gun emplacement where every member of the gun crew had been killed. Single handed, he fired the last five shells into the water line of an Axis surface raider before he himself was killed.

A Merchant Marine cadet aboard a blazing ship went below deck, carried out a wounded shipmate, threw the man and a life raft over the side, jumped after them and lashed the wounded man to the tiny raft. He swam for miles, pushing the raft through shark-infested water until they were finally rescued.

HEROIC RESCUE

A ship's carpenter, pulling away from a torpedoed vessel in a lifeboat with several shipmates was thrown in an icy sea when the boat capsized. The extraordinary stamina of the man enabled him to remain astride the overturned boat a whole night through, repeatedly pulling three surviving shipmates out of the freezing water as they fell from the icy sides of the boat.

They were located at dawn. As the carpenter and the semi-conscious men were taken aboard the rescue ship, the unassuming hero lost consciousness, for the first time. All survived.

Scores of cases such as these are in the files of the War Shipping Administration. National Maritime Day, the Administration pointed out, is an appropriate occasion to honor such men as these.

Labor Victory!

Pro-Roosevelt Candidates Sweep California

SAN FRANCISCO, May 20—California labor chalked up a sweeping victory for pro-FDR candidates this week in primary elections that had nationwide repercussions in the defeat of the third member of the notorious Dies Committee to lose or give up his Congressional seat within the last two weeks.

The victory against the Dies Committee came with the defeat of Rep. John M. Costello. The progressive side of united labor's struggle was highlighted by the renomination of Senator Sheridan Downey, Administration stalwart, by a wide margin.

Costello, a Democrat, was defeated in the Democratic primary, and while he won the GOP nomination, under Califonia law allowing filing for nomination in both parties, he cannot run as a Republican because he lost the primary election in his own party. He lost to Hal Styles, a radio commentator, who was nominated on the Democratic ticket.

The defeat of Costello was the occasion for a new wave of hysteria in the Nation's Capital, with two new resolutions introduced in Congress asking for investigation of CIO's Political Action Committee, which has twice been given a clean bill of health by competent government investigators.

Downey, who like Costello entered in both primaries, beat Lt. Gov. Frank Houser by four to one in the Democratic contest, meanwhile dropping the Republican fight to him by only a one-to-two margin.

The victory was given even brighter coloring by labor's success on a local scale, in nominating men pledged to support the pro-war, progressive policies of the Roosevelt Administration.

In Northern California, 23 out of 31 labor-endorsed candidates won nomination, with 11 of the 23 winning in both Democratic and Republican primaries. In Southern California, 36 out of 41 candidates who received the united backing of CIO, AFL and Railway unions won nomination. All nine of labor's Congressional endorsees were successful.

Ask Probe Of Phoney 'Mothers'

Washington, May 20—Fascist "mothers' groups" which are sowing the minds of Americans with Nazi propaganda seeds should be investigated by the Federal government, the CIO Auxiliaries said this week in a letter to Attorney General Francis Biddle.

"Although such fascist women's groups are relatively small and ineffective at present," the Auxiliaries wrote, "they contain the seeds of great danger for the future. We believe they should be publicly exposed and halted before those seeds can develop."

The Auxiliaries charged that the organizations—the United Mothers, the Mothers of Sons Forum, the American Women Against Communism, and We, the Mothers, Mobilize for America Inc. "are still making news with their onslaughts on our national unity and our will to win the war."

3 More CIO Unions Plug For 4th Term

Three more big CIO unions this week swelled the demanding labor chorus for a fourth term for President Roosevelt, as returns from California primary elections added additional evidence to the already strong proof that the American people want FDR to continue his leadership as Commander-in-Chief.

'Mail Order Napoleon' Files Million Dollar Libel Suit

CHICAGO, May 20—The "Napoleon" of themail order business busted into the nation's headlines again this week with the filing of a million dollar libel suit against the Chicago SUN by Sewell Avery, head of Montgomery Ward & Co. The suit charged that the SUN had published a defamatory and untrue article about Avery, in connection with a series dealing with his defiance of the government's orderly procedures for collective bargaining.

Among other charges made by the SUN against the $144,000-a-year corporation executive were:

That he viciously fought the proposed $25,000 a year limit on salaries, meanwhile making sure that 95 cents an hour is the top limit placed on Montgomery Ward salaries paid workers below the rank of executive.

That he "has fought every inch of the way against measurements enacted for national economic recovery and the betterment of the 'little people' who comprise the bulk of his customers."

Transport Service for FDR

CHICAGO, May 20—The CIO United Transport Service Employees added its weight to the drive for a fourth term for Pres. Roosevelt as one of the first acts of its fourth biennial convention.

The vote was unanimous after the 150 delegates had cheered a personal message from the President, and had heard him praised for his friendship for labor and the Negro people.

Roosevelt sent his "warm greetings" to the union's president, Willard Townsend, and to the delegates. "I am sure your convention will make important contributions to the welfare of our country in meeting the crucial responsibilities arising in this time of supreme national effort," he said.

NO SPLIT FOR GOP

Townsend declared: "There will be no split this fall by some Negroes thinking that the Republican Party still represents freedom."

Speaking of discrimination in the Armed Forces, he said: "The pattern was not set by Roosevelt," that Abraham Lincoln had admitted Negro soldiers into the Army only "under durress" and then had paid them less than white men.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray addressed the opening session of the convention and complemented the UTSEA on its organizational progress and progressive policies.

Both Murray and CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, as chairman of the CIO Committee to Abolish Racial Discrimination, were given votes of appreciation for their work for "the total welfare of working people of all races, creeds and colors."

Other CIO leaders who attended the convention and greeted the delegates included R. J. Thomas, Emil Rieve, Van V. Bittner, Len DeCaux and Michael Mann, representing the Chicago CIO.

Pres. Townsend, Sec.-Treas. John L. Yancey and the other officers presented a report of encouraging progress in organizing red caps, dining car employes, Pullman shop and laundry workers and other employes of many railroads throughout the country.

George L. P. Weaver, director of the National CIO Committee to Abolish Racial Discrimination and a delegate to the convention, praised Roosevelt's record of New Deal legislation. "It has helped us more than any other group," he said, "because we are at the bottom of the economic scale."

Fur Union Asks 4th Term

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 20—All-out support for a fourth term for FDR and for the coming invasion of Europe were action highlights of the 15th biennial convention of the Intl. Fur & Leather Workers, in session here this week. Some 400 delegates from fur centers in the United States and Canada attended the convention.

Meeting on the eve of the anticipated invasion, the officers' report called upon IFLWU members to intensify their efforts to give all possible aid to the war. A resolution urging wholehearted support for a fourth term for Pres. Roosevelt was passed with a roar of cheers.

Among speakers were Congressman Vito Marcantonio of New York who was greeted with a burst of cheers when he called for re-election of Pres. Roosevelt, and Vicente Lombardo Toledano, president of the Latin American Confederation of Labor, who stressed the need of a world federation of labor.

Joseph Curran, president of the Natl. Maritime Union, brought greetings to the delegates from his union and thanked the Fur Workers for the 75,000 fur vests which they had contributed to the merchant seamen.

Paul Robeson, famous singer and Negro leader, was presented with a silver-bound book containing the signatures of all the union officers and delegates.

EMPLOYER SPEAKS

Michael Hollander, head of the largest concern in the fur industry, was the first employer ever to address a convention of the union. Chairman of the War Chest Fund of the War Emergency Board of the fur industry, Hollander was introduced by Pres. Gold as a "bitter foe of fascism and a great patriot who has translated into action the urgent necessity for national unity.

A number of war activities listed in the officers' report included the purchase of more than $22,000,000 worth of War Bonds since the last convention; $500,000 contribution to Red Cross, and to Russian, British, Chinese and other United Nations relief agencies, and donation of 15,000 pints of blood.

Some 10,000 of the union's members are now serving in the armed forces, the report stated.

In a review of the union's political activities, the report declared that political action committees have been set up in practically every local in the union, and that a total of $25,000 has been contributed to the National CIO Political Action Committee.

Reporting a new high in membership of 100,000 fur and leather workers, the officers' said that more than $18,000,000 in wage increases had been obtained for both fur and leather workers during the past two years.

Paid vacations, sick, death and hospitalization insurance were secured for thousands of fur and leather workers for the first time.

Outstanding in the report of the Fur Division's progress were the great strides made in organizing the Canadian fur industry. In Winnipeg, the entire manufacturing, dressing and dyeing sections of the fur industry were organized for the first time, while the whole dressing and dyeing section of the fur industry in Montreal and Toronto was almost completely organized during the past two years.

The union's Leather Division, the report stated, had grown from a few small locals with barely 5,000 members in 1939 when the merger with the Fur Workers took place, to 62 functioning locals with a membership of 40,000 in 18 states and Canada.

New York, May 20—Vincente Lombardo Toledano, president of the Confederation of Latin-American Workers and other labor delegates from South American nations to the ILO Conference were honored last Saturday at a luncheon-reception given under the joint sponsorship of the New York State CIO Council and the Greater New York CIO Council.

Toledano told of the interest in the CIO among Latin-American workers and said that re-election of Pres. Roosevelt would reassure the nations of all the world.

Bosses Use BLS Figures To Fight CIO

Washington, May 20—The Labor Dept. wouldn't print it, the Government Printing Office wouldn't print it—but the steel employers now fighting the USA-CIO wage case did, and very handsomely and expensively at that.

"It" is the Bureau of Labor Statistics' "Review and Appraisal" of the joint CIO-AFL Cost of Living study put out last January that showed the BLS Index figure of a 23.4% increase between 1941 and 1944 was off by almost 100%.

Now it appears at the WLB hearings during the employers' presentation of their case. They're using it in the attempt to knock down the USA-CIO figures on living costs, which support their claim to a 17c an hour wage increase.

With the cover made up to look like an official U. S. document, the book, printed on heavy paper and expensively bound has no signature whatever on it. It proves the real use to which BLS Indexes are put—to attempt to bolster an employer's argument against a wage raise.

Steel Union Asks Time Limit On WLB Ruling

CLEVELAND, May 20—Determined to press their wage case in aggressive but orderly fashion and to campaign politically for a fourth term for President Roosevelt, the 2300 delegates to the United Steelworkers convention returned home this week after a five-day session.

Pres. Philip Murray announced he had asked the War Labor Board to set a time limit for decision of the union's case, to prevent "obstructionist tactics" on the part of employers seeking to delay a decision.

Urging avoidance of "riotous or disorderly conduct while the wage case is grinding through the mill," Murray declared:

"We propose to fight this out in an orderly way. Don't jeopardize the life of a single man in the armed forces of our country."

Before adjourning, the convention unanimously endorsed Vice-Pres. Henry Wallace, as well as President Roosevelt, for re-election; voted approval of an amalgamation of the Aluminum Workers union with the United Steelworkers; denounced the Dies Committee, and gave a rousing reception to Henry J. Kaiser, the industrialist, who called for labor-management-government cooperation for full post-war production and employment.

CONVENTION SPEAKERS

Among other speakers who addressed the convention in its closing sessions were UAW-CIO Pres. R. J. Thomas; CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey; John Brown, secretary, British Iron & Steel Trades Confederation; Leo Perlis, Natl. CIO War Relief Committee, and Jack Lawrenson, Natl. Maritime Union.

The union's international officers and board were authorized to bring the CIO Aluminum Workers of America into the USA-CIO on terms mutually acceptable to the two unions.

Murray declared the merger would bring in 30,000 new members and that its purpose was "to organize the unorganized in the aluminum industry." He said the AWA would make its final decision at its convention in Hot Springs, Ark., in June.

The delegates nearly raised the roof with their applause when President Murray announced the news that Congressman Martin Dies was retiring from public life, in the face of sharp opposition to his renomination in the primaries.

DENOUNCE DIES

His announcement came while the convention was acting on a resolution denouncing Dies as "one who deliberately seeks to disunite the American people and to cause such disruption as to actually threaten the entire war effort."

Murray's own comment on Dies' retirement was brief: "All I have to say," he declared, "is that it is the greatest contribution that Mr. Dies has made to the welfare of the people."

The appearance of such a big employer as Kaiser at a CIO union's convention was unprecedented. So too was the fact that he chose a labor gathering as the first to hear his plans for a tremendous postwar expansion of the aviation industry.

MURRAY HAILS KAISER

Kaiser was hailed by Murray for his "unexcelled record" in war production, in labor relations, and in recognizing that labor must have full employment after the war.

He declared that 50,000 personal airplanes could be made and sold in the first two years after the war, called for 3,000 to 5,000 air terminals for personal planes, and said his plans would provide jobs for the 4,500,000 workers now employed in war aviation.

"As the automobile ushered in the epoch of America's greatest material advance," Kaiser said, "just so surely will the airplane again quicken our industrial life."

UAW SUPPORT

Thomas applauded the Steelworkers' wage program and pledged the full support of the Auto Workers. He denounced Sewell Avery of Montgomery Ward as one of those "who think the war is practically over, and that now is the time to start cracking down on labor unions."

Murray followed Thomas with the remark that Avery's defiance of the government in the Ward case is only part of his consistent record. Out of 16 cases of corporation defiance of the War Labor Board, Murray said, seven cases have involved separate corporations in which Avery plays a leading part.

Carey attacked the "insecurities that lead to war," comparing low wages with high corporation salaries and profits.

"If we fail in the fight for the annual wage and greater security, we are condemning another generation to war," he said. "We are going to plow under millions or more people because of mass unemployment."

BRITISH GREETINGS

Brown brought fraternal greetings from the British union steelworkers. He thanked the USA-CIO for its assistance in establishing a rest home for the British steelworkers, and declared that despite the war strains under which they worked, "not one single ton of output has been lost as a result of strikes."

On behalf of the NMU, Lawrenson thanked the USA-CIO for its assistance in organizing Great Lakes seamen, most of whom are employed by the big steel companies.

Back FDR

New York, May 20—Complete support for the re-election of President Roosevelt and the waiver of initiation fees for veterans of the present war were two major decisions made this week by the Executive Board of the CIO United Shoe Workers Union, meeting here. The waiver affects all veterans, regardless of their previous union affiliation or jobs.

The recommendation to support Roosevelt for a fourth term came from USWA-CIO Pres. Frank McGrath, who said that the President's record shows us that "his leadership is necessary to bring our nation to final victory and to win the benefits of this victory at the peace table in preparation for a free and prosperous postwar world."

Amalgamated, PAC Back FDR

U. S. Needs Leadership, PAC Warns

CHICAGO, May 20—President Franklin D. Roosevelt is the national leader best fitted to guide this nation to a victorious peace, the CIO Political Action Committee said this week in calling unanimously for his re-nomination, and re-election as Commander-in-Chief.

In a meeting participated in by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, Chairman Sidney Hillman of the PAC said that at a later meeting Vice-Pres. Henry A. Wallace probably would also be endorsed for re-nomination and re-election, since nearly all CIO unions have endorsed him as well as FDR.

The PAC said that it believes—as do the overwhelming majority of CIO's more than five million members—that President Roosevelt is the most competent man to lead the nation to victory in the shortest possible time and to build an ordered and enduring peace after victory is won."

The PAC described President Roosevelt as "a man of experience and demonstrated leadership—a man whose performances, rather than his promises, entitle him to the confidence of the nation."

MEMBERSHIP'S SENTIMENT

Pointing out that the PAC is simply recording the already expressed sentiment of the CIO membership when it urges FDR to run again, the PAC statement said:

"We know that this position corresponds not only with the sentiment of the membership of CIO, but with the belief of the overwhelming majority of all Americans in every walk of life, and regardless of their formal party affiliation, that Franklin D. Roosevelt is the only man in public life today qualified to lead the nation during the next four years.

"A small but powerful minority in this nation which has fought the President at every turn during the past 11 years, will redouble their attack today," the PAC warned.

DIVISIVE FORCES

"They regarded the present political campaign and the November elections as their final opportunity to prevent the complete liquidation of fascism, to wipe out the gains we have won during the past 11 years, place reaction in the saddle, and make impossible the realization of our postwar goals.

"In their attempt to come to power, they will hestiate at nothing to confuse, divide and weaken labor and the progressive forces," the PAC said, in calling for intensive political action by all CIO affiliates to halt the reactionary drive and elect to office men who will support the war and desires of the people for a sound peace.

CIO Political Action Hurts; Smith Yells!

Washington, May 20—Labor political action hurts when it helps unseat a polltaxer or an ex-Dies man—and the survivors are both yelling about it and trying to protect their own jobs from the wrath of the voters.

Latest sign of this anguish comes from polltaxer Howard Smith of Virginia, who after seeing what happened to Dies, Starnes, Costello and other who tried to make a career out of union and FDR-baiting, has come up with a new plan to bust the CIO Political Action Committee.

It's not a very original one, since it follows the usual Howard Smith pattern of an "investigation"—read smear—but he put it into the House hopper this week as House Resolution 552.

Purpose of H. Res 552 is ostensibly to "investigate campaign expenditures." Smith could not be content with this innocuous statement, however, so he added more to it when he talked to reporters, saying:

"The Attorney-General has said he couldn't see anything wrong to date in the activities of the CIO. I'm putting in this bill with the idea that we may be able to bring out some things that will improve his eyesight."

Smith's beef is that he asked the Attorney-General before to investigate CIO Political Action and to indict President Murray, and that Biddle, after a long investigation by the FBI (with which CIO cooperated completely) gave the PAC a legal OK.

Smith's yelps of pain and fear have been echoed by others of his type—Rankin of Mississippi, being one of the most vocal. Maybe some of the boys will learn that union-baiting, FDR-baiting and war-obstruction pay off eventually—in retirement to private life at the urgent request of the voters.

BUY WAR BONDS AND STAMPS

Roosevelt Hails Gains Of Clothing Workers

CHICAGO, May 20—The CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers this week won high praise from Pres. Roosevelt in a special convention message addressed to Pres. Sidney Hillman.

"Your organization has blazed a path of progressive and farsighted trade unionism," Roosevelt said. "You have set a standard for others to follow.

"You have effectively demonstrated how statemanship and forward-looking trade union policy can operate to promote better understanding between employers and workers and to assure industrial peace.

"Yours is a fine record of voluntary and wholehearted dedication to the tasks of the nation in these critical years . . .

"The Amalgamated has always refused to rest upon past glories and achievements. Its ever recurrent pioneering in new fields of endeavor convinces me that you and your membership can be relied upon to make your contribution to a constantly better life for American workers."

Clothing 'Workers' Parley in Unanimous Vote For 4th Term

CHICAGO, May 20—FDR is definitely the choice of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. From start to finish of the union's week-long convention, the 974 delegates, representing a peak membership of 325,000, refused to leave anyone in doubt for a moment.

Nearly every mention of the President's name—and there were plenty—was greeted with an ovation. The climax was a cheerful, snake-dancing demonstration when the convention unanimously called upon "the American people to make manifest their common will to draft Franklin D. Roosevelt for another term in office."

The resolution was adopted immediately following announcement that the CIO Political Action Committee, meeting in the same hotel with ACW Pres. Sidney Hillman presiding as chairman and with CIO Pres. Philip Murray participating, had unanimously endorsed Roosevelt for a fourth term.

Sharing honors with FDR was Vice Pres. Henry Wallace, whose renomination and re-election was urged by the ACW in a separate resolution.

PRAISE MURRAY

Equally emphatic was the ovation accorded CIO's Philip Murray, who won the hearts of the delegates and loosened their vocal chords with his earnest eloquence.

While political action held the chief spotlight, Pres. Hillman also had a substantial record of organizations progress to report, and the convention unanimously threw its weight behind CIO's program for revision of the Little Steel formula and all-around economic stabilization.

Blaming "reactionary and partisan forces in Congress" for the failure "to stabilize our national economy," the convention declared the Little Steel formula to be "unrealistic, unworkable and obsolete."

BACK STEELWORKERS

It pledged its support to the United Steelworkers' efforts "on behalf of the whole labor movement" to have the formula modified," to permit wage increases which will realistically reflect the rise in living costs."

The War Labor Board was also asked "to modify its application of the sub-standard wage doctrine to permit wage increases up to a point substantially in excess of 50 cents an hour."

The executive board reported that the ACW has gained 60,000 new members since its last convention, reaching a new high of 325,000 members. The union has expanded particularly in the South, where 10,000 new members were obtained, and in the cotton garment, laundry and various service industries. 10,000 union members are in the armed forces.

ASKS UNITED FRONT

In his keynote speech, Hillman stressed a united home front and United Nations unity as prime essentials for speedy victory and enduring peace. He declared there has not been a single violation of the no-strike pledge by the Amalgamated.

"There is no longer any room for isolationism," Hillman said. "Those who hide behind that word today are men who do not mean well for the nation.

"If we are to win the peace, we must not divide the world again into competing groups— we must have no dollar imperialism."

Murray praised Hillman's leadership of CIO's political activities. He compared the attacks on the CPAC with the way the CIO itself was "castigated in the press."

CIO's political committee is "typically American," he said, "because it reflects the thinking of the great majority of the people. Like the CIO, it will grow, because the people want it."

Citing Roosevelt's record in leading the country out of the last depression and giving workers the right to organize, Murray expressed his firm conviction that the President of the United States should be re-elected," and said he had complete confidence in the President's ability to be reelected."

The ACW voted to waive the payment of initiation fees by demobilized servicemen and women who obtain employment in the industries under its jurisdiction within two years after their demobilization.

The convention pledged unqualified support to the CIO Political Action Committee and especially praised Hillman's work on behalf of the American Labor Party in New York State.

International labor unity was stressed in a resolution calling for an international organization embracing "the labor movements of all the United Nations without discrimination, including the labor movement of liberated Italy," and asking that the world labor conference originally planned for London be convened as soon as possible in Canada, the United States or any other country where wartime conditions permit.

The CIO Committee on Latin American Affairs, of which ACW Sec.-Treas. Jacob Potofsky is chairman, was praised for its work in a resolution which denounced the fascist regime in the Argentine and warned against attempts to impose similar regimes in other countries.

POSTWAR JOB PLANNING

Expressing sympathy with the proposals made in the Baruch report and now embodied in the George-Murray bill, the ACW urged amendment of this bill to include provisions of the Kilgore bill for prompt re-employment of workers displaced in the reconversion process and providing supplementary unemployment insurance.

CIO Takes Stand For FDR

(Text of statement unanimously adopted by the CIO Political Action Committee, meeting in Chicago, May 17, 1940.)

The CIO Political Action Committee was organized as the permanent political arm of the CIO for the purpose of implementing labor's program to meet its needs and those of the entire nation, both in winning victory in the war and in the peace to follow.

Our program has as its immediate and paramount objective the winning of the war within the shortest possible time. The achievement of this objective requires a strong and united home front in support of our military effort, and the further strengthening of the unity of the United Nations in their common struggle against the enemy.

Our program also calls for an ordered and enduring peace after victory is won, guaranteed by an international organization of the freedom-loving nations of the world.

On the domestic front, our program calls for the planning of our post-war economy and the effectuation of measures to assure the full utilization of our productive capacity and the full employment of all our people, giving them real security and equality of opportunity in an expanding economy that will make possible a more abundant life for all.

As we approach the national elections of 1944, it becomes the task of the CIO and of the CIO Political Action Committee, as its political arm, to determine what candidates for national office can best effectuate these objectives. In particular, our nation's choice on November 7, 1944 of a Chief Executive will shape our course during the next four critical years.

The man whom we elect as President will be charged with the stern and difficult task of prosecuting the war to full, final, and uncompromising victory. He will have the duty of representing our nation in writing the peace.

The character of his leadership may determine whether we will forever eliminate every vestige of fascism from the face of the earth and lay the basis for a world from which war will be banished for generations to come.

He will have the duty of guiding the nation in the difficult post-war years. The character of his leadership will largely determine whether we can move forward to an economy which will provide jobs and security for all.

These great tasks can be fulfilled only by a man of experience and demonstrated leadership—a man whose performances, rather than his promises, entitle him to the confidence of the nation.

They require a man whose outstanding capacity for leadership can unite the entire nation behind him and assure the continued unity of the United Nations. For only a united nation and united action by all freedom-loving nations can achieve the goals which we seek.

In recent months, the organizations of the CIO and its members have given careful thought to the selection of such a leader. With increasing unanimity they have expressed their choice.

The overwhelming majority of CIO's five million members, acting through their international unions and their local organizations, have called upon Franklin Delano Roosevelt to run for another term in office and upon the nation to elect him to that office.

The CIO Political Action Committee, therefore, merely records the sentiment of the membership of CIO, as already expressed, when it joins with them in urging Franklin D. Roosevelt again to respond to the call of duty in the nation's service by becoming a candidate for President.

We know that this position corresponds not only with the sentiment of the membership of CIO, but with the belief of the overwhelming majority of all Americans in every walk of life, and regardless of their formal party affiliation, that Franklin D. Roosevelt is the only man in public life today qualified to lead the nation during the next four years.

A small but powerful minority in this nation which has fought the President at every turn during the past 11 years, will redouble their attack today.

They regard the present political campaign and the November elections as their final opportunity to prevent the complete liquidation of Fascism, to wipe out the gains we have won during the past 11 years, place reaction in the saddle, and make impossible the realization of our post-war goals.

It will, therefore, be the task of the CIO Political Action Committee between now and November 7 to intensify the educational campaign which it has launched throughout the nation; to bring the historic issues which face our people to the attention of every American; to organize every shop and factory and every community for full participation in political activity; to make certain that the decision recorded on November 7 will be the decision of the overwhelming majority of the people of our nation who are of voting age.

We are confident that this task of education and organization will be performed and that on November 7 the American people will re-elect Franklin Delano Roosevelt to office, and under his continued leadership march forward to victory, peace, and plenty.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

IN Chicago it's easy to explain the political program of the CIO.

Anyone old enough to read will get it, if you just tell him, "We're for everything the Chicago Tribune opposes, and vice versa."

On the morning the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers opened its convention in Chicago, The Tribune ran an editorial describing the CIO as "Brutality, Inc." and referring to "Murray and his cold-blooded gang of revolutionaries."

The same day, the liberal Chicago Sun reported from Italy that the Nazis are using a Soviet-baiting Chicago Tribune cartoon on propaganda leaflets which they shoot in thin-skinned rocket shells into the American lines.

The Tribune has never concealed its hatred for American labor, and for all measures that would better the lot of the common people.

During the Hoover depression, when veterans were selling apples at every corner in the Loop, and the whole city groaned with the misery of the unemployed, the Tribune adopted a consistent policy of referring contemptuously to the jobless as "idlers."

It fought every New Deal measure to aid the unemployed and to promote recovery. It became hysterical in its venomous hatred of the CIO, when the workers began flocking to its ranks to better their conditions.

The war made no change in the Tribune's hatreds for labor, Pres. Roosevelt and social progress.

Combined with the paper's isolationism," they became weapons to disrupt national unity, undermine confidence in the Commander-in-Chief and promote dissension among the United Nations.

There is still hardly an issue of the Chicago Tribune that does not provide choice propaganda material for Hitler's purposes.

It was appropriate that the CIO Political Action Committee should meet in Chicago to announce its formal endorsement of a fourth term for FDR.

In the one camp are a powerfully entrenched minority of wealthy and callous exploiters, with their motley crew of camp-followers, hard-shelled tories, American Firsters, pro-Fascists and the like.

Their program sets warfare against labor and the New Deal ahead of war against the Axis. It calls for a postwar return to Hoover "normalcy," with unbridled profiteering and the devil take the hindmost.

Its so-called isolationism is camouflaged for a new American imperialism, directed against our present allies and spreading the seeds of another war.

In the other camp are the great majority of the people of Chicago, who have a lusty hatred for the Tribune's policies; who regularly reject its advice on election day; who want national unity for speedy victory, and postwar international cooperation for peace and greater prosperity for the common man.

In Chicago, the people nail the name of FDR to their masthead, while the Tribune crowd would nail him to the cross.

Everybody there understands CIO's stand for FDR. They couldn't have understood any other stand.

Chicago has also made another contribution to clarifying the issues for 1944, in the person of Sewell Avery of Montgomery, Ward.

Everybody has seen the picture of this arrogant big-shot being carried out his plant. He wanted it that way. He did everything possible to provoke the government, so he could get the most spectacular publicity.

Avery, the Chicago Tribune and much of the big-business press think this picture will swing votes against FDR. But they think wrong.

For every union-hating boss whose opposition to FDR will be strengthened by it, there are thousands of workers and other plain folks who applaud this visual demonstration that no man, no matter how wealthy, is bigger than the United States.

Every patriotic and democratic American believes that no amount of riches and power should shield the man who deliberately defies wartime regulations for the preservation of industrial peace, and who thinks his hatred of labor is more important than our victory effort.

In other parts of America, the lines may not be drawn so sharply as they are in Chicago. But look behind the mealy-mouthed protestations of all papers and politicians that want to ditch our Commander-in-Chief, when his leadership is most essential for speedy victory and future world peace, and you will find the line-up is not so dissimilar.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

Congress is beginning its pre-summer recess rush to get all "must" legislation through by mid-June—and certain forces are trying to use this rush to slip over some quick ones that would hinder the war and hurt the unions.

One example of this is the blitzing of the poll-tax repeal bill (HR 7) which was pigeonholed after the cloture vote failed to pass. The bill itself was not voted on, since it never came up. The issue still remains however, and will be pushed until the polltax is repealed.

Two other attempted blitzes are on deck:

1. A new bill (S 1864) for forced labor, offered by Sens. Bailey (D., N. C.) and Brewster (R., Me.) which would force workers from 18 to 45 into labor battalions if they shift jobs without local permission.

2. A revival of the Hatch bill (S 1272), that perpetuates the political contribution bans in the Smith-Connally Act, which has popped up in the House Judiciary Committee (Rep. Sumners, poll-taxer Tex. chmn.).

CIO is still urging passage of the Kilgore bill (S 1893) in the House as an amendment to the Senate passed Murray (D. Mont.) bill (S 1718). Both deal with reconversion. The Kilgore bill takes care of "the human side" of war industry demobilization; the Murray bill neglects it.

Price control renewal is getting closer to final action, with both Senate and House Banking Committees expected to report their bills soon. CIO and all who favor real control are opposing any amendments whatever, pressing for prompt renewal.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Brewster-Bailey- (S 1864)	Forced labor battalions for workers 18-45 who leave jobs without local permission. Worse than Austin-Wadsworth bill.	Senate Military Affairs Committee. CIO to testify.	Write Sen. Reynolds (chmn.) and your own Senators against.
Hatch (S 1272)	Perpetuates ban on labor political contributions in Smith-Connally Act.	Passed Senate, now in House Judiciary Committee. CIO to testify May 25.	Write Rep. Sumners (chmn.) and your own Representative against.
Kilgore (S 1893)	Protects workers as well as industry in reconversion to peace production.	CIO urging adoption in House version of Sen. Murray bill (S 1718) which omits "human side" of reconversion.	Write your Representative for.
Price control.	Renewal of price control act, due by June 30.	Senate and House Banking Committees working on bill.	Keep urging no amendments, prompt renewal.
Frey rider.	Freezes company unions by sanctioning all contract, no matter how collusive.	Ready for House action, with "compromise" reported prepared.	Keep urging no riders, not even "compromise" ones.

(NOTE: Congress will probably adjourn in mid-June. The CIO NEWS is preparing a special Congress supplement for that time, with voting records and analysis of bills and issues. Paper is short; write CIO NEWS to reserve extra copies for your organization. Publicity Dept., CIO, 718 Jackson Pl. N. W., Washington 6, D. C.)

New 'Service' Act Threatened In Congress

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, May 20—Blocked in earlier attempts to jam a national service act through Congress in the form of the Austin-Wadsworth bill, advocates of forced labor are trying a new bill in the Senate this week.

The new bill is S 1864, offered by Sens. Brewster (R., Me.) and Bailey (D., N. C.), which has been referred to the Committee on Military Affairs Sen. Reynolds, (D., N. C., chairman). Here's what the new bill would do:

1. Freeze all workers from 18 to 45 in present jobs by forbidding them to move unless authorized by their local draft boards. Frozen jobs include those on farms and in factories set by the National Selective Service Director as essential "war production or war services" occupations.

2. If the worker disobeys the ruling of his local board, he shall be "classified into a class immediately available for military service and shall be liable for immediate induction."

3. The Director of Selective Service is further authorized to send workers into such jobs as he may classify as essential, with the same penalty for failure or refusal to comply.

4. People who are inducted into the armed forces can then be sent into any regular part of the armed forces or into "special service units" which will be required to work on "the type of seasonal work which other members of the land or naval forces have hitherto been called on to perform."

5. And here's a final joker—workers forced into this kind of labor or "service" shall be subject to military duties and get military pay, but shall not get any allowances for dependents, no life insurance, no mustering-out pay and none of the benefits which veterans may be entitled.

CIO is asking time to testify on this bill before the Military Affairs Committee, in a letter sent this week by President Murray to the chairman, Sen. Reynolds.

WOULD FREEZE CHAOS

The bill would be of the greatest aid to big plantation owners, canneries, lumber and pulp operators and the like. It would perpetuate Public Law 45, which Sen. Tydings (D., Md.) had passed to freeze agricultural workers to the land and to exempt them from the draft—thereby keeping on tap a big source of cheap labor and incidentally causing the current manpower shortage in the army which is responsible for the draft of fathers.

The bill has every objectionable feature of the original Austin-Wadsworth bill and a great many more of its own. In addition to the anti-Democratic forced labor angles, the bill provides no system of checking on the proper use of available manpower in industry or on farms.

It could thus be used to freeze industrial and agricultural waste of manpower, since neither the local draft boards or the National Selective Service Director are in a position to know whether or not manpower is being wasted or misused in a particular industry.

CIO members should begin writing to their Senators at once—or else face a much more stringest system of forced labor than ever contemplated before.

Anti-Price Control Plots Make Rackets Seem Tame

WASHINGTON, May 20—New schemes to turn price control into a price racketeer's dream were being hatched this week, chiefly in the Senate, as the campaign to renew the act went into final committee stages in both House and Senate.

One of the schemes in the Senate is a little trick thought up by Bankhead (polltaxer, Ala.) to jack up the price of raw cotton, which in turn would increase already swollen prices on scarce low-cost clothing, especially work clothes.

Another is a proposal to knock out the triple damages section of the present law that has been the most effective check on violators. Under the present law, OPA and consumers have a strong weapon against price chisellers in the triple damage suit. Without it, enforcement would be practically impossible.

Sen. Taft (R. O.) has his favorite plan which calls for guarantees of a "fair and equitable profit on each item sold by anyone to any consumer. This would mean an impossible situation in which every item's price would have to be constantly reviewed, and would knock out completely such low cost and comparatively lower profit items as work clothes, cheap dresses, and the like.

Then there's the favorite legalistic device of submitting all OPA price and policy orders to court review. This alone could destroy application and enforcement of OPA orders and prices, simply by putting them through the court mill. There could be as many as 95 court decisions on a single price ceiling under such a provision.

Meantime, "Price Control Week," May 17-24, has been booming in all cities where labor, consumers, white collar groups and others have organized to put it over. Scores of mayors have proclaimed the week, and neighborhood rallies are being held throughout the country.

CIO, which has led in the struggle to keep price control on the statute books, is still leading the campaign to have the act renewed on time, without crippling amendments, with adequate funds for enforcement.

Wire your two Senators and your Representative again today—tell them no matter how many times you've told them before; renew the price control act promptly, without amendments, and provide adequate funds for enforcement.

Shoddy Kids, Women's Clothing Floods Market

WASHINGTON, May 20—Women are complaining loudly about shoddy stuff in low-cost children's and women's clothing, the American Home Economics Assn. said today in releasing a 28-state survey.

Pointing out that the January order of the War Production Board for more output of low-cost items "did not result in clothing of satisfactory qualtiy coming into the market," Gladys Wyckoff, executive secretary of the Association, said:

"While more of some types of clothes are available, the quality deterioration is so great that making them wasted labor and manpower, and shopping for them and making them up into garments wasted the homemaker's time and energy."

Women queried by the survey complained specifically of skimpily-cut dresses, sleazy yard goods "at outrageous prices," dresses that immediately fade, shrink, and give way at the seams, and poor quality boys' and men's underwear.

The women also sent the assn. a collection of the rotten stuff they've been forced to buy at high prices. The organization in turn sent them to WPB head Donald Nelson. Nelson replied that such "shoddy construction and extreme deterioration in quality of materials are inexcusable."

To drive the point home, Miss Wyckoff called for pricing based on quality, saying that "without it there can be no real control of clothing prices." Congressmen in charge of the price control renewal bill please note—also OPA.

CIO Japanese-American Dies For U. S.

Philadelphia, May 20—The first Japanese-American to die fighting with the U. S. forces in the South Pacific was a member of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers, the union's official monthly paper reports in the current issue.

He was Sgt. Ken Omura, member of Salmon Canning Local 7, one of a dozen or more Japanese-Americans formerly active in UCAPAWA on the Pacific coast who are now serving with U. S. Intelligence unions in the South Pacific.

Sergeant Omura was drowned last month off New Guinea while serving with an Intelligence unit, according to information sent to Sergeant Omura's relatives, now living in Des Moines, Ia.

Sergts. Karl Yoneda and Taro "Texas" Tsukahara, former UCAPAWA organizers in San Francisco, are among the Japanese-Americans now serving in the South Pacific, the union paper states.

Fight Plan to Break Union Majorities

WASHINGTON, May 20—The proposed new rule of the Natl. Labor Relations Board allowing employers to question a union's majority in a dispute "invites terror, divisions and fights" that would harm the war, CIO Pres. Philip Murray told the Board this week.

Murray testified at a NLRB hearing on the proposed new rule, which is seen as an appeasement outgrowth of the Montgomery-Ward situation. Under the rule, employers would be allowed to reopen the question of a union's right to represent a majority of the workers, even when there is no other union in the plant. At present, this is allowed only when a competing union exists.

CIO's arguments against the proposed rule were led off by Murray, UAW-CIO Pres. R. J. Thomas and Textile Pres. Emil Rieve. CIO General Counsel Lee Pressman led the legal arguments against it, together with UAW Counsel Maurice Sugar and UE Counsel David Scribner.

"We want to see that no complicated rule is adopted that would create disputes and perhaps encourage interruptions in production," Murray said. "This rule, if passed, would create more disorder, more misunderstanding and lead to more strikes than anything since the creation of this Board.

"The mere fact that this hearing is being held is already causing considerable apprehension in the war industries of the nation."

Chief argument for the proposed rule was presented by Raymond Smethurst, counsel for the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers. Even the NAM was slightly diffident about it, however, as shown when Smethurst yielded a portion of his time to labor representatives.

United labor action is shaping up against the rule, with AFL joining CIO in opposition. At the same time, AFL craft leaders and their lobbyists are sweating in Congress to get the Frey rider tacked onto the NLRB appropriation again.

The rule is generally recognized as the work of NLRB Member Gerard Reilly, who also is the reported author of the Frey rider "compromise" now kicking around in Congress, which sanctions company unions as long as their collusive contracts run. The rule would place a premium on employers like Sewell Avery, who defied the government and demanded "proof" of the union's right to represent the employes, despite the fact that it was the only union in the plant.

It would also make things much easier for employers by saving them the trouble of rigging up a "competing" union, either of the straight out-and-out company union variety or with an AFL label. From now on, if the new rule is passed, the employer wouldn't have to bother, since he'd be allowed to question the union's right to representation at any time.

Van A. Bittner, assistant to the president of the United Steelworkers and vice-chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee, stirred the delegates with his appeal for more political activity.

"We are not bringing politics into the union," he said. "We are bringing the union into the political life of America."

Bittner praised the President for taking over the Montgomery Ward plant and exclaimed: "Who would have dreamed of that happening in 1932? That's one reason we've got to make this fight."

Polltax Repeal Buried, But Still Kicking

(See Voting Record Below)

WASHINGTON, May 20—Working in close though unspoken alliance, the polltax Senators and their friends among the reactionary Republicans succeeded this week in shelving the polltax repeal bill (HR 7), without a vote on the bill itself.

The trick was worked through the defeat of a cloture motion. If it had been passed it would have ended the filibuster and permitted the Senate to vote on the merits of the bill.

The cloture motion, which requires a two-thirds majority, was defeated by 44 to 36.

The floor fight which could scarcely be called militant, lasted two days. It was led by Sen. Mead (D. N.Y.) who introduced the bill, with some support from Sens. Wagner (D. N.Y.), Barkley (D. Ky.), Pepper (D. Fla.) and McCarran (D. Nev.). The Republicans who had promised much, did nothing.

Sen. Pepper, recently re-nominated in the Florida primaries over strong anti-FDR opposition, hit at the two-thirds cloture requirement that prevented the Senators from voting on the bill itself by allowing the filibuster to go on.

"Not a Senator on either side of the aisle will deny that if a free vote of Senators were permitted this day on this issue, a majority of the Senate would vote for the bill," Pepper said.

"If the Senate of the U.S., which has one-half the legislative power of the American Congress, can have the will of a majority of its membership, duly elected and accredited, thwarted by a minority of this body, I say that this constitutes in the minority the power to thwart the functioning of the American Republic."

PRICE TAG ON BALLOT

Criticizing the fact that the polltax puts a price tag on the ballot, Sen. Barkley said: "But if a man becomes delinquent in the payment of what we call a polltax, or a head tax, he is thereby denied the right to vote.

"He is denied the right to participate in the only way the average man can participate in Government, and that is by voting; but he is not relieved of any other responsibility so far as fighting, bleeding and dying for his country are concerned."

Sen. White (R. Me.), Republican leader, took the view that the anti-cloture vote showed that the Senators are "hostile to the antipolltax bill at this time," and urged that it be pigeon-holed.

So, with a final welter of parliamentary points, the Senate laid aside HR 7 and took up other matters.

ISSUE NOT DEAD

This does not mean that the issue of repealing the polltax is dead, any more than it was dead when the polltaxers filibustered a similar repeal bill two years ago.

The bill passed the House by two-to-one a year ago. It went through the Judiciary Committee of the Senate, after months of hearings, by two-to-one. It never got to a vote on its merits in the Senate, due to the cloture rule.

Since the cloture vote requires a two-thirds majority, and since the polltaxers in alliance with reactionary Republicans were able to get a majority against it, they were able to prevent the Senate from voting on the bill itself.

Incidentally, many of these Republicans have been taking the line—and some Democrats too—that they were for repeal but against cloture. This stand, of course, helped in shelving the bill. Those Senators who took that line knew that defeating cloture, under the rules of the Senate, meant laying HR 7 aside.

Senate Vote Shelving Polltax Repeal Bill

This is the Senate vote that pigeonholed the polltax repeal bill (HR 7). The vote was taken not on the merits of the bill, but on the motion for cloture. Cloture would have closed the debate and ended the polltax Senators' filibuster against the bill.

The bill itself never came to a vote. Thus the polltax Senators and their reactionary Republican allies were able to prevent the majority of the Senate from voting for the bill. If they had been able to vote, the bill would have passed.

'R' is a vote for cloture and hence for polltax repeal. 'W' is a vote against cloture and against the repeal bill. 'NV' means not voting.

Need More Women To Help Win War

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Up to two million more women workers will be needed in this country by July, 1944, according to the Office of War Information. Already women hold one out of every three jobs, but that's not enough. In San Francisco, for instance, 85,000 women are urgently needed for trade, service and other non-war jobs. A similar situation exists in many other labor shortage cities.

At last the government agencies which are concerned with recruiting women are beginning to realize that patriotic slogans are not enough. There's been quite a rash of statements emphasizing the need to establish community services to solve the problems of women workers and make it possible for new women to take jobs.

The plain fact of the matter is that women aren't taking jobs and sticking to them in adequate numbers, and the government is beginning to realize, as Dorothy Thompson said recently in an excellent column on the subject, that "exhortation will not overcome real difficulties."

HOPE FOR ACTION

So far, unfortunately, most of the government's effort to meet these difficulties are just in the talk stage, but there are hopeful signs. The War Production Board in April 1944 finally awoke to the fact that child care centers might help in overcoming absenteeism. They have a story each week now in their Labor-Management Production News calling upon communities to get to work on establishing child care centers. They actually give out information on how communities can go about putting in applications for Lanham funds.

A recent War Manpower Commission survey in 116 cities showed that 69 of them found it difficult to recruit women because no facilities for child care were available. One plant in Seattle reported 57 women quitting in one week because of child care problems, and 20% of Elmira New York's working mothers quit for the same reason.

The Women's Adivsory Committee of the WMC is urging establishment of womenpower committees in each labor shortage city to deal with these problems.

The Women's Bureau's recent leaflet, "Community Services for Women of War Workers," has quite a bit of interesting material on the need for action. The section on Child Care is biased and inadequate—giving the impression that foster homes are the basic solution rather than nursery schools and child care centers—but there are encouraging examples of what has been done in meeting other problems.

CIO-Supported 'GI' Bill Passes 387-0

WASHINGTON, May 20—The "GI Bill," supported in its Senate version by the CIO, passed the House this week by 387-0 and now goes to conference with the Senate to work out the differences between the two versions.

The House bill, as the CIO has pointed out, is a much-weakened and in places even vicious version of the bill that passed the Senate some weeks ago.

Under the Senate bill, for example, an unemployed veteran was entitled to 52 weeks of unemployment compensation at $15 a week, with allowances up to $10 a week if he had three dependents.

Under the House version, sponsored by Rep. John E. Rankin (polltaxer, Miss.), this was cut in half to 26 weeks of benefits at a straight $20 a week, with no allowances for dependents whatever.

The House bill also contains a vicious clause inserted by Rep Rankin that puts a premium on the open shop, in a section that says no veteran shall be allowed to claim unemployed benefits if he "would be required to join" a union as a condition of getting a job.

CIO FOR ORIGINAL BILL

While protesting against the slash in unemployment benefits, against the open shop clause and against another section raising the interest rate on loans to veterans from 3 to 6 per cent, the CIO urged the House to pass the original Senate version of the bill which contained none of these weakening amendments.

As a sidelight on the anti-union way in which Congressional reactionaries have sought to corrupt the GI bill, Rep. Howard Smith (polltaxer, Va.) tried to get an amendment across which would fine or imprison anyone who asked a veteran applying for a job to join a union.

This was defeated by 112 to 19—an indication of how much more sensitive Congressmen are to labor's voting power since the unseating of the three leading Dies Committee members, Dies himself, Starnes of Alabama and Costello of California.

Rankin, who, as chairman of the House Veterans Committee, poses as the veteran's "best friend," took time out in the debate on the bill to scream at CIO political action and was soundly slapped by Reps. Eberharter D., Pa.) and Marcantonio, ALP, N. Y.).

The GI bill, which started out and passed the Senate as a simple and sound measure to aid veterans, thus has had anti-union and anti-Social Security clauses injected into it.

This is a clear example of how polltaxers and other reactionaries will seek anti-union advantage even in a measure to aid servicemen. It is also an example of how polltax Congressmen can influence important legislation. Rankin is chairman of the House Veterans Committee simply by seniority. Seniority is easy if you're a polltaxer—because few of your constituents can vote.

The bill now goes to conference, which means a meeting of committee members from the House and the Senate. There is still time to keep the GI bill what it was intended to be—a simple measure of aid to veterans. Wire your Senators now, urge them to stick by the original Senate version of the GI bill, without the amendments engineered by Rankin.

Frey 'Compromise' Phoney, CIO Warns

WASHINGTON, May 20—The drive to fasten the Frey rider on the Wagner Act, held up by CIO opposition, is going ahead in Congress again with action expected soon on a reported "compromise" which is said to be a little less stringent than the present rider.

The present rider thus makes company unions permanent. The "compromise" makes it possible to reopen a case when the collusive contract runs out. CIO is continuing its opposition to both, since both interfere with genuine unionism and orderly labor-management relations.

The reported "compromise" would allow the National Labor Relations Board to reopen a collusive contract case when the contract expires. Under the present rider, whose renewal is being pushed by AFL craft leaders and lobbyists, the Board cannot go into any situation where a labor contract exists —no matter how the contract was arrived at.

CIO'S newest leaflet, "Company Unions Ride Again," tells about the Frey rider in popular terms. It can be ordered from the CIO Publicity Department, 718 Jackson Place N.W., Washington 6, D. C. Price: 100 for $1; 500 for $4; 1,000 for $7. Illustrated, four pages.

Senate Kills Politics Ban

Washington, May 20—Chalk one up for the right of workers—in this case government workers—to take part in normal political action, despite efforts of reactionary Congressmen to make them into political ciphers.

The victory was won when the Senate reversed a House rider in an Agricultural Dept. fund bill that would have required department employes to swear an oath for each paycheck that they'd not been indulging in political activity.

Senator John A. Danaher (R., Conn.) tried hard to make the rider stick, but was defeated 42 to 24. It had been originally deleted in the Senate Appropriations Committee. The bill now goes back to the House for conference.

British Progressives Seek Unity Against Tories

LONDON, May 20 (ALN)—The emergence of a "popular front" in Britain ensuring a Labor Party victory in the next general election is visualized in several resolutions, grouped under the heading "Progressive Unity," to be presented to the annual conference of the Labor party, opening here May 29. Heretofore, the Labor party leaders have held out against joint action with other labor and progressive groups.

A resolution from Aberdeen declares that a common agreement between all progressive parties "is the only means of preventing the installation of a Tory-dominated government in the next general election." Among the trade unions supporting these unity proposals is the powerful Amalgamated Engineering Union.

Confirmation of the increasing uneasiness in labor's ranks concerning the future policies of the Tory party is given in the amendment to the Labor party's constitution tabled by the Rushholme divisional party.

"While the Labor party will make every effort to achieve socialism through Parliament," it declares, "if British capitalists should begin to use methods of force against socialists in this or any other country, the Labor party will encourage and assist all working class organizations taking such forms of direct action as are appropriate."

POLITICAL "TRUCE"

Dominating the conference will be the issue of the electoral truce —whereby any vacated parliamentary seat is filled by a member of the party that previously held it. Thirty-eight resolutions call for ending the truce, which at present is supported by the party executive. This issue will bring to a head the crisis between the executive and a growing number of "rebel" Labor M. P.'s.

A public statement that "the Labor party will not participate in a post-war coalition government and that the next general election will be fought on a party basis" is demanded by the National Union of Distributive and Allied Workers. Many resolutions ask for increased participation by trade unions in political activities.

The Labor party's annual report, to be presented to the conference, demands the total disarmament of Germany and Japan after the war. It states:

"A purely civilian police backed by the armies of occupation must keep order, and the power of the German military caste as well as German Junkers and heavy industrialists must be destroyed. Similarly with Japan. Some form of international control of German and Japanese economic and financial systems, including heavy industry, must be evolved by the United Nations at least for a period of years."

A statement on war criminals declares: "As far as possible these must be handed over, but a series of long judicial trials must be avoided. The Moscow conference decision to send back criminals to the scene of their crimes to be judged there is to be welcomed."

The report favors reparation deliveries in kind and reparation by German labor of devastated territories.

Law Guild Asks Victory Tax Repeal

Washington, May 20—Repeal of the mis-called "victory tax" in reality as well as in name was urged by the Natl. Lawyers Guild in a statement sent to the Senate Finance Committee, now winding up work on a bill already passed by the House to simplify the income tax.

The Guild, after praising the House Ways and Means Committee and the U. S. Treasury Dept. for efforts to simplify the income tax, pointed out that keeping the victory tax in substance if not in form is not only unjust, but also defeats the simplification plan of the new bill.

Because the victory tax is retained, there have to be two sets of exemptions for taxpayers' dependents, the Guild said. In its place, the Guild recommended raising the exemptions to $600 for each taxpayer and each dependent below the $5,000 a year level, and doing away with the victory tax.

"No tax on the Federal statute books has been more discredited than this regressive tax, which bears heavily on low income groups, and flagrantly violates the basic principle of taxation according to ability to pay," the statement said.

South's Oldest Shoe Firm CIO

Lynchburg, Va., May 20—The South's oldest shoe company went CIO this week when employes of the Craddock-Terry Corp here voted nearly two-to-one for the CIO United Shoe Workers against the AFL Boot & Shoe Workers' Union. The score was: USWA-CIO, 1,774; AFL, 647.

Farm Unity In Britain On Postwar Action

London, May 20 (ALN) — The biennial conference of the National Union of Agricultural Workers, held in Blackpool this week, made history by recommending that joint committees be set up between the NUAW and the National Union of Farmers for united section on post-war agricultural policy.

Declaring that "a long term land food policy is urgently required in the interests of agriculture and public health," the conference resolved:

"Any sound agricultural policy must include as essential: national ownership of land, regulation of imports, elimination of wasteful distribution costs, guaranteed prices to efficient farmers, adequate wages for workers, better rural housing, more social life and wider facilities for education, entertainment and recreation."

Chinese Seamen Win Better Conditions

Sydney, May 20 (ALN)—Chinese seamen working ships sailing from Australian ports this week won conditions never previously attained by their countrymen in any other part of the world. The Chinese are now paid approximately the same wages and enjoy the same conditions as members of the Seamen's Union of Australia, including overtime after 44 hours, war risk bonus and the right to hold stopwork meetings on the employer's time.

Historic Yard Votes CIO

Erie, Pa., May 20—A shipyard whose historic record goes back to the war of 1812 went CIO this week. The vote, among employes of the Perry Shipyard, was 106 for the CIO Marine & Shipbuilders, and 27 for the AFL, which had nine different competing craft setups that managed to win representation rights for only seven workers in two small departments.

The yard occupies the idential site of, and is named after, the original yard down whose ways slid the 22-gun brigs Niagara and Lawrence, which helped Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry to defeat the British at the Battle of Lake Erie.

Dismissal Pay for War Jobs Urged

Washington, May 20—War workers who are leaving their jobs in search of more security in peacetime industry should be kept on their jobs by the incentive of guaranteed severance pay and preferential employment when the war ends, Clinton S. Golden, assistant to the president of the United Steelworkers, said this week in a special article for Modern Industry.

Golden, who is also vice-chairman of the War Manpower Commission and the Manpower Requirements of the War Production Board, pointed out that manpower and not material shortages are the No. 1 problem of the nation today.

In upholding the "yes" side of a printed debate with Dr. Jules I. Bogen, editor of the N. Y. Journal of Commerce, on the question of dismissal pay for laid-off war workers, Golden said:

"These workers do not want to join an army of unemployed suddenly turned loose from war jobs to get just one of a rapidly diminishing number of jobs. So they take time off to 'shop around' for a more secure job in a peacetime industry, or to find a promising opportunity to go into a business of some description."

NOT NEW IDEA

Golden, in explaining that the idea of dismissal pay is not new, said that a worker in an airplane plant will stay on his job and produce to the utmost if he knows that:

"1. The longer he stays and the steadier he works, the more he will receive in the form of a dismissal bonus computed in part on (a) his total length of service, and (b) his total earnings or wages paid by his employer, and (c) a predetermined fixed sum that would represent the amount it would cost to break in and train a new employe to take his place had he not remained on the job.

"2. The government, through the USES, is prepared to give him a No. 2 priority position (after returning soldiers) for replacement in another job as soon as he reports with a release showing that his services have been involuntarily terminated because of contract termination or cancellation."

WISHFUL THINKING: "He wants us to carry him in and out, ma'am . . . thinks he's Sewell Avery."

Rubber Workers' History Told in New Book

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

Formation of the CIO in 1935 came like a Godsend to several million workers in mass production industries, but to none was its appearance on the labor front more welcome than to the industrial union-minded employes of the Big Four rubber companies —Goodyear, Firestone, Goodrich and U. S. Rubber — which dominated the industry.

Efforts of rubber workers to organize had met with repeated defeat from the days of the Knights of Labor in the 1880's to the last feeble, confused efforts of the American Federation of Labor in the 1930's.

The early history of the rubber workers, which throws a significant light on the dramatic upsurge of unionism in the 1930's, sets the stage for the complete story of union organization and collective bargaining in the rubber industry is told in a new book by Harold S. Roberts, "The Rubber Workers."

As early as 1902, jurisdictional disputes with craft unions were already handicapping attempts of the rubber workers to build a union strong enough to protect them.

The Amalgamated Rubber Workers Union of North America, which was set up in that year, was given jurisdiction by the AFL over "all persons working at the trade of making rubber goods of every description." This was contested by the Boot & Shoe Workers and the United Garment Workers.

Before the Amalgamated had a chance to develop and establish its jurisdictional rights, a disastrous strike at Trenton, N. J., in 1904 weakened it beyond recovery and by 1906 it had completely fallen to pieces.

"Like Ford, the lone wolf of the automobile industry, Goodyear held out, fighting the tide. Both Ford and Goodyear succumbed in 1941."

AMA Fights Service Aid

Washington, May 20—Big shots in the American Medical Assn.—one of the toughest trade organizations in the country—are working overtime in Congress to deny maternity and infant care to the children of servicemen.

The high-priced sawbones are doing it in an all-out attack on the "Emergency Maternity and Infant Care" (EMIC) program, sponsored by the Women's Bureau of the Labor Dept. and in successful operation for a year.

The AMA, which got a setback last week when a $6,700,000 deficiency appropriation passed with CIO and CIO Auxiliary support to carry EMIC through to June 30, is aiming now at the program for next year, for which $42,000,000 is being asked.

The program is administered by the Children's Bureau. Under it, the service wife gets complete care for herslf through pregnancy, childbirth and care for the baby during the first year, however sick he may be or whatever operations or hospitalization are needed—all without cost to her or her husband.

State health departments are responsible for giving this aid, and the wife can get it by applying at her local health department. No one is barred on account of residence, race or family income.

Fair Warning

Permanent Political 'Ban' Hatch Act Aim

WASHINGTON, May 20—An old enemy of the workers' right to political action is up again in Congress, with indications that early action can be expected if CIO members fail to halt it quickly enough.

This is the Hatch bill (S 1272) that perpetuates the ban on political contributions already in the Smith-Connally Act. The Smith-Connally Act ban runs for the duration and six months; the Hatch bill would run forever.

The bill, after passing the Senate last February, lay dormant until this week, when it suddenly popped up in the House Judiciary Committee (Rep. Summers, poll-taxer, Tex., chmn.).

The CIO NEWS poined out the dangers of this bill at the time it was slipped over as an apparently innocent amendment to the Federal Corrupt Practices Act. Now it is approaching House action.

Write to your Representative, tell him that labor political action has been OK'd by the U.S. Dept. of Justice and the Senate Committee on Elections (both of which cleared the CIO Political Action Committee) and that Congress should avoid any further gags on the fundamental right of American citizens to take part in politics.

Protect Workers As Well as Industry In Conversion—CIO

WASHINGTON, May 20—CIO's drive to get "the human side" of war industry reconversion considered in current bills before Congress continued this week with testimony for the Kilgore bill (S 1893) presented in Pres. Murray's name by Robert K. Lamb, legislative representative of the CIO United Steelworkers.

As the situation stands, the Senate has passed the Murray (D., Mont.) bill (S 1718) which protects industry only, does not aid war workers or veterans in the industrial demobilization from war to peacetime production.

An earlier Kilgore bill which would protect war workers and veterans through unemployment compensation and other assistance was by-passed when the Murray bill slipped rapidly through the Senate.

CIO is plugging for re-introduction of the new and improved Kilgore measure, as an amendment to the Murray bill when it hits the House floor and as a separate bill in both Houses.

Murray's latest testimony, presented by Lamb to the Senate Postwar Economic Policy and Planning Committee, centered on the need for planning to achieve full employment during the reconversion now going on and after the complete switch-over from war to peace production.

"If we face the facts we must begin by realizing that in the last quarter of 1943 the government was the largest customer in the U. S. at the rate of an estimated $94 billion of finished goods and services annually. Remove that stimulus and all talk about the effect of the backlog of $12 billion of 1943 savings tends to disappear into thin air. Where is the new business to come from?" he asked.

Urging speed on Congress to pass the Kilgore bill before the June recess, Lamb said: "Either Congress bestirs itself to pass some of this legislation in the next six weeks, or we enter upon the period of cutbacks, following the collapse of Germany, without preparation for the greatest shifting about of population in our history.

"Full employment is our objective, and an increasing standard of living for all. We do not overlook, however, the need for increasing unemployment benefits, raising their standards, and nationalizing the employment service.

bodily removed from his office after he had refused to cooperate with the government, began negotiations with the CIO United Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes Union, which advised him that it "continues to represent a majority of his employes" in the Chicago plant.

This representation was established beyond even Avery's doubt by an NLRB election which the union won overwhelmingly last week. The union has been certified by the NLRB as bargaining agent.

The union, which has asked the Natl. War Labor Board to continue the old contract with the firm during negotiations for a new agreement, is seeking the settlement of grievances, in connection with the negotiations. Particularly, it is asking for reinstatement of Sec.-Treas. Adolph Loresch, of Local 20, at the Chicago plant.

Meanwhile, all labor, which has united behind the union's case, was cheered by the SUN's exposure of the attitude of Avery, who was described in the articles reprinted in the Congressional Record as a user of labor spies and as a Roosevelt-hater extraordinary.

Declaring that Avery "likes to think of Herbert Hoover as the greatest president of contemporary times," the SUN pointed out:

"Avery represents a small but exceedingly articulate group of industrialists and businessmen, but he does not represent them all, and certainly not the majority."

"It is significant," the SUN added, "that of the 6,500 labor dispute cases which have reached the WLB since its creation in 1942, only seven cases of defiance by employers—and 10 of defiance by unions—have been sent to the White House for action, and that of the seven employer cases, two involved Montgomery Ward and thus Sewell Avery."

"While the rest of America has rolled up its sleeves and plowed ahead with the war effort, Sewell Avery and Montgomery Ward have concentrated their efforts on one battle—the legal battle to defend its self-asserted right to conduct labor relations as they were conducted at the turn of the century," the SUN added.

Ward Probe 'Kick-Back' For Sewell Avery

WASHINGTON, May 27—The Congressional investigation that was designed to make a martyr out of Sewell Avery this week, at least, blew up in the face of the 69-year-old Montgomery Ward chairman as government officials flatly said that his anti-union attitude was responsible for the recent brief stoppage and the necessary seizure of the firm's Chicago plant.

Not only was President Roosevelt's war power to seize the plant supported by Attorney General Francis Biddle, but Chairman William Davis of the Natl. War Labor Board warned that if FDR had refused to act, the Montgomery Ward strike might have led to others that would have drastically affected war production. Testimony was given before a House Select committee set up to probe the case.

In testifying as to the constitutionality of the seizure, Biddle cited the facts that the company is one of the two largest mail order houses in the nation, with 30,000,000 customers, gross yearly sales of over $600,000,000, and operates in every state in the Union.

Biddle said that the company is an important distributor of building materials, work clothes, essential electrical supplies, heating apparatus, and farm equipment and machinery.

Davis declared that if the WLB were held to lack jurisdiction over the Ward case, it "would mean that we were unable to act in other cases involving employes in such fields as the distribution, transportation, service trades, wholesale and retail services, because like

NAM 'Sinatra' Beamed To Make Congressmen Swoon

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, May 27—Want to know how to make friends out of Congressmen and influence legislation the "Free Enterprise" way? All you have to do is read the latest easy guide to Capitol Hill, put out by the Natl. Association of Manufacturers and prepared especially for industrialists haunted by fears of government taking away their livelihood.

According to the NAM guide, which comes under the disarming title of "Know Your Congressman," the first thing to remember is that a Congressman leads a hard and very meagerly rewarded life. Furthermore, he's a sensitive fellow, harassed by "bureaucrats" and also by his constituents. The NAM tune goes:

"A Congressman is a human being, living in a most uncomfortable way. His salary is $10,000 a year. And this is important. It is not enough . . ."

On this sympathetic note, the NAM guide moves on to the troubles a Congressman has with his voters back home—and incidentally contrives to ridicule and insult the plain people who vote for him in these words:

"Businessmen may not know his salary, but Mrs. Zilch knows. Mrs. Zilch is president of the Women's Auxiliary to Eradicate Poverty in Stumptown. And Mrs. Zilch sees that the Congressman is a regular contributor to her association . . . So Mrs. Zilch must be pacified."

Its the same way with the "bureaucrats" of the New Deal. Unless the Congressman happens to be a New Dealer himself, the guide says, he gets no help from them, rather he gets hindered and harassed. Especially on such things as profits, renegotiation, and patent control.

NAM VOLUBLE

The NAM guide has a lot to say on these subjects, chiefly to the effect that "Free Enterprise" doesn't do enough about getting its point of view across.

"Do his Congressmen have any idea as to the size of his tax bill as compared to his profits?" the NAM asks the reader. "Has he explained fully, in simple language, how renegotiation affects the financial affairs of his company and how much his postwar reserves were curtailed by renegotiation?

"Do his Congressmen know anything about the type of patents he uses in his business and how they contribute to the stability of employment in his district and state? Has he spelled out to his Congressmen the effect of unreasonable and arbitrary rules from Washington upon his business?"

Regretfully, the NAM concludes that he hasn't done these things—otherwise, businessmen wouldn't

Convention Roundup

Amalgamated Backs Intl. Labor Unity Program

By RICHARD ROHMAN

CHICAGO, May 27—The 14th Biennial Convention of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers wound up this week in a blaze of glory, dealing with important international matters and demanding real labor representation at the peace table. The 1,000 delegates had previously endorsed Franklin D. Roosevelt for a fourth term and had voted all-out support for the CIO Political Action Committee.

Declaring that the recent conference of the ILO at Philadelphia did not adequately represent the voice of labor of the United Nations, Sidney Hillman, Amalgamated president and chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee, urged the calling of an international labor conference, with both the CIO and the Soviet Trade Unions present, to work out a program for presentation to the future peace conference.

While stating that "a fairly good program" for world economic reconstruction and social advancement was presented at Philadelphia, Hillman insisted that the ILO meeting was not truly representative of international labor because of the absence of the CIO and Soviet Trade Unions.

Warning that labor must not repeat the mistake of the Versailles peace conference by being content with mere token representation at the conference table, Hillman said that labor must demand "a full and rightful place in the peace negotiations."

Hillman was renominated as president of the Amalgamated, with no opposition, as was Jacob S. Potofsky, for secretary-treasurer. The nominations are tantamount to re-election. The present general executive board was also renominated.

In a discussion on political action, Hillman again offered to show the books of the CIO Political Action Committee "to any properly authorized committee of Congress" desiring to investigate its activities and financial resources, but said they would be withheld from the Dies Committee on the ground that it has no jurisdiction.

"It so happens that Mr. Joe Starnes of Alabama and Mr. John Costello of California, two members of the Dies Committee, have been defeated in primary contests for re-election," Mr. Hillman said, as the convention applauded. "Mr. Dies did not choose to run."

"Some of these gentlemen whom our friends have retired have tried, as alibis for themselves or otherwise, to make some fantastic statements about the 'unlimited funds' spent by the CIO Political Action Committee to accomplish this.

"The thing that really scares them is that our bringing of the facts to the voters has already been in large measure responsible for what has happened."

Fur & Leather Backs Murray Unity Drive

By GEORGE KLEINMAN

ATLANTIC CITY—Marked by complete unity and spirited enthusiasm, the 15th Biennial Convention of the CIO Fur & Leather Workers Union wound up its sessions here this week by mapping a hard-hitting and comprehensive program of utmost support to the war effort and the winning of a just and lasting peace, intensive political action and continued organizational progress.

Pres. Ben Gold, Sec.-Treas. Pietro Lucchi, Leather Division Pres. Augustus J. Tomlinson and Leather Division Sec.-Treas. Isador Bickman were unanimously reelected to office. Gold, Lucchi, Tomlinson and Pickman head a 38-man Intl. Executive Board elected at the same time.

The convention, largest ever held by the union, was attended by more than 400 delegates from over a score of states and three Canadian provinces.

Expressing wholehearted support of the CIO, the convention sent a telegram to CIO Pres. Philip Murray declaring its "enthusiastic support to the CIO and to your statesmanlike leadership of labor and your great contributions to our country and the United Nations in this people's war against the deadly fascist foe."

The telegram also pointed out that the Fur & Leather Workers Union unanimously endorsed and supports the "demands of the steel workers now pending before the National War Labor Board."

Resolutions adopted called for full and uninterrupted war production and all other aid to the invasion; greeted the historic decisions of the Moscow, Cairo and Teheran conferences, and international labor solidarity.

The convention urged revision of the Little Steel Formula, retention of price control and rationing, and the enactment of a more just tax program.

The polltax, the Dies Committee, the Smith-Connally Act, the Frey rider and other legislation aimed at undermining labor's rights and the unity of the nation were roundly condemned by resolutions, as were Jim-Crow, anti-Semitism and all forms of discrimination.

The convention urged full recognition of the French National Liberation Committee as the Provisional Government of France, the 6-party coalition government of Italy and the government of the Yugoslav partisans headed by Marshal Tito.

Newark, N. J., May 27—The CIO Office & Professional Workers, New Jersey Regional Advisory Council this week urged President Roosevelt to seek a fourth term.

Transport Service Solid Behind FDR

By ERNEST CALLOWAY

CHICAGO, May 27—Chicago's south side celebrated CIO week as delegates to the Fourth biennial convention of the United Transport Service Employes of America, held here last week, endorsed Pres. Roosevelt and Vice-Pres. Wallace for re-election. This sentiment was echoed at a community-wide mass meeting May 17, when more than 5,000 Chicago Negro unionists turned out to hear speeches by Pres. R. J. Thomas of the UAW-CIO; Van A. Bittner, assistant to the president of the USA-CIO; and CIO Secy.-Treas. James B. Carey.

Highlight of the convention was CIO Pres. Philip Murray's opening day address before 150 assembled delegates and a capacity hall of visitors. Pres. Murray, in outlining the nature of the Negro problem, declared:

"If the Negro people are to win their economic emancipation, it can only be brought about through affiliation with a labor organization whose tasks are devoted primarily to the elimination of all forms of discrimination.

"We find there was no better weapon ever created . . . for the furtherance of the Negro's cause than the instrument of collective bargaining."

CITES STEEL DEMOCRACY

After describing the growth of CIO unions in various industries and the firm resolution of these organizations to eliminate all discrimination, Marray declared.

"Today we have over 70,000 colored workers, members of the United Steelworkers of America. They are a part of our organization, they participate in all our organizational activities, they exercise the constitutional right to aspire to any office within the organization.

They are being extended a larger measure of representation as the days go by, and their foresight, understanding and knowledge of the problems affecting the welfare of all workers have gradually grown and developed until today there is no Negro problem.

"Our problem has become a common problem. We are workers—we are all members of the same union—we have all the same aspirations and ideals—we are all looking toward the attainment of our common objectives."

The convention adopted a resolution commending President Murray's statesmanship and "generous and sympathetic understanding of the deep social problems which must be solved if we are to uproot the forces of intolerance which threaten the freedom and security of all humanity."

Backs Ward Seizure

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah—Governor Herbert B. Maw's full support of President Roosevelt's seizure of Montgomery Ward property was one of the highlights of the recently concluded State CIO Convention here. The Governor told convention delegates that the seizure "was merely an application of the Smith-Connally Act—but it happens to have been applied to an industrialist in this instance, instead of to labor as heretofore."

"Because of this," Governor Maw said, "the law suddenly has become a 'bad law' even in the eyes of those very persons who advocated it in an attempt to curb labor."

Main actions of the convention included:

Full support of the United Steelworkers' wage demands, opposition to destructive amendments to the Price Control and Natl. Labor Relations Acts, opposition to any labor draft law and to proposed federal sales tax legislation, a pledge to purchase only from stores carrying grade labelled goods, reaffirmation of the no-strike pledge, full support for the policies of CIO Pres. Philip Murray, and approval of the Murray-Wagner-Dingell social security bill.

Among convention speakers were Regional CIO Director Adolph Germer and August Scholle, Michigan CIO political action director.

Schole urged stress on getting out the women's vote for the 1944 elections, and said that the CIO is hopeful that such a vote would place in public office persons who could negotiate a "proper postwar program."

Both Germer and Governor Maw criticized the daily press for misleading the public on stories concerning the Ward case. They pointed out that the press approved action of the government six months ago in seizing the coal mines, then reversed the same arguments in the Ward case.

Steel Pamphlet Highlights Union Wage Battle

WASHINGTON, May 27—Under the title "Steel Fights for the Nation," the newest CIO publication tells the story of the drive of the CIO United Steelworkers for a wage raise to help the workers bridge the gap between frozen earnings and the rising cost of living.

Elaborately illustrated, the pamphlet was prepared by the CIO Research and Education Dept. and is based on the brief submitted by the USA-CIO to the special panel of the War Labor Board now dealing with the union's case.

"The issues involved are of major importance to all Americans," the foreword says. "The steel industry is typical in that it involves great numbers of workers and their families, who in turn form the basis of the social and economic life of their communities. What affects their lives and standards of living must affect the national life."

The pamphlet follows the union brief in discussing the need for a wage increase, in listing profits and comparing executives' salaries, in giving the background of the failure of Congress to stabilize the national economy, and in briefly describing the union's demands other than the wage raise.

CIO Blasts Phoney NLRB Maneuver

WASHINGTON, May 27—CIO took a hefty sock this week at a proposed Labor Relations Board rule requiring new elections any time an employer felt like it, and included in the punch was Gerard Reilly, NLRB member and author of the proposed changed policy.

The CIO blast came out of a meeting of President Murray, Sec.-Treas James B. Carey and the nine CIO vice-presidents. In it, they said that Reilly's conduct "reflects a sense of irresponsibility and a complete lack of understanding of our war problems."

Murray, CIO Counsel Lee Pressman and other CIO leaders and attorneys protested the proposed rule at a public hearing by the NLRB last week.

Under the rule, any employe could question a union's majority even though there is only one union in his plant and no question of a competing union.

"This," the CIO officers said, "would invite a wave of petitions by employers intent on delaying bona fide collective bargaining, and thereby unquestionably provoke strife and turmoil with a terrifying impact on war production."

At the same time, Pres. Murray wrote to all CIO affiliates warning them of the "very grave danger to all organized labor and to the entire war effort," in the proposed ruling, and urging them to write in protest against it to the NLRB in Washington.

RETREAT FROM PRINCIPLES

Listing recent decisions of the NLRB in the American News case and the foremen's case, as well as the proposed rule, the CIO officers said:

"These recent acts of the Board reflect a retreat from the basic policies and principles underlying the Natl. Labor Relations Act and actually deprive the workers of the nation of the fundamental rights which the act was intended to guarantee them.

"Undermining the protection afforded labor by the act in peacetime would be serious enough. But this activity carried on during wartime reflects a sense of irresponsibility and a complete lack of understanding of our war problems.

"We hereby desire to express our condemnation of the policies promoted by Gerard Reilly as a member of the NLRB in subverting the fundamental policies of the Natl. Labor Relations Act."

Price Control Fight Unites The People

Washington, May 27—Price Control Week found workers, farmers and housewives united as consumers to demand renewal of the Price Control Act without crippling amendments. It was marked in hundreds of cities, small and large, through the nation May 17 to 24.

Idea of the week was to center neighborhood and community attention on the act that must be renewed by June 30, and to combat amendments proposed by self-proclaimed "friends" of price control in Congress that would actually destroy control and make enforcement impossible.

Twenty-three city governments, including such big ones as New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, St. Louis, Toledo and Milwaukee, officially proclaimed the week, and a number of state governors did likewise.

More than 200 organizations, CIO, AFL, Railroad Brotherhoods, consumers, women's auxiliaries, farmers, white collar, religious, veterans and businessmen joined in the week—and in sending urgent messages to their Congressmen.

Half Million Retroactive Pay Boost

Washington, May 20—A $500,000 melon will be split by 1,700 members of the CIO United Steelworkers as a result of a retroactive wage boost ordered by the Natl. War Labor Board this week for the Sheffield Steel Corp., Houston, Tex.

In addition to seven-month retroactive feature, the WLB ordered the increase to apply at the rate of 8c an hour above the common labor rate which was set at 60½c.

Blitz Amendment Threat To Price Control Program

WASHINGTON, May 27—First of the blitz amendments to the price control act was produced this week by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, which reported favorably by 12 to six on the Bankhead plan to lift ceilings on cotton textiles.

CIO President Philip Murray, writing immediately to CIO affiliates warning them about the amendment and against others that can easily follow from this breakthrough, said:

"It will greatly increase the cost of work clothes, house dresses, childrens' clothes and the like in all the cheaper brackets. It will open the door to unlimited price increases in every commodity consumers use. It will encourage every profiteering interest now pressing to lift ceilings and destroy price control."

Senators voting against the amendment were Wagner (D. N.Y.), committee chairman, Barkley (D. Ky.), Maloney (D. Conn.), Radcliffe (D. Md.), Murdock (D. Utah) and Clark (D. Idaho). Democrats voting for the amendment were Bankhead (Ala.), Downey (Cal.), Maybank (S.C.), Scrugham (Nev.) and McClellan (Ark.). All the Republicans except Danaher (Conn.), who was away, voted for it.

Murray urged "every CIO member and housewife" to wire their Senators against the amendment at once. "Failure to do so will be taken as our consent to a profiteering orgy that will destroy price control and result in a further serious wage cut for all workers."

The situation on price control renewal is moving very rapidly. This amendment will undoubtedly set the tone for other attempts to wreck control and open the way to inflation. The House Committee is working on its version of the bill also.

Senate action can be expected within a week or 10 days. Wires should be rushed in at once.

Rankin Stab At GIs Gets Setback

WASHINGTON, May 27—Rep. Rankin (polltaxer, Miss.), who likes to pose as the "best friend" of the veterans, got a setback this week when the House-Senate conference committee restored one feature of the "GI Bill of Rights" (S 1767) to its original form—which is to the benefit of veterans of this war.

The break for the veterans came in action to cut interest rates on loans from Rankin's proposed six per cent to three, as was written in the original Senate version of the GI bill.

As The CIO NEWS went to press, the conference committee, set up to reconcile the differences between the Senate and House forms of the GI bill, had still to deal with other weakening amendments put into the House version by Rankin.

The fight to restore the bill to its original form, as it was backed by the CIO, got powerful aid from Sen. Wagner (D., N. Y.), who made a lengthy speech analyzing the Rankin attempts to destroy the social security features in the first bill.

As passed by the House under Rankin's leadership, the GI bill's unemployment provisions were reduced from 52 weeks to 26, and all allowances for dependents were wiped out. In addition, Rankin put in a vicious anti-union clause that bans unemployment aid to a veteran if he "would be required to join a union" as a condition of getting a job.

The Rankin version of the bill passed the House by 387 to nothing last week, Congressmen fearing to endanger aid to veterans by making an all-out fight against weakening changes.

The campaign to get these changes removed and the bill restored to its Senate version is going on in conference this week. More is at stake than aid to veterans, important as that is, since Rankin's attacks on the social features of the bill and the anti-union shop clause are wedges against all workers.

If Rankin and his allies among reactionary Republicans are successful in chiselling down social security and in attacking union shops in the GI bill, it will be that much easier for them to move on to attacking these things as they apply to workers generally.

The emasculated GI bill as passed by the House is thus not only a stab in the back to the soldiers and sailors fighting for us, but also a sneak punch directed against all workers here at home.

With this in mind, you should wire your Senators and your Representative again to stick to the original version of the GI Bill as passed by the Senate—without Rankin's vicious amendments.

CIO Executive Board to Meet June 16 in D.C.

Washington, May 27 — CIO's national Executive Board will meet at 10 a.m. Friday, June 16, at national CIO Headquarters, 718 Jackson Pl. N.W., Washington, D.C., Pres. Philip Murray said this week.

Among problems expected to be high on the agenda are political action, support for re-election of President Roosevelt, and legislation affecting the welfare of the nation.

Union Head Publishes First Novel

New York, May 27.—Union leader turned novelist—in Yiddish—is the unique record of Ben Gold, president of the CIO Fur & Leather Workers Union.

The novel, "Avraiml Broide," tells of the life of a needle trades worker whose experiences in fighting for unionism and democracy are finally summed up in his struggle for world freedom in the ranks of the Intl. Brigade.

Hit Shutdown Of Brewster

Washington, May 27—Shutdown of the Brewster Aeronautical Corp. plant at Long Island City, N. Y., without adequate notice to 13,500 employes, was sharply criticized this week by Richard T. Frankensteen, director of the CIO United Auto Workers' Aviation Division.

Frankensteen said that the shutdown was due to lack of planning, and pointed out that the Long Island area is not in a critical labor market, while other of the firm's plants in Connecticut and Ohio are in critical labor areas. These plants will continue to make the same plane that had been manufactured at Long Island, he declared.

"The Brewster case," Frankensteen said, "reveals once and for all the sham methods of certain members of Congress and government officials who are impeding war mobilization and full production and full employment plans by crying 'wolf, wolf' about the manpower situation without lifting a finger really to solve manpower and full production problems."

In telegrams to President Roosevelt and to the Navy, which canceled the Brewster contract, Frankensteen pointed to the Long Island plant's good production job and to the fact that if the plant is closed the skills of thousands of trained workers will be wasted.

Guard Wagner Act

Ever since its passage the Wagner National Labor Relations Act has been under attack by the enemies of labor.

These attacks have been of every kind, including crippling amendments, attempts to cut off the funds of the Natl. Labor Relations Board, appropriations riders to tie the hands of the Board, and more subtle pressures to have the Act administered contrary to its spirit and intent.

Against every one of these attacks, the CIO has fought with all the vigor at its command to preserve for the country the full benefits and unbiased administration of this "charter of labor's rights."

But in recent months, the purposes of the Wagner Act have been undermined from an unexpected quarter—from within the NLRB itself.

There have been a series of decisions and rulings by the Board that threaten to deprive the workers of the rights which the Act was intended to guarantee them.

In one of these (the American News Co. case), the Board went beyond the authority granted it to pass judgment on certain union actions and to deny workers the protection of the Act on the basis of this judgment.

In the case of foremen, the Board has provoked industrial disruption by peculiar decisions which, on the one hand, say foremen may not be discharged for union activity but, on the other hand, make them Class B citizens by denying protection of their right to organize in unions for collective bargaining.

The latest proposal of the Board, however, is the most dangerous of all to the rights and existence of labor unions.

It would provoke constant strife and turmoil, most disruptive to war production, by permitting employers to question a union's representation status upon termination of a contract and to request an election.

This would give anti-union employers a ready weapon to stall off collective bargaining and renewal of contracts, encouraging others to follow the notorious example of Montgomery, Ward. It is unitedly opposed by organized labor.

The executive officers of the CIO have also put the finger on the member of the NLRB who has been chiefly responsible for these anti-labor changes in the administrative attitude of the NLRB, in its sharp condemnation of Board Member Gerard D. Reilly.

To preserve the Wagner Act, and to maintain full war production, it is imperative that the present trend of the NLRB should be halted.

This should be impressed on all members of the Board, and the authorities concerned with war production should be warned directly of the dire results which can be expected if the Board is allowed to go through with its proposed new regulation.

Another Polltax Alibi

The Senate's surrender to minority rule in sidetracking the anti-polltax bill (HR 7) has left such a bad taste in the public's mouth that 35 Republican Senators are seeking to cover up the scandal by proposing a constitutional amendment to abolish the polltax.

This is like refusing to pull a drowning man out of the water, but assuring him you favor his rescue on general principles and will take up with the city council the question of appointing a lifeguard.

The anti-polltax bill has been passed by the House. It is favored by a majority of the Senate. All that was necessary to rescue 10 million disfranchised Americans was a vote for cloture, to end the filibuster of the polltax minority.

But instead there was a shameful surrender to the filibuster, through the defeat of the cloture motion.

The constitutional amendment move is certainly no substitute for passage of HR 7. The child labor amendment has been promoted for 20 years and it still has not been ratified by the required number of states.

A minority of 13 states can block passage of an anti-polltax amendment indefinitely. Even under the most favorable circumstances it would take years to get action through an amendment.

On the other hand, if these 35 Republicans would join with progressive Democratic Senators in a pledge to vote cloture, HR 7 could still be passed by this session of Congress.

Let your Senators know labor still demands passage of HR 7, is sizing up its representatives according to their stand on this bill and on cloture, and is not fooled by any alibis about constitutional amendments.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

What's a doodlebug? We don't consider Congressman Rankin an authority, but one can usually believe the opposite of anything he says. So let's start with him.

Every time he'd do this, according to Rankin, "the sand at the little end of the funnel would be seen to stir, and then the little head of his chosen representative would pop up."

Any man elected to Congress with CIO support would be a "doodlebug," Rankin said. So, applying the law of opposites, we can safely assume a doodlebug is the type of politician that CIO opposes—a servant of special interests instead of a representative of the people.

The CIO has received even more credit from its enemies than from its friends for the high mortality among doodlebugs in recent primaries.

The Dies committee has long been the champion doodlebug outfit.

Anytime an anti-union boss would have trouble with the union, during plant elections, wage negotiations or what-not, he could just call "Doodle, doodle," soft and slow, and up would pop the Dies committee with a smear of that particular union.

Similarly, the Dies committee was always ready to pop up at the call of wealthy and reactionary interests to smear a New Deal agency or a New Deal candidate for public office.

So when the three leading doodlebugs of this committee, Starnes, Dies and Costello, were eliminated by the flit-gun of public sentiment—and when other primaries also showed the voters' preference for progressive, pro-Roosevelt and win-the-war candidates—all the doodlebugs took alarm.

They couldn't hide the influence of the labor vote. So they tried to make a bogey of the CIO and spread wild and ridiculous claims of its alleged money-spending to influence the voters.

The motives of the doodlebugs are clear:

(1) They want to cover up the fact that the big money is still being spent by those who have it, by the wealthy special interests that want to return their own doodlebugs to Congress.

(2) They hope to cripple labor political activity through legislation forbidding unionists to spend any money for political education and organization.

(3) They'd like to scare conservative voters into the camp of reaction by red-baiting the CIO, and then claiming that the present broad swing of patriotic Americans of all classes toward national unity behind the Commander-in-Chief is exclusively a CIO affair.

What are the real facts about CIO influence in recent primary elections?

It is true, the CIO Political Action Committee has been a factor of great and growing importance.

Through its national and regional offices it is conducting a large amount of educational work on political issues. It is stimulating all sections of labor, and all other progressives, to greater political activity. It is promoting effective campaigns to get all workers to register and vote.

The limited funds of the committee are spent chiefly for these purposes. It could not compete, even if it wanted to, with the huge slush funds of wealthy interests nor with the resources of the tory and anti-administration press.

In the recent Southern primaries, for instance, the greatest expenditures were made by Northern capitalists with interests in the South. Huge sums were spent on rabid Negro-baiting papers and other propaganda in vain attempts to defeat Senators Pepper and Hill.

Dies spoke of the CIO having millions to defeat him. But he lied, as usual. The CIO Committee spent not one red cent against him in his district.

The CIO was a big factor in all the recent primaries, not because of money-spending but in spite of it.

Its influence counted because many newly-organized workers were disinclined to vote for anti-labor politicians; because the CIO gave its members information on the issues and on the candidates' records; and because it encouraged them to make full use of their democratic rights by registering and voting.

The CIO's political influence is also increasing precisely because its activities and aims are not narrowly partisan in any sense.

It seeks only to be an active part of the broadest possible movement of farmers, workers, businessmen, professionals—of all patriotic Americans, in fact—in support of candidates and policies that will serve the whole nation by bringing speedy victory and lasting peace.

Packing Membership Hits 100,000

Denver, Colo., May 27—Membership of the CIO United Packinghouse Workers of America has now reached the 100,000 mark, Lewis J. Clark, international president of the union, this week told representatives attending a union conference here.

Lewis said that in October 1943 when the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee became an international union, the membership stood at 53,000. Seven months later, as of March 1944, the dues paying members had increased to 92,000.

First Congress 'Snoop' Starts On PAC's Work

WASHINGTON, May 27—First of many threatened Congressional investigations of labor political action got under way this week with the setting up of a House group to probe the CIO Political Action Committee.

The new House group was set up under Rep. Anderson (D. N. M.) who had introduced a resolution to look into all campaign expenditures. This was taken up by House reactionaries who incorporated into it large parts of a motion by Rep. Gathings (polltaxer, Ark.), aimed pretty specifically at labor.

Earlier in the week Rep. Howard Smith (polltaxer, Va.) had demanded a probe, saying that he wanted "to get at the CIO before the damage is done." Smith has recently been extremely worried over the fate of fellow reactionaries like Dies, Starnes and Costello, who have already been rejected by the voters.

Hoffman (R., Mich.) put in his nickel's worth by repeating the diatribe of Rankin (polltaxer, Miss.) against "foreign-born" leaders of the CIO and of labor political action.

In fact, the words and music of the reactionary Republicans like Hoffman and the words and music of the polltaxers like Rankin are parts of the same tiresome duet—hate-labor, hate-Roosevelt, and to hell with what happens to the war.

Baltimore CIO Starts Classes in Political Education

Baltimore, May 27—Political education of CIO members through a series of Legislative Institute meetings is being conducted in this war boom city, jammed full of thousands of aircraft and shipyard workers who for the first time are learning what the labor movement is all about.

First two speakers on the Institute's program were Washington Legislative Representatives Irving Richter of the CIO United Auto Workers and Mrs. Frances Sayler of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

FEPC Threatened By Budget Cut

WASHINGTON, May 27—Congress' first appropriation for the Fair Employment Practices Committee was passed by the House this week, reduced from the sum of $585,000 asked by the FEPC and the Budget Bureau to $500,000.

The reduction of $85,000 looks like small potatoes in an overall budget for U. S. war agencies, but it means considerable curtailment for FEPC in view of the modest amount requested by the Budget Bureau. It will force FEPC, for example, to cut down on travel or on personnel—either of which would curtail its effectiveness.

CIO, following its practice of fighting all job discrimination on grounds of race, color or belief, urged the House to restore the full amount, in a letter to Congress from Legislative Representative Nathan Cowan.

"Because of your interest in promoting utilization of manpower in governmental and other essential war activities, I am sure you agree that adequate funds for the continued operation of FEPC is a matter of high importance and that the full budget of $585,000 should not be decreased," Cowan said.

The FEPC appropriation, part of a general war agencies fund bill, now goes to the Senate. Write your Senators to restore the full amount—which is little enough to help in getting full use of all manpower, regardless of race or color, in war production.

CIO Fights Race Lies

Muncie, Ind., May 27—Some 300 CIO representatives here pledged their support last week to a drive to break up a hate-campaign raging in this city.

Through stories told undercover about an imaginary crime wave, rumor mongers knowingly or unknowingly playing Hitler's game have been stirring up bad feeling against Negroes, says the Indiana CIO Political Action Committee.

The committee praised CIO rank and file and leadership in Muncie for "their fight against the prejudice, ignorance and hate that created this situation."

Finish Schooling, Hillman Urges U. S. Fighters

Washington, May 27—GI Joes were advised this week to complete unfinished schooling after the war to better prepare themselves for postwar jobs. The advice came from President Sidney Hillman of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers, one of six nationally prominent leaders asked to give opinions for publication in "The Leatherneck," a magazine for U. S. Marines.

"Organized labor," Hillman wrote, "strongly urges the soldier, sailor or marine to make every effort to complete his general and technical education upon return from war. We believe that a grateful people and government must and will provide the necessary financial aid to help complete interrupted schooling.

"The American labor movement, from whose ranks spring millions of soldiers, sailors and marines, recognizes as its first obligation, in a postwar world, that every opportunity for full employment and advancement must be guaranteed to those men and women who defended our lives and our liberties at perilous risk to their own."

Another Anti-FDR Casualty!

Portland, Ore., May 27—Another anti-FDR man went down to defeat this week as Oregon Republicans soundly rejected the reactionary record of Senator Rufus C. Holman, to nominate for his post Wayne L. Morse, former public member of the Natl. War Labor Board.

Morse, 43 years old and a former Oregon Law School dean, led Senator Holman by 47,152 to 39,891.

Morse will in November oppose Edgar W. Smith State Board of Higher Education member as the Democratic candidate.

Morse's decisions on the WLB earned for him a reputation of fairness and impartiality that brought forth strong labor support for his candidacy.

Keep 'Em Reading, Is GI's Advice

Pittsfield, Mass., May 27.—A "get 'em reading" campaign that would extend the circulation of union papers' servicemen's editions was recommended strongly this week as one of the best ways to build a solid bond between home and fighting fronts. The recommendation came from a man who ought to know—Marine Cpl. Stephen Helstowski, mustered out for illness after miraculously surviving the fierce Guadualcanal battles.

"The CIO," he said this week, "certainly ought to push with vigor a special newspaper that will give the troops on all fronts the straight labor facts, since there are so many other newspapers that distort the news.

WANTS ALL NEWS

"Union papers earmarked for troops in all areas, combat and otherwise, should give all the dope—what the European and other underground movements are doing to aid the Allies, what Tito of Yugoslavia is achieving, De Gaulle's Free French Committee and their work, etc."

Helstowski, who was a victim of a tropical swamp fungus, said that the gap between soldiers and civilians is smaller than a lot of people think, and urged that the labor movement make it smaller yet by making sure that GI's, particularly in small cities, are provided with inexpensive lodging and entertainment.

AWARD FOR GIVING: The CIO was honored this week by the American Red Cross for contributing its share toward the oversubscription of the 1944 $200-million War Fund. The scroll above was sent to CIO Pres. Philip Murray.

CIO Says:

Planned Output, Not 'Service' Act, Needed

WASHINGTON, May 27—Adequate planning and all-around cooperation will continue to meet manpower crises without such bills as the Brewster-Bailey proposal (S 1864) to dragoon workers into forced labor battalions, CIO President Philip Murray told the Senate Military Affairs Committee in hearings on the bill this week.

"With adequate planning and all-around cooperation, the al-leged manpower crisis can be met in the months ahead as it has been met in the past," he told the committee in testimony prepared for the hearing.

"We believe that with a knowledge of all relevant facts you would agree with us that there is no reason to abandon now the democratic methods that have proved so successful. Only the most extreme crisis could justify such a retreat."

Murray's prepared testimony, presented by Ted Silvey of the CIO Natl. Office, was backed up by Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, who analyzed the proposed bill and declared that "no more autocratic suggestion had ever been made in Congress."

Under the proposed bill, workers from 18 to 45 who leave their jobs without consent of their local draft boards could be put into forced labor battalions under military service conditions — less the benefits that actual servicemen get.

Thus, the conscripted worker would get military pay and be subject to military discipline, but his dependents would be cut off from any of the allowances that soldiers' families receive.

At the same time, as Pressman pointed out, the bill sets up no system for deciding what jobs are essential, other than freezing workers in present jobs. It gives the local draft boards and the Director of Selective Service unrestricted power to control the lives of all workers in the country. It takes no account of real manpower needs.

"May I urge that before taking any action toward national service legislation that you insist on a complete presentation of manpower information," Murray said in his statement.

"Such information should deal among other things with probable approaching cutbacks which may release hundreds of thousands of workers in a short time if the invasion meets with success."

Information here is that the Senate Military Affairs Committee will try a quick job of moving the Brewster-Bailey bill onto the Senate floor. Letters should go to all Senators against the bill, urging its defeat as a measure that will not help the manpower problem, but rather make it worse.

Watch Frey Rider Compromise Bill!

WASHINGTON, May 27—Here's the current status of the Frey rider to the Wagner Act—the AFL craft leaders' pet device that's designed to perpetuate company unions by freezing all union-management contracts, no matter how collusive.

The House Appropriations Committee has been considering the rider for some weeks now, following earlier Senate Committee action approving it in a Labor Relations Board deficiency fund bill.

Gerard Reilly, NLRB member blasted this week by CIO as author of several recent anti-collective bargaining Board policies, has written a "compromise" version of the rider. Under this "compromise," the NLRB can look into a collusive contract only after it expires. This of course will mean that collusive contracts will suddenly acquire a much longer span of life—will be valid for five years, say, instead of one or two.

According to reports, the House Committee is about to report out the Reilly compromise. This means that CIO members and everybody interested in genuine collective bargaining must redouble their efforts to free the Wagner Act of all riders of any kind, Frey or Reilly or otherwise.

Tells How CIO War Relief Aids British Workers

WASHINGTON, May 27—A first-hand account of how CIO war relief money is being spent in Great Britain was given to Pres. Philip Murray and other CIO officials this week by George Tomlinson, British Labor member of Parliament and Joint Par-liamentary Secretary of the Ministry of Labor.

Expressing British gratitude for this tangible expression of American labor solidarity, Tomlinson said he had become "the champion club-opener" in the course of his duties in supervising relief expenditures.

He gave a vivid description of the 116 war workers' clubs that have been made possible through American assistance, with recreation and games rooms, kitchens, bathrooms and washing and ironing rooms, for the convenience of women war workers.

Tomlinson told of the enthusiasm with which the first CIO canteen trucks were greeted during the height of the air blitz. As a result of American help in starting the first seamen's club, he said the government has now taken up the work, and similar clubs have been opened in every port.

Other projects made possible through American labor relief money include six rest houses, where workers can have a couple of weeks' rest to prevent illness and breakdown due to war strains; a rehabilitation center, and educational projects for war workers.

Tomlinson said the British unions hoped to continue most of these projects after the war as "a permanent testimonial to the good relations between American and British labor."

Sir Frederick Leggett, a leading official of the British Ministry of Labor, accompanied Tomlinson and supplemented his report.

Both Britishers came to the United States as government delegates to the recent conference of the Intl. Labor Organization.

New York, May 27—The CIO Furniture Bedding Allied Trades Joint Council District No. 3, representing 12,000 organized furniture workers of the Metropolitan area, this week urged President Roosevelt to run for a fourth term.

Bang Up Registration Job Credit to CIO

(Special to the CIO NEWS)

The Number One job in labor's political action drive—registration—is being done—and done well.

The victories of labor's candidates in recent primaries offer proof that the workers' vote is being effectively mobilized. American workers know vital issues will be decided in this year's crucial elections—issues such as the speedy winning of the war and the achievement of a post-war world of peace and plenty. And they know by registering—and voting—they are staking out a claim on their own future.

Credit for labor's awakening must go to the CIO Political Action Committee. Before the Committee was established, registration reports showed only few union members qualified to vote. But with intensive campaigns being conducted by PAC in every corner of the nation, registration has increased tremendously.

The nation's industrial war centers have been combed by worker-registrars in the wake of an influx of migratory workers. With members of the armed forces virtually deprived by Congress of their constitutional right to vote, it is vitally important that all workers be registered to assure a heavy ballot.

A light vote, leading political observers concede, would be a blow to the re-election of President Roosevelt.

SUCCESS ON COAST

One of the most effective registration campaigns was carried through on the Pacific Coast, especially in California. Workers reaped the harvest of this drive when pro-labor candidates won in the primaries last week.

In Los Angeles county, registration totaled 1,432,839, an increase of 400,000, and over 95 per cent of the estimated 1,500,000 eligible voters in the county. San Diego signed up 15,000 voters by primary day and other west coast communities reported successful drives.

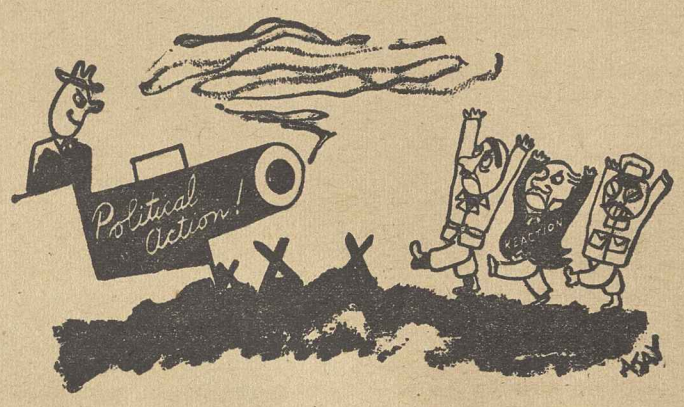
The drive in Ohio by worker-registrars proved highly effective. In Cleveland, Labor's Joint Committee for Legislative Action, composed of CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhoods, broke all records in the pre-primary registration. More than 37,000 workers were registered, far exceeding any previous mark.

Dayton reported a rush period with more than 3,000 labor men and women signing on the final day. Workers waited on line in the courthouse and in the streets during a rain storm to make sure they qualified. In one union, Local 648, United Auto Workers, less than 12 per cent of its members were registered before the drive began. When the drive ended, more than 75 per cent had qualified.

Raymond S. McKeough, PAC regional director, reported 100 per cent registration by several locals of the Farm Equipment & Metal Workers and the United Steelworkers in Chicago. An intensive campaign is scheduled for that section, pending completion of a ward and precinct organization.

SOUTH, TOO

George A. Mitchell, PAC director of the south-eastern region, estimated that 50,000 new labor voters have registered and paid their poll taxes in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee and Florida.



In the New England section, PAC Director Joseph Salerno is using the registration card system to excellent effect. On the card the worker indicates if he is registered. If unregistered, other union members get in touch with him to emphasize the importance of registration. About 160,000 cards have been circulated through Massachusetts and 100,000 in Connecticut.

"REGISTRATION WEEKS"

The mayor of Los Angeles, Fletcher Bowron, set aside the first week in April as "Registration Week."

St. Louis city and county election boards responded to the demands of labor groups by designating May 23 as special registration day, with 884 neighborhood registration centers open all day.

The Cleveland Board of Elections approved labor's request to keep booths open in the evenings to accommodate late shift war workers. The spirit of labor's registration drive was shown by two loyal union members, who succeeded in registering thousands of workers single-handed.

In Oakland, California, Jack Horan, of ILWU Warehousemen's Local 6, turned in a total of 62 registration books, totaling 3,100 names. In Atlanta, Georgia, Mrs. Annie Maude Creel, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, registered 1,200 workers in less than 60 days.

HOLLYWOOD STARS

There are many human-interest angles to the "Register Now" campaign. Hollywood movie stars turned out to act as volunteer registrars during Los Angeles' registration week. Such screen favorites as Loretta Young, Eddie Cantor, Claudette Colbert, and George Tobias were stationed in booths in Hollywood and down-town Los Angeles.

Members of Local 845-USA did a rush business when they installed a registration booth in a plant in Maywood, California, before they were ejected by the personnel manager. This didn't bother them a bit. The booth was moved to the sidewalk, the registrar got a chair and a desk, and carried on until she had registered over 200 workers in five hours.

A Register-to-Vote "picket line" was thrown around the huge Fisher Body plant in Cleveland. It wasn't directed against management. The idea was to emphasize the importance of registration among members of Local 45. United Auto Workers.

NEGROES REGISTER

The Supreme Court decision, outlawing the "white primary" in Texas, spurred Negro registration in the south. The Negro press, a vital factor in Negro life, called upon its readers to practice democracy and vote.

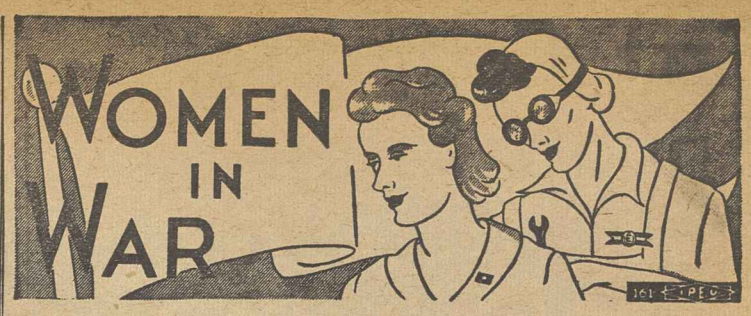
No picture of the nation-wide trend toward registration is complete without a word of praise for the labor press from the CIO NEWS down to local union bulletins. Trade-union publications did a magnificent job in informing their readers of the need for registering.



Auxiliaries Do Real Political Action Job

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Nell Proctor, of the Los Angeles Longshore Auxiliary and president of the California Auxiliary Council, has given a personal demonstration of how much auxiliary women can do on political action. She volunteered from four to ten hours a day to the campaign to elect Hal Styles and defeat Congressman Costello in the 15th Congressional District of California. Among other things she made a list of all CIO and AFL members in 65 AD and secured captains for 41 precincts.

So it's partly due to Nell's effective work that the third member of the Dies Committee went down to defeat in the primaries.

All over the country auxiliary women are at work doing the same sort of thing Nell did. Up in Oregon the Woodworker gals are feeling pretty pleased with their share in getting Wayne Morse nominated to run for the Senate. Since winning the Republican primary in Oregon is equal to being elected, we can thank our Oregon sisters for sending us a new Senator.

The political action committee of UAW Auxiliary No. 2 in Milwaukee is meeting jointly with the union committees working especially on a campaign to get ballots to our servicemen. UAW Auxiliary 261 registered voters for eight days in Moline, East Moline and Rock Island, Ill. They also gave instructions to union members of three locals on how to use the voting machine which was on display in the union hall.

NMU ACTIVE

The National Maritime Union auxiliaries are busy getting signatures on the NMU political action pledge. They've set themselves a goal of 10,000 signatures in New York. Signers promise to work for the reelection of Roosevelt in 1944, to study legislation affecting the welfare of our nation and to act through CIO political action committees and their local organizations for the passage of win-the-war legislation.

Tables on the street at which women could sign up to urge President Roosevelt to run for a fourth term netted thousands of signatures in a campaign conducted by Shipyard Auxiliary No. 1 in Camden, N. J. They had their pictures in the Camden paper, too, as well as in the Shipyard Worker.

Peoria, Ill., Farm Equipment auxiliary women have been helping the political action committee of the big Caterpillar local there to break down the union membership lists according to wards and precincts as the first step in building a down to earth labor political organization.

Out in East Helena, Montana, the political action committee of Mine Mill auxiliary 55 is busy helping its local get a county political action set-up going. "Our first big issue," they report, "is to get every eligible voter registered and the job is nearly completed."

And so it goes. Wherever CIO auxiliaries are functioning, they are helping to do the big job of mobilizing the country behind the re-election of our Commander in Chief. They know it's the most important way they can help their unions now because President Roosevelt's program is labor's program—quick victory in the war and full employment afterwards.

Auxiliary Gives $5,340 For Ambulances

Anderson, Ind., May 27—Presentation of a check for $5,340, representing funds raised by the Women's Auxiliary of the CIO United Automobile Workers for the purchase of three Army ambulances, featured a banquet held recently in Anderson, Ind.

In recognition of the outstanding record established by Auxiliary No. 203 of Anderson in the fund raising campaign, Mayor C. D. Rotruck of Anderson, Mrs. Dorothy Keene of Rockford, Ill., Int. president of UAW Auxiliaries, and David Connery, assistant to UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas, were speakers. Mrs. Eva Wyant, director of women's auxiliaries in region 3, presented the check to Lt. Col. H. S. Collisi of Fort Harrison.

Hit GOP Plot to Stall Repeal of Polltax

WASHINGTON, May 27—The Republican plan to "repeal" the polltax by amending the constitution is "too long and difficult a process" to do the job and to satisfy the American people's demand for action on this issue, the Natl. Committee to Abolish the Polltax said this week.

The committee's statement came after some 30-odd Republican Senators put forward the amendment following their defeat of the cloture motion that would have killed the Senate filibuster on HR 7 the repeal bill, and ensured its passage.

HR 7, passed two-to-one by the House last year, was shelved by an alliance of Southern polltaxers and reactionary Republicans when it finally reached the Senate floor two weeks ago. It can still be called up, however, since only the cloture motion and not the bill itself was voted on.

"The Senate was kept from voting on HR 7 by a minority filibuster although a majority favored the bill," the committee said. "A minority of 13 states can block action by the other 35. There are eight polltax states; there are three Southern states that will be likely to vote with them.

"We will therefore continue to fight for HR 7, regardless of the disposition made by the Senate of the constitutional amendments proposed by Sens. Wherry and O'Mahoney."

Other constitutional amendments, the committee pointed out, have lain dormant for many years, notably the child labor amendment. Congress action on the polltax is perfectly constitutional, as was pointed out by the Senate Judiciary Committee in voting to report the bill by two-to-one and by eminent constitutional authorities.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

The new forced labor bill (Bailey-Brewster, S. 1864) is moving ahead to a showdown, with CIO testimony against it presented this week. The bill is even worse than the Austin-Wadsworth bill stopped by labor some time back.

Following a line of being vocally for repeal of the polltax but actively against HR 7, the bill to repeal it, Senate Republicans are pushing a constitutional amendment that would take years to do the job HR 7 can do right now, if it were passed.

The newly revived Hatch bill (S 1272), which perpetuates the Smith-Connally Act ban on political contributions by unions, is now in a subcommittee of the House Judiciary, headed by Rep. Hobbs (polltaxer, Ala.). CIO is due to testify soon against it.

Price control renewal is still marking time, with Senate and House Banking Committees still due to report their version of the bill. CIO and general public drive for early renewal with no crippling amondments in final stages.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Brewster-Bailey (S 1864)	Forced labor for workers 18-45 who change jobs without permission; freezes farm labor, puts workers on less than soldiers' pay, no allowances for dependents.	CIO testifying this week in Senate Military Affairs Committee.	Wire Senators against.
Hatch (S 1272)	Perpetuates ban on union political contributions now in Smith-Connally Act.	In House Judiciary subcommittee, headed by Rep. Hobbs (polltaxer, Ala).	Wire Representative against.
Price control	Renewal of Price Control Act, due June 30.	Senate and House Banking Committees working on bill.	Keep urging no amendments, prompt renewal.
Kilgore (S 1893)	Protects workers, returned veterans in reconversion to peace industry.	Not yet referred to committee; CIO pressing for hearings.	Write Senators to support.

Back Pay Award

Back pay totalling $12,647.35 has been paid to 20 workers who were fired by Poultrymen's Service Corp. feed mill, Toms River, N. J., because they struck for union recognition back in 1940. The pay for time lost until reinstatement was ordered by the NLRB. UCAPAWA-CIO is the union involved.

While it took over three years for the government to catch up with this outfit which resisted the NLRB every step of the way, the Circuit Court of Appeals' decision of Ocober, 1943, ordering them to obey the NLRB directive, has stuck.

Wm. B. Taylor, Dir. Organizing Drive, OWIU-CIO, reports: Lone Star Gas Co. Distribution Dep., Dallas, Texas: CIO 89, against 7.

As we predicted Mr. S. L. Avery is still carrying on the fight and endeavoring to create more disunity. This time he involves an AFL union. It appears that ordinary, decent procedure for unity on the home front in support of our Armed Forces to bring about an early victory for the United Nations at the earliest possible mament, is of little consequence to men of his type. The CIO will keep on with its work of organizing the employes of this empire.

At a meeting of the CIO Executive Officers and Vice Presidents held on Saturday, May 20, the conduct of Mr. Gerard Reilly of the NLRB was roundly condemned. Mr. Reilly's efforts to throw labor unions into elections every year upon the demand of the employers is an unfriendly act to all organized labor and contrary to the spirit of the law and what it was inended to do.

It will be in order for Mr. Reilly to note that the workers now have the right to demand that the stockholders of a firm hold an election every year whether they want to or not. The enemies of the NLRB and collective bargaining have condemned these things for some time. Little did we think they would have a champion in the person and position of Mr. Reilly. Our unions have many things to complain about in connection with Mr. Reilly's conduct on the Board.

Unity Means Jobs—Kaiser To Steel

Washington, May 27—A postwar plan envisioning strong cooperation between labor, industry and government to guarantee jobs for all able and willing to work was one of the major points in a speech made by Henry J. Kaiser, famous shipbuilder, in a speech before the CIO United Steelworkers' recent convention.

"The safety of our land in war and in peace depends on two preeminent social forces—one spiritual and the other material," Kaiser said. "The first is national unity; and the second is employment. These are mutually interdependent — neither can be achieved without the other."

Hailing the CIO no-strike pledge as evidence of labor's good faith, the nationally known industrialist said that the need to prepare for unity and jobs in the postwar world is as urgent as the task of preparing for the war has been.

SPEEDY PROGRAM

"We need a program that can be launched in one or more of its essential parts the very moment unemployment begins to threaten," he declared. "We must take up the slack as fast as it appears. We must be certain that the psychological fear of unemployment is reduced to an absolute minimum."

Kaiser advanced a plan providing for huge expenditures for hospitals, transportation, highways and housing.

He proposed a pre-peace selling program, with orders to be accepted in advance, with prices to be fixed now, and with contracts to be entered into with labor on the basis of the prices.

High on the list of projects Kaiser suggested was development of the airplane industry. He declared that "it is by no means visionary to suppose that 50,000 personal airplanes can be manufactured and sold in the first two years after the war." Declaring that some estimates place the number as high as 150,000, Kaiser said:

"As the automobile ushered in the epoch of America's greatest material advance, just so surely will the airplane again quicken our industrial life. Despite all the dire forebodings about weight, fuel costs and capacities, the place of the airplane in passenger and freight transport is assured."

UNITY IN ACTION: Smiling as they leave the White House after discussing postwar plans with President Roosevelt are, left, CIO Pres. Philip Murray, and Henry J. Kaiser, nationally known shipbuilder who addressed the convention of the CIO United Steelworkers last week.

Soviet Kids Enjoy Summer Camps

MOSCOW, May 27 (ALN)—Nearly two and a half million children will be accommodated this year in summer camps run by the Soviet government with the cooperation of trade unions, according to an announcement by the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions here this week. The camps are run for children between the ages of 7 to 13.

Children of soldiers and invalids get priority and 10 per cent of all places are set aside for their admission free of charge. The total cost of the entire plan is estimated at 144,000,000 rubles ($28,800,000), taken from the social insurance funds administered by trade unions under Soviet law, plus an added 20,000,000 rubles ($4,000,000) supplied by unions from their own funds.

In most cases, parents contribute from 100 to 380 rubles per child ($20 to $78), depending on the type of camp and the length of the child's stay.

UNION INSPECTION

The AUCCTU prescribes strict measures to guarantee that the best possible conditions prevail in all camps under its jurisdiction. Factory committees and trade union locals have been asked to apportion the places assigned to them immediately among workers in their districts; to approve the plans for the camps, including location, instructors, services, personnel and budgets; to undertake to repair camp buildings and clean up camp grounds.

It is obligatory for all trade union groups to examine their camps and to approve them only if they are in a good state of repair and provisioning. Unionists must see that proper feeding has been arranged, that firefighting apparatus is intact and that all precautions have been taken for the care of the children.

Urge Annual Wage Plan In Britain

London, May 27, (ALN)—Retention of the principle of a guaranteed weekly wage, established by the wartime Essential work Order, was stressed by Albert Coulton in his presidential address before the annual conference of the National Union of Dyers, Bleachers and Textile Workers this week as "one of the chief post-war aims of the British trade union movement."

Declaring that there is no major industry where the "jungle law" is more in evidence, Coulton emphasized that the textile industry is "in dire need of reconstruction."

The NUDBTW is a member of the United Textile Factory Workers' Association, which embraces all unions in the cotton industry.

Responding to the British Board of Trade's recent request to labor and employer groups to formulate postwar plans for their industries, the UTFWA has called for socialization of the cotton industry after the war.

It proposes that the present owners should be compensated, and that the various sections of the industry be organized into horizontal combinations under the direction of a general board composed of 14 members, representing the workers, administrative staffs and the Board of Trade.

Set New World Record

Edinburgh, Tex., May 27—Workers at the Trulyn tomato sheds set a world production record by packing 157 cars in one week. The reason? Maybe it was that union spirit a-movin' them. Trulyn Shippers, probably the biggest tomato shed outfit in the world, had just signed its first contract with CIO's Cannery Agricultural Packing & Allied Workers.

U.S. Needs Unity, CIO Head Says

Washington, May 27 — America cannot stand alone and will not stand alone, CIO Pres. Philip Murray told an audience of labor delegates to the Intl. Labor Organization Conference that attended a CIO dinner for them here this week.

"America cannot stand and will not stand alone," he said. "We will need the cooperation of other nations towards our common goal. All of us must have faith in each other, if we are to implement our commitments to each other and put them into practical action."

WANTS COOPERATION

Declaring that the CIO had wanted to attend the ILO meeting, but was prevented by the attitude of AFL officials, Murray said that the CIO has a "prime interest in building close relations with the labor movements of the entire free world.

"Our goals are the same as their goals. A state can only be as worthy and as forward-looking as the labor movement in that state wants it to be. For this reason, the CIO wants to lend whatever wholesome assistance it can to the labor movements of all the world."

The dinner, which was attended by about 20 delegates from the ILO meeting in Philadelphia, was arranged by CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, who acted as toastmaster during the affair.

Spain Aid To Nazis Confirmed

Montevideo, May 27, (ALN)—Confirmation of reports that Franco Spain continues to send to Germany large quantities of war materials purchased in South America was given Allied Labor News this week by crew members of the Spanish ships Arriz and Monte Gorbea, who jumped ship early this week.

The eye-witness revelations come on the heels of the treaty between Spain and the Allies and the denial in April by Franco's Legation here that such shipments were being made. Because of possible recrimation against their families at home, the Spanish seamen have asked that their names not be revealed.

MATERIALS TO NAZIS

Describing how Germany receives the war materials from Spain, the seamen declared: "Chilean nitrate, arriving from Montevideo, is loaded in the Uribitarte dockyard in the port of Bilbao on German trucks, which are escorted by Spanish and German police. The trucks reach France within three hours and the nitrates are then transported to German factories by train.

"Nitrates and other American materials such as Brazilian and Peruvian cotton are transported by a special fleet of eight merchantmen of about 1000 tons each, which ply the waters between the Spanish port of Bilbao and the French ports of Bayonne and Bordeaux. Much South American cotton is also unloaded in the port of Barcelona and shipped to Germany from there.

"The contraband shipments to Nazi Germany were first discovered by chance by the Barcelona branch of the National Bank of Spain, when Barcelona industrialists, Spain's principal consumers of cotton, began to deposit huge quantities of 1000 peseta notes.

"The industrialists said the notes were received from a German purchasing commission for the delivery of cotton, which the Spanish Minister of Industry had ordered them to sell to the Germans. The notes are even printed in Germany."

Honor NMU Dead At N. Y. Services

NEW YORK, May 27—The more than 5,500 dead of the U. S. merchant marine were remembered this week in services at the Natl. Maritime Union headquarters here marking Maritime Day.

They were remembered in the unveiling of a memorial scroll in the lobby of the building, in messages and speeches by President Roosevelt, by NMU President Joseph Curran, by Admiral R. R. Waesche, by Mayor LaGuardia— and by an award of Gold Star flags to relatives of two of the heroic seamen who died to "Keep 'Em Sailing."

The shipowners were there too, with Frank J. Taylor, head of the American Merchant Marine Institute, present to add his praises to the men who deliver the goods and to their union that has made the miracle of shipping possible.

"It is altogether fitting that the opening of the new national headquarters if the NMU be the occasion for the dedication of a memorial to the many seamen who have given their lives that free people might remain free," President Roosevelt said in his letter to Curran.

"The nation will always owe a debt to those young Americans who have sailed the seven seas in the face of hidden dangers and gone down with their ships carrying supplies to our lghting men and those of our Allies.

"Their heroism is a living example to that brave band of merchant seamen who carry on the best traditions of American sailors and unflinchingly do the job of keeping our ships sailing."

Perhaps the most moving part of the ceremony was the award by Pres. Curran of the Gold Star flags to two of the many members of the NMU Women's Auxiliary who have lost a son and a husband at sea. Symbolizing the unity of the NMU, one of the women was a Negro and the other white. The acutal presentation of the award was done by Admiral Waesche, with Curran introducing them to the audience.

"We will continue your struggle."

"We will never rest until the cause for which you died has triumphed.

"We will 'Keep 'Em Sailing' in your hallowed spirit—the spirit of free men who never have and never will bend the knee to fascist slavery."

CIO Warns

U. S. Shipping Based On Intl. Unity

Washington, May 27—An expanded U. S. shipping program, providing full employment and based on international cooperation, was urged this week by the CIO Maritime Committee, which is considering HR 4486, a bill that would set up a formula for the disposal of government-owned vessels.

Testimony by Arthur Phillips, acting CIO Committee executive secretary, was based on the Maritime Committee's postwar program, which is primarily concerned with full utilization of ships rather than their disposal. The program recommends that:

"The U. S. must take the lead in calling for an immediate opentable United Nations conference on shipping at which preliminary agreement on a fair distribution of the world's tonnage can be reached.

WORLD SHIPPING

"The central theme of the conference must be organization of world shipping to fill the needs of an ever-expanding economy.

"Agreement must be reached on a limiting of the spheres of economic conflict and a widening of the horizons of economic opportunity. Cooperation must be effected to prevent ruinous competition, rate wars, and restrictive and discriminatory practices."

Other points called for by the program are: an international agreement on minimum wages and on use of subsidies to prevent economic warfare, full integrating of air and sea transport, use of war-ouilt ships, strengthening of labor-management cooperation, provision of unemployment insurance for seamen, and an overall health program for seamen and their dependents.

The CIO report pointed out that:

"Full employment at decent wage levels for the seamen, longshoremen and allied workers directly concerned with the maritime industry, and for the millions of shore-side workers indirectly affected is dependent on a sound postwar operational program.

"The destruction of the foreign trade policies of fascism, the end of China's economic servitude, the coming freedom and maturity of the colonial peoples, the vast relief and reconstruction needs of Europe and Asia are the preconditions for world trade on a scale never before equalled."

CIO Beats Lewis 2-1 at Chalmers

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 27—John L. Lewis' District 50 took a drubbing from the CIO Farm Equipment Workers Union this week, in a plant where the Lewis forces had instigated the first strike under the notorious Smith-Connally anti-labor law.

Involved were two Allis-Chalmers plants here. The score was: CIO 1,124; District 50, 777.

The election was ordered by the Natl. Labor Relations Board as time for contract renewal approached and the CIO union's jurisdiction right to represent the workers was challenged.

"Approximately 15,000,000 people," Davis warned, "would thus be free to strike, for the no-strike pledge was based on the authority of a tripartite Board to settle labor disputes for which other peaceful means of settlement are not available.

"It would lead finally to a complete distintegration of the existing machinery set up by Congress to preserve industrial peace. The only way to have an effective no-strike policy is to ban all strikes, and the only way to ban all strikes is to have a forum where all disputes can be peacefully resolved, a forum whose statutory authority is incontestable and whose decisions must be accepted."

HITS CO. ACTION

Also testifying before the committee, NLRB Member Garard D. Reilly charged that the company's actions in the dispute played a large part in causing members of the CIO Retail, Wholesale and Dept. Store Employes to call the brief strike that finally resulted in the seizure.

Meanwhile, according to Leo Goodman, the union's Washington representative, negotiations for a new contract with the firm are proceeding, with management so far agreeing only to the setting up of grievance machinery, with the issues of wages and vacations accepted on the agenda for future conferences.

A further investigation of the Ward case has been scheduled by the sub-committee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, headed by Senator Pat McCarran, who was urged this week by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, Retail & Wholesale Pres. Samuel Wolchok and James G. Patton, president of the Natl. Farmers Union, to hear.. union testimony.

"It seems strange to me," Wolchok said, "that the Senate committee investigating the exercise of power by the Executive in the seizure of the Montgomery Ward case has to date failed to hold any hearings to develop the facts in the case.

"I feel that the committee cannot comply with the mandate of the Senate unless they hold public hearings at which the union can give its facts regarding policies, relationships and controversies."

Correction

The CIO NEWS said May 15 that the WLB had directed that a maintenance of membership clause be included in a contract with Local 25 of the Retail union at the mail order house in St. Paul. This was wrong. The directive was issued in favor of Local 215 of the Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union.

be having the dreadful time they are having because the "federal bureaucracy contains many employes who are opposed to the Free Competitive Enterprise System."

The NAM handbook recommends that all this be corrected at once by setting up new departments (could they be called "bureaus"?) to promote better relations with Congressmen.

At that, however, the NAM can't avoid insulting the very Congressmen it wants to make friends with, in a final piece of advice to the industrialist which goes: "Cut out demagoguery before a committee. That is Congress' own specialty, and encroachment in this sphere is resented."

But the main idea is to persuade the shy, inarticulate defender of "Free Enterprise" to untie his tongue and speak up in defense of the "system."

Labor Fights for Vets' Welfare, Carey Writes

WASHINGTON, May 27—"Organized labor is acutely conscious of its double responsibility: first to produce the maximum of weapons needed for the speedy and successful conclusion of military hostilities; and second, to set up at home the mechanisms by which to carry over a prosperous and secure peace, the production and employment record set during the war."

That, with CIO's program for veterans and all the people, was the message advanced by CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, writing in the May issue of "The Jewish Veteran."

Declaring that the CIO is working closely with veterans' groups in the interests of full postwar employment, Carey wrote:

"The labor movement fights for international and national stability because it knows that should reaction set in, it will be the first to lose its freedom."

CIO's program, as stated by Carey, includes:

Full employment at an annual living wage; a program of social security; the continued operation of government war plants, after reconversion; taxes based on ability to pay; price control and subsidies to prevent inflation, and a federal planning agency to see that national resources are used intelligently for the benefit of all the people.

The CIO program for veterans includes:

1. Mustering-out pay.

2. Quick placement of veterans in suitable jobs, with a decent and fair return for their labor.

3. Adequate hospitalization when needed, with full protection for disabled veterans and dependents.

4. Re-education both for disabled veterans and for able-bodied men who need to learn—or want to learn new skills.

5. Protection of seniority rights of those leaving industry for military service; and the waiving of union initiation fees for young servicemen new to industry.

6. Scholarships, covering living as well as educational costs, for veterans who qualify for higher education.

7. Adequate aid to the families of those killed in action.

8. A social security program, such as outlined in the proposed Wagner-Murray-Dingell Bill, to include veterans in all benefits relating to unemployment, health and old-age insurance.

CIO Fights Cutback Chaos

PROTEST AGAINST CHAOS: CIO United Auto Workers Union pickets from the Long Island City, N. Y., Brewster aircraft plant, march in front of New York City Hall in protest against the sudden cancellation by the Navy of the plane contract held by the company. More than 4,500 were thrown out of work at this plant-by termination of the contract, which was without notice.

HITS BUNGLING: UAW-CIO Vice-Pres. Richard T. Frankensteen joined Brewster Aeronautical Corp. officials in testimony before a Senate Military Affairs Committee to declare that cancellation of a Brewster contract was without proper notice to company or union. Frankensteen said the action was "typical of the bungling which has characterized the handling of manpower problems throughout the war."

Brewster Battle Sparks Drive For Reconversion Plan

WASHINGTON, June 3—In a dramatic struggle involving thousands of workers, CIO won national attention for its battle for a sensible industrial reconversion program this week. The issue, that affects the destinies of millions, was highlighted by "sit-in" demonstrations of 12,500 employes of the Brewster Aeronautical Corp. at Long Island City and Queens, N. Y., and at Johnsville, Pa.

Front page headlines over the nation pointed up the CIO United Auto Workers contention, and that long ago expressed by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, that Congress must enact legislation which will guarantee that cancellation of war contracts will not lead to disruption and to bread lines.

Main point in bringing the issue to the people was the sudden termination by the U. S. Navy of the Brewster plane contract, without adequate notice or consultation, with no provision for re-employment of 12,500 workers who would be thrown out of jobs.

Main results of determined agitation by the UAW-CIO were:

1. An order from President Roosevelt for government agencies to try to find work for Brewster plants.

2. A survey of the plants by the War Production Board to see how they can be utilized for new contracts.

3. An order from James F. Byrnes, War Mobilization Director, for government agencies to give adequate notice of cutbacks and proposed layoffs.

The drum that beat out a call for government action was the demonstration staged by workers in the three plants and led by Vice Pres. Richard T. Frankensteen, head of the union's aircraft division.

SIT-IN DEMONSTRATION

Reminiscent of the famous 1937 sitdowns, but definitely not a strike, was a one-night camping stand of thousands of employes in the three Brewster factories. Frankensteen stressed the fact that there was no quarrel with management, and that the interests of workers, bosses and the nation were identical.

The demand for an orderly reconversion program was highlighted by workers' signs, reading:

FDR Tops—N.J. CIO

NEWARK, N. J., June 3—Franklin D. Roosevelt is the overwhelming choice of the rank and file members of the New Jersey CIO in the coming presidential election, State CIO Political Action Chairman Carl Holderman announced today in disclosing results of a postcard poll conducted among union members all over the State.

The ballots showed that 69.08 per cent of the CIO workers want Roosevelt for a fourth term, while 19.05 per cent showed a preference for Governor Thomas E. Dewey of New York as the next president of the U. S.

Holderman declared that the results refuted recent figures released by the Gallup poll, which in a nation-wide sampling of the labor sentiment gave Roosevelt 61 per cent and Dewey 39. This included both union and non-union workers. The Gallup report, further broken down, credited Roosevelt with 65 per cent and Dewey with 35 per cent of the union members' vote, while 59 per cent of non-union votes went for the President and 41 per cent to Dewey.

The CIO's poll operated on a strictly rank-and-file basis. The thousands of postcard ballots went out only to the general membership, none to officers of any local. The cards asked the voter to indicate his choice among six men regarded at the time the poll started as outstanding presidential possibilities.

Every Worker a Voter!

CIO Political Action Committee Pamphlet Shows Job to Do

CIO's Political Action Committee is doing a marvelous job in registering workers to vote, in forming district and precinct groups for the 1944 elections, and in educating the membership of CIO unions to their political responsibilities. One of the reasons for PAC's success has been its simple, effective publicity. Latest sample is the pamphlet, "Every Worker a Voter." The CIO NEWS this week reprints significant excerpts from the pamphlet.

The 1944 elections will be unlike anw other elections in our lifetime. What will be decided in these elections, will be decided not just for four years, not just until the next elections come around. Our entire future may be signed and sealed by the outcome.

How quickly and completely will we defeat the Axis? How secure shall we make the peace? Will we have jobs for all after the war or sink into the quicksands of another depression? Will the rights of labor be upheld or will the trade unions be smashed?

Will housewives be able to make ends meet? Will the small farmers be allowed to live in peace or will they be tractored out and auctioned out of existence?

Will small businessmen enjoy freedom of competition and growth or will the last breath of life be choked out of them by trusts and cartels?

Will there be an extension of civil liberties to all classes and races or will there be an increase in prejudice against particular races or creeds?

These and many other issues will be decided in 1944—issues that will affect our lives and the lives of our children into the third generation.

Depends on Election

How these issues are decided will depend on the kind of President and the kind of Congress we elect this year.

If we want a President and a Congress who will truly represent the interests of the people, the voters must understand the issues of this election, and the voters must vote.

The best way to get all the people to understand the issues and to vote is through well organized Political Action Committees in every community. That means in the wards and precincts where people live—and vote.

Organization Needed

All people who work for a living—that includes all factory workers, white-collar workers, small farmers, professionals, and small businessmen — and their families need community organizations to protect their interests.

What kind of community organizations do these have to be?

They have to be political organizations.

A political organization in the community is the best agency of the people to protect their interests.

When a community organization speaks to a Congressman, it speaks with the voice of the voters who put him in office and whose interests he was elected to represent.

The workers need political action community organizations as much as they need their trade unions. And just as the trade unions were built by the workers themselves, so also will they have to take the lead in building up their own community organizations.

Some people may get cold feet at the thought of how big the job is. A community organization in every precinct or election district in the entire United States! That is a big job!

There are no fixed rules on how to start a community organization. We suggest that you should take the following steps:

1. TALK TO FRIENDS. You may do that by getting together with a group of union men and women in your block—or just by calling on your neighbor and his wife to talk over the idea of a community organization. Do that today or tomorrow. Do not delay it.

2. CONVINCE THEM OF THE NEED. Point out to your friends the importance of organizing the community to act politically and how urgent the 1944 elections will be.

3. MAKE A LIST OF NEIGHBORS AND FRIENDS. It does not matter whether they belong to your union or not. Do not make the list too long or too ambitious, at first. Your group will grow faster it you build on a solid foundation.

4. DECIDE WHAT TO TELL THEM. Draw up a list of the problems in your own community which bother and concern these people. These may include the high cost of living, the need of a good nursery school, black markets, health and sanitation problems, and so on. Most people are worried about what is going to happen to them and to their jobs after the war. They remember Mr. Hoover and 1929. Tell them what they must do this year to avoid another Hoover and another 1929.

5. THEN CALL YOUR MEETING. Show them how a community organization would be helpful to all of you. Explain carefully that the most local of problems is a political problem. Make clear to them that 1944 will be a year of decision for all of us. Convince them that we must organize by communities and that the time is now.

6. GET IN TOUCH WITH YOUR CITY OR COUNTY CIO COUNCIL. Find out what plans they have for community organization and how they can help you. They will have some materials, such as leaflets, identification cards and buttons, and maps of your vicinity to help you. But if they are not yet ready for action, go on organizing your group anyway.

7. WORK OUT A PLAN OF ACTION. Among the first things to be done is to get the information about your local government. Find out who is your Councilman. Get the name of your Congressman and look up his record on issues affecting labor and the consumer. You will also wish to make a list of other civic, fraternal and religious organizations in your community and what they are doing.

8. MAKE YOUR ORGANIZATION INTO A "CLUB." After you have had one or two get-togethers, form yourselves into a neighborhood organization. Give your newly-formed group a local name, such as "Friendship Heights Community Club." The idea of a "club" will be helpful to you later on when you really swing into action. It can become the clearing house of many community activities.

9. PLAN YOUR WORK BY WARDS AND PRECINCTS. Your city or town is divided into political subdivisions—wards and precincts (in some places they are called assembly districts and election districts). For this reason, the Political Action Committee of the CIO suggests that, wherever possible, you include your entire precinct in your organization. But if this is too big an area to start with, begin by organizing your block.

10. DO THE FIRST JOB FIRST. The first job your group should plan to do, as soon as it is organized, is: registration. You will want to make sure that every man and woman of voting age in your neighborhood is registered for voting in the coming elections. That means calling at every home in the community—talking to every resident—urging them to get out and register.

11. RING DOORBELLS. You cannot do this job by just making a plan and calling a meeting. You will need the help of most of the people working with you in your community organization.

The big job is to go out and ring doorbells. No community organization can succeed without canvassers. Your doorbell-ringers will have to be good.

The CIO, through its Political Action Regional offices and the City and County Councils, will help your local community organization. They will take many steps to back you up.

They should become the centers from which you will receive printed pamphlets, leaflets, posters, instructions, and any advice you may need.

They will arrange for speakers, from the ranks of labor or government, to address your meetings. They will keep in close touch with your chairman and your precinct captains.

We count on you to get the job done.

We know you will do it and do it well.

Stone Workers Win Pay Hikes

Barre, Vt., June 3—A new contract providing for five to 10 cents an hour in raises has been signed by the United Stone & Allied Products Workers with the American Shingle Co., Columbus, O., USAPW Prs. H. C. Ledyard announced this week.

Raises of from 7 to 12 cents an hour were negotiated with the Grove Lime Co., Stepehens City, Va. Wage provisions in both pacts are subject to WLB approval.

ACA Win Sews Up Intl. Wire Field

New York, June 3—Employes of Press Wireless, the last major radio company in international communication not already in the ranks of the CIO American Communications Assn., voted 81 to 60 for ACA over AFL in a recent Labor Board election, the CIO union announced this week.

The union said the victory represents "a great step forward in welding the unity of all international communications workers behind a program for the protection of jobs, wages and working conditions from the threat of merger in the international field in the postwar period."

Maybe It's The Heat!

Washington, June 3—For sheer, unadulterated nerve, this one is hard to beat. It concerns a letter written by Sen. Bankhead (polltaxer, Ala.) to the OPA.

In the letter, Sen. Bankhead complains about the high price of cotton dresses, cites a newspaper ad of such dresses at $19.95 and says in his letter to OPA: "I've heard much complaint about prices of what used to be cheap cotton dresses."

The payoff is simply this: Sen. Bankhead is the author of the Bankhead amendment to the renewal of the price control act, which amendment would raise the price of all cotton textiles by at least 20 per cent over present high levels, would up textile manufacturers' profits by 50 per cent.

Senate Showdown Due on Price Control

BULLETIN: House action on the price control renewal bill is expected by the middle of this week. A special wrecking job is expected on rent control. Wire your Congressman now—unless you'd like to pay double your rent.

WASHINGTON, June 3—The matter of how much Americans will eat, how much clothes they will wear, how they shall be housed, comes up in the U. S. Senate this week for a showdown when debate opens on renewal of the price control act.

The showdown will be a serious one, because the Senate Banking Committee in charge of the bill has put its OK on an amendment that could blow price control sky-high if it becomes part of the law.

This is the Bankhead amendment, proposed by Sen. Bankhead (poll-taxer, Ala.) ostensibly to help cotton growers, actually to help cotton textile manufacturers and all other profit hogs by ripping off the ceilings on all prices.

According to the amendment, it will simply "adjust" cotton textile prices every 60 days to conform to market changes in the price of raw cotton. This, says Bankhead, is just a matter of giving a fair break to cotton.

But here's what actually would happen if this amendment goes through. The figures are not from CIO but from such sources as the N. Y. Journal of Commerce and the OPA. According to the Journal of Commerce, which is a daily dope sheet put out for the use of the big-time finance boys on Wall St., the cost of cotton clothing will go up 20 percent. Profits will go up 50 percent.

According to the OPA, which opposes the amendment, it will cost the consumers an extra $350,000,000 a year. And what's more, the amendment makes no guarantee that work clothes, women's house dresses and cheap kids' clothes—the kind workers' families buy—will be of any better quality.

WORSE TO COME

This is only part of the story. If the Bankhead amendment goes through, it will be a green light to every other profiteering interest that wants to drop a blockbuster on price ceilings.

The high-price agents in Congress and outside it have been clamoring for months for an increase in the price of heating oil and the price of milk. They almost succeeded in getting through amendments to the act to do this job earlier in the present session of Congress.

If the Bankhead amendment goes through, they will find plenty of room on the gravy train not only for their own pet price-hiking schemes but also for the schemes of all their buddies in the inflation crew.

JOB TO DO

There's still time to stop the Bankhead amendment—and all others like it. The OPA, through Administrator Chester Bowles, is against it. President Roosevelt denounced it at a press conference this week, said it would open the way to inflation.

Rush your wires to your Senators against the Bankhead amendment, for renewal of the price control act without amendments of any kind.

That's the only way to hold the line on price control—for once that line is broken, you can watch your paycheck set up new records for a quick disappearing act out of your pocket and into the pockets of the profiteers.

FDR Man Wins Over Labor-Baiter In Alabama

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 3—Labor political action this week put another FDR supporter into Congress with the run-off primary success of former Rep. Luther Patrick over incumbent Rep. John Newsome, a labor-baiter and anti-administration hack.

Patrick's victory in the Alabama primary came after a straight-out fight on the issue of support for the President and his win-the-war policies. Winning the Democratic primary in Alabama, as in many other Southern states, assures election.

Patrick had the full backing of CIO and other labor in the heavily industrialized Birmingham area, where CIO Steelworkers and Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers are especially strong.

Defeat of Newsome is the second unseating of a reactionary in Alabama, following the earlier forced retirement to private life of Rep. Joe Starnes, former second in command of the un-American Dies Committee.

Patrick had been defeated in 1942 after an all-out campaign involving every reactionary element in the area was waged against him.

Credit CIO With Defeat Of Holman

Portland, Ore., June 3 — A big share of the credit goes to CIO Political Action for the defeat of labor-baiter Sen. Rufus C. Holman (R) and the nomination of Wayne L. Morse for his place in the Senate.

This is the verdict, not of the state PAC here, but of the Oregon Journal, which pointed out after the primary: "Morse won his material majorities in Multnomah, Clatsop, Klamath and Lane counties, where the CIO organization has its heaviest and most active voting strength."

In addition to unseating Holman, one of the most reactionary Senators and a man who tried to make a career out of breaking the Wagner Act, the PAC elected a number of CIO candidates for state posts and the PAC director, Douglas B. Anderson, to the Democratic National Committee.

Washington, June 3—CIO's Political Action Committee will meet here June 16 to map out plans for the coming campaigning and the re-election of President Roosevelt, to take stock of its accomplishments so far and to give labor's answer in terms of concrete planning and program to the reactionaries.

The meeting, which will bring CIO Political Action Committee leaders from all over the country to the nation's capital, will coincide with a CIO Executive Board meeting to be held at the same time.

Three days—June 16, 17 and 18—will be taken up by the meeting. Philip Murray, president of CIO, and Sidney Hillman, chairman of PAC, will preside.

D. C. Drive Threat to U. S. Housing Plans

Washington, June 3—A warning that selfish real estate interests in the nation's capital are spearheading a nation-wide attack on the public housing program was sounded this week by Director of CIO Industrial Union Councils John Brophy.

In a letter to Councils, throughout the country, Brophy urged that they step into the fight, not only on the basis of protecting the principle of extension of public housing, but also on the basis of postwar job opportunities,

He pointed out that a big public housing program will probably be necessary to help take up the job slack after the war.

Brophy urged opposition to S 1923 and HR 4819, which are aimed at killing the public housing program, and support for S 1930, S 1699, HR 4847 and HR 4850 which call for its extension.

Hold Your Hats! Here Come Two More Investigations

WASHINGTON, June 3—The closer the election, the bigger the crop of proposed "investigations" of CIO Political Action. Several have been proposed already, and this week there are another two.

The two are identical twins, born of the same elephant. Harrison Spangler, nominal head of the GOP, assisted with the first one, which came already wrapped up in a letter to Attorney-General Francis Biddle. It was a sort to reverse proposition from the beginning, because the letter asked Biddle in piteous tones if, in view of his ruling that CIO-PAC was OK, "other groups who wish to campaign against the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt to a fourth term" could do so legally.

Spangler's bleat was accompanied with loud protests against Biddle's earlier ruling, and even dragged in Sewell Avery whom it described as "an unarmed storekeeper" that Biddle brutally threw out of his little corner store.

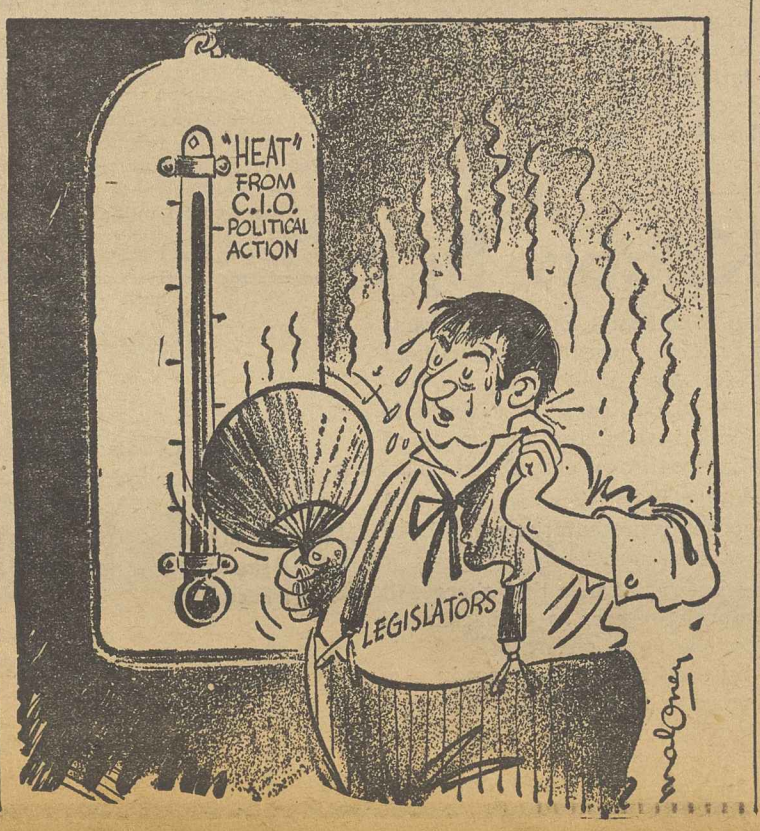
Then, to make it official, Sen. Butler (R., Neb.) gave out in the Senate with a formal demand that the Elections Committee reopen its investigation, which has already cleared CIO Political Action, in view of Spangler's letter.

This is the second half of the pair of identical twins. A short and unfruitful career is predicted for both of them.

Sees 60% Women's Vote in November

Oakland, Calif., June 3—"Over 60 per cent of the vote cast in November will be cast by women," Mrs. Verda Barnes, director of the Women's Division, CIO Political Action Committee, today told the California CIO Council executive board meeting in Oakland.

Mrs. Barnes, beginning a tour of California CIO unions, disclosed that special attention will be directed to getting women active in politics, because "women are interested in seeing the war end quickly, and are particularly concerned with proper rehabilitation and full employment after the war."



Boston CIO For FDR

Boston, June 3—Full support for a fourth term for FDR was voted by the CIO Council here his week. As the Council, headed by Jack Hurvich, USA-CIO, put it:

"The invasion and final victory can be guaranteed only by a severely tested war leadership and the security of all working people is tied up with the security of all the people of the world, therefore, be it resolved that:

"The Greater Boston CIO pledges to work and fight for the nomination and re-election of Franklin D. Roosevelt as the sole guarantee for ourselves and our allies of a speedy victory and a permanent peace."

OPA Labor Man

Washington, June 3—Appointment of Samuel Jacobs as Labor Relations Advisor in the OPA was announced this week by Cleon O. Swayzee, Director of the OPA Labor Office. Jacobs was nominated by the CIO to serve as liaison officer for the CIO to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of John W. Edelman last fall.

Canada Labor In Politics Too

Toronto, Canada—Labor political action is on deck in Canada as well as in the U. S., recent actions of the Canadian Congress of Labor show.

According to A. R. Mosher, president of the Congress, the Canadian Political Action Committee will work to elect progressive candidates to office as the CIO Political Action Committee works in the United States.

At the same time, the powerful Toronto Trades and Labor Congress (AFL) is also setting up a political action group to work along the same lines.

Dry Your Tears, Mr. Spangler!

S. L. Avery of Montgomery Ward has been called a lot of things lately since his union-busting revolt against Uncle Sam.

But even he must have raised his eyebrows at being called "an unarmed storekeeper" by Chairman Harrison Spangler of the Republican National Committee.

Avery's little "store" includes nine mail order plants, 649 retail establishments and has $178 million in net assets.

When he is not behind this "storecounter," Avery also functions as chairman of the $80 million U. S. Gypsum Co. and director of U. S. Steel, Pullman Inc., Armour & Co., People's Gas Co., Pure Oil Co., and the Northern Trust Co.

Spangler's reference to the "unarmed storekeeper" is only a side-crack in the course of a long attack on the rights of CIO members to engage in political activity.

But it is indicative of what he means by the "little businessmen" who, he says, are so eager to engage in political activity against Pres. Roosevelt.

Don't be so jittery, Mr. Spangler. "Little businessmen" like Sewell Avery and other heads of the biggest corporations are engaging in plenty of political activity and spending plenty of money on it.

Thomas L. Stokes, Scripps-Howard correspondent, reported estimates of half a million dollars spent by corporate interests in one primary campaign alone, to defeat Senator Hill in Alabama. Many devious ways were easily found to get around the law.

Even within the law affecting corporation political contributions, "little businessmen" like the DuPonts and other friends of Mr. Spangler have such large families and so many friends!

By the time all the DuPonts, their wives and their relatives and their subordinate executives have contributed the limit of $5,000 each, for instance, the total amounts to quite a substantial anti-New Deal kitty.

Then there are those other "little businessmen" and "storekeepers," the owners of the newspaper chains and metropolitan dailies. There's nothing to prevent the millionaire press from continuing to campaign against Pres. Roosevelt, against labor and against progressive policies.

No, Mr. Spangler, you really shouldn't lose any sleep at the idea of union members, farmers and real little businessmen trying to pit their pennies against the millions of dollars of big-business money available for your friends. You've still got the edge on this—and then some!

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

AT THE age of four, Shirley has found the secret of CIO's success. In fact, she discovered the magic formula almost as soon as she could talk.

Unimpressed by long-winded explanations or good resolutions that are not accompanied by action, she gets right to the point—and sticks to it.

So if you talk of buying her an ice cream cone, Shirley won't wait while you elaborate on its cooling merits or outline conditions or other obstacles in the way.

Quick as a whip, she comes back: "Well, do it!"

Delays and excuses have no appeal for her. If there are good reasons for any course of action, her immediate, logical and impatient response is: "Well, do it!"

The lingering guest who repeats, "I really must be going," should beware of Shirley. To the confusion of the adults, she has been known to answer, "Well, do it!"

★ ★ ★

The effectiveness of CIO's political activities has stimulated many columns of analysis and speculation in the press.

To many sophisticated minds, it all seems very unusual, irregular—and some of them hope, unlawful.

But if you follow Shirley's formula, the explanation is simple.

Spurred by the CIO Political Action Committee, countless labor unionists and other progressives are just doing what all forward-looking democratic elements have talked of doing for generations.

In planned, organized and intelligent fashion, they are using their right to vote to elect candidates who will really represent them.

The CIO did not originate the idea of organizing the unorganized into labor unions. Nor did it originate the idea of labor political action.

Its chief claim to fame is that it rolled up its sleeves and did what others had just "resolved" to do.

At the 1935 AFL convention, the founders of the CIO reacted in Shirley's fashion to the speeches and resolutions about organizing that had marked AFL gatherings for 50 years.

They said: "Well, do it!" And when the AFL refused to do it, they set about doing it themselves.

Labor has been in politics—Samuel Gompers to the contrary notwithstanding—ever since there has been a labor movement.

In promoting their members' economic interests, the unions have always had to fight anti-labor legislation and to support bills to better conditions.

At every election, the AFL has talked of "rewarding labor's friends and punishing its enemies."

That involves labor political action.

The chief reason the CIO has caused so much stir this year is that it has made the word "action" mean action.

If American citizens have the right to vote, why are there so many Congressmen who serve selfish minority interests and flout the wishes of the majority of working and other plain people?

The reasons are not obscure:

(1) An entrenched political machine, organized in every ward and precinct, gets those to vote who favor its candidates.

(2) The big money is on the anti-labor side, and the reactionary press confuses the voters on the real issues.

(3) Too many labor and progressive voters fail to register and vote.

The remedies are also obvious and well-known:

(1) Labor, farm and other progressive groups must combine their efforts. They must organize in neighborhood clubs, and in every ward and precinct, to support progressive candidates.

(2) A campaign of education must be conducted through the labor and progressive press, through radio, meetings, etc., to inform the voters on the real issues and on their Congressmens records.

(3) Campaigns must be organized to get all progressive voters to register and to go to the polls on election day.

The CIO has helped to defeat reactionaries and to nominate progressives in state after state in recent primaries, simply because it has pointed out these elementary rights and duties of citizenship and said to itself and to the voters: 'Well, do it!'

Nothing short of an overthrow of the U. S. Constitution can prevent American citizens from doing these things. For the Constitution provides free speech, free press and free assembly for the very purpose of enabling the citizens to elect a Congress and a government that reflect their wishes.

Continue FEPC

Its function is to see that all American workers have equal opportunity to engage in war work, without discrimination against any minority group.

The Committee has done its work courageously and effectively, despite the prejudices and hidebound practices it must buck.

Yet the FEPC is threatened with discontinuance by some Congressmen who want to cut off its appropriation.

An appropriation of $500,000 has been approved in the House, and decision on the life or death of the FEPC now rests with the Senate Appropriations Committee.

The CIO is urging the committee to vote the appropriation without delay.

But if the work of the FEPC is essential during the war, it is equally essential after the war, when even more serious employment problems will arise and unfair discrimination may lead to serious conflict.

That is why the CIO is also supporting the Dawson-Scanlon and LaFollette bills to create a permanent commission to prevent unfair employment practices and eliminate discriminations because of race, creed or color.

This legislation, which is necessary to continue the work of the FEPC after the war, is now before the House Labor Committee. It deserves the support of all good Americans.

The Kilgore Bill

The sudden cancellation of war contracts at the Brewster Aeronautical Corp., without any provision for the employes or for continued use of the plants, came as a shock to millions of others besides the thousands of workers immediately thrown out of their jobs.

The workers' "stay-in" demonstration and the union's vigorous representations may lead to some relief at Brewster.

But labor wants assurance that there will be no more Brewster cases, as cutbacks and reconversion become more general.

That is why the CIO calls for speedy passage of the Kilgore bill, for planned and orderly reconversion, with full protection for human as well as business interests through unemployment benefits and other similar provisions.

Push Soldier Ballot Drive

Columbus, O., June 3—CIO members and their wives in the auxiliaries are pushing a state-wide drive to make sure that their relatives and friends and neighbors in the armed forces get their ballot in time for the November election.

Writing to CIO unions and auxiliaries, George de Nucci, acting secretary-treasurer of the State CIO Council, said:

"Do we really mean all our talk about giving our boys and girls in the service a decent break? If so, here's our chance. I can think of no finer public service we can perform."

All it takes, he said, is a trip to the local elections board to pick up the application forms.

BACK COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF:

Every big CIO union and the Natl. CIO Political Action Committee have endorsed the win-the-war policies of President Franklin D. Roosevelt. In the belief that his continued leadership is vital to victory and to the building of a sound peace, they have urged him to run for a fourth term.

CIO Solid for FDR; Unseats Defeatists

CIO and the CIO's Political Action Committee have endorsed President Roosevelt for a fourth term.

Here's why, explained by Philip Murray, president of CIO and head of the 900,000-strong CIO Steelworkers, at the May convention of his union:

"It is my earnest belief and firm conviction that in the interest of national unity to bring speedy victory to our cause, and to assure the realization for the people of the Four Freedoms, Franklin D. Roosevelt must be a candidate

GI Job Rights Spotlighted By U. S. Agency

A GI "Bill of Rights" for return of veterans to their former jobs was stressed this week by the Selective Service System. The details, which are of increasing importance as more and more men are mustered out every month, provide:

1. That qualified veterans are entitled to reinstatement even though it forces the discharge of non-veterans with greater seniority.

2. That seniority rights for veterans accumulate during service with the armed forces exactly as they would if the veterans had remained on their civilian jobs.

3. That veterans' job rights are not affected by agreements entered into by employers which set conditions of employment different from those which existed at the time the veteran left his job.

4. That veterans must be quali-

Congressman Martin Dies, Texas labor-baiter and chairman of the Dies Committee, will not run for re-election. He said he had a sore throat and wanted to return to private business. Incidentally, CIO workers in his district pushed a registration-to-vote drive so hard that they probably would have retired him—with or without his consent.

Stormy Weather for GI Bill

Polltaxer Tries to Grab 100% More Interest On Loans to Veterans

The GI Bill of Rights, which started out as a simple measure to help the servicemen get back to civilian life with loans, unemployment insurance and educational aid, has run into heavy weather in Congress.

As originally backed by the CIO and passed by the Senate, the bill provided loans at only three percent to veterans, unemployment benefits for 52 weeks in case jobs are hard to find, free tuition, increased hospital facilities, etc.

This was too good for a reactionary bloc in Congress headed by Rep. Rankin, polltaxer from Mississippi, who immediately started to water down the Senate version of the bill.

Under Rankin's treatment, the interest rate on loans was upped from three percent to six. The unemployment insurance benefits were cut from 52 weeks' duration to 26. The benefits were slashed from a top of $25 a week, with allowances for dependents, to $20 a week, with nothing for dependents.

Then Rankin put in a sneak clause that would make a veteran ineligible for unemployment benefits if he refused a job in an anti-union shop.

REVERSE ENGLISH

This was done in a reverse-English phrase that says no veteran shall be allowed to claim benefits "if he would be required to join a union" as a condition of getting a job, and should refuse a job under such circumstances.

In other words, the clause was aimed at union or preferential shops, where the worker joins with his fellow workers in helping to support his union that has improved his working conditions. It means that a veteran would either have to look for a non-union job or lose his eligibility for unemployment benefits.

Rep. Howard Smith, another polltaxer, from Virginia, tried to slip in a clause that would fine or imprison anyone who asked a veteran to join a union and pay dues. CIO unions, incidentally, have waived initiation fees for veterans, whether they're union members or not.

The Rankin version of the watered-down GI bill has passed the House. Currently, committees from both House and Senate are trying to iron out the differences between the two versions of the bill.

Already Rankin has been forced to retreat on the six percent interest on loans to the original three percent. CIO is working to make him retreat on the unemployment benefits and to knock out the anti-union sneak clause.

KO Polltax Repeal But Comeback Fight Slated

The bill to repeal the polltax was pigeon-holed in the Senate this month. Senators from polltax states teamed up with a number of Republicans to defeat it.

This means more than keeping price tags on ballots. It means more than taxing away the right to vote of 10 million citizens.

It means a lot to the serviceman and his family, who are directly affected by the kind of legislation ultra-conservative polltax congressmen sponsor. For example:

Rep. Rankin, polltaxer from Mississippi, was the spearhead of the anti-Federal ballot bill that makes it extremely difficult for GIs to vote. Rankin took the "GI Bill of Rights" as passed by the Senate and cut in half the unemployment benefits in the original bill; he tried to double the interest.

Rep. Howard Smith, polltaxer from Virginia, has been a leader in the drive to change the price control act and raise food, clothing and housing costs sky-high. Smith's changes would blow the lid off real control, and would make the job of living on a serviceman's dependency allotment even harder than it is now. Smith is also a noted enemy of the unions.

Sen. Bankhead, polltaxer from Alabama, is author of a price control amendment that would jack up prices 20% on work clothes, house dresses, kids' clothes etc.

These are only three examples of what polltax Congressmen do. These men, and others like them, are elected by about three percent of the people in their home districts. A lot of the others don't vote because they literally can't afford to pay the polltax on the measly wages that they get.

Under the service vote law as passed by Congress, you can get a postcard application form from your CO which you send to the Secretary of State in your state. The form is USWBC No. 1.

Fill out the form as indicated by the instructions and in addition:

1. Indicate whether you want a ballot for a general, special or primary election. Many primaries are now over, so you'll most likely want a general election ballot.

2. If you can't remember accurately the voting district where you last voted, its wise to write "do not remember." Don't try to guess.

3. Give your military address.

4. PRINT your name and serial number and SIGN your name on the bottom.

A sufficient supply of these cards should have been sent around by now. CIO in some states has distributed hundreds of thousands of cards to be sent to service people.

After you've got the card filled out, have a commissioned officer or your sergeant sign it. Mail it to the Secretary of State in your home state capital. No postage is required.

Lowdown on Nazis

Sgt. William Gandell, former CIO organizer and editor, is giving American GIs "somewhere in England" the lowdown on how the Nazis fight. Gandell, who received his experience during service with the Intl. Brigade, is in charge of all Army talks given at an Air Service Command where he is stationed.

By E. M. SCHOFFSTALL

To the 100,000 members of the Textile Workers Union of America who are in the armed forces of the United States, the union has made a solemn pledge: "We shall keep the home front strong."

Since Pearl Harbor, TWUA has kept this pledge in many ways. Its 450,000 workers in the mills make a myriad of items that contribute directly to the war effort—uniforms, parachutes, blankets, underwear, tents, tarpaulins, sleeping bags, cartridge belts, overcoats, mosquito nettings and gas masks.

This is the fifth in a series of articles about CIO unions and the part they are playing to help win the war. The articles are published to acquaint servicemen and women with CIO's policy of backing all-out production of weapons needed for victory.

Textiles play such an important part in the war effort that Maj. Gen. Edmund B. Gregory, Quartermaster General, U. S. Army, recently declared:

"Textile workers have proved themselves to be war workers in the finest sense. They are producing goods for the victory effort that are just as essential to the fighting efficiency of our Army as airplanes, guns, and ammunition."

Besides clothing fighting men and the home front, textile workers are buying $50,000,000 worth of war bonds a year and have given millions of dollars to war relief agencies.

SERVICEMEN'S AID

Every TWUA local and joint board has its Servicemen's Committee. Some locals send "comfort kits" and cigarettes abroad. Some buy war bonds for the men and women in the service. All participate in USO and related soldier-welfare activities of their respective communities.

TWUA locals have furnished day rooms at Army camps, sponsored correspondence clubs to keep their servicemembers informed about activities on the home front, and participated in mass donations to the Red Cross blood bank.

TWUA's home front army is constantly protecting job, pay and working conditions for the men and women who are away. As this is written, the union is engaged in a broad-front battle to win wage increases for textile workers, so that the jobs the soldiers come home to will be at living wages.

JOB PROTECTION

All TWUA contracts give full protection to the seniority and job rights of men and women in the service, substantially stronger than that provided in the Selective Service Act.

When members of TWUA return to their jobs after the war, they will have full rights as union members. Servicemen who come into the textile industry or whose shops have been organized while they are fighting will have their initiation fees waived in shops where fees are the practice.

FDR Signs Bills to Boost GI Pensions

Disabled veterans of both world wars and their dependents will get a pension boost under two bills signed by President Roosevelt this month.

One of the bills gives a straight 15% raise to veterans with service disabilities, and to their dependents.

The other gives a $10 a month raise to those war veterans whose disability is not service connected, provided they are permanently or totally disabled. It makes no allowance for dependents, except on the death of the veteran.

Bill Would Help Meet High Cost of Having Babies

Servicemen's wives and kids can get free maternity and infant care—if a bill now pending in Congress goes through the way it should.

The bill provides money to carry on the "Emergency Maternity and Infant Care" (EMIC) program that has been operating for a year. The program needs some $42,000,000 to carry it through.

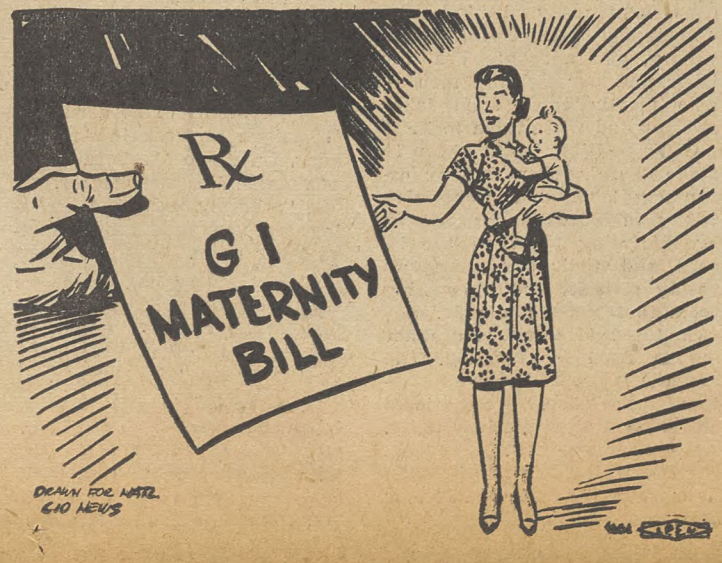
The program is backed by the CIO and the CIO Womens Auxiliaries. It gives free care through pregnancy and one year of infancy for every serviceman's wife and new-born child. All the mother has to do is apply to her local Board of Health, which will tell her how to get it. Nobody is barred because of race, family income or length of residence.

Already about 250,000 service families have been helped, at no charge to themselves.

You might think that nobody would oppose this program—but there are people who do. These people are the big-shot doctors who run the American Medical Assn., and their beef is that they'd rather have the service wife be forced to hire an individual doctor who could set his fee at all the traffic would bear.

As EMIC stands now, the doctor is paid by the Women's Bureau of the U. S. Labor Dept. and so he can't bargain individually with his patient.

The AMA, of course, is all for motherhood and for the armed forces too—but a fee is a fee!



CUT ON THIS LINE

LOOKING AHEAD

By LEN DE CAUX

THIS is a story of the BAG that came loose.

The 1942 elections were in the BAG for reaction, because 20 million Americans failed to vote.

Millions of them couldn't. Out of 5 million servicemen, only 28,000 got the chance.

Five million war workers, moved to other states, couldn't vote either; and millions more worked overtime instead of voting.

So the politicians were sure they saw a TREND—against the New Deal, against FDR, against labor. They acted accordingly.

★ ★ ★

To make sure the TREND continued, they tried to keep even more voters from voting.

They denied most servicemen the right to vote by turning down the federal ballot bill.

They knifed the anti-polltax bill, to keep 10 million Americans disfranchised.

With twice as many in the armed forces, and twice as many workers moved to new war jobs, they figured the 1944 elections would be twice as much in the BAG.

But in the primaries this spring something happened. The BAG came loose. The TREND reversed itself.

Huge sums were spent to defeat Senators Hill (Ala.) and Pepper (Fla.), both staunch FDR men. But without avail.

Three leading members of the anti-administration, anti-labor Dies Committee bit the dust — Starnes (Ala.), Costello (Calif.), and Dies (Tex.) himself, who decided he had a sore throat and didn't want to run.

Arch-tory Sen. Holman (Ore.) was licked by liberal Wayne Morse. In California, West Virginia, Ohio and elsewhere, pro-FDR and pro-labor candidates were uniformly successful.

Who loosened that BAG? The CIO is modest, but a lot of folks are pointing the finger at it.

The same crowd that blocked the soldier vote are screaming that something must be done to stop the CIO Political Action Committee.

The fact is that most Americans want unity behind the Commander-in-Chief for quick victory, and a square deal for labor and our fighting men — who mostly come from labor anyhow and will return to it.

CIO's political job has been to make these wishes felt, by organizing labor and progressive voters in wards and precincts, by informing them on the issues and their Congressmen's voting records, and by getting them to register and vote.

So the 1944 elections are not in the BAG for reaction. The TREND is pro-FDR, pro-servicemen, pro-labor, pro-national unity, pro-United Nations unity, and pro-victory soon.

All of which ought to be okay by most of the GI's we know or have heard from.

U.S. War Output Tops—Army to GIs

U. S. Army and Navy enthusiasm for the production of American workers hit a new high pitch this month as government war agencies announced that huge stock piles of weapons, ammunition and other equipment needed for the invasion of Europe was ready for the D-Day job.

In a special newsmap distributed to troops, the Army said:

"This is the work of your sisters and brothers and fathers, sweethearts and friends. They are the home front workers. They want to get the war over in the shortest possible time.

"They want you home safe and whole. To do it they are turning out equipment at a rate never before equalled in the history of any country. They are doing their share to win the war."

Here's what they have done in cooperation with industry, according to official armed services reports:

1. Boosted plane production, by weight, 6,800 per cent to give the U. S. Air Forces 4 to 1 superiority over the Nazis and 7 to 1 superiority over the Japanese.

2. Turned out during the first four months of 1944 a total Navy tonnage approximately equal to that of the entire fleet four years ago.

3. Launched 19 million tons of merchant shipping during 1943—2½ times the amount built in 1942 and almost 17 times that built in 1941.

4. Produced 424,000 pieces of artillery from Jan. 1, 1942, to Jan. 1, 1944.

5. Manufactured 1,160,000,000 rounds of artillery ammunition in that period and so much small arms ammunition that some plants have been closed or have been converted to other work.

6. Turned out 1,200,000 military trucks and 148,000 tanks and other combat vehicles.

The Army pointed out that the U. S. is producing more war supplies than all the other nations in the world combined. This vast output, the Army said, is the result of "the sweat and prayers of millions of men and women on the production line."

"That line," the Army declared, "now includes boys and girls working after school, housewives who place their children in well-supervised day nurseries while they are at the plants, and men and women who have come back out of retirement to bring the end of the war closer."

Press Lies About Labor Make Army Man Sore

Would-be splitters of unity between the fighting forces and the home front were sharply denounced by a GI Joe writing this week to CIO Pres. Philip Murray. Said Pfc. Thomas E. Coll from "somewhere in Italy":

"There seems to be a subversive clique at work in America today, trying to arouse a revolt between soldier and worker."

Coll sharply criticized magazines and newspapers for distorting labor news.

"Almost every magazine we pick up contains either a picture story or an editorial telling us how the CIO or the AFL is helping the enemy," Coll wrote.

"We are led to believe that labor unions are tools of Hitler and Tojo. If we believe what we read, we would think that the American working men and women—our own families and friends—stay up nights fighting out ways to lose the war.

"Personally, I think the news we get and the pictures they send us, are downright insults to our intelligence. Thinking men are infuriated with the bunk that is cooked up for our benefit."

We Trust Weapons—Eisenhower To CIO

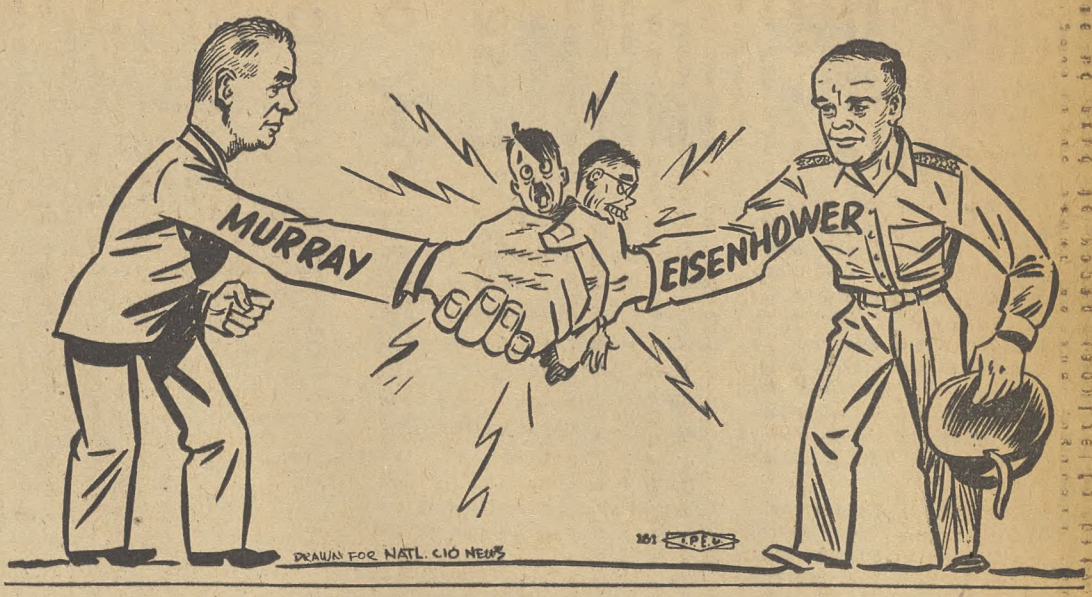
America's fighters trust America's weapons. That was the message cabled to CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week by General Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander-in-chief of Allied forces poised for the invasion of Western Europe.

Eisenhower's cable was in response to one sent by Murray, which pledged all-out support of CIO's five million members to the mighty offensive. Murray's cable said:

"More than five million CIO members and their families join with other Americans in heartfelt hope for overwhelming success in the coming attack by American and British forces on Fortress Europe.

"We trust that you and your men will find that the weapons hammered out by American workers will prove equal to your difficult task, and superior to those in the hands of the enemy.

"We pledge that the all-out production record which has made these American weapons possible will be continued wholeheartedly in complete support of the invasion and the mighty battles that will follow it until the Nazis are completely crushed."



EISENHOWER TO CIO

"Please accept for yourself and convey to the five million CIO workers and their families my sincere appreciation and that of the men under my command for your heartwarming message."

"Rest assured that all of us will enter the battles ahead full of trust and confidence in the weapons that have been forged by American workers and we also look forward to the days when those same workers will again forge the tools of peace."

Steel Union Re-affirms No-Strike Pledge

Close to 2,300 delegates from CIO's second largest union, the United Steelworkers (USA-CIO, met last week in their second union convention under the leadership of Philip Murray to reaffirm their no-strike pledge, pledge new production efforts, and outline a program of aid to servicemen.

Reporting on membership and other gains, the union officers showed a total of 949,938 members, including 201,635 in the armed forces. Of these, more than 80,000 are women and 70,000 are Negro workers. It was these people who made the 90 million tons of steel produced in this country last year.

The convention endorsed the union's plan to have each member set aside $20 out of any wage increase secured for a servicemen's fund, the steel companies to contribute an equal amount. The plan is to hold this as a fund for steelworkers to draw upon when they are discharged.

David J. McDonald, secretary-treasurer of the USA-CIO, told the delegates that a special union committee is being set up to help returning servicemen in the adjustment to civilian life. This, he said, would work with a national CIO committee set up for the same purpose.

Speaking on the union's no-strike pledge, Pres. Murray said: "You can't indulge in idle platitudes about it and you can't straddle the issue. When your country is involved in a war your country must ome first, because without your country you could have no United Steelworkers of America."

TOURING VETS SAY:

Home Front Job Strictly GI

Atlanta, Ga.—Two wounded vets who've had first hand opportunities to shoot the breeze with production front workers this week said flatly that labor's record is OK and that GIs abroad ought to know about it.

The two are Staff Sgt. Earl Ledford and T/Sgt. Daniel A. McKinley. Both are convalescing at Lawson General Hospital, near here. They were interviewed by a CIO NEWS correspondent.

Sgt. Ledford hails from Detroit. He holds the Purple Heart, RAF Silver Boot, Air Medal and both Pacific and European Campaign ribbons. As a civilian, he was a member of the CIO. He said:

"I have seen the stockpiles of war material overseas waiting to be used and here at home waiting to be shipped, and I have seen no let-up labor's part to keep this material flowing in ever increasing lots to the boys overses."

Ledford, who spent 14 days in the desert after being shot down over Tunisia, speaks with more than ordinary knowledge, for he has made many tours under Army Industrial Services sponsorship through war plants in the South.

WORK, WORK, WORK

Sgt. McKinley, too, was a war plant visitor. An attorney before he entered the Services from his home town of Dodgeville, Wis., Sgt. McKinley toured textile and turpentine plants and shipyards in four states.

"Everywhere I have been," he reported, "I have seen work, work and more work with labor doing its share to insure that our boys get everything they need for a quick victory."

McKinley, who was a radio operator and top turret gunner on a Liberator B-24, was shot down by Nazi aircraft and crashed 150 miles off the Malta coast. He wears the Purple Heart, RAF Silver Boot and European Campaign ribbon.

Sgt. McKinley asked that men overseas be told that "definitely the workers and public here are behind us 100% in everything, and I say this after talking to 100,000 people (and with a lot of them) during the time I have been touring war plants."

GI Ballot Aid

CIO in Ohio is working to see that every serviceman gets a ballot for the November vote. Members are asked to mail ballots, which they get from the local Board of Elections, to relatives, friends and fellow union members in the service.

Prices Back Home—The Lowdown

(Price control affects twice as many people as wear pants. It's one of the biggest issues before Congress. Servicemen with families are particularly affected, since a jump in the cost of living bears heavily on everyone who lives on an allotment or any other kind of fixed income. By the time this edition of the CIO Servicemen's NEWS reaches you, the issue may have been settled. This is what's happened so far.)

By June 30, Congress will have passed a new Price Control Act, continuing controls that have been in operation for the past two years.

Nobody is arguing that there shouldn't be price control, because the alternative is out-and-out inflation that would make dollar bills almost as worthless as stage money. The argument—and its been a hot one—is over the kind of price control we shall have.

The CIO, led by Pres. Philip Murray, has been asking for a simple renewal of the price control act without changes or amendments of any kind. Joining with the CIO are organizations of consumers, farmers, women's auxiliaries, religious groups and some businessmen.

A typical change in price control asked by some special interests is one to raise the price of all cotton goods. This change (amendment to the act) looks simple. It appears to bring cotton growers' prices into line with other prices. Actually it would increase the cost of work clothes, women's cheap dresses and kids' clothes by 20%. It would up the manufacturers' profits — already swollen — by 50%. It would mean nothing to the cotton farmers, because the new prices would be set at the manufacturers' end, not at the growers'.

GRAVY TRAIN RUSH

This simple looking change—and there are more than 135 others like it already proposed to Congress—would set every other manufacturer and seller of goods into a wild scramble for his place on the gravy train. It would blow the lid off price control completely.

If the lid is blown off price control, the people back home and the soldiers' families aren't the only ones who'll pay the price. Uncle Sam, who buys most everything made nowadays, will have an enormously increased war bill to pay.

Uncle Sam's war bill is paid by taxes, now and far into the future. This means that the soldiers and sailors and the merchant seamen, after they've fought the war and won it, will have to come back to pay an even greater share of the cost in future taxes.

AT YOUR SERVICE

Servicemen discharged for illness or those about to be mustered out will find this column of particular interest. It is the second of a series presented by The CIO NEWS Servicemen's Edition in cooperation with the Red Cross.

Q. If I decide to ask the Red Cross hospital worker to help me plan for a new job and for my return to civilian life, but my disability discharge comes through before my plans are completed, am I still entitled to this Red Cross service?

A. You may request the hospital worker to write to your local chapter presenting your problems and the recommendations of your medical officers as to what he thinks you can or should do in regard to employment and further treatment if necessary. Or, upon your return home, you or your family may go directly to the chapter for service.

Q. I did not file a claim for pension at the time of my disability discharge. Now I find that I cannot apply for vocational rehabilitation because I am not receiving a pension. Is it too late to do anything about it?

A. No. Your local Red Cross chapter can give you full information about the law govering vocational rehabilitation as well as assistance in filing your claim. No action can be taken by the Veterans' Administration concerning your eligibility for vocational training until a pension has been granted by the rating board. When you receive the notification that your claim has been allowed, and that you are entitled to training because of a vocaional handicap resulting from your disability, your Red Cross Home Service worker will help you with your application.

for re-election to the Presidency of the U.S. and that the overwhelming majority of the people of the nation, regardless of political affiliation, demand his re-election."

The voters — CIO and non-CIO—have already begun to deliver on the pledge to re-elect FDR. Recent primary elections have retired many anti-labor, anti-FDR, anti-war politicians from public life.

Leading this list of politicians who fought labor and the New Deal and who basically opposed the war are men like Rep. Dies (Tex.), Starnes (Ala.), Costello (Calif.), all leading members of the un-American Dies Committee. With them went such anti-labor and anti-FDR men as Sen. Holman (Ore.), Rep. Newsome (Ala.), ex-Sen. Rush Holt (W. Va.) and others.

At the same time, the CIO through its Political Action Committee has been working to get the largest possible number of voters registered so they can cast a decisive ballot in November.

Along this line, many CIO state groups have been pushing their state authorities to send ballots to servicemen and to make sure that their votes are counted.

The theory on which CIO Political Action operates is a simple one—when all the people vote, we get a progressive government. Therefore the main aim is to get as many people as possible to vote in 1944.

fied to handle jobs to which they are reinstated, although if there is any doubt the veteran is "entitled to a chance to prove that he can do the work."

5. That if a veteran is not qualified for a better position, "he is nevertheless entitled to a position equal in seniority status and pay to the one he left."

6. That a veteran entitled to reinstatement can go to court to recover back pay even after reinstatement if the reinstatement was improperly delayed by the employer.

Veterans who left temporary positions are not entitled to re-employment, but in case of question about the meaning of "temporary," the courts may be appealed to.

UNION MADE: GI Joes dance under the stars with union members at the USO-Labor Plaza in the center of Philadelphia. Monty-Ward Philosophy—Fight U. S. Workers First, Then Nazis, Nips

A 69-year-old industrialist and businessman, who thrives on his hate for labor and the progressive policies of the Roosevelt Administration, came to grief this month after unsuccessfully defying the war power of the U. S. Government.

The name of the obstructionist is Sewell L. Avery. He is the $100,000-a-year chairman of the giant Montgomery Ward mail order company. Most of his 70,000 lowly-paid employes know him as "S-L-AVERY".

His defiance of the constitutional power of the government came to an open break with his refusal to accept an order of the Natl. War Labor Board, set up by FDR to arbitrate disputes between employers and workers.

The Board, as it has done in many other cases, advised Avery that he should agree to a contract with the CIO Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes. The contract provided that when workers joined the union they should remain members of it for the duration of the agreement — usually one year in most CIO shops.

Avery became so defiant that the government, under a law passed by Congress, was forced to take over Montgomery Ward's Chicago plant. Avery, who declined to remove himself, was carried out by two soldiers.

One of the main points on which Avery based his defiance was that the union "did not represent a majority of his employes". That was proved wrong by an election the Natl. Labor Relations Board held shortly after Avery's ouster. The employes reaffirmed their wish to be represented by the union by a vote of 2,440 to 1,593.

STILL BALKS

It looked for a moment as though all would be quiet on the Chicago front. But the government, which turned Avery's plant back to him after the election, failed to reckon with his stubbornness.

Again he refused to deal with the union, which is asking for an extension of its old contract while a new one is being negotiated.

Apparently Avery is seeking to do his best to disrupt war production by attempting to "needle" his employes into violation of labor's no-strike pledge. His attitude and his record were cited recently by the Chicago SUN.

"It is significant," the SUN said, "that of the 6,500 labor dispute cases which have reached the WLB since its creation in 1942, only seven cases of defiance by employers—and 10 of defiance by unions—have been sent to the White House for action, and that of the seven employer cases, two involved Montgomery Ward and thus Sewell Avery.

"While the rest of America has rolled up its sleeves and plowed ahead with the war effort, Sewell Avery and Montgomery Ward have concentrated their efforts on one battle—the legal battle to defend its self-asserted right to conduct labor relations as they were conducted at the turn of the century."

Jobs Main Goal of CIO

CIO's program for aid to veterans, with job guarantees topping the postwar list, was outlined this week by CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, writing in "The Jewish Veteran," a servicemen's magazine.

"Organized labor is acutely conscious of its double responsibility; first to produce the maximum of weapons needed for the speedy and successful conclusion of military hostilities; and second, to set up at home the mechanism by which to carry over into a prosperous and secure peace, the production and employment record set during the war," Carey stated.

The CIO program for veterans, as presented by Carey, includes:

1. Mustering-out pay.

2. Quick placement of veterans in suitable jobs, with a decent and fair return for their labor.

3. Adequate hospitalization when needed, with full protection for disabled veterans and dependents.

4. Re-education both for disabled veterans and for able-bodied men who need to learn —or want to learn—new skills.

5. Protection of seniority rights of those leaving industry for military service; and the waiving of union initiation fees for young servicemen new to industry.

6. Scholarships, covering living as well as educational costs, for veterans who qualify for higher education.

7. Adequate aid to families of those killed in action.

8. A social security program, such as outlined in the proposed Wagner-Murray-Dingell Bill.

Want to know how to get help when your wife expects a baby? Threatened by bill collectors? Know what you're supposed to get in dependency allowances?

All these questions and a lot more that every GI will be mighty anxious to know about will be answered in the CIO War Relief Committee's new Servicemen's Manual, that's going to roll off the press within the next month.

According to Edward M. Maisel, director of the War Relief Committee's Servicemen's and Veterans' Division, the new manual will take the place of the extremely popular old one.

"Why can't the CIO initiate conferences with management on a local scale, leading to a national scale, to facilitate the re-employment of discharged postwar servicemen? Most CIO unions also have voted to allow returning veterans to affiliate without payment of initiation fees, and other CIO unions are planning similar action in the near future.)

Keep Your Eye On Congress

CIO won a real victory this week with the announced pigeon-holing of the Brewster-Bailey forced labor bill (S 1864) by the Senate Military Affairs Committee. It wasn't killed, however, but simply laid on the shelf—and it can be taken off again.

Price control is moving towards a showdown in the Senate, with the Bankhead amendment ripping the ceilings from clothing prices as the opening wedge for the inflation drive. Both Senate and House debate are set for this week.

A new attempt to palm off inadequate reconversion in place of the Kilgore bill (S 1893) that aids workers and veterans as well as business is being made in the Murray-George bill, just as phoney as the previous Murray bill (S 1718) that passed the Senate.

Party maneuvers continue on the polltax, with the Senate Judiciary Committee shelving the Republican constitutional amendment proposal, which would take about 25 years to achieve repeal. HR 7 is still the only way to get rid of the polltax.

The Fair Employment Practice Committee appropriation ($500,000) has passed the House, now goes to the Senate as part of an appropriation bill (HR 4879). Powerful polltax opposition is ganged up waiting for it.

The "GI" bill to aid veterans is still stalled in conference between House and Senate.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Price control.	Renewal of price control act due June 30.	Headed for Senate and House debate this week.	Wire Senators against Bankhead amendment and all others. Same to Representatives.
FEPC, part of War Agencies bill (HR 4879).	$500,000 for FEPC to fight job discrimination against Negroes, other minorities.	Senate Appropriations Committee, with polltaxers opposed.	Wire Senators to support without riders, with full funds.
Kilgore (S 1893).	Aids workers, veterans in reconversion problems, as well as industry.	New attempt to side-track it by Murray-George bill—just as bad as earlier one.	Write Congress for S 1893, early hearings, passage.
"GI" bill (S 1767).	Aid to veterans, education, unemployment aid, etc.	Rankinized version, with heart cut out of unemployment aid, now in conference with Senate.	Wire Senators and Representative to return to original Senate version as backed by CIO, vets.

CIO Victory

Forced Labor Bill Buried

WASHINGTON, June 3—CIO won a victory on one major war production front and prepared to deal with another stall on a second issue in Congress this week.

The victory was in the laying away of the unlamented Brewster-Bailey forced labor bill (S 1864) which was shelved in the Senate Military Affairs Committee. The bill, fought vigorously by CIO Pres. Murray and other CIO leaders, would have sent workers into forced labor battalions, if they changed jobs without permission of local draft boards.

The new stalling maneuver occurred on the Kilgore reconversion bill (S 1893), which takes care of the "human side" of reconversion of war industry by aiding workers and demobilized veterans as well as business. This came in the introduction of a new Murray-George bill only slightly different from the original Murray bill (S 1718), which has passed the Senate and which protects business only.

The new Murray-George measure tries to meet the CIO insistance on protection of demobilized war workers and veterans, but does so in only half-measure. For example, it provides only 26 weeks unemployment benefits at $25 a week top, while the Kilgore bill, backed by the CIO, provides a top of $35 a week for as long as it is needed. It fails to set up any central government agency for handling reconversion planning, as does the Kilgore bill.

The Brewster-Bailey bill, an even more extreme measure than the first forced labor scheme of the Austin-Wadsworth measure, would have frozen all workers into present jobs, regardless of their usefulness in war production. Thus, it would have perpetuated the frozen surplus labor pool on the big cotton plantations and in certain lumber camps—providing a wasteful pool of enforced labor for big operators.

Anti-Dote To Digest

New York—Reader's Digest, which spreads its anti-union and anti-United Nations poison among far too many readers, has a liberal competitor that everybody hopes will run the Digest out of business.

The competitor is "Reader's Scope," edited by Leverett Gleason and published monthly at 25 cents. Leading article in the July issue is "I Accuse Martin Dies" by Albert E. Kahn, author of "Sabotage," a best selling expose of native fascists in this country.

WASHINGTON, June 3—The fantastic defiance by Montgomery Ward & Co., of official U. S. wartime labor policy reached the stage this week where a new seizure of the firm's Chicago plant loomed, as management's obstructionist attitude tripled the tension of relations with the CIO United Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes.

The deliberate baiting of the union by the company, headed by anti-union, anti-Administration Sewell Avery, has led to a situation that might possibly result in another shutdown. Ward workers, are completely fed up with company stalling and with failure of the Natl. War Labor Board to take more decisive action than it has to date.

The union, through President Samuel Wolchok, warned the WLB at a hearing held here this week that the company must agree at least to temporary continuation of a contract which expired Dec. 8, 1943, pending negotiaion of a new agreement.

Pointing out that the recently held NLRB election had unquestionably established the fact that the overwhelming majority of workers at the Chicago plant wish to be represented by the union, Wolchok declared that the company is seeking to destroy the union while all government agencies are "standing by and ... time."

ASK GRIEVANCE MACHINERY

The union, through Wolchok, Vice-Pres. Leonard Levi and Attorney Francis Heisler, demanded that the WLB set up a board to decide 150 unsettled grievances or name an arbitrator to deal with them.

Wolchok said that no grievance machinery exists to settle disputes and pointed out that 22 union members had been dismissed while the plant was in the hands of the government, during the recent seizure.

Virtually putting the case back where it started, except for the union's election victory, the Ward management said that it still maintains its opposition to proposed maintenance of membership, checkoff and compulsory arbitration of grievances.

Maintenance of membership is a standard part of hundreds of contracts awarded through the WLB which has utilized this stabilizing influence in labor-employer relations to help prevent wartime disturbances that might result if unions did not have security from employer attacks.

School Lunch, Aid To Mothers Bills Pass House

WASHINGTON, June 3—A reluctant House of Representatives gave the nation's kids a break this week, when CIO and CIO Women's Auxiliary pressure forced it to carry on the school lunch program for another year.

At the same time, the House OK'd the Emergency Maternity and Infant Care program (EMIC) which gives maternity and medical care for the first year to wives and newborn children of servicemen. This program, opposed by the American Medical Assn., was energetically pushed by CIO and its Women's Auxiliary. Total cost is $42,000,000 a year, and last year the program helped some 250,000 service wives and babies.

The House in voting the lunch program which last year gave five million kids a hot, nourishing meal a day, voted to cut down the Senate program from two years to one. Earlier, the House had turned the program down completely, with the Republicans leading "economy" outcries against it.

The program costs about $50,000,000 a year and is direct aid to war production by enabling mothers to stay on war jobs without worrying about their children getting a decent mid-day meal.

Both programs have already passed the Senate. House passage is a real victory for CIO, which with its Auxiliaries was the only mass organization that actively campaigned for the two programs.

Blunt Warning

War Strikes Will Kill UAW—Thomas

DETROIT, June 3—A blunt warning to the membership of the largest union in the nation that it must maintain inviolate its pledge not to strike or else face destruction was sounded this week by R. J. Thomas, president of the CIO United Auto Workers Union.

In a statement sharply criticizing minorities who indulge in wildcat walkouts, Thomas said that "there can be no such thing today as legitimate picket lines."

"Any person who sets up picket lines is acting like an anarchist, not like a disciplined union man," Thomas declared. "Such picket lines should be ignored."

Thomas said that within recent weeks there have been "too many wildcat strikes" and pointed out that "public opinion has become inflamed against our union."

CANNOT SURVIVE

"Our union," he added, "cannot survive if the nation and our soldiers believe that we are obstructing the war effort.

"Our loyal membership must face that fact. They must see to it that the good of our union is maintained, that the acts of isolated handfuls are not permitted to continue to the detriment of all of us.

"Today our armed forces are poised for an attack on the Nazi war machine. Already more than 35,000 of our American brothers have been killed in action. Many more have been maimed, many of them for life. These figures will increase many-fold in the months to come.

SET HOUSE IN ORDER

"Does any reasonable and responsible person believe that, in the face of these terrible facts, our union can tolerate wildcat strikes in war plants and still survive? It can't be done.

"Either we set our own house in order at once, cease all wildcat strikes, or we will face an attack such as no union can withstand.

"Let us all resolve today to obey our constitution and the no-strike pledges made by our conventions. There can be no such thing today as legitimate picket lines. Any person who sets up picket lines is acting like an anarchist, not like a disciplined union man. Such picket lines should be ignored.

"I need not be reminded that the maintenance of production requires the cooperation of management and Governmental agencies, as well as of our union and its members. I know that Government agencies are too slow, and that managements in many cases are trying to provoke strikes, or at least to take advantage of the no-strike pledge to weaken our union.

"These things are true, but to me they are only additional reasons why we must exert every bit of self-control we have to prevent the provocation from achieving its intended results—strikes and the blackening of our union.

"This war must be won. If management will not sincerely work toward that end, then labor must do so. We may have to take it on the chin here and there for a time, but if we can present the nation and the returning soldiers with a clean labor record, we will gain after the war for the sacrifices we are making today."

Guard Vets' Job Rights—Calif. CIO

Oakland, Calif., June 3—Passage of the GI Bill of Rights in its original form was urged this week by the California CIO Council executive board.

The CIO also set policy to guarantee that a "certain percentage of all new employes hired shall be veterans."

The board, in its day-long discussion of postwar problems, voted unanimously to work for plantwide seniority for disabled servicemen, "so that veterans unable to resume their previous jobs shall suffer no loss of pay in new work."

The board also recommended that CIO contracts with employers carry strong guarantees protecting rights of returning servicemen, including cumulative seniority during their absence, and of top wage rates.

On the eve of the invasion of Europe, the board re-affirmed its position that "any strike, for any reason, by any section of labor is a strike against all labor."

Dyers Boost Shift Pay

Patterson, N. J., June 3.—Shift differentials of five to 10 cents an hour were negotiated this week by the CIO Federation of Dyers in industry wide conferences with management affecting 20,000 workers in seven eastern states.

The proposed raises will be submitted to the WLB for approval, as will a demand of the union for a 15 cents an hour general increase which management did not agree to. The conferences were the first ever held on an industry-wide basis, according to Federation Pres. Joseph W. Knapink.

WASHINGTON, May 27—This is a clipping that ought to be pasted in the hats of Bureau of Labor Statistics officials who apparently are convinced that the cost of living hasn't really gone for a ride into the stratosphere.

The figures that follow are prices of 14 important foods or household items as of January 1, 1944, compared with prices of January 1, 1941. All the purchases, made by Sec.-Treas. Eleanor Fowler of the CIO Women's Auxiliaries, were made at the Rochdale Stores, Inc., in this city.

The prices—backed up by receipts which the Bureau of Labor Statistics may inspect—show that increases range from 8 to 171 per cent, with six of 14 foods or household necessities above the 132 per cent mark!

Well, What Do You Like, Mr. Grace?

New York, June 3—Some fast mental foot work in the steel industry, which is plenty jittery over the wage demands of the CIO United Steelworkers, marked the meeting of the American Iron & Steel Institute here this week.

The man who did an intellectual Benny Leonard was Eugene Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel, who first said he did believe in industry-wide collective bargaining and then the next day denied that he had meant what he said.

Grace was quoted in Friday's N. Y. TIMES, May 26, as saying that he thought collective bargaining with labor should be on an industry-wide basis because the "pooling of brains in many companies would be of service to all in establishing and maintaining sound labor relations."

Apparently the remark didn't follow the line to be taken by the steel companies in their current negotiations, because the next day's TIMES carried a retraction which must have been delivered personally to make the letter column. In the retraction, Grace did a complete about face, saying:

"Though my remarks may have been susceptible of the interpretation given in your paper, it was not my intention to endorse the principle of industry-wide collective bargaining for I do not believe in it."

Sues to Kill Anti-Union License Fee

Macon, Ga., June 3—A $5,000 license fee for the privilege of union organizing imposed by the nearby town of Milledgeville was under court attack this week following the arrest of R. E. Starnes, a representative of the CIO United Steelworkers.

Starnes filed an injunction suit in federal court against Milledgeville officials attacking the enforcement of the law, after appealing a sentence of either 90 days on public works or $150 fine, imposed following his arrest for violation of the unusual law.

Starnes, who has been organizing workers at the Reynolds Corp. naval ordnance plant, said that the ordinance was enacted after his arrival in Milledgeville solely for the purpose of attempting to halt the union.

Runaway Prices Are Real Threat!

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

If there is one thing the women of this country are really sore about it is the price increases and quality decreases which feature our wartime textiles and clothes.

Our CIO cost of living study shows that clothing costs have gone up 72% since January, 1941. We regard that as a conservative figure. Off hand, we would have said that they had doubled in the past two years. Everything we buy today is not only much more expensive to begin with, but wears out in about half the old time.

And there's so much waste. All of us have had the experience of buying a shirt, a house dress, pants for the children or something else and finding that after one washing it had shrunk so much it wouldn't fit.

Every housewife will tell you, clothes is the weakest point in our whole price-control structure. It's the place where there is the worst cheating, the most shameless chiseling on quality, the most outrageous gouging of the public.

And in spite of all this, the Senate Banking and Currency Committee has adopted the Bankhead amendment to the Price-Control Act which would mean at least an 20% increase in clothing costs.

Low-Cost Items to Zoom

Low-cost items would increase much more than that because of the nature of he formula. Under the Bankhead amendment the price on each textile construction (denim, chambray or any other fabric) would have to be set at a point that would cover total cost of production of 90% of the industry plus a reasonable profit.

LOW-COST ITEMS TO ZOOM

Before the war many firms sold low-cost fabrics at a price which did not cover total costs. They let their more expensive fabrics pay for the overhead. The result of the Bankhead amendment, therefore, would be big increases in low cost items like work shirts, overalls, housedresses, etc.

OPA has been setting ceilings at a point where 60 to 70% of the industry could make a fair profit. Even those ceilings have given low cost producers staggering profits. Imagine what would happen if the price should now be raised to meet the costs of 90% of the industry. The big textile manufacturers will simply coin money. The consumer will take it in the neck.

And not just on clothes either. If the textile lobby gets the price increase which the Bankhead amendment would guarantee think what pressure the milk interests will bring for an amendment to increase their price, and the oil interests. The door to inflation will be wide open.

Maybe we've been a little too sure about the price control fight. We've seen so clearly ourselves the consequences of a breakdown in control that we've found it hard to believe the act was really threatened.

The approval of the Bankhead amendment by a 12 to 8 vote in the Senate Committee should bring home to us how immediate the danger is. There's still time to save price control, but it's going to take an intensified campaign right now.

We have a wonderful weapon in the universal indignation of American women about the cost and quality of clothing. Let's show them that the first concrete step they must take to get clothing prices under control is to urge their Senators and Congressmen to defeat the Bankhead amendment to the price control act and all other weakening amendments.

Let's urge them to call up their governors, their mayors, and other public officials and ask them to put pressure on Congress to save price control.

CIO Appeals To Votes Of Women

Oakland, Calif. — Women voters will receive special attention in future political campaigns according to the report of the CIO Political Action Committee now in session here.

Mrs. Claudia Williams, Political Action director who presented the report, urged "that special appeals be made to women voters, in view of the fact that for the first time women now outnumber men as registered voters in California."

"Our chances of winning in the final elections will be enhanced," Mrs. Williams said, "if the importance of women in the political scene is properly understood. Special methods would be valuable in explaining the issues which closely concern them, to insure their increased political activity in proportion to their numbers.

"Women members and leaders of the CIO played important roles in the recent campaign in practically every district. This undoubtedly helped in securing the interest and support of women voters."

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

As reported in my column in the May 29 issue of The CIO NEWS, the CIO Farm Equipment Workers won the election at the Allis-Chalmers plant in Springfield, Illinois, by a vote of 1124 to 777 for District 50. This is the plant where District 50 interferred and brought about a strike. They protested the extension of the contract to the WLB affecting other plants of this company and petitioned for the first strike vote under the Smith-Connally anti-labor law, which was carried by a small majority. This NLRB election victory is the answer. Credit is due to the efforts of FEW Rep. Forrest Emerson, CIO Field Rep. John Hindmarsh. Congratulations to all participating in this victory.

Asst. CIO Reg. Dir. Carey Haigler, Alabama, reports: Massey Concrete Products Co., Birmingham plant: USA-CIO, 18, no union 1. Dir. R. E. Farr of Dist. 36 stated that Field Reps. W. J. Shewmake and A. F. Walker were responsible for the results.

Additional USA-CIO victories reported: Williamson Heater Co., Cincinnati, Ohio: CIO 305, against 242. This culminates a seven-year struggle, according to Dist. Dir. Al Whitehouse.

Wm. Donovan, Dist. Dir., Cleveland, reports a 6-1 majority at a Labor Board election for office workers at the American Works of American Steel & Wire Co.

Thomas Barrett, UGCCWA Rep., advises the runoff election at Bird Gas Co., Detroit, Mich., resulted in 57.14% for CIO to 42.85% for AFL.

Hit NLRB Policy Plan

Oakland, Calif. — The Executive Board of the California CIO Council today adopted a sharp denunciation of proposed changes in National Labor Relations Board policy which would permit employers to challenge union majorities each time an agreement expired.

Blasting the charge as one which would create "havoc and chaos in war industries," and "tremendous new and difficult problems for labor in the maintenance of its no-strike pledge," the CIO statement demanded Congressional action to prevent its realization.

British Govt. Workers Vote to Join Trade Union Congress

LONDON, June 3, (ALN)—A resolution to affiliate to the Trades Union Congress as soon as it becomes legal to do so was passed by the Civil Service Clerical Association conference here this week.

The vote followed the disclosure by L. C. White, CSCA secretary, that he received a letter from Prime Minister Churchill's secretary stating that as soon as the immediate strain is eased, the government will give careful consideration to the CSCA's demand for amendment of the 1927 Trades Disputes Act, which prohibits unions of government employes from affiliating with the TUC. The CSCA, along with other unions of federal workers, has long fought for the amendment of the act.

All forms of racial persecution were condemned in another conference resolution, which criticized especially the outbursts of anti-Semitism in the Polish army in London and demanded that any Polish Jewish soldiers who wished should be allowed to transfer to the British armed forces, as their 200 colleagues were recently permitted to do.

Immediate withdrawal of the new anti-strike legislation decreed by the British government was demanded in a unanimous resolution. Moving the resolution, White declared: "This regulation is designed neither to help the state nor to assist the war effort, but to protect those people who are pillars of reaction within the trade union movement and whose position is being challenged by a movement underneath."

A resolution urging equal pay for women in the civil service was endorsed, after W. J. Brown, Independent M. P., told the conference that the recent appointment of a Royal Commission to study the problem was a means of "sidetracking the issue." The conference also demanded democratization of the civil service, a minimum living wage, a five-day week and implementation of the Beveridge, Barlow, Scott and Uthwatt reports.

Italian Partisans Hit Nazis

London, June 3 (ALN)—The Germans have been forced to divert six of their 25 divisions in Italy to quell the resistance of Italian partisans and workers in the north, the Allied High Command announced in Naples this week. In cooperation with Marshal Tito's Yugoslav partisans in the east, Italian patriots have cut the main Nazi rail communications near Verona, while in the west, together with French guerrillas, they have seized control of the Little St. Bernard Pass leading from Italy to France.

Indicative of the support the Allied armies in Italy are receiving from the partisans is the fact that a joint Italian-Allied command, under Gen. Sir Harold Alexander and the Badoglio high command, has been established in Naples to coordinate partisan activities. The joint command has divided all German-occupied Italy into six zones in order that "the population will be able to receive instructions by means of radio."

Communiques issued by the joint command this week stated that the Italian resistance movement "is particularly strong" in Milan, Florence and Sienna, that guerrillas control "a vast area" of the Biella region, and that in the Bergamo region" the patriots have formed detachments of 100 men and are carrying out continuous attacks on German military posts."

In Genoa, one communique said, "five German soldiers were killed by a hand grenade thrown during a motion-picture show for members of the Luftwaffe." The killing of an Italian woman by puppet-Italian police in Rome led to a general strike of Aniene chemical workers, Mastai tobacco workers and municipal employes.

Eisenhower Thanks ACW For Support

New York, June 3 — General Dwight D. Eisenhower, in a message from England received last week by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, acknowledged the pledge of the union and its 325,000 members to produce and supply the general's needs for the invasion of the European continent without interruption.

The message from Gen. Eisenhower was contained in a letter from Major Gen. A. D. Surles, director of the War Dept.'s Bureau of Public Relations, to Sidney Hillman, Amalgamated president.

"On behalf of the men and women in my command," stated Gen. Eisenhower's message, "I thank your convention for its encouraging message of confidence. I thank you too for the pledge to continue to produce and supply our needs without interruption. This is the spirit which is needed to bring victory."

The General's statement was in reply to a cable sent him during the recent convention of the Amalgamated in Chicago.

Scholarship Honors UE Local

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 3—A four-year scholarship award has been presented to Westinghouse Local 601 of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers by State Senator Walker, in recognition of the local's sincere efforts for a win-the-war program and outstanding leadership.

The scholarship is to be awarded to a member of Local 601 or to a close relative of a member....to either the University of Pittsburgh or Penn State, the local announced here this week.

Available only to those living in the 44th Senatorial District, applicants must be graduates of schools in that district.

FEPC Vital To War, Murray Tells Senate

WASHINGTON, June 3—Cutting off the Fair Employment Practice Committee "could imperil our armed forces at their hour of greatest exertion," CIO Pres. Philip Murray said in an urgent message to the Senate this week.

Murray's plea for continuing the FEPC came as the Senate Appropriations Committee was taking up the House-passed $500,000 fund for the anti-discrimination agency. Polltax Senators have been lying in wait for the agency since the appropriation came up and was passed by a narrow four-vote margin in the House.

As a further step to continuing the fight against Jim Crow and other job-bias, CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey testified before the House Labor Committee this week on a series of bills to make FEPC permanent.

"The FEPC, operating as it has done since its inception, has been of the greatest assistance to the nation in achieving the production records that have made our military successes possible, and in arming us for the imminent invasion of Axis territories," Murray wrote to the Senators.

CIO's main concern, he added, is for top production for "the speediest possible victory," and is an added reason why CIO is so strongly opposed to all forms of discrimination.

Following Murray's letter to the Senate, Carey told the House Labor Committee in urging a permanent FEPC:

"The CIO felt when it originally demanded the present FEPC that America could not afford to fail to utilize all the skills and strength of every American worker to shorten the bloody and destructive war.

"The FEPC is a war agency. What fair-minded person, after an objective examination of the record this agency has compiled, will deny that it has been of inestimable value to the war effort?"

After the war is won, he pointed out, we will need a permanent agency such as FEPC to see "that job discrimination will not continue in the postwar period."

Folk School Teaches Union Recreation Plans

Monteagle, Tenn., June 3—Students representing CIO local in six southern states learned how to organize recreation programs for their own unions at the CIO session held at Highlander Folk School during May,

They took part and received instruction in teaching games and dancing in their own locals when they returned to their various states. Dr. Lois Fahs Timmins of the Highlander school staff was director of recreation during the CIO session.

35c a Week 'Profit' For War Jobs!

Washington, June 3—War workers' income leaves the average worker's family with the grand total of 35c a week clear profit after living costs, taxes and war bonds are paid for, the CIO Economic Outlook says in its current issue released today.

At the same time, manufacturers are making profits averaging $1,000 a year per employe, while top executives pull down the neat average sum of $84,000 per annum.

And at that, the war workers' surplus of 35 cents a week is due to the fact that he (or she) is working long hours of overtime, is earning special incentive pay, or is able sometimes to shift to higher paid industries.

LOW WAGES

"Victory will end special wartime conditions that have permitted average earnings to rise more than wage rates," the Outlook points out, "and thus, even with full, year-round employment, factory workers can expect to average not more than $1,600 a year if wages are not raised before peace comes."

This $1,600 a year is only half the amount the Heller Committee budget sets as "a health and decency standard generally accepted by the local community." Even worse, it is $100 a year short of the WPA maintenance budget as priced by the Bureau of Labor Satsistics study of June 1943 " 'which does not approach the content of what may be considered a satisfactory American standard of living.' "

Organized labor, the Outlook concludes, "is fully justified in its charges that it is being treated unfairly. Wage rates must be increased without further delay unless American wage earners are to have lower purchasing power after the war than before."

Sign Johnson & Johnson Pact

Newark, N. J., June 3—Johnson & Johnson, one of America's leading manufacturers of surgical gauze and similar products, has signed a one-year contract with the CIO Textile Workers Union, TWU Regional Director Sol Stetin announced here this week. Some 2100 workers in plants at New Brunswick, North Brunswick and Milltown, N. J., are covered by the agreement.

Terms include ten per cent pay increase; premium pay for late shift workers, improved paid vacation schedule, seniority rights, maintenance of membership and check-off of dues.

the experience. We've got the will. But we ain't got the work."

Outside the plants, workers carried picket signs, which said:

"Is this postwar conversion?"

"Hard work pays poor dividends at Brewster."

"D-Day is dismissal day at Brewster."

The demonstration, and a joint telegram by Pres. Murray and Frankensteen to Senators Wagner, Mead and Kilgore, and wires to President Roosevelt and Sec. of the Navy Forrestal, brought immediate action.

The Murray-Frankensteen wire said:

LEGISLATION FLOUTED

"Unless the Congress of the United States is presumed by the Navy Dept. to be acting outside of its scope in creating other government agencies to cope with just such problems, the action of the Navy must be construed as deliberately flouting the enacted legislation of that body.

"Neither Defense Plant Corp. nor F. H. A. were notified, thus ignoring an investment in which millions of dollars of U. S. taxpayers' money is invested.

"Because of the difficulty in again assembling an industrial unit, the UAW with the full concurrence of the CIO has asked the workers to cooperate with the management to the extent of standing by for work without wages until the management can ascertain if other work can be obtained.

"In the meantime it is respectfully requested that the Secretary examine the political background of the Navy's action. Those in your Department initiating the action could not have been blind to the fact that terminations of contracts are of the greatest political significance in this election year particularly when it is demonstrated that the Dept. has not planned for or exhibited any consideration of the people thus thrust out of work.

"It would be most reassuring to be informed that the Navy's action was not precipitated by Navy Dept. people unfriendly to the President of the United States and to Senator Robert Wagner of N. Y. Such a back door entrance into national politics, we feel sure, you would deplore in any Department serving under our president."

Meanwhile, Frankensteen, in testimony before the Senate Military Affairs War Contracts Subcommittee, said:

NO NOTICE TO UAW

"This action was taken by the Navy Dept. or rather by the Bureau of Aeronautics within the Navy Dept. without notice to the union, without advance notice to the company, without consultation with the War Manpower Commission in the interest of minimizing employment dislocations, without consultation with WPB or with the War Dept. concerning other uses of the plant and of its trained labor, and finally, without even adequate consultation with other parts of the Navy Dept.

"In short, this is a prime example of the anarchy in procurement programs which labor has warned against since 1941. An anarchy which has been compensated for during the war by imminent national danger, will overwhelm us in the transition to peace when integrated planning is necessary to meet even more imposing problems of coordination.

Frankensteen said that the UAW-CIO is not advocating that planes be produced if they are not needed but is advocating that the cutback in their production be made, after full consideration and consultation, so as to help rather than hinder war production.

FIRE-BRIGADE ACTION

Pointing out that the entire manpower program has been handled on "a fire-brigade basis," Frankensteen declared that failure to plan adequately for demobilization will harm the war effort.

"Workers in danger of working themselves out of jobs will not produce as efficiently, or certainly, as workers with a reasonable degree of economic security," he said.

Calling for the adoption of S. 1893 the Kilgore bill to provide for orderly procedure in handling manpower demobilization problems, Frankensteen explained how the Brewster situation would have been handled if the bill now were law.

"The stategic decision to cut back production of Corsairs would have been made as now by the military authorities," he testified. "But then instead of an arbitrary decision by a single Bureau, the incidence of the cutback would have been agreed upon by a central agency which would have taken into consideration the overall needs of the war program, the importance of maintaining employment and the possibilities of scheduled resumption of production for civilian use or for export.

JOB COMPENSATION

"If it proved to be impossible to use all the workers in the plant where it was decided that the cutback could most advantageously be made, a program would have been immediately available for transferring them to other plants in the locality or in the industry.

"In the event that some delay was inevitable in getting the workers into new jobs, there would have been an adequate system of unemployment compensation to tide them over."

Meanwhile, at a mass meeting called by the union in New York City, and supported by the City CIO Council, Senator James E. Murray (D., Mont.) called for immediate Congressional action to forestall any future abrupt cancellation of war contracts.

HEARING SLATED

Murray, who heads the War Contracts committee before which Frankensteen and Brewster officials testified, announced that he will call officials of the aircraft industry and of the UAW to testify on needs of a reconversion program.

Weaker Frey Rider Pushed Through House; Bill Still Bad

WASHINGTON, June 3—An altered version of the Frey rider went through the House this week and now heads for the Senate before it is finally fastened onto the Wagner Act and the NLRB that administers it.

Under the House version of the rider, company union contracts as defined by Sec. 8 (2) of the Wagner Act are excluded from its protection. Previously, all contracts, no matter how collusive, were protected from Labor Board investigation.

The present "compromise" still protects AFL-company union tie-ups as in the Basic Magnesium case, where the AFL came in, took over a company union, chartered it, and immediately signed a contract with the company that froze the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers out of the picture.

The "compromise" between the extreme form of the Frey rider as it oprated last year and the present House version was worked out by NLRB Member Gerard Reilly, who has been denounced by Pres. Murray and CIO for other attempts to wreck the Wagner Act.

All CIO members should rush wires to their Senators protesting against the House form or any other form of the Frey rider or any kind of rider on the NLRB appropriation.

One-Woman Drive Registers 1,200

Atlanta, Ga., June 3.—Mrs. Annie Maude Creel's registration drive has amazed veteran local politicos.

In less than two months, she induced 1,200 people to pay their poll tax and register. Only five women aided her.

Mrs. Creel's fame has spread around the court houses. When her registrants appeared to pay their poll tax, they all stated: "Mrs. Creel urged us to come."

The 1,200 new voters include more than 100 from Local 108, CIO Packinghouse Workers of America and members of locals of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

Mrs. Creel represents the Amalgamated on the local CIO Political Action Committee.

kie, though never large in volume, came in up to the time of the Wisconsin primaries. After he announced his withdrawal, votes for him practically ceased.

The poll showed that none of the "possibilities" besides the President and Dewey got much consideration from the union members. The vote for MacArthur (who has since announced he would not accept the Republican nomination) was 5.08 per cent of the total. Willkie's total was 3.49 per cent and the others were as follows:

Byrnes, .51 per cent; Bricker, .86; personal choices, written in, 1.32. The last groups included scattered votes for Henry A. Wallace, Norman Thomas, Harold E. Stassen, Senator Byrd, James A. Farley, Senator Barkley, Eric Johnston, D. Lane Powers and Cordell Hull.

CIO Swamps AFL in Big Shipyard Vote

By SAM KRAMER

PORTLAND, Me., June 10—An avalanche of 11,191 votes snowed under the hopes of the AFL Metal Trades Council for a jurisdictional raid against Local 50 of the CIO Marine and Shipbuilding Workers at the New England Shipbuilding Corp. yards here this week.

The vote gave a clear majority of 4,740 to the IUMSWA-CIO in a National Labor Relations Board election held to determine the bargaining agency for the 23,000 workers at this yard. Score was: CIO 11,191; AFL 6,451; no union 290.

The IUMSWA-CIO victory was due to the activity and unity of 400 shop stewards and committeemen who united behind them a determined rank and file to triumph over a horde of AFL organizers who descended upon this city in their campaign to blackjack the workers into supporting the craft union's jurisdictional raid.

Last week's election was the second defeat of the AFL by the IUMSWA-CIO here. In 1943, the Todd-Bath Iron Shipyard, which was under a union shop contract with Local 50, and the South Portland Shipbuilding Corp. which was under a similar contract with the AFL, were combined to form the present shipyard. The IUMSWA-CIO was designated bargaining agency in an NLRB election.

Waive Union Fees For Servicemen

Philadelphia, June 10—Waiver of union initiation and permit fees for honorably discharged veterans, as well as cumulative seniority and preferential hiring on new jobs, became the official policy today of the CIO Cannery and Agricultural Workers of this week.

The policy was set by the Executive Board, which also ruled that honorably discharged veterans returning to their former jobs within nine months after discharge shall be entitled to straight cumulative plant seniority accruing during their period of service.

In case of new hirings, veterans are to be employed first, with preference given to length of service; in case of re-calls, employes with seniority are to be employed first, and then veterans.

When layoffs occur, new employes who are honorably discharged veterans shall be entitled to their regular plant seniority, plus their length of service under the Selective Service Act.

Arizona Labor Asks 4th Term

Phoenix, Ariz., June 10—The Arizona Labor Victory Committee wound up its two-day spring convention in the state house here by voting unanimously to draft Roosevelt for a fourth term and to support pro-labor Gov. Sidney P. Osborn for reelection.

Attending the convention were 51 delegates from AFL, 14 from CIO, 42 from Railroad Brotherhoods and representatives of the Intl. Typographical Union and union auxiliaries.

STENO QUEEN FOR '44: Picked by servicemen at the Steno Canteen run by Local 16, United Office & Professional Workers, was Miss Gertrude Pearcy, Federal Reserve Bank employe, in New York City.

WASHINGTON, June 6—The world-shaking struggle for the liberation of Europe has CIO's complete support, Pres. Philip Murray declared this week in a D-Day letter to President Roosevelt. The letter contained a stern warning to CIO members stressing the importance of keeping labor's no-strike pledge 100 per cent.

"No violation of our no-strike pledge can be tolerated by the consciences of our members," Murray wrote, "and I call upon every one of them to let not one minute be lost, for any reason, that might be used to keep the stream of supplies and weapons flowing without interruption to every far-flung battlefront until our final victory is assured."

The complete text of the letter follows:

"On behalf of the six million members of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, both on the home front and in our fighting forces, I am addressing you as our nation's Commander-in-Chief on this first day of the great invasion for the liberation of Europe.

GREATEST TASK IN HISTORY

"Like all other true Americans, we consider this a day of solemn and prayerful dedication to the greatest task which history has assigned to the American people and our brave allies. Words are weak things indeed to express our loyalty and devotion to the fighting men who are today hurling themselves against Hitler's Fortress Europe.

"I need say nothing on behalf of our members, our sons and our brothers who are risking their lives in this supreme venture. They will do their duty as bravely and as gallantly as all our other fighting men, and America can never measure or repay the debt of gratitude it owes to them.

"But I know I voice what is in the hearts of every CIO member laboring on the home front, when I say that never by thought, word or action will we be untrue to our fighting men and to the great goal of our victory effort.

"No violation of our no-strike pledge can be tolerated by the consciences of our members, and I call upon every one of them to let not one minute be lost, for any reason, that might be used to keep the stream of supplies and weapons flowing without interruption to every far-flung battlefront until our final victory is assured.

"To you, as Commander-in-Chief, as well as to our fighting forces, we pledge our complete loyalty in any steps or any sacrifices that may be necessary to speed the day of the total defeat of the Axis enemies of mankind."

Aluminum Union Votes Affiliation With Steelworkers

By RAY PASNICK

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., June 10—Delegates to the fifth biennial convention of the Aluminum Workers of America meeting here this week voted unanimously at the opening session Monday to merge with the CIO United Steelworkers of America.

The amalgamation was previously approved at the convention of the USA-CIO held in Cleveland in May, and the merger will take place as soon as the action is okayed by the National CIO. After amalgamation the new union will be called the United Steel and Aluminum Workers of America.

Pres. N. A. Zonarich who presided at the AWA convention, received congratulations from Secy-Treas. David J. MacDonald of the Steelworkers who later addressed the delegates. The convention passed a resolution thanking Smoile Chatak, USA-CIO representative, who together with Pres. Zonarich, was instrumental in bringing about the merger.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray sent a message to the convention congratulating the union.

One of the first actions taken at the convention was a vote to send telegrams to Pres. Roosevelt, the Secretaries of War and Navy, and Gen. Eisenhower, pledging full support and continued increased production for the liberation of Europe.

Col. Innis D. Harris, deputy supervisor of the Mid-Western District, AAF Material Command, discussed the invasion on Tuesday. He praised the war production efforts of the CIO Aluminum Workers and urged continued support.

Publish New GI Manual

New York, June 10—A new CIO Servicemen's Manual, even more useful than the original highly popular edition, will be issued probably within a month by the Natl. CIO War Relief Committee, it was announced this week by Edward M. Maisel, director of the Committee's Servicemen's and Veterans' Division.

The new booklet, which may be obtained free by servicemen and women or their families, will be entirely new, with features that will appeal not only to those about to be inducted but to those who have already served in the armed forces.

Among features, according to Maisel, will be voting rules, armed forces pay scales, dependency allowance information and other useful facts.

Those wishing to obtain the booklet should write to the Servicemen's Division, CIO War Relief Committee, 1776 Broadway, New York 19, N. Y. Servicemen should give their name, rank, serial number, outfit, city or camp, state or ship or APO number.

Blasts 25% Limit On Income Tax As Fascist Brainstorm

WASHINGTON, June 10—The attempt to pass a constitutional amendment holding income taxes down to 25% of income is the work "of a fascist group" and will "destroy this government" if it succeeds, Rep. Wright Patman (D., Tex.) charged recently in the House.

The amendment, which has already been endorsed by the legislatures of some 14 states, is being pushed by Frank E. Gannett, wealthy Republican newspaper chain owner, through his "Committee for Constitutional Government, Inc."

This committee, repeatedly exposed as anti-labor and charged with fascist links by Patman, has as its chairman Samuel Pettengill, a former Republican Representative and once treasurer of the Natl. Republican Committee.

"Their activities have the brands and earmarks of fascism," Patman charged in the House.

"They want to turn the country over to the rich. If this amendment were to become law, in a few years a few families would own the entire wealth of this nation. Is that not fascism? Certainly it is a justified charge."

Wealthy people desiring to evade taxes and to fasten the cost of the war on the workers, the farmers and the returning servicemen give big money to Gannett's committee, figuring it as a good investment that will save them millions if it is successful, Patman added.

Every candidate for Congress should be asked how he stands on this conspiracy, Patman said. The whole plot, he added, is one to "exempt the wealthy few from adequate taxation and make impossible the payment of benefits to veterans, their dependents, farmers, the aged and other recipients of social security assistance and, in addition, to almost immediately crush small business."

The thing is "a legislative boobytrap," Patman said, that is being laid in every state legislature in the land. Following a sufficient number of state endorsements, its backers plan to rush the proposed amendment through Congress and then to ratify it in the required 36 states.

HISTORICAL NOTE

Committee Reports On Anti-Labor Drive

WASHINGTON, June 10—An organized drive by powerful employers' associations in California hostile to collective bargaining, as revealed by an investigation made before the war by the Senate Subcommittee on Education and Labor, is told in a report filed in the Senate this week by the two members of the Committee — Sen. Robert M. LaFollette Jr. of Wisconsin and Sen. Elbert D. Thomas of Utah.

Entitled "The Origin and Promotion of Recent Legislation in California Limiting Labor's Civil Rights", the report is the ninth in a series based upon the Committee's pre-war investigation of violations of civil liberties in that state.

Conclusions of the Inquiry have profound implications for the nation as a whole, the report points out. Although the Committee has not been able to inquire into the origin and sponsorship of recent attempts to enact legislation restricting labor's rights, the report notes a similarity with findings in the California investigation.

"Their similarity suggests widespread organized anti-union employer activity of the California variety," the report states.

Describing a statewide campaign launched in 1938 to enact anti-labor legislation, the report declares:

"A gigantic and coordinated political campaign, the movement to bring about a State-wide anti-picketing ordinance, called into play all of the combined influence and energies, as well as the financial support of all the principal employer groups within the state."

One of the characteristics of the campaign, the report points out, was the use of "front" or so-called "third party" organizations, ostensibly representing the public interest and used by the employers' associations to propagandize the public.

FDR Quotes In New Book

The book is designed to be consulted and read by anyone interested in Roosevelt's stand on specific subjects and is arranged with factual and historical references and summaries.

Work Like This Helps Win in Nov.!

Duluth, Minn., June 10—Just how important mass political action is for the 1944 presidential election was demonstrated here this week by the CIO United Steelworkers.

Faced with management opposition to registration of employes on the property of the Zenith Dredge & Shipbuilding Co., USA-CIO members voted to take time off from work and go en masse to the city registration office.

According to Earl Bester, political action director for USA-CIO Dist. 33, practically every worker in the plant is now a registered voter. A survey showed that previously only 43 percent were registered.

The workers took time off without pay, assembling at Duluth's city hall in what was described as the greatest mass registration demonstration the city has seen.

The entire movie industry was also cited "for an outstanding job of dramatizing the war and its issues for the public."

Commanders Gene Tunney and Jack Dempsey were named as the "two champions who voluntarily donned uniform to aid their country in winning the toughest fight of them all," and Walter Winchell was hailed as "the journalist who made the Fifth Column respect the Fourth Estate."

Name Weirton Organizers

Pittsburgh, June 10—Appointment of a new director and assistant director to complete organization of the Weirton Steel Company mills in Weirton, W. Va., and Steubenville, Ohio, was announced this week by Pres. Philip Murray of the CIO United Steelworkers.

Robert J. Davidson, CIO regional director in Cincinnati, will direct the campaign, and Lorne H. Nelles, of the Philadelphia district staff of the USA-CIO, will be assistant director. Both men were steel workers before becoming staff representatives.

Hillman to Press

Jobs, Full Production, Intl. Unity CIO's Main Goals

WASHINGTON, June 10—Jobs for all, full production and world unity after the victory are the main aims of CIO Political Action, PAC Chairman Sidney Hillman said at a newspaper interview here today.

"All candidates for public office must say where they stand on these objectives," Hillman said. "They must make clear whether or not they're still dominated by the philosophy of Hoover-ism that produced 15 million unemployed in '32 and made sweatshops out of most American factories."

Hillman said that Thomas E. Dewey, who is "working night and day" for the Republican nomination "has no program" on these or other issues. "All he has is plain ignorance on these problems that face the nation," Hillman declared.

Replying to a daily newspaper reporter's question to the effect that CIO Political Action has "prejudged" Dewey, Hillman answered: "Yes, we've judged Dewey—on his record and on his lack of record."

Hillman said that PAC is perfectly willing to undergo any amount of investigating by proper authorities, and has already written Sen. Theodore Green (D., R.I.), chairman of the Senate Committee on Elections, to that effect.

PAC has cooperated with the FBI and the Dept. of Justice in earlier investigations, but has refused to work with such smear outfits as the un-American Dies Committee — whose chairman, Rep. Martin Dies (polltaxer, Tex.) recently lost his nerve and refused to run again for Congress.

Discussing the June 16 PAC conference to be held here, Hillman said that it would draw up a platform for campaign activity and would be attended by members of the CIO Executive Board, headed by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, by CIO state council presidents, and by officials and field workers of PAC.

Attacks on PAC both in Congress and in the newspapers didn't begin until the primary returns began coming in, Hillman pointed out. "The results in Florida, Texas, Alabama, Oregon, California and other states have startled some of our smug politicians, to put it mildly," he said.

Aroused electorates soundly trounced men who hadn't properly represented them either through sheer incompetence or gross lack of social vision. The contest is clearly joined. PAC wants the biggest vote in history in this momentous year in our history. Its opponents want the smallest vote."

Hillman vigorously denied newspaper reports that the CIO and PAC had prepared a "purge list" of Congressmen and Senators it intended to defeat. No such list exists or ever did exist, except in the imaginations of people opposed to labor's taking part in politics, he declared.

Memo to Dies—Every Cent Accounted For!

NEW YORK, June 10—CIO's Political Action Committee has spent $189,112.12 to date of a total fund collected from CIO unions of $669,764.11, PAC Chairman Sidney Hillman revealed this week in a detailed report on PAC finances.

Of this, salaries and travel of the 48 PAC national office staff and 49 regional workers took $99,398.61, publicity $19,064.83, and office equipment, etc., $43,788.63.

Hitting out at hysterical screams in the newspapers and in Congress about the way PAC has used its supposed "slush fund," Hillman said:

"The activities of the PAC have recently become the center of wide-spread interest and comment throughout the nation.

"It has been charged in some quarters that the Committee is engaged in a gigantic conspiracy, in violation of the election laws, to buy the nomination or election of its favored candidates through the expenditure of fabulous funds.

"The Committee has nothing to hide from the American public. It operates in the light of day. It has openly and repeatedly stated its aims and purposes. It now submits to the public a full accounting of its receipts and expenditures.

"The great asset of the PAC is not the money in its treasury. We could not hope to compete with the gentlemen who have made us the target of their abuse in the expenditure of funds. Dollar for dollar they can and do outmatch us many times over.

"What we have and they lack cannot be measured in money. It cannot be bought or paid for. It is the confidence, the goodwill and the enthusiastic cooperation of millions of Americans who are searching for a program to meet their needs for speedy victory in the war and a peaceful and secure world which will give them the opportunity for useful work, improved living standards and a better life."

PAC Before Senate Group On June 14

Washington, June 10—CIO Political Action will get its day in court here this week when Sidney Hillman, PAC chairman, testifies June 14 before the Senate Elections Committee.

The call to testify followed a letter from Hillman to Sen. Green (D. R. I.) who is chairman of the Committee. In the letter, Hillman said: "Our Committee has repeatedly stated that we would welcome an investigation by any authorized committee of Congress," and asked that the committee call on him at any time.

Hatchet Job Still Price Law Threat

WASHINGTON, June 10—Pausing only briefly to mark the opening of the invasion, the polltaxers and their Republican allies in both Senate and House continued their drive to do a hatchet job on price control through passage of crippling amendments.

In the Senate, the Taft (R. O.) anti-subsidy amendment passed 50 to 22. This is the one that cuts off all food subsidies after June, 1945. The date is significant, since it means that the Republicans are afraid to take the rap for hiking food prices before election, hope to be able to do it after the vote is in.

In doing this, Taft has warned the voters of what will happen if a reactionary Congress is elected, since after June, 1945, subsidies can only be used to hold food prices when specifically authorized by Congress.

Taft underscored the warning when he said in debate: "After all, we are trying to hold prices somewhere near stable levels. I think perhaps we should let them go up five percent a year." This, of course, would be added onto the 43.5 percent cost of living increase since the war began.

In the House, polltaxer Howard Smith (Va.) took a tactical beating when a majority of Congressmen refused to let his special amendments to price control and to War Labor Board policies be considered, after some complicated parliamentary jockeying.

Smith's amendments, issued as a report from his "investigating committee (incidentally, investigating committees have no legal right to write legislation) would have forbidden the WLB to order maintenance of union membership and would have held retroactive WLB pay awards to a limit of three months.

REASON FOR VICTORY

They were knocked out largely because the House Banking Committee did not like the idea of Smith's committee muscling in on its bill. Even so, knocking them out represents a real victory for price control and against the poll-tax-Republican alliance.

As The CIO NEWS went to press, the Bankhead amendment was still being debated in the Senate. This one would take all ceiling off cotton textiles, would raise prices on work clothes, kids' clothes and all cheaper lines—hitting directly at workers and all lower income consumers.

Bankhead announced that his intention was to raise prices of cheaper cottons, lower prices on expensive stuff—the $30 blouses, for example. The Bankhead amendment, it should be remembered, doesn't raise cotton prices to the cotton farmers, just to the manufacturers. It will increase their profits 16 times over pre-war levels.

SENATE THREAT

The Senate has also been working on an amendment by Sen. Weeks (R., Mass.) that gives price control violators an out by forcing the government to prove that the violation was wilful before it can collect damages. This would allow anyone to plead ignorance of the law or no intent to defraud, and opens a wide barn door to violations.

Smith also has some tricks to knock out rent control, by allowing a landlord to plead "peculiar circumstances" in asking for a rent increase. There are millions of rental units in the country; investigating every one of them would be an impossible job.

Another House proposal says OPA regulations mustn't alter "customary business practices," even to enforce price control policy. Under this, landlords can go back to the old practice of extorting "security deposits" from tenants, can sell houses out from under them, etc.

And still another House proposal would allow anyone to challenge the legality of an OPA order on a violation without time limit. It is estimated that a violator could tie up an order against him for as much as 344 days through the courts, provided he has the money to hire enough lawyers.

After the Senate and House bills go through—which will be about two weeks from now—they go to conference in a joint conference committee of the two. It's not too late to wire your Representatives and Senators again to reject all amendments, renew the act as it is.

After all, the way you'll eat and the rent you'll pay and the amount of clothes you'll wear for a long time depend on how the price control act is renewed.

86% Vote For UAW-CIO

Cleveland, O., June 10—An election among 200 employes of the Harris Calorific Co. was won this week by the CIO United Automobile Workers, UAW Regional Director Paul E. Miley reported. Score was 86 per cent for the UAW.

From D-Day To V-Day

The beginning of the great invasion has stirred the whole American people more deeply than any other event in history.

In every heart and every home, there are feelings too deep for adequate expression—love and loyalty for our fighting men facing up to the war's greatest test, patriotism, a sense of one-ness between the home front and the fighting front, between our own country and all the United Nations.

Everyone recognizes that this is the supreme offensive—from west as well as from south and east—to strike down the tyrants who plunged the world in war in their mad drive to enslave all free peoples.

From every war plant come stories of workers asking what they can do to express their emotions in action.

Pres. Philip Murray and other CIO leaders with one voice have given the only possible answer, with their calls for complete national unity behind the Commander-in-Chief and our armed forces; iron-clad observance of labor's no strike pledge; greater and greater productive effort; and enthusiastic performance of every duty that in any way contributes to our victory effort.

"Let not one minute be lost, for any reason, that might be used to keep the stream of supplies and weapons flowing without interruption to every far-flung battlefront until our final victory is assured," Murray said.

Every American must make it his personal responsibility to back the invasion by every means at his disposal. For everyone is a link in the great global chain of this war of all free peoples.

The duty of the soldier of production is as clear as the duty of the soldier in uniform. But as civilians and citizens, CIO members at home have other obligations too which are less apparent and on which they must do double duty in the absence of their service brothers.

They must take the lead in strengthening the whole home front, in the spirit of unbreakable national unity.

They must use their citizenship rights, their voice and their vote to combat every prejudice and discrimination that divides our people; to maintain the price controls that guard us from inflation; to defeat the preachers of disunity and disruption; and to support and elect true representatives of the people's will for united all-out effort for victory.

These are the goals of the CIO's program and policies, industrially, legislatively and politically. They give a practical answer to all who want to know what we here in America can do to speed the transition from D-Day to V-Day.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

D-DAY came, but life went on.

A flyer in the great invasion fleet told of seeing a French peasant so intent on his ploughing that he did not even look up.

But the flyer could not see the Frenchman's thoughts or measure his emotions.

The prayers of a million American mothers were not broadcast. Wives and lovers did not show their hearts to the passers-by.

Before they set forth to drop from the air into the midst of the enemy, paratroopers played poker, passed wise-cracks.

Crossing the British channel on this perilous venture, with their own lives and the future of mankind at stake, the toughest fighting men were seasick—just as tourists have always been on these choppy waters.

In the cockpits of that mighty air fleet, beneath the helmets in those landing barges, behind the gleaming bayonets were Johnny and Jack, the fellow who used to work next to us, our own boys, the neighbor's boys—ordinary folks, these heroes and crusaders.

In the United States, life went on. Congress did not adjourn. The elections were not called off. Stores opened as usual. Factory whistles blew.

Sewell Avery went through his scheduled performance before a Congressional committee—on D-Day. He raved against the unions, against the government, for interfering with his freedom to impose open-shop exploitation.

Most wildcat strikers listened to their unions' appeals, thought of the invasion, and returned to work. But some did not.

★ ★ ★

The world's fate may hang in the balance, but people still get hungry at mealtime. Death strikes, but life goes on for the living.

The closest irritations irk us most. Our rivalries, prejudices and ambitions may be hushed or softened by great events, but it takes more than a bugle blast to make them fade away.

Many whose hearts were stirred by those radio announcements in the early hours of June 6 wondered how things could ever be the same thereafter.

Were they too naive, too emotional?

When millions of fighting men, from west, from south, from east, assail Hitler's bristling fortress with dauntless courage and for a single purpose, is it too much to expect their own home folks to think and feel and act as part of the same crusade?

It is two and a half years since Pearl Harbor. Americans have fought and died at Bataan, Guadalcanal, in North Africa, Italy and on other battlefronts.

The homefront record has not been spotless. Emotions have been stirred only to sag again. There have been relapses to business as usual, disunity as usual.

But American labor has performed miracles of production. Our farmers have fed half the world. Business has pitched in. The American people have met past tests.

Now that the greatest test of all has come, he would be not only a cynic but a fool who would doubt that our people will rise to this test too.

In every war plant in the land, working people are responding to their unions' calls for greater productive effort than ever before.

If here or or there some outlaw strike occurs among a handful, because the meaning of the great invasion is slow in penetrating the blind passion of some immediate irritation or injustice, it will be shortlived.

Pres. Philip Murray spoke from sure knowledge when he said CIO members will "never by thought, word or action be untrue to our fighting men and to the great goal of our victory effort," nor will their consciences "tolerate any violation of our no-strike pledge."

For one Sewell Avery who persists in his private warfare against labor and the government, there are countless other employers who will merge their interests with their country's cause.

If some Congressmen persist in preaching disunity, encouraging inflation and sabotaging the home front, the voters will know how to deal with them at the next elections.

The American people will rally behind the Commander-in-Chief and their fighting forces with greater and greater unity as the war's demands increase.

Is this just wishful thinking? We believe that every American whose heart has leapt the Channel with our armies of liberation will answer "No."

Plans That Spell Inflation

Here's what will happen to you if the amendments now proposed to the price control act go through:

The Bankhead (polltaxer, Ala.) plan on cotton textiles will jack clothing prices up to 20%, cost you as consumers $350,000,000 a year. And it'll be followed by others on other commodities.

The Taft (R., O.) plan to end food subsidies after June 30, 1945 (note, this is well after the election) will raise your food costs on every item you buy at least 10 per cent.

The Smith (polltaxer, Va.) plan to wreck rent control will put you right back in the landlord's not too tender clutches—and your rent bill will go up out of sight.

The Weeks (R. Mass.) plan to let price violators plead innocent of intent to defraud will make enforcement impossible, leaving you at the mercy of every chiseller.

Put them together and they spell inflation for you and an enormously greater tax bill for you, your children and the fighting men who will have won the war to pay now and in the future.

RUSH those extra wires to your Senators and your Representative. Your food, clothing and shelter are at stake.

Labor Honors Infantry

Washington, June 10—The nation prepared this week to honor fighting U. S. Infantrymen on Infantry Day, June 15, as American ground troops slug it out with the Nazis in the battle for the liberation of Europe.

CIO and AFL joined in paying tribute to the Infantry's work as General Lesley J. McNair, commander of Army Ground Forces, pointed out that workers and industry have never failed to provide for infantrymen the weapons they need.

In a statement for CIO, Pres. Philip Murray said:

"I am glad to join with millions of other Americans in paying tribute to our hard-fighting Infantrymen who are doing such a magnificent job in every theater of war."

Back the Invasion—All-Out Production!

Murray Backs Drive to Save Fair Jobs Group

WASHINGTON, June 10—All fairminded citizens "concerned for national unity as liberation reaches Europe are agreed that job discrimination on grounds of race or nationality must end as a matter of justice and of aid to the war," CIO Pres. Philip Murray said this week in a statement on the need for continuing the FEPC.

Murray's statement, one of a series of moves to aid the drive for continuance of the anti-job-bias agency, came as a showdown neared in the Senate, with Sen. Russell (polltaxer, Ga.) leading the fight against it.

The House has passed a $500,000 appropriation for FEPC by a narrow margin in a struggle led by Rep. Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N.Y.) and others. This now goes to the Senate as part of a war agencies appropriation bill (HR 4879).

CIO is also supporting a drive in the House for a bill to make the FEPC a permanent agency. CIO Secretary-Treasurer James B. Carey testified on this before the House Labor Committee last week.

Murray's statement was joined by similar ones from over 100 leaders of labor, churches, civic organizations and the like released by the Natl. Federation for Constitutional Liberties.

Kilgore 'Conversion' Bill Still Hot

WASHINGTON, June 10—Prospects of action on the Kilgore reconversion bill (S 1893) are seen here in a pledge by nine Senators that they would seek early hearings and passages of the labor-backed measure.

The bill, backed by CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhoods, is designed to help demobilized war workers, merchant seamen, returning veterans and others as well as helping industry in the difficult job of reconverting from war to peace production.

It does this by providing for special unemployment benefits, travel allowances for workers moving, training allowances, and the like. The bill also sets up a central government planning board for reconversion, including representatives from labor, industry, agriculture and the public.

An earlier bill backed by Sen. Murray (S 1718) and quickly rushed through the Senate completely fails to help workers or ex-service people, concentrating solely on helping industry. It also lacks the central reconversion planning agency which is another main feature of the Kilgore bill.

Reconversion is not simply a postwar problem. It is going on right now, and there is no reason why it can't be done in an orderly fashion instead of in the chaotic and demoralizing way it has been handled as in the Brewster case.

The Kilgore bill will help make reconversion of industry orderly, and will protect workers and ex-servicemen at the same time. Write your Senators today to work and vote for the Kilgore reconversion bill (S 1893).

CIO Shipyard Congress Race

Portland, Me., June 10—Success of the CIO Political Action Committee in other states has thrown reactionaries in Maine into a small panic according to the CIO Marine & Shipbulding Workers here.

Andrew A. Pettis, president of Local 50 at the New England Shipbuilding Corp. yard in South Portland, is a candidate for the Republican nomination to Congress, opposing the incumbent, Rep. Rob-

Keep Your Eye On Congress

Price control went into its second week of Senate and House debate, with the Congressmen working on amendments which, if passed, will wreck control and completely stymie enforcement. Chief of these are the Bankhead amendment raising prices on work clothes, house dresses, kids' clothes; the Taft amendment knocking out food subsidies, and various blows at rent control.

House action will probably finish this week, the Senate by the end of next week. There's still time to wire against all amendments, for plain renewal.

Prospects of action on the Kilgore reconversion bill (S 1893) are looking up. This bill aids war workers, servicemen as well as industry in the reconversion process. Wire your Senators to support hearings, passage.

FEPC, government agency fighting race discrimination on war jobs, faces a stiff Senate fight this week for funds, already passed by House. Hearings are being held on bills to make FEPC permanent.

Pres. Murray has given full CIO support to a bill backed by the United Federal Workers to raise inadequate U. S. wage scales. Bill is endorsed by Rep. Scanlon (D., Pa.), is House Joint Resolution 198.

Get WLB Wage Break

Philadelphia, Pa., June 10—Benefits for servicemen and their families are likely to result from War Labor Board rules based on interpretations of Selective Service regulations, according to Bert W. Levy, attorney for the Regional WLB in the third district.

Approval of the WLB will not be necessary in order to continue paying employes who enter the Armed Forces all or any part of their former wage or salary, he stated.

As for former employes who are mustered out of the Armed Services, WLB approval is also not necessary in order to pay them all of the increases which they would have received if they had continued on the job.

Slate Talks on Plane Cutback Problem

WASHINGTON, June 10—Threatened with cutbacks that may mean loss of 135,500 jobs by Jan. 1, the aircraft industry management and CIO and AFL unions representing the workers will meet July 10 under Senate Committee auspices to see what can be done to provide an orderly transition of employes to other war production jobs or to convert aircraft factories to production of other needed items.

Hearings on the war and postwar prospects of the industry will be held by the War Contracts Sub-Committee of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, according to Richard T. Frankensteen, head of the CIO United Auto Workers aircraft division.

Immediate cause of the hearings were the dramatic "sit-in" demonstrations last week of 12,500 workers at the Brewster Aeronautical Corp., with plants at Long Island City, N. Y., and Johnsville, Pa.

With both plants operating with skeleton crews totalling less than 2,000 workers, the War and Navy Depts. were pushing an intensive campaign this week to keep them in production, with no definite decision to announce, however.

Meanwhile, 25 delegates from UAW-CIO locals in New York State were scheduled to confer with the N. Y. Congressional delegation regarding cutbacks that have affected aircraft plants there.

Frankensteen pointed out that the cutback issue, which is becoming daily more acute, emphasizes the need to pass the Kilgore Reconversion Bill, so that war workers who are thrown out of work can be guaranteed jobs either in other war industry or in factories that are converting to peacetime production.

Hits Forced Labor Bill

WASHINGTON, June 10—Manpower shortages are due to poor planning, low wages and bad working conditions that cannot be corrected by any kind of forced labor law such as the Brewster-Bailey bill, UAW-CIO Pres. R. J. Thomas told the Senate Military Affairs Committee here this week.

Lumber, ball bearings and foundry work are the three most critically short industries, he pointed out, and all of them suffer from sub-standard wages and working conditions. He criticized the War Labor Board for denying an increase to west coast lumber workers, even though the War Producton Board had seen the need for it and had recommended it.

Passage of the Kilgore reconversion bill (S 1893) which would plan reconversion and help workers and ex-servicemen in the process would also prevent manpower shortages, he pointed out. Lacking this protection, thousands of workers are reluctant to go into an industry where job security is lacking.

Thomas's statement came one day after War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt announced a new policy that sets up a system of "priority referrals" for war jobs and that places all employment in the hands of the U. S. Employment Service.

S-L-A-V-E-R-Y IN ACTION

Monty-Ward Head Bares Anti-Unionism

By FRED d'AVILA

WASHINGTON, June 10—A 69-year-old corporation executive conducting a Spanish-American War style of sniping campaign against organized labor played a minor part on this city's stage this week as American and British troops made their D-Day assault on Fortress Europe.

The name of the executive was Sewell L. Avery—S-L-A-V-E-R-Y to many of his 78,000 employes, who work for wages averaging only 60 cents an hour at the more than 600 branches of Montgomery, Ward & Co., scattered over the Nation. Avery is head of the company.

Variously described during a hearing held by a House investigating committee as "a soap box orator and the worst example of the worst kind of employer in the country," Avery this week reiterated his opposition to signing a contract, which contains a maintenance of membership clause, with the CIO United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes.

His defiant refusal immediately followed a National War Labor Board order this week that the company extend terms of an original contract, containing a maintenance of membership clause, until a new agreement is negotiated.

The hearing, which adjourned this Thursday, was held to determine facts surrounding seizure of Montgomery Ward's Chicago property. The seizure was ordered by President Roosevelt, after Avery's die-hard opposition to unionism had so irritated his employes that a substantial number of them left their jobs to demonstrate against his last-century attitude.

INDUSTRIAL DICTATOR

But the facts of the hearing played second fiddle to the personality sketch the tall, spry, gray-haired industrial dictator gave of himself in testimony before the committee, headed by Rep. Ramspeck (D., Ga.).

Pretending to be in favor of unionism, the 190-pound Avery said that he practically forced soldiers to evict him from his office so that he could dramatize before the Nation the "march of dictatorship" toward the closed shop.

Bitter hatred of the "New Dealers" oozed from every pore as Avery said that he "had to be carried out in the interests of liberty, sir."

Avery's shrewd, deep-set eyes, glinted like an owl's in his ruddy face as he neatly side-stepped cross questioning about his failure to accept policies of labor-employer co-operation in the interest of winning the war.

WOULD WIPE OUT WLB

Loudly maintaining that "this is Montgomery Ward's war, too," Avery nevertheless said that he would be happy if Congress would wipe off the books the one agency that has done most to prevent industrial strife and to maintain full production.

His attitude was expressed in response to the question, "Suppose Congress wiped the War Labor Board off the slate?"

He said of the WLB, "It's the nature of their decisions I object to," and added that "it would be good for the country" if he could fill positions on this government agency.

"ONE-MAN REBELLION"

Described as a "one-man rebellion" against the war power of the federal government, Avery denied that his intransigent attitude might in any way have caused industrial conflict in the Chicago area, despite testimony to the contrary by CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey and Pres. Samuel Wolchok of the Retail & Wholesale Union.

Avery's neat merchant's mind, which has failed so miserably to comprehend the problem of human relations, was much more concerned over the fact, which he testified to, that Ward's suffered a 50 percent cut in mail order business when the public learned of the company's anti-union attitude.

DEFIANCE marked the testimony this week of Sewell Avery, 69-year-old chairman of Montgomery Ward, as he testified before a House Investigating Committee.

Avery's revelation of his anti-union position was supplemented by testimony from Carey and Wolchok, who proved that the company had lied to the investigating committee about the status of union membership.

Concrete evidence that Ward executives had under-stated the membership by more than 50 per cent was introduced by Wolchok, who presented a check for $2,048 made out by the company to the union in payment for 2,048 dues checkoffs of that number of union members.

A notation on the check stub indicated that 2,225 workers were union members as of that date (last December), but that almost 200 of them had either been absent or worked too short hours so that they were not eligible under the checkoff system.

Wolchok said that about 650 other workers paid dues directly to the union, thus proving that the paid up membership at that time was well over 50 per cent of the 4,700 workers who were ruled eligible to vote in the recent NLRB election, which the union won overwhelmingly. The company had maintained that less than 20 per cent of the workers were union members.

Wolchok told the committee that "this hearing is being held because Sewell Avery did not lay his pistol down after Pearl Harbor, but has continued to carry on his private war against labor."

Wolchok testified that Ward's, which last year netted a tidy profit of more than $20,000,000, has been involved in 98 cases before the NLRB, has had 22 serious dispute cases certified to the WLB with five of them going into Federal courts, has fought 218 wage and hour cases and has been declared a violator of OPA regulations to the tune of 434 items in the 1942-43 fall and winter catalog alone.

SEIZURE SEEN

Pointing out that it may be necessary for the Government again to seize Ward property if Avery maintains his opposition to collective bargaining, Wolchok said:

"The attitude of Sewell Avery toward the union and toward the Government has been never to do anything until he has exhausted all the legal means of obstruction, and then to sabotage the law by obeying only the letter of the law and not the spirit."

Wolchok testified that the union has locals solidly organized in nine cities where Ward's has stores, but that the only collective bargaining contract the union has been able to get the management to sign is the one agreed to in Chicago last year, only after the WLB advised management that it should be signed in the interests of peaceful employe relations and speedy prosecution of the war.

CAREY TESTIFIES

Carey, testifying generally about CIO policy, said that the no-strike pledge is still the guiding policy of CIO unions.

Recalling the national meeting of labor, industry and Government which formulated the no-strike no-lockout pledge in the interests of the war effort, Carey said:

"That policy made no exception for Mr. Sewell Avery or for Montgomery, Ward & Co. It was a universal policy. It did not attempt to distinguish between so-called war industries and non-war industries. At no time during the conference was it ever suggested by any representative either of labor or management that such a distinction should be drawn.

"At no time was it suggested by any representative of labor or management that the jurisdiction of the National War Labor Board should be limited to any particular groups of industries."

PRAISES WLB

Carey said that he believes "the Nation owes a debt of gratitude to the WLB" in bringing about the co-operation between labor and management that is necessary to help win the war.

Turning to charges of "racketeering" by Avery, Carey challenged him to name "one single, solitary racketeer" in the CIO, and declared that there are fewer racketeers in labor than in ministerial associations, the Chamber of Commerce or the U. S Congress.

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

The challenge of D-Day is here. I don't suppose there's a woman in this country who didn't wish, when she heard the news of the Allied invasion of France, that she could do more to help speed the Victory.

Of course if you can go to work where women are needed on the job, or if you can join the armed forces to release men for duty at the front now is the time for you to do it. But though most of us can't do anything so spectacular or new, there are a number of important ways we can help. Let's remind ourselves of them again and take a pledge that we will do them as fully as we can, until the day of final victory.

First comes the purchase of war stamps and bonds. The Fifth War Loan Drive opens on June 12 and it's up to each and everyone of us to participate in it. Buy an extra bond as your D-Day contribution during that drive. Urge your friends to do the same. If we can't fight in France we can at least buy the planes and tanks and guns the boys need to beat Hitler.

Second comes blood donations. If there ever was a concrete way to show our devotion to the boys in our armed forces who are gladly risking their lives to liberate the world from fascism, it's through giving blood to the Red Cross blood bank. The next few months will probably see the hardest fighting our troops have faced. There will be plenty of casualties and plasma will be desparately needed. Now is the time to build our blood banks up to meet that need.

SALVAGE IMPORTANT

Third comes salvage. There's a critical shortage of paper to make the cartons bombs are packed in. Here's where every one of us can help. We can use less paper ourselves, and we can save all we get for salvage collections. Fats continue to be needed too, for soaps and medicines, especially. Both are desparately needed by the exhausted people of Hitler dominated Europe. They need clothes, too, and there are many channels through which we can donate any clothes we no longer need to the people of Europe.

Fourth comes food for freedom—with all that that phrase has come to mean—Victory gardens, home canning, avoidance of waste and observance of price ceilings and rationing regulations. All of those things are vital to our victory because they help to insure that there will be food in plenty for our boys in uniform, for our war workers, for the victims of Hitler's starvation and for us at home.

Remember—the world's food supply today is not sufficient to meet all the need for food in full. It's up to us to make that supply stretch as far as possible. Every one of us can help.

Finally there are all the things we can do for our boys in the armed forces and their families at home. Millions of American families are living in suspense these days, glad the invasion has begun, but fearful for their sons and brothers. And so, in addition to sending letters and papers, pictures and gifts to our fighting men we must help their families here at home, give parties for them, draw them in to our activities, help them to keep too busy to worry.

Go over this list. We're all doing these things now, but most of us can do them more and better. It's the very least we can do to back our boys in France.

Rasmussen D. C. Representative For Mine, Mill

Denver, Colo., June 10 — Vice-Pres. Ralph Rasmussen of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers has been appointed director of the Intl. Union's Washington office, Pres. Reid Robinson announced this week.

Rasmussen will act at legislative representative and contact man with federal agencies, will keep locals advised of legislative activities and important measures before Congress, and will handle War Labor Board cases.

Hike Jobless Aid For GI Bill

WASHINGTON, June 10—Progress, though slow and somewhat uncertain, is being made on the "GI Bill of Rights."

The bill (S. 1767), passed by the Senate with CIO support as a simple measure of aid to returning servicemen and women, was watered down in the House by Rep. Rankin (polltaxer, Miss.) who tried to wipe out its unemployment benefits and double the interest on loans to veterans.

It's now in House and Senate conference, where Rep. Kearney (R. N.Y.), one of the House conferees reports that the unemployment benefit duration has been raised from Rankin's figure of only 26 weeks to 40. Duration originally was 56, with benefits for dependents. Rankin cut this in half, wiped out the dependents' allowance.

The conference has also put the interest rate on loans back to three percent. Still unresolved is a trick clause that would penalize a veteran for working in a union shop.

Meantime, three UAW members, one a veteran of the first world war and the others of the present war, have been visiting Congressmen to tell them of the veterans' need for the GI bill as passed by the Senate some weeks back.

The three union vets are Clifford V. Fay of New York, Chris Topel of Toledo, O., and Wendell Hardy of Brookfield, Ill. Hardy holds the Purple Heart and a Presidential citation.

CIO Plugs for U. S. Workers' Pay Hikes

WASHINGTON, June 10—Complete CIO support for wage demands of 3,000,000 Federal workers—more than half of whom get less than $200 a month—was expressed this week by Natl. CIO Legislative Rep. Nathan Cowan, in a letter to Chairman Robert Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Commission.

Cowan's letter urged passage of the Scanlon resolution (H.J.R. 198), which calls for creation of a Federal workers' wage board with power to keep salaries in line with living costs during the war.

Passage of the resolution would mean a 15 percent base pay increase for Federal workers under the Little Steel formula, and more if the War Labor Board should grant the United Steelworkers' request for upward revision of the formula.

Meanwhile, Arthur Stein, recently appointed wage campaign director of the CIO United Federal Workers Union, said that the UFWA has lined up 26 Congressmen out of 35 interviewed in support of the resolution.

Stein pointed out that salaries received by over half of all Federal employes are less than that recommended as a healthy minimum by the recent report of the Senate Education and Labor Committee.

UAW Plea To WLB Urges Action To Halt Strikes

Washington, June 10—The CIO United Auto Workers Union has placed before the public members of the Natl. War Labor Board an urgent demand that the board "measure up to its full responsibility to help eliminate labor resentment which is the cause of many stoppages of work."

Pres. R. J. Thomas of the UAW-CIO said that the union "does not subscribe to the belief that members of our union and labor in general bear any major part of the responsibility for unauthorized work stoppages which have plagued our war industries."

The UAW-CIO was represented at a meeting with the officials by Thomas, Sec.-Treas. George F. Addes, and Vice,President Walter P. Reuther and Richard T. Frankensteen. Attending for the WLB were vice-chairman George W. Taylor, and other public members.

Thomas said that the UAW delegation placed the following considerations before the WLB members.

1. WLB decisions affecting thousands of workers have been delayed—some as long as two years.

2. The WLB has been ineffective in obtaining compliance with decisions of regional boards. Employers who do not like decisions appeal cases to the national board which then, in a leisurely fashion, goes through the entire procedure all over again.

3. The WLB's area wage bracket system is working to tear down wage standards which in many cases it has taken the UAW-CIO ten years to build. Wage rates are being set by regional and national boards which are far below rates in existing UAW-CIO collective agreements.

"Serious as this is now, it has even more critical implications for the post-war period," the UAW-CIO stated. "It will permit the decentralization of work to low-wage areas, to the detriment of the established centers of our industry.

"Even now, thousands of men are losing work at the Ford Rouge plant because the WLB has fixed lower rates for the same work in other areas. More Ford Rouge work is going to other areas all the time. This is an intolerable situation which the union will not accept.

Urges Britain Unite for Labor Govt. Struggle

LONDON, June 10 (ALN)—Stressing the urgency of a united labor movement so that "the basis can be laid for the return of a Labor and progressive government" immediately after the war, Jack Tanner, president of the 900,000-strong Amalgamated Engineering Union, this week reiterated his union's request that the Labor party convene a conference of "all working-class political organizations for the purpose of giving consideration to the question of unity."

Warning that without unity between all progressive elements "there is a great danger that the people will not be able to reap the full fruits of victory over fascism," Tanner urged "the creation of a common front of the people in readiness for a general election."

To Debate Congressman

Detroit, June 10—UAW-CIO Vice President Walter P. Reuther will defend labor's political rights in a radio debate with Congressman Everett M. Dirksen (Rep., Ill.) on Thursday, June 22, at 8:30 p.m. (E. W. T.) over the Blue Network.

The subject of the debate, which will be one of the Town Hall of the Air series, is, "Should Political Activities of Labor Unions be Restricted?"

Hit South African Slave Law System

Capetown, June 10 (ALN)—In a meeting of major significance to South Africa, 540 delegates representing over 600,000 people met in Johannesburg last week to demand abolition of the Pass laws directed against Africa's native population. Three hundred seventy-five trade union, peasant, political, religious, student and tenant organizations were represented.

The Pass laws, designed to police the 8,000,000 natives of Africa's total population of 10,000,000, compel all Africans to carry passes signed by their employers showing that they received permission to leave work and special permission to be on the streets between 9 p.m. and 4 a.m. Natives must also be able to produce a receipt for payment of the head-tax of one pound ($4).

A Union-wide campaign was launched for 1,000,000 signatures on an anti-Pass petition, to be presented to the government in August by a deputation of African leaders. Demonstrations will be held then throughout the country.

Back the Invasion—All-Out Production!

Morrison Field, Fla., June 10—A sharp editorial crackdown on columnists and radio commentators who give the armed forces the impression that all is chaos on the home front featured a recent issue of "Flight," official newspaper of Station 11, Caribbean Wing, U. S. Air Transport Command.

"Flight" cited the facts that organized labor has kept its no-strike pledge nearly 100 percent and that labor and management, cooperating, have turned out a production job that has equipped the armed forces with every weapon they need to combat the enemy.

Declaring that "there is ample proof that the majority of the American people have placed the winning of the war above personal consideration," "Flight" said:

"There are a raucous few among our columnists and radio commentators who would tell the country that management cares only for profit or that labor cares only for wages, and they would tell the members of the armed forces that all is chaos on the home front. Such people serve the enemy.

"Constructive criticism is always in order, but the critics of our war effort should be very sure that they are not exaggerating the exceptional case into a general indictment.

"The key to victory is found in the combination of merchants and farmers, workers and management, civilians and fighting men, recognizing that each has a part to play, that all must cooperate as members of our nation's fighting team."

Annual Wage OK, Says Minister

Columbus, O., June 10—A strong case for a guaranteed annual wage not only on a bread basket basis but psychologically was made last week in a sermon by the Rev. Roy A. Burkhart of the First Community Church.

The Rev. Burkhart said that a guaranteed annual wage is in a real sense "a spiritual thing," pointing out that "men do not live by bread alone, but they cannot live without bread."

"Anxiety and fear not only can bring on bodily sickness, but mental sickness too, and that can result in a break-up of the basic institutions, especially the home," the minister said.

"If a man is sure of a minimum income, then he can give his best not only to his work but to his family. He has possession of that which makes for peace in his heart and peace among his fellows."

The Rev. Burkhart urged that every industry analyze its payroll situation and "for as large a percentage of the total employes as possible arrange for a fixed minimum annual income."

CIO Fights Radio Censorship Plots

WASHINGTON, June 10—Fearful of new restrictions on labor's already limited freedom of the air, the CIO this week took steps for a public airing of radio industry policies that result in censorship and discrimination against union programs.

(1) Reflecting labor disturbance over the discontinuation of "Labor for Victory," the only regular labor radio program over a national network, CIO Pres. Philip Murray requested the National Broadcasting Co. to explain whether this action was due to any new policy affecting labor broadcasts.

(2) Murray urged Chairman Fly of the Federal Communications Commission to grant a full hearing on the petition of the UAW-CIO directed against Station WHKC in Columbus, on account of unfair censorship of the union's broadcast.

The NBC has notified both the CIO and AFL, joint sponsors of the "Labor for Victory" program, that it wishes to suspend the series after June 25.

Writing to NBC Pres. Niles Trammell, Murray expressed the appreciation of the CIO to the company for granting labor the opportunity of a regular weekly broadcast for more than two years. The NBC, he said, "has done more for us in this connection than has any other network or radio company."

FUTURE RESTRICTIONS

But at the same time, the CIO leader expressed his fears that the reasons given for discontinuing the program during this year's election campaign might lead to "still further restrictions on labor's already limited freedom of the air" if they reflected a new policy or a new interpretation of policy.

He asked the NBC to confirm or correct his understanding that the company would regard any labor broadcast during the election campaign as having political implications, and so being subject to the rates and regulations affecting "political broadcasts."

Murray pointed out that the CIO, as an association of unions concerned with advancing its members' economic interests, has frequent occasion to use the radio for broadcasts that in no sense come within the Broadcasters' previous definition of "political broadcasts."

FREE SPEECH BAN

If this definition is to be so enlarged as to include all labor broadcasts during an election campaign, he said, "this added to existing restrictions would effectively deprive labor of all free speech over the air . . . except insofar as a labor organization is able to buy time at the higher political rates for a political campaign speech."

In that event, Murray added, the CIO "must reserve the right to take steps to question whether radio companies which enforce such a policy are being operated in the public interest'."

Murray also requested the NBC to define its policy more clearly in regard to "controversial" programs and the use of actors and dramatizations on such programs, to which objections have been verbally raised.

PETITION FILED

The petition filed with the FCC by the UAW-CIO against renewal of the license of Station WHKC presents a fully documented case of censorship and discrimination "which is not untypical of labor's experience on the air generally."

Although it applies directly to one station only, if a hearing is granted on this case, it will expose policies that are common in the industry and may furnish an effective test of labor's radio rights.

"Though the UAW-CIO bought time over Station WHKC and paid the full rates charged others, we were forbidden to seek new members over the air. We were forbidden to discuss any controversial issue. We were forbidden to discuss race, religion or politics.

"Simultaneously, anti-labor agitators like Fulton Lewis Jr., and Boake Carter were permitted to pour forth their venom daily, immune from the censorship and gag-rules with which WHKC sought to hamstring the UAW, representing 120,000 or more listeners in the WHKC area.

"Station WHKC is not unique in this respect. We view the present petition as a test case, to determine whether only the Fulton Lewis Jrs. and the Boake Carters are to have access to the microphone, or whether radio listeners will also be permitted to hear the progressive views of such community groups as labor unions, farm organizations, cooperatives, veterans' organizations, and others now banned from effective use of radio."

The petition notes that an address by Frankensteen was censored to eliminate references to Republican members of Congress, and that UAW-CIO scripts were censored to exclude:

A statement that the present protection afforded soldiers, sailors, and the merchant marine in returning to their jobs after the war is "inadequate."

A statement that "for no other necessity do you have to pay so much and get so little in return as for housing."

The petition cites, paragraph against paragraph, statements in favor of decent housing for workers etc., which the union was not allowed to broadcast, and statements on the opposite side of exactly the same questions, against federal housing etc., that Fulton Lewis was permitted to broadcast over the same station.

It also notes that WHKC has carried "the venomous talks of Col. Robt. R. McCormick of the Chicago Tribune . . . violating with impunity every one of the restraints on free speech so strictly imposed on the union."

Bury Steel Formula, Is Rieve's Plea

New York, June 10—"The Little Steel Formula is dead and ought to be quickly and decently interred by the Natl. War Labor Board," Pres. Emil Rieve of the CIO Textile Workers Union told a special panel of the Board this week.

The statement was made at the opening of hearings on the union's request for a 65c minimum wage, a general increase of not less than 10c an hour and other concessions from the 17 American Woolen Co. mills now under contract with the TWU.

Labeling the Little Steel formula as "obsolete, unfair and unrealistic," Rieve told the panel that one-third of the 20,000 workers affected by the current cases were receiving substandard wages

Insurance Held Subject To NLRA

Washington, June 10—The Natl. Labor Relations Act applies to the insurance business, the U. S. Supreme Court ruled this week in one of two decisions holding that insurance companies are in interstate commerce.

The NLRA decision, by 8 to 1 vote, applied to the Polish National Alliance of Illinois.

The other decision, which held that insurance companies are subject to the Sherman Anti-Trust Act Law, was by four 4 to 3, with two justices not voting.

In the 4 to 3 case, the majority opinion held that "no commercial enterprise of any kind which conducts its activities across state lines has been held to be wholly beyond the regulatory power of Congress under the commerce clause."

The decision gives Congress the power to regulate insurance rates, thus creating consternation in the industry, which has been able through mild state regulations to charge almost as much as it wishes for protection.

Not Bad!

Labor's D-Day Batting .999!

WASHINGTON, June 17—Approximately 54,998,602 American workers of the estimated U. S. Labor force of 55,000,000 were on the job producing for an early victory following the Allied invasion of Hitler's Europe Fortress! Eat those figures Messrs. Smith, Connally, Vandenburg, Atherton, Avery, McCormick and others who manufacture hate against labor and decency!

D-Day among other things cleared the War Labor Board's docket of unauthorized and "wild cat" strikes, it was reported by the board.

However, there were 2,257 labor dispute cases before the Board and its 12 regional offices. Of these, 1981 were demands for wage increases.

Fire 3,000 For Union Activity

Philadelphia, June 17—More than 3,000 workers employed at the Edward G. Budd Mfg. Co. here have been fired for union activity during the past two months, it was revealed this week.

Budd, the Avery of Philadelphia, is an old hand in the game of fighting unionism through the use of discredited company union outfits.

While discharging thousands, the company continues to advertise for new workers through newspaper and street car "ads".

At the present time, the CIO United Auto Workers Union is conducting a drive to organize the 12,500 production workers and the CIO Office & Professional Workers Union is facing an NLRB election among the company's 1,500 white collar workers.

Recently CIO President Murray told a Senate committee that 2,800 men had been discharged by the company for union activity while the company kept advertising.

Christian-American Assn. Whipped In Louisiana

BATON ROUGE, La., June 17—Anti-labor reaction and intolerance in the South took a drubbing this week when the combined forces of the CIO, AFL, Railroad Brotherhoods and sections of the church marched on the Louisiana legislature to deefat two vicious anti-labor proposals sponsored by the notorious Christian American Association.

One proposal called for the compulsory registration of all union finances and membership with the Louisiana secretary of state, and the other sought to outlaw maintenance of membership as well as closed shop contracts in the state. The first proposal was defeated by 6 to 2 in committee and the latter by 8 to 0.

Led by acting CIO Regional Director Robert W. Starnes, delegations representing the CIO Political Action Committee, United Steelworkers, Sugar Workers, Textile Workers, Fur and Leather Workers, Brewery Workers (unaffiliated) and others, descended on the state capital and made labor's combined protest heard.

Also active in the campaign was Father Jerome A. Drolet, of New Orleans.

Both bills now have been withdrawn and the Christian American boys have sulked back to Texas and Senator W. Lee "Pass the Biscuits, Pappy" O'Daniel.

CIO Man Elected To Legislature

Salt Lake City, Utah, June 17—CIO won a substantial political victory this week with the election to the State Legislature of CIO Regional Director Frank Bonacci.

Bonacci, who was a member of the legislature from 1937 to 1939, found this week that he had no opposition on the Democratic ticket and no Republican candidate to run against him—thus assuring his election.

Gets OK to Take That Vacation!

Washington, June 17 — Vacations pay dividends in greater war productive output, WPB Vice-Chairman Clinton S. Golden and Joseph D. Keenan declared this week.

They said that government agencies have found that experience shows vacations for war workers are "conducive to sustained production" and "make it easier to control sporadic absenteeism."

Win Million In Back Pay

Des Moines, Ia., June 17—One million dollars in back pay and another million in wage increases were won by Local 235, CIO United Rubber Workers, through a Natl. War Labor Board directive to the Des Moines Ordnance plant of the U. S. Rubber Co.

The directive, gained after strenuous negotiations, awards 3c an hour retroactive increases to all employes, including many former workers now in the armed services or in scattered war plants from coast to coast.

The increase will further add more than $1 million to employes' checks during the year ahead.

Back 4th Term

New York City, June 17—Unconditional support of a guaranteed annual wage plan and re-affirmation of a call for a fourth term for President Roosevelt were the major decisions of the General Executive Board of the CIO United Furniture Workers Union this week.

New York, June 17—CIO members in New York City have contributed nearly $50,000 to Italian War Relief, according to Saul Mills, secretary of the CIO War Chest.

CIO Political Action Program

The CIO NEWS this week presents major excerpts from CIO's Political Action program, as approved this weekend by the CIO Executive Board and by a special meeting of the CIO Political Action Committee.

We, of the CIO Political Action Committee, realize that the road to victory is still long; and longer still the road to an enduring peace. We realize that the war against Hitler, Hirohito and their cohorts is still to be won, and the winning will be costly and hard.

We are aware . . . that there are those in our midst who fear the power of a united people more than they fear the Axis enemy. We must fight these enemies with the same unified determination that we must show the foe outside our borders.

Must Have Unity

Now, more than ever before, we must have unshakable unity among the people of this nation and among the peoples of the United Nations.

Ultimate victory . . . must bring with it the assurance of lasting peace; the utter destruction of Fascism; the full realization of the Four Freedoms; and the development of an abundant life for the Common Man of this earth.

The . . . November 7th, 1944 . . national elections . . . will decide whether we can move forward with confidence to peace, freedom and security, or, whether we will be thrown back into insecurity and want, imperialist conflict, Fascism, and, inevitably, into a third World War.

The CIO will measure each candidate by his past record for performance and his stand on the issues outlined in this program.

Hail FDR's Record

By our measure, Franklin Delano Roosevelt's record is one of great and glorious achievement. Under his leadership, we . . . moved forward to these achievements:

On the social security front: Old age insurance; unemployment insurance; aid to the blind, the crippled, the needy.

On the farm front: The raising of farm income and the saving of farms from foreclosure; the rescue of small and marginal farmers; crop insurance; the ever-normal granary; rural electrification.

On the housing front: The saving of a million urban homes from foreclosure through the HOLC; slum clearance and low cost housing; the stimulation of private home building through the FHA.

On the conservation front: Soil conservation; the TVA; unparalelled progress in flood control; erosion control; the conservation of all our natural resources.

On the financial front: The insuring of bank depsits; an improved banking act; the protection of investors through SEC; the curbing of utility empires.

On the national security front: President Roosevelt was among the first to recognize that the advance of the organized thugs in Europe, Asia and Africa threatened our own national security and to call for collective action to halt aggression. When that call went unheeded and Europe was plunged into war he led us in arming for our own defense and providing assistance to the nations resisting Hitler. As Commander-in-Chief he has given us unparalleled leadership on our march to Victory. As one of the principal architects of the United Nations he laid the foundation for the coalition of our freedom-loving nations which assures victory over the enemy and the possibility of an enduring peace.

Has Not Failed Us

As President, and as Commander-in-Chief of our armed forces, he has not failed us.

We urge the nation to draft and elect Franklin Delano Roosevelt for another term in office as the man best qualified to lead the American People during the next four crucial years.

Foreign Policy

Our first duty is to assure the total mobilization of our people and our resources and, in close cooperation with Great Britain, the Soviet Union, China and the people of the occupied lands, to speed the day of full and final victory. We shall not be satisfied with less than the complete extermination of Nazism, Fascism and Japanese Imperialism and all their evils.

Closely associated with the task of mobilizing for victory is the task of planning a peace . . .

(1) The objectives for which we fight are set forth in the Four Freedoms, the Good Neighbor policy, the Atlantic Charter, and the United Nations' agreement. These objectives can be reached only if the coalition of the United Nations . . . is preserved and strengthened in the peace to follow

(2) We urge the establishment . . . of a general international organization open to membership by all peace-loving states, large and small . . . to destroy the basis of militarism and Fascist power . . . and to maintain international peace and security by taking prompt collective action against any future aggressor.

(3) We . . . urge the establishment of international machinery to make long-term credits available to industrially backward nations so that they may create an industrial economy for themselves which will raise the living standards and provide economic security for their people.

(4) We urge extension of the right of asylum for persecuted minorities . . . and adequate guarantees for the protection of racial, religious and political minorities by international agreement . . .

(5) We advocate complete support and adequate financing of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration . . .

(6) We urge . . . adequate labor representation of all planning and administrative bodies charged with the formulations and administration of the fore-going programs.

Domestic Policy

President Roosevelt . . . proclaimed our objectives for postwar America in a new Bill of Rights:

"The right to a useful and remunerative job . . .;

"The right to earn enough to provide adequate food and clothing and recreation;

"The right of every farmer to raise and sell his products at a return which will give him and his family a decent living;

"The right of every businessman, large and small, to trade in an atmosphere of freedom from unfair competition and domination by monopolies . . .;

"The right to adequate medical care and the opportunity to achieve and enjoy good health;

These rights will not realize themselves. We must plan our economy to achieve them.

We, therefore, propose that as soon as the 79th Congress convenes it adopt by Joint Resolution of the Senate and the House the President's New Bill of Rights as the basic objective of our national policy.

We propose that Congress establish a permanent National Planning Board, composed of representatives of industry, labor and agriculture. This board should be charged with the task of formulating plans and developing programs in cooperation with other agencies of the government to effectuate the new Bill of Rights.

We propose that the National Planning Board encourage the establishment for each industry of an industry council, composed of representatives of labor, management, agriculture if the case requires, and government, to assist in the formulation and administration of plans for full production and full employment within such industry.

In the paragraphs that follow, we enumerate measures for immediate adoption and outline the major principles which should guide the work of the National Planning Board.

We can and must continue full production and full employment for men and women alike in the postwar period.

A substantial increase in the income of the American workers must be an immediate objective of postwar planning and policy. The guaranteed annual wage is one means to this end. We urge that the Federal government endorse the principle . . . and encourage its incorporation in collective bargaining agreements.

We recognize that the task of providing full employment is primarily that of private industry. The full employment program must, however, be guaranteed by government with a prepared program of jobs at useful work, with standard wages and working conditions, if and to the extent that private industry falls short of the goal.

1. The key to firm national unity for the most vigorous prosecution of the war is effective economic stabilization to establish and maintain a fair and non-discriminatory balance between wages, prices and profits. Such a program requires:

A. A policy permitting wage increases which will realistically reflect the rise in living costs with special consideration to substandard rates, equal pay for equal work by women and the problems of white collar, professional and government workers, whose income has tended to remain fixed.

B. Effective price and rent control and rationing rigorously to prevent further price increases, with food subsidies in an amount sufficient to hold prices at present levels while maintaining farm incomes. We favor the maintenance of these controls during the period of postwar reconversion.

C. Heavier progressive taxes on personal incomes and corporate profits, with a $25,000 ceiling on net personal incomes after taxes. An increase in personal exemptions and credits for dependents to exempt from taxation those persons whose income are at or near the subsistence level. We vigorously oppose all regressive tax measures such as the sales tax and urge elimination of the victory tax principle . . .

D. We favor proposals for facilitating war contract termination, and the prompt payment by government of its war contract obligations and orderly reconversion at as rapid a rate as is consistent with the needs of war production and wifull protection against fraud.

E. It is just as essential to make proper provision for the human aspect of reconversion. We support the principles of the Kilgore Bill for centralized planning of reconversion, with labor participation, and machinery to facilitate the prompt re-employment of displaced workers with supplementary Federal unemployment insurance during the period of their idleness. We also urge the payment of dismissal wages to workers laid off upon reconversion.

3. We propose that the sale to private industry of any government-owned plant or facility be made with full protection of the public interest and conditioned upon a guarantee that the purchaser will fully utilize its entire productive capacity.

Public Works

We must immediately plan a comprehensive public works program financed from Federal, state and local funds, to embrace such projects as flood control, soil conservation, forestation, public power, rural electrification, roads, schools, hospitals and other public buildings and sanitation facilities.

We shall have to build a minimum of 1,500,000 dwellings a year, over at least a 10-year period, to rehouse our urban and farm population to minimum standards of decency and comfort.

To the extent that private construction proves unable to fill the peoples' needs, the government—city, state and federal—must take the necessary steps to assure every American a decent home at a cost within his means.

We advocate the continuance of price guarantees to farmers at levels which will encourage full production and assure them of a fair return for their product. All agricultural programs and planning should be designed to eliminate discrimination against rural areas and give farm people the same social and economic benefits enjoyed by city dwellers.

Small Business

We urge an adequate program of credits to small business to finance its purchase of surplus government property and facilitate reconversion. We also favor government assistance in giving small business access to expert research, engineering and marketing services.

A nation dedicated to planning an economy of abundance and the full utilization of all our productive resources cannot tolerate practices on the part of monopolies and international cartels which restrict production, stifle fair competition, hamper the full development of domestic and foreign trade and endanger world peace. These practices must be stopped . . .

Servicemen

1. We owe the greatest obligation to our men and women who now fight our battles . . . The best way to repay them in part . . . is to attain the goal of full employment and thus assure them of jobs and security.

2. The following measures are (also) essential: Hospitalization, completion of education, with tuition and subsistance at government expense; adequate demobilization pay, loans for the improvement or purchase of homes, farms or business establishments without interest for the first year; special provision to expedite the placement of veterans in jobs, federal unemployment benefits to begin four weeks after demobilization and continue for a period up to two years after initial employment.

While the so-called GI Bill provides many of these benefits, we urge that it be strengthened by granting increased benefits to disabled veterans and their dependents and by increasing their unemployment insurance to a minimum of $25 a week, to be paid as long as unemployment continues. We also urge extension of coverage to include merchant seamen and Red Cross workers.

Social Security

We urge the immediate enactment of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell Bill as a long forward step toward the attainment of full social security.

Our nation can and must guarantee equality of opportunity for education to every American. We propose that the Federal Government establish minimum education standards, based on the principle that every boy and girl is entitled to free education through the high school level, with advanced study for those of demonstrated ability.

Civil Rights

The hateful practice of discrimination because of race, religion or national origin against which we are fighting abroad must be stamped out at home. Economic, political and civil equality must be guaranteed to every American, regardless of his race, creed or national origin.

We call for the establishment of a permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee with adequate appropriations and enforcement powers. We urge legislation to prohibit activities or propaganda directed against any individuals because of their racial, religious or national origin.

(a) The immediate passage of the anti-poll tax bill and elimination of other restrictions on the right to vote;

(b) Enactment of a genuine soldier vote bill.

3. Free, strong and responsible labor organizations are the bulwark of democracy. Their growth, and the extension of the process of collective bargaining throughout American industry must be encouraged as an objective of national policy. The right to join labor unions of their own choosing must be guaranteed and protected for all wage earners, including federal, state and local government employes.

TODAY'S LESSON IN ARITHMETIC

WORKER'S THIN PURSE

On the basis of the AFL-CIO cost-of-living study, the married worker with a family of four has only 35c more each week than he had in 1941. The above figures completely refute the charge that factory workers are going on inflationary buying sprees.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

Both House and Senate this week did their job on price control renewal, passing the bill with crippling amendments that would crack ceilings on clothes and make any kind of enforcement almost impossible.

The bill now goes to conference between Senate and House, and then to FDR for signature or veto. It's time to write Senators and Representatives to support FDR if he has to veto the bill.

The Kilgore reconversion bill is making slow progress, with hearings starting before a Senate Military Affairs sub-committee this week. Mayor LaGuardia of New York testified for it, while Under-Secretary of War Patterson appeared against it.

Southern polltax Senators are set to fight any move to give funds to the Fair Employment Practice Committee (FEPC), which comes up for debate in the Senate this week.

Congress will most likely adjourn around June 24 for a five week summer recess, meeting again around Aug. 1. The Congressmen and Senators will go to their party conventions and then home. Talk to them about the issues described in the special legislative supplement to this week's CIO NEWS and tell them what you, the voters, think.

(NOTE: Keep Your Eye On Congress will not run during the five-week recess. It will be resumed when Congress comes back.)

PAC-CIO Backs Wallace As FDR Running Mate

WASHINGTON, June 17—Labor political action's first full dress conference, bringing 300 delegates from all CIO unions to Washington, closed here today after a two-day session.

Opened by CIO Pres. Philip Murray and chaired by Sidney Hillman, Political Action Committee head, the conference adopted a detailed platform for action now and in the postwar period, reaffirmed its endorsement of a fourth term for President Roosevelt, and endorsed Vice-Pres. Henry A. Wallace as his running mate.

"The sole purpose of the CIO Political Action Committee is to inform the people on the issues and to help them solve the problems confronting our nation," Murray said in his opening speech

"The committee has been operating one year," he said. "In that time it has won the admiration and respect of the American people. This is because our committee brings unity of action to the nation. There is nothing selfish about our aims. People in all walks of life — business, the professions, farmers, as well as labor are joining with us in this common purpose."

Hitting at efforts in Congress and outside it to smear CIO-PAC, and at efforts to make it appear illegal, Murray declared:

"None of these charges has been proved true. The CIO Political Action Committee is within the law and will stay within the law. PAC is strictly American. It seeks to put into effect the declarations of President Roosevelt, and to rally the nation behind him as our Commander-in-Chief."

Wallace's endorsement, which was presented in a special resolution by R. J. Thomas, secretary of PAC, and a CIO vice-president, brought a tremendous round of applause from the delegates, who also pledged themselves to help elect a new Congress that would support FDR and his win-the-war programs.

"CIO Political Action is not a political party," Murray said. "It seeks only to win the quickest possible victory in this war and to build a better America. We are wedded to the ancient democratic traditions of the United States—the traditions of political and economic freedom."

British Shipbuilders Aid Invasion

London, June 17—Three hundred carefully selected union British shipyard workers last week played a major part in helping to win success for the invasion blow struck by Allied forces on the continent of Europe.

Chosen from 1,000 volunteers—members of the Confederation of Shipbuilding & Engineering Unions—the workers departed on what was advertised as "a dangerous and secret mission" to render first aid to vessels damaged in the assault.

They were among the first of the invasion forces to storm ashore after the Normandy beachhead was established.

Kids' Play Tells Evils of Bias

New York, June 17—A play for children, exposing the evil roots of race hatred, first put on for grammar school kids in the small town of Amityville, N. Y., has made such a hit that it has been printed in pamphlet form.

"Divide and Conquer," by Allan Sloane and Bob Russell, dramatizes a game of marbles played by three small boys, one a Catholic, one a Negro and one Jewish. A bully appears and by playing one off against the other, gets all their marbles, until a nearby soldier explains the bully's tactics.

More PAC Appointments

Columbus, June 17—The appointment of Garland Ashcraft of Cleveland and Paul Shearer of Columbus to the staff of the CIO Political Action Committee for Region 5 (Ohio, West Virginia and Kentucky) was announced this week by Regional PAC Director Jack Kroll.

Ashcraft left a position of acting public relations director for the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. He will serve as assistant director of Region 5 and will handle public relations.

Shearer, a Negro war worker in the Curtiss-Wright Aircraft Corp., will serve as field representative for the PAC in charge of work among Negro voters.

Registration Drive Hot In Michigan

Detroit, June 17—Registration became the keynote of political action this week as August Scholle, regional director of the CIO Political Action Committee, issued a call for all political action workers throughout the state to concentrate their energies on meeting a June 21 primary registration deadline.

Special arrangements have been made in all the larger Michigan cities for workers to register. In some cities it is planned to have extra registration booths remain open all day.

Elsewhere registration clerks will be assigned to shops so that workers can register as they leave their jobs. In some cases union representatives will be especially deputized as registration clerks.

In addition, the state PAC has mailed out more than 250,000 post card ballot requests to the Michigan CIO members in the armed forces.

Election officials have pointed out that almost everyone who mails back one of these filled-out cards in sufficient time will get a full ballot.

The percentage rise in employment of women in the last four years is nearly equal to that for the entire period 1900 to 1940, according to the Retraining and Reemployment Administration.

Price Control Limps; Congress Scalpel Ruthless

WASHINGTON, June 17—Congress finished the first leg of its job on price control this week, as the bill was renewed in both House and Senate with amendments. Following the renewal, the bill now goes to House-Senate conference to iron out differences in the two versions and then to FDR for signature or veto.

The first leg of the job limps pretty badly, with amendments in both versions that are enough to cripple price control and bring on inflation if they finally become law.

price ceilings on cotton textiles. Passed by 39 to 35, this would lift the price of work clothes, women's dresses and kid's clothes by an immediate 20 percent, with more to come.

The House rejected this pirates' scheme by 191 to 87, but added a joker of its own that can make a mockery out of any kind of enforcement by OPA. This is the Dirksen (R., Ill.) amendment subjecting all OPA orders, regulations, etc., to court review.

COURT DELAYS

Innocent-looking on its face, the Dirksen plan simply means that every step OPA takes to enforce ceilings or other orders can be hamstrung with endless court delays. Like the Bankhead plan, it benefits the big operator, who can afford lawyers and long ligitation. The Bankhead plan, incidentally, means nothing to the cotton farmer, only more profits to the manufacturers.

Sen. Taft (R., O.) had his tory finger in the pie with a Senate-passed amendment to end use of subsidies to hold prices down after June, 1945. Balked in repeated efforts to kill subsidies and thus hike food prices last year and before, Taft finally had his way. The House has an even worse one that ends subsidies on meat, butter and bread immediately.

House and Senate polltaxers and their reactionary Republican pals divided up the dirty work fairly evenly. Thus, the Senate didn't act on the Dirksen plan to wreck enforcement, but produced one of its own that could do just as efficient a job.

IGNORANCE AMENDMENT

This is the amendment by Sen. Chandler (D., Ky.) making "ignorance" of an OPA order or policy a valid excuse for violating it. This of course would be a perfect out for any chiseler.

The House was assigned to take care of wrecking rent control, which is attempted in an amendment allowing landlords to plead "hardship" due to costs and taxes and to get a rent raise.

There are some 15 million rental units registered with OPA. Disproving "hardship" would be almost impossible, especially on big real estate firms that keep accurate books.

STOP FUEL OIL HIKES

On the positive side, the House defeated the Disney (D., Okla.) amendment to lift fuel oil prices, though this was largely a matter of polltax revenge for defeat of the House version of the Bankhead scheme.

The bill passed with everyone saying loudly and repeatedly that he was for price control, and with most of them adding a whole string of "buts."

President Roosevelt may be forced to veto the bill, if the crippling amendments aren't taken out in conference. To help sustain this possible veto, we must rush wires to our Representative and Senators to support it at once.

U. S. Gets Back $5 Million In Excess Profit

Washington, June 17—An excess profit recapture agreement has been effected with the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., Newport News, Va., providing for return to the U. S. of $5,092,480 profit in excess of 10 per cent on a final contract price of $52,379,048.

Urge A-1 Priority For Household Aid To Women Workers

Washington, June 17—A new wrinkle in the priority granting business was offered June 15 by the Women's Advisory Committee of the War Manpower Commission. It was the granting of priorities to women war workers to get first chance at hiring household help.

Here is what the committee said: "Priority on household help should be granted to women workers according to the value of their respective services to the war. . . . By making it possible for other workers to stay on the job, many women can render their greatest wartime service" by doing part-time household duties.

The committee warned that "in many localities greater home assistance must be furnished if large numbers of women are to continue on their war jobs without interruption."

Let's Investigate, By All Means

Chairman Sidney Hillman of the CIO Political Action Committee laid all his cards on the table when he appeared before the Senate Committee to Investigate Campaign Expenditures.

He answered all questions fully and frankly. He offered to supply the committee with all available records and information.

But at the same time he wanted to know why there should be all this concentration on investigating the limited expenditures of organized working people, rather than the huge amounts spent by corporate interests and their agencies.

"If there is to be an investigation," Hillman said, "let it be full, fair and complete. Let it include not only the activities of labor, but the less publicized, the more obscure efforts of some of the representatives of big business and high finance."

For instance, how about Frank Gannett's Committee for Constitutional Government, which a few years ago refused to submit any of its records to a Senate committee, but which boasts that it distributed over 26 million pieces of literature and spent more than $300,000 in 1943?

Or how about the Natl. Industrial Information Committee of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, which is spending huge sums on a political propaganda campaign? Or families like the DuPonts and Pews who contributed $186,000 and $108,000 respectively to the 1940 Republican campaign?

Then, too, the public should be interested in knowing how much big business interests like the Hearst press, the Chicago Tribune and other reactionary publishing corporations are spending in their daily propaganda campaign against Pres. Roosevelt and progressive members of Congress.

And how about investigating the large sums spent by business interests for anti-administration political propaganda through commentators like Fulton Lewis and other radio programs?

A full, fair and complete investigation might lead even further afield in many directions.

It would reveal that the workers' pennies pooled for political education and action are a mere drop in the bucket compared to the many millions spent by wealthy minority interests to influence election results.

The CIO has no fear of such an investigation. We wonder if the anti-labor, anti-administration crowd can say as much.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

"IT'S AN OPEN and shut case," said Mr. Bigdough. "All that remains is to arrest and punish the criminal."

Publisher Worst nodded: "The evidence points only in one direction. Look at the initials on this leaflet—CPAC. And those are clearly a worker's fingerprints."

"Well, Senator Stooge, why don't you say something?" Bigdough said sharply. "Or, rather, why don't you do something?

"A series of strange political deaths—elections stolen from under our noses—and all you do is make a speech and call for an investigation!"

★ ★ ★

"Yes, Senator," Worst chimed in, "if you don't do something, you'll be bumped off too."

"That suicide note of Congressman Lies is obviously phoney. We're up against a clever gang, with large funds at their disposal."

"I've told the authorities, but they refuse to arrest. They even say they find no evidence of unlawful acts."

"Why don't you make them unlawful then?" demanded Bigdough. "What do you think I put up my money to elect you for?"

★ ★ ★

"Perhaps I can be of some assistance."

A nondescript little fellow had joined them unannounced. Without introducing himself, he continued:

"I've followed this case with some interest. But before we look for the criminal, are you sure of the nature of the crime and the identity of the victims?"

"Of course we are," Bigdough replied impatiently. "The victims are our best friends. They've just been rubbed out."

★ ★ ★

"There is one piece of evidence you have overlooked," the intruder went on.

He fumbled in his pocket and brought out a crumpled piece of paper.

"This is what is known as a ballot," he explained. "Is it not possible your friends were rubbed out, as you put it, by many people, in fact by a majority of the people, through a quite lawful use of this ballot?"

"But what about the initials, CPAC?" said Worst. "They obviously stand for CIO Political Action Committee."

"So it would appear," the little man said dreamily, "but they could also represent the Common Purpose of All the Commonpeople."

Senator Stooge cleared his throat.

"Let's not quibble," he said. "As a lawmaker, I can assure you it is contrary to the spirit and intent of the Corrupt Practices Act for labor, or corporations, to expend large sums to influence elections.

The newcomer seemed to pay no attention. "Dear me," he said, "I never was good at arithmetic. Maybe one of you gentlemen could divide $700,000 by five million. The answer must be somewhere around 13 or 14 cents.

"Mr. Bigdough, you said you put up some money to elect Senator Stooge—surely more than 13 or 14 cents?"

"I kept within the law," Bigdough replied. "As an individual I'm allowed to contribute $5,000."

"And your wife too, I presume and your corporation vice presidents. But that gets me into arithmetic again, adding up all those five thousands. Didn't the DuPont family contribute $186,000 in the 1940 elections?

"Then your corporation sponsors that radio commentator, Fullof Loosetalk, doesn't it? Smart fellow. Must influence a lot of voters around elections. But it must also cost you a million or so a year."

★ ★ ★

Suddenly the little fellow turned to Worst.

"You own quite a chain of newspapers, don't you? Worth 40 millions or more? Your papers want to keep Senator Stooge in, and get that White House fellow out."

"Certainly," Worst said. "We've still got some free press."

"Then you must be spending much more than $5,000 to influence the elections. Certainly more than 13 or 14 cents—if that's what the average CIO member has contributed to CPAC."

★ ★ ★

Senator Stooge perked up. "Perhaps now you fellows will stop riding me about investigations. No telling where they'll lead these days. But why do we let this fellow heckle us? Who are you anyhow? And who are the criminals you were going to find?"

"My name is Common Sense," the intruder replied. And as to the crime of stealing, or, rather, buying elections, if you want to know who are guilty, just look in that mirror.

"Now, gentlemen, I must be going. The verdict in this case rests with the Court of Public Opinion. The sentence will be executed by the voters."

Vanishing Freedom of the Air

The suspension of labor's only regular national radio program, the Labor for Victory series over the National Broadcasting Company's network, raises a number of disturbing questions to which the CIO would like to know the answers.

The NBC has been the only network to grant the millions of organized working people as much as this 15-minute weekly program, shared by both CIO and AFL, and we have repeatedly expressed our appreciation of this public service.

But even this brief offset to business monopoly of the air waves is now at an end, and labor is left without any regular radio channel to bring its message to the American public.

It is particularly disturbing that this action should be taken at the beginning of a national election campaign, on the apparent grounds that any labor program during this period would be "political."

Labor is already discriminated against under the code of the Natl. Assn. of Broadcasters on the ground that any program it broadcasts is "controversial." It is supposed to receive occasional free time on this account, at the whim of radio companies.

But if labor programs having no direct connection with elections are to be considered "political" as well as "controversial," this means that even free time will not be granted for them—leaving labor only the right to buy time at the higher political rates for an occasional campaign speech.

Even when free time has been granted in the past, on the ground that a labor program is "controversial" and so not entitled to paid time, there has been an increasing tendency by some radio companies to object to program content on the very ground that it is "controversial"!

Repeated objections have also been made to labor programs which are dramatic in character, using actors, music, etc., to attract radio listeners who will not listen to a straight speech.

While labor has been more and more restricted in its freedom of speech over the air, big business interests have suffered no similar restrictions.

They are free to sponsor commentators who daily propagandize against labor, against the administration and against progressive political policies, and to use all the arts of dramatization and entertainment on their programs.

The case of the UAW-CIO against Station WHKC in Columbus illustrates the prevailing denial of free speech to labor. The union was forbidden to solicit new members on its program, to discuss any controversial issue, or to discuss race, religion or politics—this on a station that granted full free speech to Col. McCormick of the Chicago Tribune, Fulton Lewis, Boake Carter and other reactionary propaganda.

About the only legal recourse labor has at present against all these discriminatons is to appeal to the Federal Communications Commission against renewal of licenses to stations that practice them, on the ground such stations are not operated "in the public interest."

This the CIO is doing in the case of Station WHKC and may do in other cases, to direct public attention and indignation against the radio industry's present denials of free speech to labor.

The Record Of Congress And What It Means to You

Special Legislative Supplement

The CIO News

National Edition

How To Use This Record

A voting record of your Representative and your two Senators is one of the most useful tools you have in doing your job as a citizen concerned with what happens to you and your country.

It is not by itself a complete guide to legislative or political action. It is significant because it is a record, but it is not the whole story. A Congressman, whose record on issues must be taken into account, does not stand or fall by his recorded vote alone on one or even several measures.

A great deal of work in Congress is done in committees which consider and shape bills before they reach the floor. A great deal of work is done by Congressmen and Senators talking to each other, both on the floor and off it. Congressmen also have close contacts with various government agencies, and seek to influence their administration of laws and policies.

There is nothing wrong or unusual in this. The kind of Congressmen—and the kind of Congress—we have depends on our understanding of all the issues, and our action based on that understanding. This understanding must be communicated to our Congressmen, both those now in office and those we will elect November 7.

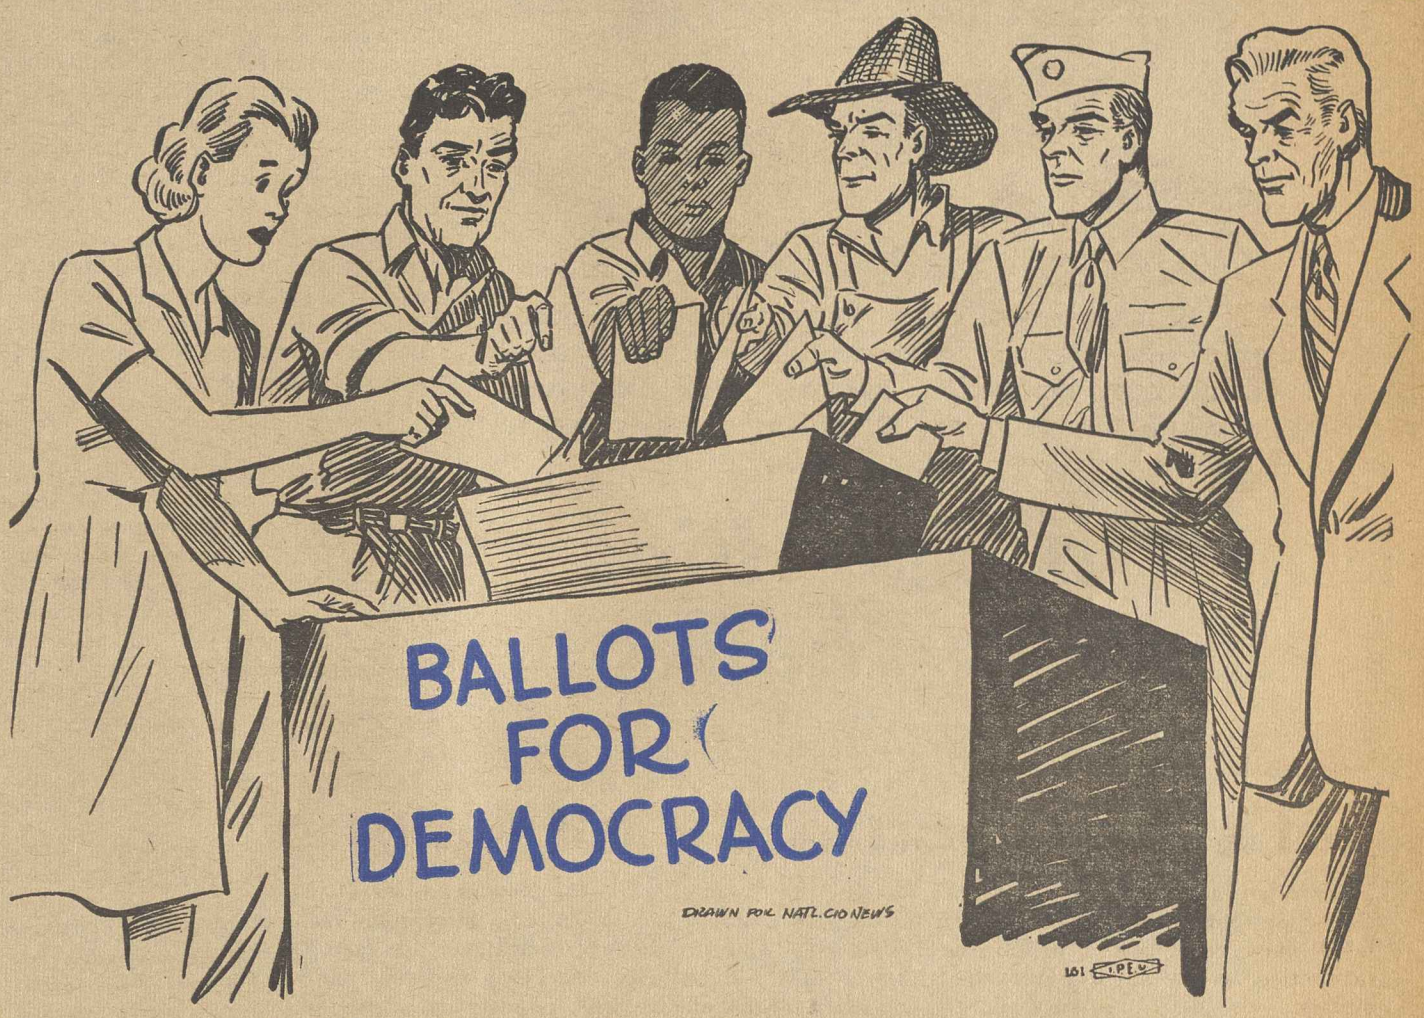
The men and women we send to Congress must get their guidance as well as their jobs from the voters. To give Congressmen that guidance, we need to have the issues clearly in our own minds when we talk to them and when we vote for them.

Only in this way can we tell Congress what the needs of the people are. Only in this way can we keep ourselves and Congress clear on the problems that face us.

Our men in the great armies of liberation depend on us to do this job, for them and for our country.

The CIO has dedicated itself to political action for victory and a secure postwar world. The key to wise and successful political action is to know the record, understand the issues . . .

AND VOTE!



Your War Job With Congress— A Victory 'Must'

Here's the record and the analysis on what Congress has done during the past few months. It shows you what your Representatives and your Senators have done on issues affecting you and the nation.

These issues concern your pocketbook and your living standards.

Some deal with your union, your right as an American citizen to vote and take political action, your right to expect fair and democratic treatment from your government.

Still others deal with the welfare of young men and women very close and dear to you—your sons and husbands, your daughters, your friends and fellow-workers and neighbors who are in the fighting forces.

All of these issues directly affect the war and the postwar world you will live in—by their impact on your democratic rights, by the contribution they make or fail to make to world unity now and after the victory.

The final liberation of Europe and the world from Axis slavery has begun. The great blows from the west, the south and the east, and in the Pacific, are now being delivered against the fascist enemy.

The success of our armies and those of our heroic allies depends not alone on courage and on military skill, but also on the strength and unity of the home front.

The home front job is ours, a production job and a job of mobilizing every resource that we have for the victory and for the world we want to live in after the war.

To do this home front war job, we have to understand the issues we face, know the record of Congress in dealing with these issues—and above all . . .

Do our full duty as workers and citizens when we . . .

GO TO THE POLLS ON ELECTION DAY AND VOTE.

Polltax Congressmen who represent only three per cent of the people in their districts think they can keep on burying polltax repeal. Polltax repeal would restore the vote to 10 million Americans, is a vital aid in fighting a war of liberation.

Aid For Veterans—What's Been Done

The "GI Bill of Rights" started out with strong CIO support as a simple measure to help returning veterans of World War II. As originally passed by the Senate, 79 to nothing, it provided:

Increased hospitalization; free tuition for veterans who want more education; vocational training; loans at three per cent to buy homes, farms and other properties; help in finding jobs and unemployment payments up to $25 a week for 52 weeks (including allowances for dependents) if a job can't be found.

As passed by the Senate with CIO support, the bill was a real security aid. When it got to the House, and after it went through Rep. John E. Rankin's (polltaxer, Miss.), wringer, it was a different story.

On Rankin's demand, the House jacked up the interest rate on loans from three to six per cent. It cut the unemployment benefits from 52 weeks to 26, set a top of $20 a week and cut out all allowances for dependents. Thus a veteran with three children got the same amount as a veteran with none.

The GI Bill then went to conference (a meeting between the House and Senate to iron out differences in a bill). The CIO urged the Senators to hold out for the original version. As a result, the conference threw out the boost in interest rates and restored the unemployment compensation to 52 weeks at $20, but still without aid for dependents.

While Rankin had the bill, he tried to slip an anti-union clause into it that would have blessed the open shop. This was a clause saying that no veteran should be denied unemployment insurance if he "would be required to join a union" as a condition of getting a job. This was too much for the House, which threw it out.

Ban On Job Bias Helps Win The War

Job discrimination on grounds of race, color or creed are foul in peacetime. They're worse still in war, a luxury we can't afford when the nation needs every worker it can get on the war job.

To help end job discrimination, President Roosevelt a while back set up the Fair Employment Practice Committee (FEPC) with orders to break job discrimination down as far as war production is concerned.

FEPC immediately became a target for the polltaxers and their reactionary Republican allies in Congress. They saw their chance when an appropriation bill for FEPC and other war agencies came up a few weeks ago.

After a stiff battle in the House, a $500,000 appropriation was passed by a thin margin of four votes. Rep. Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.) was one of the leaders of the agency.

Leading polltaxer against FEPC in the Senate was Sen. Russell (Ga.) who has tried to block any funds, first in committee and then on the floor of the Senate. Failing to block it in the Senate Appropriations Committee, he took a petty revenge on FEPC's chairmen by getting his salary cut $2,000 a year.

CIO President Murray and the whole CIO has fought for FEPC, not only for funds but also for a bill to make the agency permanent. This bill is in the House Labor Committee.

CIO Helped Up Dependency Allotments

CIO and CIO Womens Auxiliary action was effective in getting more help to a hard pressed group of Americans last year—the wives and kids of servicemen.

Before the CIO and its Auxiliaries took action, a service wife with one child got only $62 a month from the government to live on, $50 for herself and $12 for the child. The War Dept. recommended an increase of $6 a month for the first child and $1 a month for each additional child.

CIO asked for an increase that would have given a service family of three $120 a month. After some stalling in the House, which started out by listening to the War Dept. and wound up by listening to the CIO and to thousands of people who wrote letters, Congress passed a bill that was a substantial increase.

Under this bill, a service wife gets $50 a month for herself, $30 a month for one child and $20 a month for each additional child. CIO, incidentally, was the only mass organization that interested itself in this angle of servicemen's family welfare.

School-Aid Bill

Because some states are poorer than others, or less alert on education than they should be, Federal help in bringing their schools and their teachers up to par is needed.

There's a bill to do this before Congress now. It would spend $300 million on improving education, one third of it on raising teachers' salaries and the rest on fixing up the schools themselves. The average

The bill is currently bottled up in the House Education Committee (Rep. Barden, N. C., chairman). There's a Discharge Petition No. 12 circulating to get it out of committee. A discharge petition takes 218 signatures—ask your Congressman to sign.

Wagner Act Sabotage Still on Deck

Ever since the Wagner Act was passed, enemies of real collective bargaining have tried to repeal it, to amend it or put it out of business by one device or another.

One of these devices to wreck the Wagner Act is the "Frey rider," first attached a year ago to the appropriation for the Natl. Labor Relations Board that administers the act. Its history, though brief, is interesting—and its end represents a solid CIO accomplishment.

Under the rider, dreamed up by "Colonel" John P. Frey of the AFL metal trades, all contracts between management and unions are sacred and cannot be investigated by the NLRB, even if the contract is a deal between management and a company union stooge.

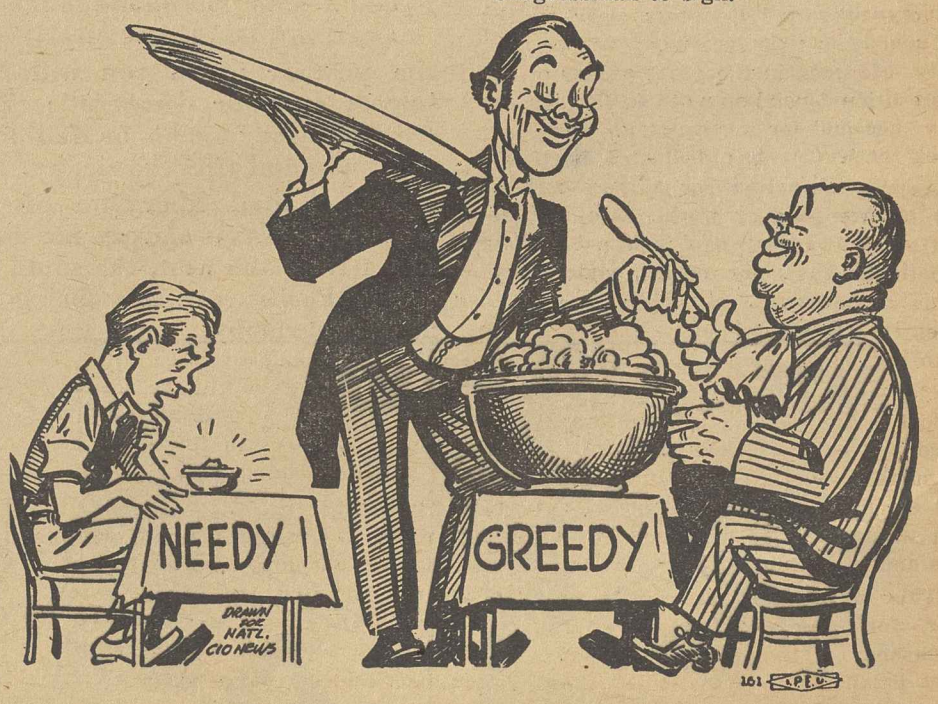
The primary purpose of the Frey rider was to protect the AFL's habit of chartering company unions and then signing a quick contract with the boss in order to freeze out the CIO.

CIO has consistently fought against all attempts to repeal or amend the Wagner Act. In the present session CIO has fought renewal of the Frey rider and has won a real victory.

As a result of CIO pressure, the Frey rider has been completely changed from its original form. Congress has removed the original protection from out-and-out company union contracts, and has restored the right to file charges against them within three months after they're in force or renewed.

There's still another form of attack on the Wagner Act that comes from within the NLRB itself. This is the proposed ruling by NLRB member Gerard Reilly that would allow employers to question the right of a union to represent the workers even after it has been certified and even if there is no competing union in the plant. This, as CIO President Murray and General Counsel Lee Pressman have both pointed out, would mean chaos in labor management relations and serious cuts in war production.

CIO's vigorous action, taken against the AFL sell-out, stopped the Frey rider. CIO will continue to oppose any attempts to monkey with the Wagner Act.



"Relief, not for the needy but for the greedy" was the way FDR described the 1944 tax bill passed by Congress over his veto. The bill protected the wealthy against paying their share of war costs.

Forced Labor Bills Buried As Threat To War

Two major forced labor bills have offered in Congress. Both have been buried—not only due to labor protests, but also due to the fact that neither one answers the manpower problem.

The two bills are the Austin-Wadsworth bill and the Brewster-Bailey bill. Of the two, the bill offered by Sen. Brewster (R., Me.) and Sen. Bailey (D., N. C.) is the worst.

Under this bill, no worker could leave his job without permission of his local draft board—a straight job freeze. If he did leave, he would be put into a labor battalion regardless of the need or use to which he could be put.

The bill would have frozen large pools of forced labor into non-war jobs at low wages, as scores of thousands of cotton plantation workers are already frozen. It would not have contributed to war production.

The Austin-Wadsworth bill, offered last January, would have done the same job in smoother and politer terms. There was no threat of forced labor battalions, but the same idea of forced labor was there.

As CIO President Murray pointed out, forced labor is no solution of manpower or production problems. These can only be solved by proper planning, use of existing manpower on essential war jobs, and the un-freezing of manpower where it is locked up in non-essential jobs.

In addition, proper use of manpower requires study of the problem of re-conversion, so that thousands of workers will not be suddenly thrown out of war jobs due to the cancellation of war contracts in that plant or industry. Plans must be made through a sensible approach to re-conversion to use those workers where they are needed—and with proper safeguards over their welfare and the welfare of their families.

None of these things were considered in the Brewster-Bailey or the Austin-Wadsworth bills. As a result, both of these bills have been laid aside. What is really needed is an intelligent approach to the problem of full use of manpower and intelligent handling of the reconversion question.

Postwar Action Is Vital Problem Now

As the liberation invasion rolls ahead, problems of what to do with America's gigantic industrial capacity get closer and closer to home.

The end of the war in Europe will bring tremendous cutbacks in war production. The industrial capacity and the workers are there, and must be reconverted from war to peace production—if we are to have full employment and a real guarantee of the Four Freedoms in the peace.

This is not simply a postwar headache. Re-conversion is an immediate question, as the sudden abandonment of war work at the Brewster plant dramatically showed.

The Brewster case, where one day 12,500 workers were on the job and the next were told they were through, was one example. There will be others. The problem has to be handled on a national scale by Congress. And so far Congress has not worked out a plan for handling it.

There is a bill cooking, however, that will take a long step toward a rational solution of reconversion problems. This is the Kilgore bill (S. 1893) now before the Senate, sponsored by Sen. Harley Kilgore (D., W. Va.) and endorsed by the CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhoods.

The Kilgore bill protects not only industry but war workers and returning veterans as well during the reconversion process, both now and after the victory. Another bill, (S. 1730) sponsored by Sen. Murray (D., Mont.) gives very inadequate protection to workers, lacks any central workable plan for reconversion as a whole.

The Kilgore bill sets up a central government agency with real powers to plan reconversion, production, contract termination, and the like. Full participation of labor with industry, agriculture and the public is provided at every step.

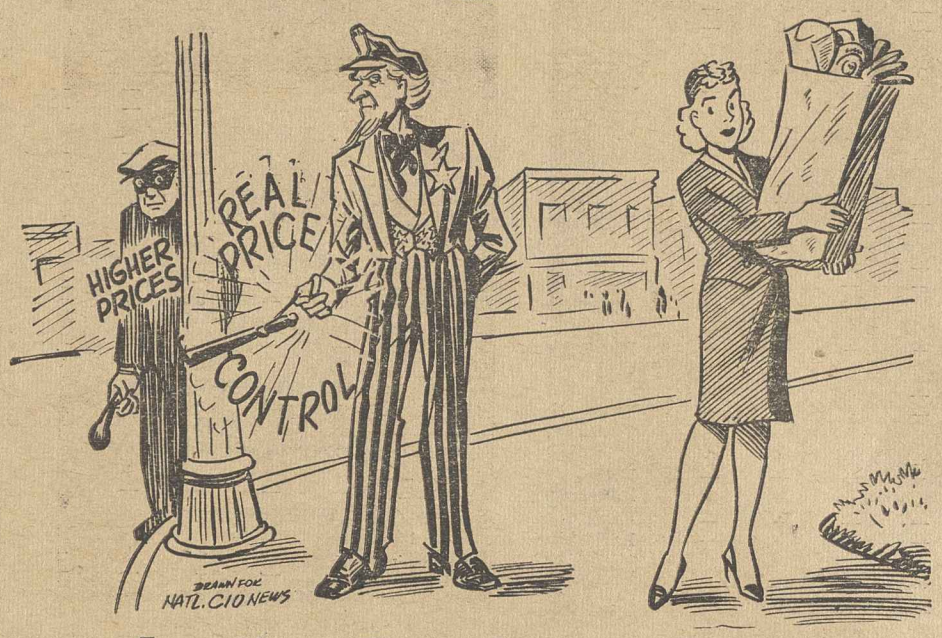
It provides re-training for war workers and veterans, with allowances of $50 to $100 a month for six months. It pays the total cost of moving workers and families to war jobs where they are needed or to prevent unemployment.

Unemployed benefits of $20 a week plus $5 for dependents up to $35 are provided, for as long as the worker is unemployed. Of special importance for veterans is a clause providing for sickness and disability aid.

By contrast, the other bill (S. 1730) makes very meager or no provisions on these points.

The Kilgore bill is sitting in the Senate Military Affairs Committee. Hearings and action have been repeatedly urged by Pres. Murray and the entire CIO. Several Senators have promised action.

The way to get action is to ask for it. Write your two Senators now, tell them you don't want to go through what the Brewsters workers had to take, that you want protection for yourself and for the returning veterans in reconversion now and after the war.



Price Vote Record—I'm For You, But . . .

The record on price control is one of the clearest examples of the "I'm for you but . . . " technique.

Everybody was "for" price control and nobody was against it, but the majority of Congressmen voted for a series of amendments which, if they finally become law, can pretty well wreck the whole operation.

(As this special supplement of The CIO NEWS goes to press, the price control renewal bill has been passed by both House and Senate, with amendments. It now goes to a conference between the House and Senate and finally to the White House for signature or veto.)

Most of the many amendments proposed and passed looked plausible, on the surface. Such was the Dirksen (R., Ill.) amendment passed by the House that would open all OPA policies, orders and regulations to court review.

This means that every OPA order, for example (and there are thousands of them) would be subject to all the delays and red tape of court action. High-priced lawyers for big firms could tie up price control enforcement in knots and keep it tied up for months.

The "little fellow" that so many Congressmen weep for would not be benefitted, since high-priced attornies are not available to him. The consumer, and especially those who buy from chain stores, would take it in the neck.

The decisive amendment passed by the Senate was the Bankhead (polltaxer, Ala.) plan to break price ceilings on cotton textiles. This scheme would raise the price of work clothes, women's house dresses and kids' clothes by 20 per cent and more, all to the benefit of the cotton textile manufacturer.

The cotton farmer, for whom Sen. Bankhead and other polltaxers and reactionary Republicans bleed so profusely, gets nothing out of the amendment by way of higher prices for his product. It all goes to the manufacturer, already making nine times his pre-war profits.

Another House amendment would wreck rent control by allowing profit-swollen landlords and real estate sharks to jack up rents whenever they felt a "hardship" coming on in terms of higher costs or taxes.

This scheme would simply wipe out rent control. Some 15 million renting units are registered with OPA. Few landlords keep accurate or honest books. Disputing their claims of increased costs or "hardships" would be simply impossible.

Both House and Senate passed an amendment making "ignorance" of a price control order an excuse for violating it. No other law permits ignorance as an excuse for a violation. The possibilities of chiseling are boundless.

The Senate passed the Taft (R., O.) amendment cutting off subsidies after June, 1945. Subsidies have been successfully used to hold back food prices and have saved consumers $12 for every $1 spent, while giving farmers a fair break on their production costs.

Price control affects not only our own pocketbooks and living standards, but the taxes we and our children and the returning veterans have to pay now and far into the future.

Wrecking price control by amendments, as both House and Senate have tried to do, adds enormously to the cost of the war and to the burdens laid on us now and on future generations.

All the amendments proposed and passed aim at increasing the war-swollen profits of the food monopoly, the landlords and the manufacturers. CIO, under Philip Murray's leadership, opposed them all, urged simple renewal of the Price Control Act without change.

A majority of Representatives and Senators thought otherwise, preferring profits to the welfare of their voters and of their country.

This is the key to the voting record given on these two pages. It explains briefly what the issues were on which the Congressmen and Senators voted.

* * *

• 1. SOLDIERS' VOTE. The House vote was taken Feb. 3, 1944, on a motion to lay aside the Rankin (polltaxer, Miss.) bill which robbed the soldier of the vote by surrounding it with endless "states' rights" red tape, and to take up the Worley (D., Tex.) bill that would have provided a simple, uniform Federal ballot that could be easily distributed, filled out and returned. The Rankin bill was passed 224 to 168.

The Senate vote was taken Feb. 8, 1944, on basically the same "states' rights" bill sponsored in the House by Rankin and in the Senate by Eastland (Miss.). It was passed by 46 to 40.

• 2. TAXES. The House voted Feb. 25, 1944, to over-ride FDR's veto of the wholly inadequate 1944 tax bill which FDR described as "relief, not for the needy but for the greedy." FDR and CIO had asked for $10 billion in taxes based on ability to pay. Congress after months of delay passed a tax bill for only $2 billion, laid mostly on those with low incomes and intended to pave the way for a sales tax next year. The House vote to over-ride the veto was 299 to 95.

The Senate voted to over-ride FDR's veto the same day, by 72 to 14.

• 3. POLLTAX REPEAL. In its second vote in two years, the House voted May 25, 1943 to pass HR 7 which would repeal the polltax that robs 10,000,000 white and Negro Americans of the right to vote. The bill was passed by 265 to 110.

The Senate vote on polltax repeal was not taken until May 15, 1944. Even then, the vote was not taken on the merits of repeal, but on "cloture" (motio cessful, would have ended the the repeal bill. The cloture mot

The Senate vote to over-r same day, within a few hours ridden by 56 to 25.

• 5. FOOD SUBSIDIES. The House voted Feb. 18, 1944, to uphold FDR's veto of a bill that would have barred use of subsidies to farmers to assure them a fair break on prices while cutting down food costs to consumers. The subsidy system, used also for copper and other war materials as well as food, saves the public up to $12 for every $1 spent, helps prevent inflation. The veto was upheld by 226 to 151.

The Senate voted Feb. 11, 1944, to bar subsidies by 42 to 28. This vote was for the bill that FDR vetoed. Since the veto was upheld in the House, the bill did not become law.

• 6. UNITED NATIONS RELIEF AND REHABILITATION. Concealed under this long title is a simple plan for the U. S. to take part with others of the United Nations in helping countries ravaged by the Axis. The House vote of 338 to 54, taken Jan. 25, 1944, is a fair test of isolationism against cooperation in the war and in the peace. This vote simply authorized U. S. participation in the project, which helps us as it helps others.

The Senate vote of 47 to 14 was taken Feb. 14, 1944, on the same issue.

• 7. PRICE CONTROL. The decisive vote in the House was taken on the Dirksen (R., Ill.) amendment to throw all price regulations into endless court litigation, tying up price enforcement in legal red tape. The vote was taken June 14, 1944, and the amendment passed 206 to 181.

The decisive Senate vote was taken June 9, 1944, on the Bankhead (polltaxer, Ala.) amendment to take price ceilings off cotton textiles, thereby raising prices of work clothes, women's house dresses, kids' clothes by 20 per cent and up, and opening door to destruction of all price ceilings. The amendment passed June 9 by 39 to 35.

ONCE UPON A TIME THERE WAS A

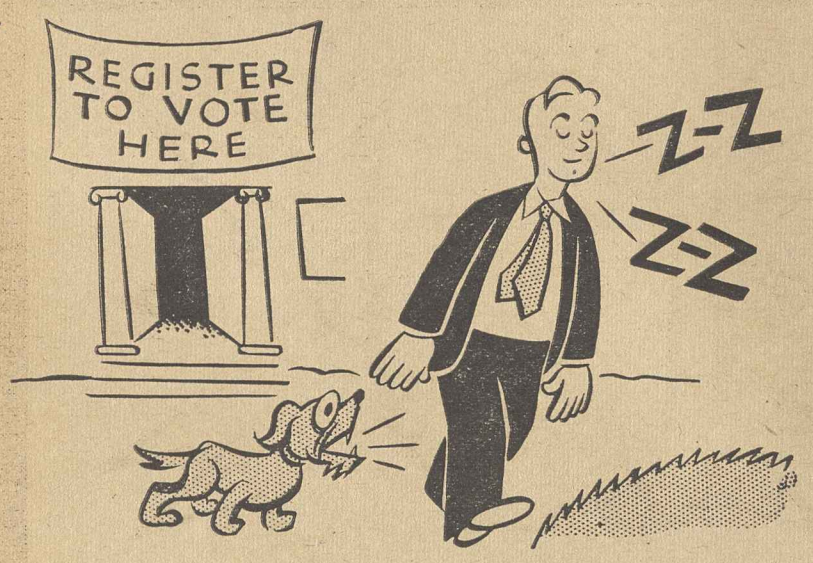
1

. . . and before he went to sleep he forgot to look up his Congressman's record on a lot of important issues . . .

2



. . . and he also forgot to get together with his friends and neighbors . . . and worse, he forgot to register to vote . . .

3

While he was asleep (and other people were doing what he forgot to do) he had a dream . . .

4

In this dream he was being chased by reactionary politicians

5

6

7

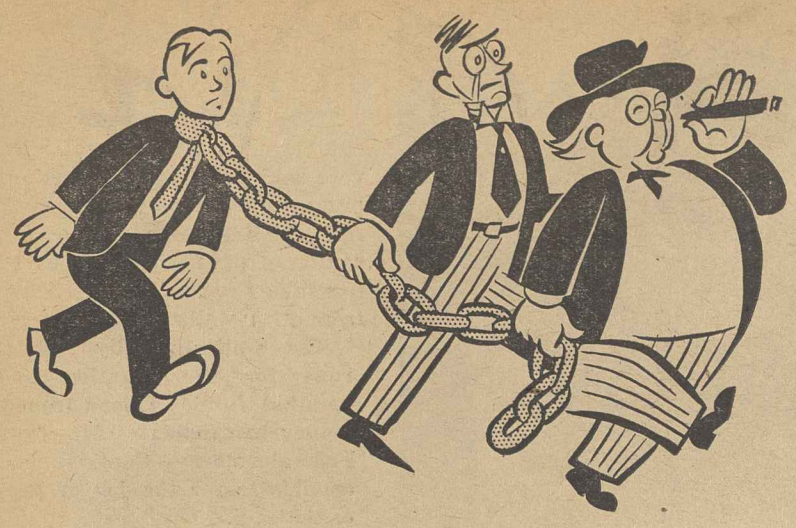
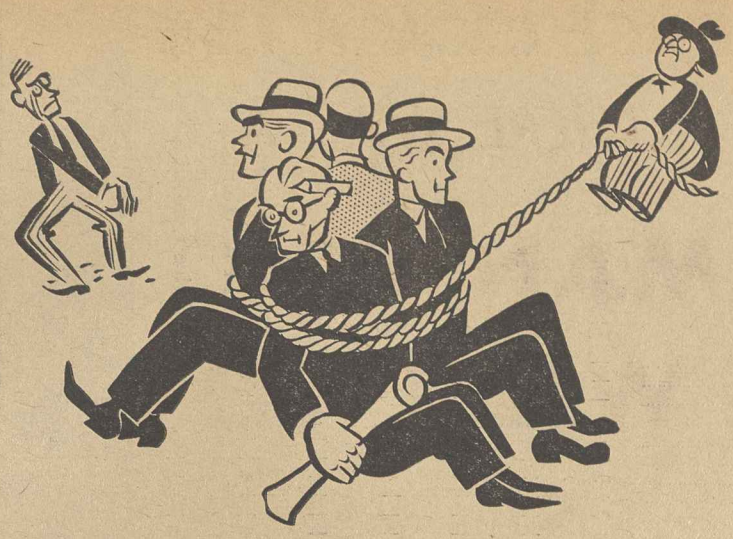
8



. . . and like passing a forced labor bill that tied up him and war production both . . .

9



. . . or like tying up U. S. war agencies and plans (especially Reconversion) in knots of confusion and futility . . .

10

11

. . . then he woke up POP! from his nightmare the way you do just before you go over that cliff . . .

12

13

14

. . . and was a WIDEAWAKE CITIZEN doing his duty as a voter to his country and to the servicemen who rely on him to help win the war and make a people's peace.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT stands for everything we want—speedy victory, security and freedom in the postwar world. For 12 years now he's fought for us and led the nation. The reactionaries in Congress who work and vote against his program are working and voting against us and against our country. The job of backing him is up to us.

Security Vital to Four Freedoms' Life

The Four Freedoms we're fighting for are bound up in one word—security. Two of these freedoms—freedom from fear and freedom from want—can be helped ahead if Congress passes the Social Security bill now before it.

Under this bill sponsored in the Senate by Sens. Wagner (D., N. Y.) and Murray (D., Mont.), and in the House by Rep. Dingell (D., Mich.), Americans will be protected from cradle to grave, through sickness, unemployment, old age and other hazards.

The new bill would broaden and increase unemployment benefits; health, maternity care, disability aid and help for the needy; old age assistance, child care, etc. Returned veterans would get special help in finding jobs, benefits if they fail to get jobs at once.

It would include many millions of people now left out of the present Act, which was passed 10 years ago and has not been improved since. Agricultural workers, seamen and domestic workers would be covered for the first time, as well as the self-tmployed. Social Security standards, now very uneven throughout the 48 states, would be lifted and made uniform.

The bill is sitting in Congress, after months of stalling. Urge your representative and your Senators to get action on it, to demand hearings and early passage.

Hatch Aims Axe at Work In Politics

There have been many attempts to cut down on the right of workers to vote and take political action. Most brazen of these is the Smith-Connally Act which tries to prevent organized workers from taking their part in politics along with their fellow-ctiizens from other walks of life.

The Smith-Connally Act (which runs for the duration and six months) forbids unions from giving money to candidates for election to Federal office — Congressmen and candidates for the job of President of the U. S.

The Act does not forbid labor political action or contributions in primaries or in local or state elections. It was directed solely against unions, since corporations and wealthy families are allowed to give any amount of money they like through their individual officers and members, simply by sticking to the $5,000 limit per individual.

Not satisfied with this attempted gag on labor political action, the Senate passed last February a new Hatch Act (S. 1272) aimed at the people's right to take political action.

This was the bill, sponsored by Sen. Carl Hatch (D., N. M.) to make the Smith-Connally Act's ban on labor union contributions permanent. Senator Hatch is also the author of the earlier Hatch Act that cuts off U. S. government employes from normal political life.

Servicemen's Wives Get CIO-Backed Aid

Service wives who have babies don't need to worry about meeting doctor's bills, thanks to CIO and CIO Womens Auxiliary initiative in pushing renewal of the Emergency Maternity and Infant Care program through Congress in June of this year.

Under the program, as renewed with a $42,000,000 appropriation, a service wife can get free care for herself through pregnancy and for the infant during the first year of life, including hospitalization, operations, etc. All she has to do is apply to her local Board of Health.

PAC Head Takes Congress Over Political Hurdles

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, June 17—CIO Political Action, most talked about and most written about of all political phenomena in this decisive election year, had a day in court this week with appearance of PAC Chairman Sidney Hillman before the Senate Elections Committee.

From the beginning, the two Republicans at the hearing (Ball of Minn. and Ferguson of Mich.) tried literally to turn it into a court trial, with sharp cross-questioning of Hillman in the manner of the best hardboiled prosecuting attorney.

Ball tried to make it into a lynching by demanding the right to question the witness first and let him make his statement last.

Hillman wasn't having any, however, and insisted on making his own statement before the questioning. Then, despite the fact that Ball claimed he had "an extremely important" meeting in 15 minutes, he stayed for an hour and a half.

Opening his testimony, Hillman assured the Senators that CIO-PAC has no "purge list" of Congressmen marked down for defeat, as has been widely reported in the newspapers. PAC, he said, considers the issues and the way Congressmen act on the issues, and is completely non-partisan in studying them.

"Our committee is a non-partisan organization," he said. "We have frequently reiterated our purpose to abstain from and discourage any move in the direction of establishing a third party at this time.

"Nor are we an appendage of either major political party. We are prepared to and do give our support to candidates on the basis of their records, without regard to party labels."

Main objectives of the PAC, Hillman said, are to support President Roosevelt for a fourth term, to work for a program of full employment now and after the war, and for world unity and cooperation after victory is won.

This program requires the largest possible number of voters in the 1944 election, he added, and can only be achieved that way, since a large vote is always a progressive vote.

"We do not think it sufficient to bring issues to the attention of the people," he said. "We also believe it to be one of our important functions to show people what they can do about these issues—how they can participate in deciding them.

"We have unshakeable confidence in the good sense and sound judgment of the American people. We believe that the democratic process works most effectively when the greatest number of citizens participates in that process. Therefore we are interested in the exercise of their right to vote by the largest possible number of our citizens."

Both Ball and Ferguson tried very hard to build up a case for the "illegality" of CIO Political Action, claiming it was against the Smith-Connally Act, the Hatch Act, the Corrupt Practices Act, etc.

They didn't get very far with this line. Hillman and PAC counsel John Abt pointed out that nothing in the law prohibits political action or contributions by labor during primaries, state or municipal campaigns.

Turning to the $5,000 campaign gift limit in the law, Hillman pointed out that PAC money did not go as political gifts but was spent on education on the issues. If this comes under the law, then every newspaper that prints a political editorial for a candidate or a party is also open to indictment.

"We welcome investigation," Hillman said. "It's our first chance to tell the country through this body what we stand for. We do feel a little surprised that we should be singled out, but that is because for the first time labor is doing an effective political job."

CIO-PAC has no fear of any amount of investigating, he added, but would like to know why other organizations aren't looked into. He cited Frank E. Gannett's "Committee for Constitutional Government" which has been accused in Congress of pro-fascist leanings, and also the huge political contributions of wealthy families such as the duPonts and the Pews.

"There are a contemptuous few who scoff at this idea" of labor political action, Hillman concluded. "They will never be able to understand the work of our committee, but will forever search for some darkly-hidden secret to explain its success."

Kilgore Bill Sparked By LaGuardia Testimony

WASHINGTON, June 17—Slow progress is being made on the Kilgore reconversion bill (S 1893) which got a boost from New York's Mayor LaGuardia in testimony last week and a knock from Under-Secretary of War Patterson.

LaGuardia praised the bill as a means of preventing the type of chaos that occurred in the Brewster plants when 12,500 workers were thrown out of jobs without provision to place them where they were needed or take care of them while they were unemployed.

Reconversion is not only a post-war problem, but an immediate question as the Brewster situation shows. War plants are being cut-back and reconverted right now.

SIDNEY HILLMAN
Talked on the Issues

The Kilgore bill, while aiding industry, also protects the workers and the veterans. Here's what it does:

Pays total cost of moving war workers from one plant to another where the worker is needed, and also helps prevent him from becoming unemployed.

Provides six months of training for displaced workers and war veterans, with from $50 to $100 a month maintenance.

Provides unemployment benefits of $20 a week, plus $5 for each dependent up to a total of $35 for as long as the war worker or veteran is unemployed.

Aids war workers and veterans in case of sickness or disability. This is of special importance to veterans. Merchant seamen, federal employes, state and local government workers are also included in this and in the unemployment protection. Benefits last for the duration and two years after the war.

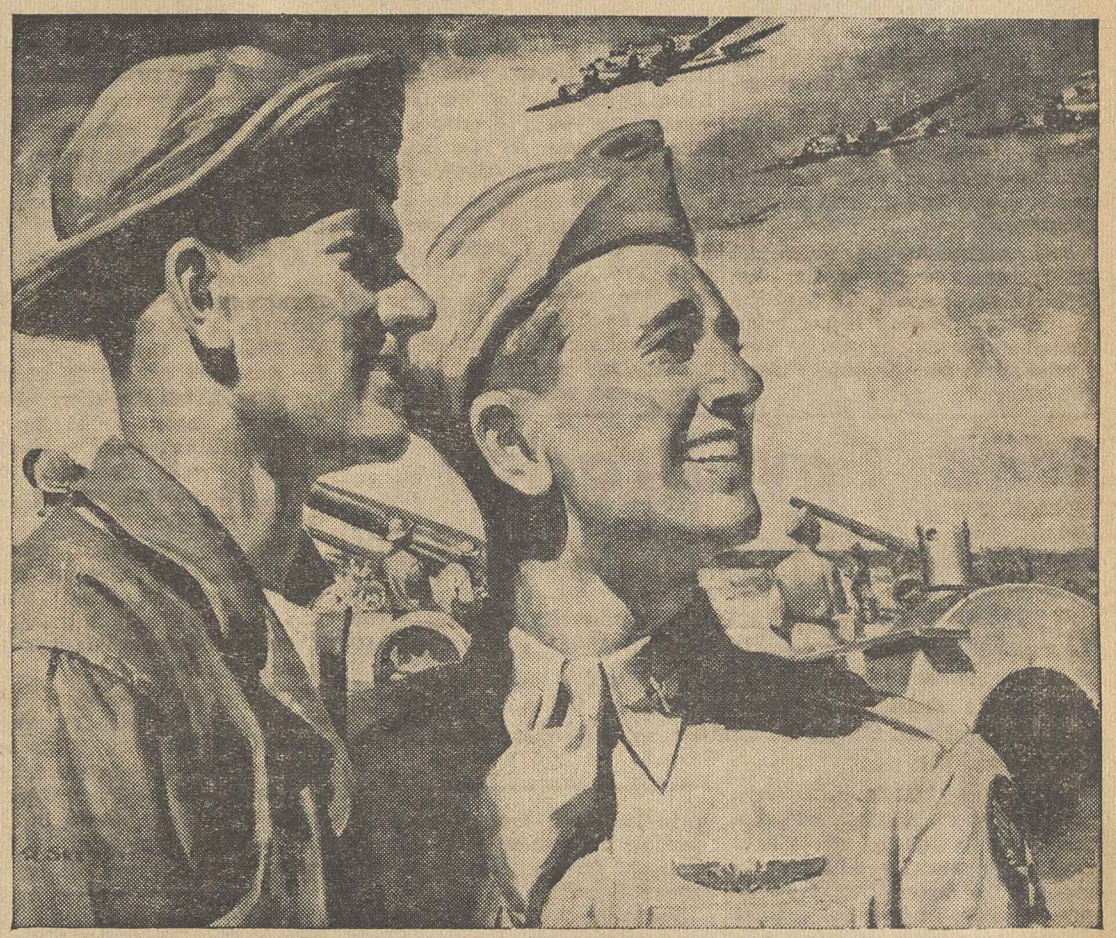
These are the features that protect the workers and the returning veterans—scores of thousands of whom are coming back every month seeking and finding jobs in war industry.

CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhoods are pushing the Kilgore bill, with CIO in the lead. The Senate Military Affairs Committee is more interested in pushing the wholly inadequate Murray-George bill (S 1730 which does not help displaced war workers or veterans.

As The CIO NEWS went to press, Sen. Murray (D. Mont. and Sen. George (polltaxer, Ga were actively fighting for their bill, which lacks disability and sickness help, has no training benefits, limited unemployment benefits and omits railroad and other workers covered in the Kilgore bill.

Urge Support For FDR

Philadelphia, June 17—The Executive Board of the CIO Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers this week added the collective voice of its 100,000 members in urging President Roosevelt to seek a fourth term.



Threat Still Looms For FEPC

Washington, June 17 — Polltax Senators, led by Russell of Georgia, were still trying to kill the Fair Employment Practices Committee that works against job bias in war industries this week.

Their plan has been to defeat the $500,000 fund for FEPC. Another scheme would limit FEPC to hiring not more than 25 percent of its personnel from minority groups that comprise less than 15 percent of the U. S. population.

Russell also had an earlier scheme to wreck FEPC by doing away with executive agencies set up by FDR under executive orders, by requiring them to be authorized by Congress.

The House passed the $500,000 fund for FEPC three weeks ago, by a slim margin of four. If the Senate dumps the fund by the time you read this, wire your Senators at once to start to restore it in conference or by special act.

Meantime, the House Labor Committee has a series of bills to make FEPC permanent. CIO is supporting these measures. Write to your Representative to work and vote for early passage.

One Policy Insures Whole Family

OMAHA, NEBR.—Here's something worthy of your attention. It's an extra liberal, new "Family Group" Life Insurance Policy that insures your family, 2 to 6 persons, for less than $1 a month. NOT $1 per person, but $1 for your entire family group of 2 to 6 members!

This policy is issued by an old line, LEGAL RESERVE life insurance company with assets of more than 7 million dollars. It is genuine LEGAL RESERVE life insurance and it pays for death to ANY member of your family group from ANY cause.

What's more, it pays quick cash benefits that are big enough to be worthwhile. For death due to natural causes or ordinary accident, this policy provides maximum benefits up to $1000.00—DOUBLE for auto accidental death, or $2000.00—and TRIPLE for travel accidental death, or $3000.00, all as provided in the policy. Also benefits are graded according to ages of persons covered and number insured.

The amazing part of it all is the fact that you can get this policy without medical examination. You may include parents, children (married or unmarried, whether living at home or away), grandparents, in-laws, in fact any relative in good health and between the ages of 1 and 70 years.

The cost for all is only $1 a month or $10.95 for a full year. What's more, this is a guaranteed rate, can never increase; and there can be no dues or assessments. Newcomers can be added at any time without extra cost; and the death of one member of the family does not terminate the policy. Instead it continues in force to protect those remaining, and provides continuous family protection.

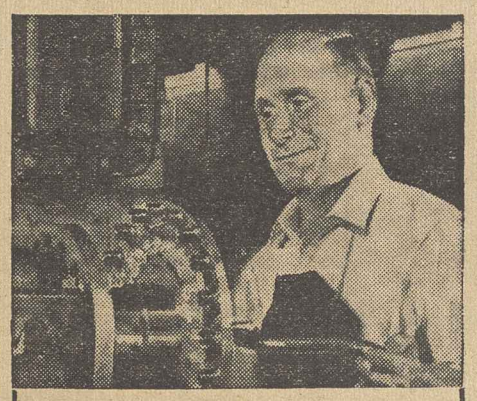
just as they did on their Studebaker jobs



Lieutenant, corporal and craftsman—the Hinkles still "work together"—Tom Hinkle builds Flying Fortress engines at Studebaker where his record as a motor car craftsman goes back nearly 23 years. At last reports, one son, George, is an AAF lieutenant in India, Bill Hinkle, Tom's other son, is a Coast Artillery corporal in the Fijis.

IT'S a long way from the Fiji Islands to the Studebaker factories where Wright Cyclone engines for the Boeing Flying Fortress are built.

It's still farther to the American air bases in India from which vital war cargo is flown into China across the towering Himalayan "hump."

But there's a link that spans those distant spots where Tom Hinkle's boys are now stationed and their father in South Bend. That link is a comradeship in craftsmanship which had its beginning when all three were working close together in the Studebaker plants.

Like large numbers of other Studebaker automobile craftsmen, Tom Hinkle is now building aircraft engines while his sons serve their country in combat areas overseas. Instead of manufacturing Studebaker Champion, Commander and President cars as a family team, they're working together for victory although many miles apart.

It's largely because of the peacetime care and skill of many such father-and-son teams that there's so much solid wartime value in Studebaker cars and trucks

Hatch Act Court Test June 29

Washington, June 17 — The Hatch Act is set for a round in U. S. District Court June 29 when hearings will open on a suit brought by the CIO United Federal Workers in behalf of 12 members working for government agencies in various parts of the country.

The suit seeks to prevent the U. S. Civil Service Commission from enforcing Section 9 (a) of the Hatch act, which forbids federal employes to engage in political activity.

Lee Pressman, CIO General Counsel, will represent the union, which contends that Section 9 (a) of the law deprives Government employes of rights guaranteed them under the Constitution, and will ask that its enforcement be stopped.

In commenting on the application of this law, UFWA Sec.-Treas. Eleanor Nelson said:

"We are firmly convinced that there is more danger of reverting to the old spoils system in government if employes have no political rights, than if they are permitted to take an active and informed part in the selection of national and local candidates for public office.

An affidavit signed by the 12 members state that it is an obligation for all citizens to participate actively in the making of vital political decision and that they "desire to engage in these activities freely, openly and without concealment."

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

June 8, 1944

Dear Mr. Murray:

I want you to know how genuinely I appreciate the spirit of your letter of June sixth, pledging anew the faith of the six million members of the Congress of Industrial Organizations on the day of the great invasion for the liberation of Europe.

You have expressed in terms of lofty patriotism the solemn import of D-Day. The road ahead is hard and may be long. We have reached the grim stage of the war. We shall be called upon to make many and great sacrifices. But the wholehearted pledge of support which you renew in behalf of every CIO member laboring on the production line points the way to certain victory.

Nothing could be more heartening than the pledge of faith and loyalty which you make to the Commander in Chief and to all of our fighting forces all over the world, to work and to sacrifice, "to speed the day of the total defeat of the Axis enemies of mankind."

Very sincerely yours,

Franklin D. Roosevelt

Honorable Philip Murray,
President,
Congress of Industrial Organizations,
718 Jackson Place, N. W.,
Washington, D. C.

FDR TO MURRAY: Above, the letter sent by President Roosevelt to CIO Pres. Philip Murray, thanking him for CIO support for the invasion leading to the liberation of Europe.

CIO Battles To Hike Textile Wages

NEW YORK CITY, June 17—Lending its weight to the CIO drive to secure an equitable wartime wage program, the CIO Textile Workers Union this week launched a frontal attack on the Little Steel Formula at hearings conducted before a special War Labor Board panel on TWUA's demands for wage increases and other improvements for workers in the wool and worsted industry.

The union's demands, in behalf of the employes of 17 American Woolen Co. Mills under contract with TWUA, include: a 65 cent minimum wage; a general increase of not less than 10 cents an hour; uniform occupational minimums; daily minimums; union security; two weeks' vacation with pay for workers with five years of service, in addition to the present plan; 5 cents differential for the second shift; and group insurance.

The wage increases sought by the union, TWU Pres. Emil Rieve told the panel, are necessary to eliminate substandard conditions of living. Wages in the American Woolen Co. plants, he showed, fall far short of 76 cents an hour, found by a TWUA pricing survey to be the minimum rate necessary for wool and worsted workers at the present time.

"The gap between workers' wages and their cost of living must be closed", Rieve stated. "Labor is the only segment of American society which has had its wages frozen.

"While labor went along whole heartedly with the President's stabilization program, it is now obvious that the program has been sabotaged by the refusal of Congress to keep prices in line, enact a fair tax program, or limit profits."

WLB Pay Bracket System Unfair—UAW

DETROIT, June 17—The area wage bracket system of the War Labor Board is a serious source of unrest, and is "inviting post-war economic catastrophe for workers and communities who have made outstanding contributions to the war production front," Vice-Pres. Walter P. Reuther, of the United Auto Workers, charged this week.

Under the WLB's area wage bracket system, Reuther said, the board and its regional offices have fixed wage rates for skilled workers in the automotive industry fully 60 cents an hour below rates agreed on in union agreements in the same areas.

Rates fixed by the WLB for production workers doing the same work in the same area, Reuther said, vary in many cases as much as 65 cents an hour. As a result, the UAW official said, the workers are calling the WLB policy "the bracket racket."

"The 'bracket racket' system," Reuther said, "not only denies workers equity based on equal pay for equal work, but it actually destroys the degree of stability and uniformity which we had established in our industry through the processes of collective bargaining."

Reuther said that the "WLB's sound and tested going rate was to be established by arriving at the community weighted average and by setting the minimum rate ten per cent below the average community rate."

"Even this procedure," he said, "would have been destructive of our industry-wide wage pattern, but the WLB, in conjunction with the Bureau of Labor Statistics, has not been establishing the area rate on the basis of weighted community averages. The WLB has given as much weight to small shops that have sub-standard wages with few employees as it gave shops with union wages and thousands of employes." Through this method, Reuther charged, the WLB "corrupts the application of its policy to the further jeopardy of our wage pattern."

WLB Region I: UAW-General Motors rates—$1.35 to $1.55 an hour. WLB rates—New Haven, 90c to $1.40; New London, 75c to $1.15; Boston, 80c to $1.35; Worcester, Mass., 70c to $1.20.

WLB Region II: UAW-General Motors rates—Buffalo, $1.35 to $1.55 an hour; Tarrytown, N. Y., $1.40 to $1.60 an hour. WLB rates—Buffalo, $1 to $1.45 an hour; New York City, 96c to $1.45 an hour.

Name Ferry As New PAC Publicity Head

Washington, June 17—Appointment of Ping Ferry, former chief investigator for the Office of Price Administration in New Hampshire, as chief of press relations for the CIO Political Action Committee was announced here today by PAC Chairman Sidney Hillman.

Ferry, a native of Detroit, was with OPA for two years. Prior to that he worked on newspapers in Detroit, New England, and in Central and South America. He also handled press relations for the recent meeting of the Intl. Labor Conference.

WLB Starts Lake Steel Hearings

Washington, June 17—A Natl. War Labor Board tripartite panel this week began hearing dispute cases involving the CIO United Steelworkers and 19 companies operating approximately 40 iron ore mines in the Lake Superior region.

The public and labor members of the panel are those now sitting on the so-called "basic steel" panel —David L. Cole, chairman, and Nathan P. Feinsinger, vice-chairman, representing the public, and John Despol of San Francisco, Calif., and Stephen Levitzky of Pittsburgh, Pa., international representatives of the union, representing labor.

The industry members will be Thomas M. McCabe of Duluth, Minn., an attorney, and R. C. Allen of Cleveland, O., vice-president of Oglebay, Norton and Company.

The panel will endeavor to make its report to the board at the same time the "basic steel" panel makes its report, thereby giving the ore companies concurrent consideration by the board of the steel and ore cases, which they desired.

The hearings before the "basic steel" panel are scheduled to resume, probably about June 27.

Special Interests Wreck Price Law

By ELEANOR FOWLER

The House amendment to the Price Control Act to exempt watermelons from price control really sums up what has been happening in Congress this past week.

Our highest American legislative body has been meeting to consider renewing one of the most important pieces of wartime legislation—the Price Control Act. It is their responsibility to guard the national welfare in one of the greatest emergencies our nation has ever faced.

It is the duty of Congressmen to legislate for the public good and instead of a majority of them have been spending their time listening to and helping the lobbies of the special interests.

LAW CRIPPLED

The result, of course, is that the price control law has been crippled beyond all recognition. Plenty of lobbies have been here besides the watermelon boys — and all too many of them have got their way.

The textile boys, with the help of the cotton bloc, have chalked up one of the most serious raids on price control. Their Bankhead amendment, if it becomes law, will mean an increase of 10 to 20% in clothing prices, especially inexpensive women's and children's clothes and work clothes. The cotton farmer won't get a cent of that price rise, but the textile mills will get double and more their already staggering profits.

The big retailers have won the outlawing of the "highest price line limitation" which operated to prevent stores normally selling nothing more expensive than $5.95 dresses from suddenly selling only $10.95 or $16.95. This deprives consumers of one of the few protections we have had against increasing clothing costs.

CHISELERS' VICTORY

The chiselers and the black marketeers have won a victory in the weakening of the enforcement provisions of the act. Congress has voted that anyone who is charged with violating OPA orders in the future can turn around and challenge the validity of the order. He may lose in the end, but during the several months, or more, it takes OPA to prove each order is reasonable and within its powers, the violators will go free.

And when they do land in court, if they can show they really didn't mean to violate the regulation, they can be excused.

These are some of the outstanding victories the special interests have won. Of course, Congress has not finished with the bill. It goes to conference, where members of the House and Senate will work out a bill acceptable to both houses.

The way things stand now, however, it doesn't look as though a bill acceptable to Congress would also be acceptable to the consumers or in the interest of the public welfare of the United States. In that case we may have to call upon the President once more to use his veto to save this country from inflation.

Senate Hears

Ward Case Affected 15 Millions

Washington, June 17—Approximately 15 million employes would have been eliminated from its jurisdiction, the War Labor Board told the Senate Judiciary Committee, if it had refused to assume control over the Montgomery-Ward labor dispute with the CIO Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes.

The board in a brief presented to the full committee stated:

"Additional facts which the board had before it, since they were matters of which they might properly take judicial notice, were that approximately 15,500,000 people are employed in such fields as distribution, transportation, communication, service and wholesale and retail trades.

"If the board were to rule that it lacked jurisdiction over the dispute in the Montgomery Ward case, it would also need to rule that it lacked jurisdiction over labor disputes involving these 15,500,000 people."

Fighting on another Montgomery Ward front, Attorney General Biddle renewed his attack on a Senate sub-committee report which condemned the Government's seizure of the Chicago properties of Montgomery Ward. Biddle declared that the sub-committee took "an erroneous view of the law."

Meanwhile, Samuel Wolchok, president of the Retail Union, announced that CIO unions to date had contributed $50,000 to an organizing pool for the purpose of conducting a nation-wide organizational campaign among all Montgomery Ward employes.

Twenty-five thousands each was contributed by the Steelworkers and the Auto Workers.

FDR Praises Patriotism Of CIO Auxiliaries

WASHINGTON, June 17—A D-Day pledge to speed victory over the hordes of Hitlerism was contained in a letter from Pres. Faye Stephenson of the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries to Pres. Roosevelt last week and brought immediate recognition from the President.

Mrs. Stephenson wrote him: "Our hearts go out to the boys who are now risking their lives in France to rid the world forever of fascist terror. We pray God that Victory may be rapid and complete and we pledge our unalterable devotion to you, our Commander-in-Chief.

"There is a ring of sincerity and earnestness and high patriotism in your letter of June 6, renewing in behalf of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO your pledge to do everything within your power to speed victory. It is an appropriate D-Day message.

"I am impressed not less by the significant bodies of steadfast and whole-souled women, who constitute the Congress of Auxiliaries in whose behalf you write, than by the fine spirit of patriotism which prompts this letter."

Report from France

Vichyites Ousted As Underground Arises

NEW YORK, June 17—(ALN)—Mass demonstrations against local Vichyites are being held by the French people in the towns and villages now being liberated by the Allies, war correspondents report.

"The chief Nazi collaborationist of Bayeux, who is also head of the 'Anti-Bolshevist League,' was shoved through the main street by an hilarious and demonstrative crowd," Alan Moorehead, London Daily Express correspondent representing the Combined Allied Press, reported from Normandy. "His shirt was half torn off, and a wreath of roses crowned his head in an ironical take-off of a ceremonial. One of the collaborationist policemen was beaten by the screaming townspeople."

These uprisings have as their background four years' starvation for the entire people of France. During those years, the majority of French men and women who did not themselves undergo arrest, torture, execution or deportation to Germany, saw members of their families or friends suffer these cruelties. Their hate is directed against the German occupationists, but perhaps even more so against those Frenchmen who betrayed their country by selling the people to the invader.

As recently as last April 28, Marshal Petain, in a radio address, heralded the day "when our civilization will have definitely been made safe from the menace of Bolshevism, thanks to Germany's defense of the continent."

For the people, Germany's role as "saviour against Bolshevism" has meant occupation of two-thirds of their country—including the richest and most populous regions—and deportation of millions of young Frenchmen to German concentration camps or forced labor.

UNDERGROUND PRESS

The spirit which is now inspiring the French people to rise against the Nazis and collaborationists has been voiced during the last four years in their underground press. It is estimated that over 60 illegal newspapers appear regularly in occupied France.

Among those with the widest circulation are the partisan organs Combat, Liberation, Le Franc-Tireur, Valmy and Liberte, the Communist party organ L'Humanite and the Socialist party's Le Populaire.

La Vie Ouvriere, organ of the General Confederation of Labor (CTG), and Bulletin des Chemins de Fer, organ of the railway workers, are among the trade union papers which began to appear illegally almost immediately after the fall of France in June, 1940.

The mastheads of these papers carry such slogans as "Our hate for the tyrants; liberty or death" —revived from the French revolution—and "Thee is but one enemy, the invader!"

FLOUT GESTAPO

These papers are put out directly under the noses of the Gestapo and the Vichy police, who have several times admitted their failure to prevent their publication and distribution.

Slave Asia Danger To U. S.—Wallace

NEW YORK, June 17—"Until all Asia is free and prosperous, our own prosperity and freedom are in danger," Vice-Pres. Henry A. Wallace stated in a pamphlet written shortly before he left America on his current mission to the Far East. Writing under the title, "Our Job in the Pacific," Wallace said:

"What we want is prosperity combined with security. We cannot have prosperity for ourselves alone. We cannot sell unless others can buy. We cannot maintain a high standard of living if it is to be undermined by the low standards of others.

Asserting that Asia cannot permanently exist half free and half subject, Mr. Wallace says that "it is not to our advantage to perpetuate this division." He names India, the Netherlands East Indies, Burma, Malaya and Indo-China as among the subject countries referred to.

Japan, he says, will fall at the end of the war into still another category, for while "our primary objective must be to keep Japan disarmed," yet "we cannot keep Japan in permanent subjection ..without going against the trend toward the reduction of colonial areas."

He suggests that Japan should become "an Asiatic Sweden," working for self-sufficient food production, for high technological skill and quality production rather than military power.

New CIO Vets' 'Mag' Published

New York, June 17—"The New Veteran," vest-pocket monthly magazine devoted exclusively to the veterans of World War II, made its first appearance this week.

The 16-page magazine is published by the National CIO War Relief Committee and deals with many of the down-to-earth problems of our returning servicemen.

Leo Perlis, national director of the War Relief Committee, in commenting on the new soldier publication, stated:

"The New Veteran is a tangible expression of CIO's active interest in the veterans of this war, and its determination that they shall have a chance to make a decent living, to raise their families in security, and to live in freedom from the threat of another world conflict."

Asks Cooperation In Survey Of Self-Made Men

College Park, Md., June 17—"Who are the self-made men today?" is the general question Prof. C. Wright Mills, sociologist at the University of Maryland, proposes to answer in a survey he is conducting to determine the opportunities presented to several hundred business and labor leaders.

Professor Mills asked this week that CIO leaders who have received the questionnaires fill them out and return them as quickly as possible.

CIO Servicemen Help Work on Soviet Planes

MOSCOW, June 17—(ALN)—Among the hundreds of Americans servicing the tremendous air bases built by the Soviet Union for the American Air Force Eastern Command are many electricians, machinists, plumbers, carpenters and other skilled servicemen who are members of CIO unions.

In charge of one phase of radio work is Cpl. Jerome Pinzur of Brooklyn, N. Y., a former worker in the Western Electric plant and a member of the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers. Cpl. Donald Price of Lansing, Mich., is a member of the Oldsmobile local of the CIO United Auto Workers.

UAW-CIO Local 130 at the Fleetwing plant in Pennsylvania has its own mission to Russia in the person of Sgt. Ray Chichowski of Quakertown, Pa., who is waist gunner in a huge Flying Fortress which participated in the epoch-making first flight of American planes to the American base "somewhere in the Soviet Union" on June 2.

These young men and others like them made it possible for the huge American-made planes to make shuttle flights from bases in Italy, England and elsewhere to the Soviet Union, bombing targets in enemy-occupied Europe.

Coming to the USSR is a great event for the boys. "The Russian spirit toward Americans is unequalled anywhere in the world," Lieut. Albert M. Jaroff of Portland, Ore., said, adding: "We aren't just here to fight against the Germans. We are also here to represent America, like diplomats, and to show what Americans are really like."

DESCRIBES RUSSIANS

Everyone of us is glad to be here," said Charles Williamson of Norfolk, Va., 22-year old veteran of 47 missions and a former fisherman.

"The Russians sure are different," commented Peter Osterhaus, of Cleveland, O., who worked as a junior engineer at the Alliance plant there. "What strikes you most of all," he said, "is their independence, their cleanliness and their pride. In Italy, Arabia and Africa where we were before, everybody tried to beg from us, but nothing like that happens here."

LABOR'S RECORD OK: That's the unanimous opinion of two GI's convalescing at Lawson General Hospital at Atlanta, Ga. They are Staff Sgt. Earl Ledford (left) and T/Sgt. Daniel A. McKinley. Both have received the Purple Heart and the RAF Silver Boot.

Labor's Record OK, Wounded GIs Testify

ATLANTA, Ga., June 17 — Anti-union propaganda among servicemen is striking a well-deserved snag, according to the expressions of a number of GIs who have been in the thick of the fighting in North Africa and Italy.

Two wounded veterans this week said flatly that labor's record is O.K. and that GIs abroad ought to know about it.

The two are Staff Sgt. Earl Ledford and T/Sgt. Daniel A. McKinley. Both are convalescing at Lawson General Hospital, near here.

"I have seen the stockpiles of war materials overseas waiting to be used and here at home waiting to be shipped, and I have seen no letup on labor's part to keep this material flowing in ever increasing lots to the boys overseas," Sgt. Ledford told a CIO NEWS correspondent.

Ledford and McKinley have made many tours through southern war plants under the sponsorship of the Army Industrial Services. Sgt. McKinley asked that men overseas be told that "definitely the workers and public here are behind us 100%.

OPINION FROM ITALY

He is Sgt. Martin A. Watkins. Sgt. Watkins wrote: "You have in the CIO Political Action Committee the machinery with which to drive out of the halls of government, the saboteurs of the war effort, the hate-mongers, and the opportunity to throw the fear of God into the native facists.

"I would like to see each of the five million CIO members spend one hour a week more working in the CIO Political Action Committee for a CIO brother in uniform. Get behind the Committee, brothers, and give it a push for a CIO soldier."

Plan Organizing Drive

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 17 — Plans for an extensive organizing campaign among white-collar workers were made at a conference of Western Pennsylvania locals of the United Office and Professional Workers of America this week.

Resolutions were adopted urging President Roosevelt to accept a fourth-term, and supporting the CIO Political Action Committee, the Fifth War Loan Drive and the Steelworkers' demands for a 17-cent an hour wage increase.

Win 1st Victory in Sleepy Lagoon Frameup Case

LOS ANGELES, June 17—The fight of labor and liberal groups to free the victims of the notorious Sleepy Lagoon frameup this week won its first victory with the announcement of parole release dates for nine of the 12 Mexican-American boys serving sentences in San Quentin prison for the unproved murder of one man.

Forerunner of fifth column-inspired race riots here last summer, the Sleepy Lagoon case was one of the most outrageous instances of injustice and race hatred in the history of west coast vigilantism.

The boys were convicted for the murder of Jose Diaz, found dead near a mud swimming hole called Sleepy Lagoon, although no evidence linked them to his death or showed that it was other than accidental.

They had been rounded up with hundreds of other Mexican youths, held incommunicado, beaten and terrorized until the police wrung implicating statements from them.

They were then given a mass trial before a jury inflamed with prejudice whipped up by the Hearst press. The campaign of race hatred was spread throughout the area and was used by Axis propagandists in Latin America to stir up resentment and distrust of the U. S.

The fight for pardon of the frameup victims had the support of the national and California CIO and of other labor and liberal groups.

The Sleepy Lagoon Defense Committee, headed by Atty. Carey McWilliams, hailed action of the parole board as a distinct gain, but said the case will continue not only to free the three boys who cannot benefit by parole action, but completely to exonerate the nine.

Even though they are out of prison, they will be considered guilty, lose their citizenship rights and suffer severe job problems, McWilliams said, adding: "We have the duty to clear their names and restore their rights."

GIs to CIO:

Keep Unions Alive For Servicemen

Washington, June 17—A GI program to keep unions alive in the minds of union members overseas was presented this week to CIO Pres. Philip Murray by three servicemen who are members of the CIO United Steelworkers of America. High on the list of recommendations was extended circulation of CIO papers, including the CIO NEWS Servicemen's Edition.

The three CIO members are Meyer Bernstein and George M. Brugog of the Gary Works, Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., and John Tierney, former recording secretary, USA-CIO Local 1593.

GREATEST NEEDS

"Greatest needs are to acquaint our membership in the armed forces with their rights in the union, their rights under the contract, their rights under the law, and the manner in which the CIO is looking after their interests at home," the soldier-unionists advised.

They stated that the average fighting man doesn't know that he is still in good standing with his union. Many think that their membership lapses when they cease to pay dues.

"The serviceman regrets having lost contact with his union . . . and in spite of the drum hammer barrage of anti-union propaganda and sentiment he is exposed to, he is ready and anxious to rejoin the ranks of organized labor as soon as the opportunity presents itself," the GI's said.

They suggested the following local union program to encourage this spirit:

SEND CIO NEWS

1. In each local union establish committees of correspondence whose duty it will be to write servicemen giving answers to their questions. This committee should also see that they receive copies of union papers and the Servicemen's Edition of the CIO NEWS.

2. Send the servicemen dues cards or other evidence of continuing membership.

3. If possible prepare department or mill news and chatter papers, preferably with pictures.

4. Send the servicemen small remembrances but do not mail cigarettes. Practically all gift smokes are promptly deposited in the nearest trash dump. In combat zones soldiers are issued cigarettes free.

Atherton Hit By Union Legionnaires

Chicago, June 17—Representing more than 212 trade union posts, delegates to the National Conference of Union Labor Legionnaires of the American Legion recently closed a two-day conference here which condemned Legion Commander Warren Atherton for exceeding his authority in "endorsing undemocratic and discriminatory" anti-labor legislation.

The conference condemned the Austin-Wadsworth bill; endorsed labor's no-strike policy; condemned as "un-American" the discrimination against Negroes in the U. S. armed forces; urged labor-management committees to plan for peacetime production; supported price control, and called for unity in the ranks of all labor.

Among those who spoke before the Union Legionnaires were: Kermit Eby, CIO Educational Assistant, and Victor Olander, Secretary-Treasurer, Illinois Federation of Labor.

Ask Severance Pay In All U. S. Aircraft Industry

Detroit, June 17—The CIO United Auto Workers this week opened a campaign to obtain severance pay for UAW aircraft workers who are laid off through contract terminations or general eductions in the level of production.

Presidents of all UAW aircraft locals were instructed by Vice Pres. Richard T. Frankensteen, aircraft division director, to enter into negotiations immediately with their respective managements for inclusion of a severance pay clause in their contracts.

"If management refuses to accept this clause (this can be expected in practically every case)," Frankensteen wrote in his letter of instructions, "immediate steps should be taken to call in the conciliation service and to secure certification of this as a dispute case to the Natl. War Labor Board."

The aircraft division will then take steps necessary to obtain from the WLB consolidation of the separate severance pay requests into a single case covering the aircraft and aircraft engine industries.

Reliable information from procurement officials reveals that additional cutbacks will take place in the aircraft industry before the end of 1944, Frankensteen said, "but these later terminations will take place against a background of a generally declining war production program."

"In order to maintain stable production in the aircraft industry and in the face of the decline requirements of our armed services," Frankensteen said, "some inducement must be offered to the workers to keep them from migrating to (what might appear to be) more secure employment in civilian or nonessential work, and it is certainly apparent that war workers are justly entitled to greater security than is afforded by existing compensation laws."

The aircraft division's proposal provides for severance pay in the amount of four weeks' pay at 48 hours a week computed at the highest rate received during the last six months for a worker employed less than one year, and eight weeks' pay at 48 hours a week computed at such rate for a worker employed at the company for one year or more.

WLB Controls Pay in Hawaii

Washington, June 17—A unanimous resolution of the Natl. War Labor Board, extending wage and salary stabilization and procedures for the settlement of labor disputes to the Territory of Hawaii, was announced this week.

The Board's resolution temporarily banned any wage or salary adjustments in Hawaii pending the adoption of appropriate regulations to cover the territory.

Charges GM Using GIs Against UAW

DETROIT, June 17—Returning servicemen are being used by employers in an effort to undermine union contracts. That was the charge made by Walter Reuther, UAW-CIO Vice-president, against the General Motors Corp. this week.

Reuther, in commenting on publicity given the Company's discharge of five servicemen because of non-payment of dues under the maintenance-of-membership clause, said.

"General Motors is attempting to use some returned soldiers as a pretext for undermining its contract with the UAW-CIO.

"The UAW-CIO has more than 100 GM plants under contract. Prior to issuance of the story by GM, we had never heard of these cases. At no time did the Corporation bring them to our attention.

"Obviously the corporation is not as much interested in the five ex-servicemen as it is in using them as propaganda against the union," the UAW official stated.

He charged that the company was "simply climbing on the Montgomery Ward bandwagon in its fight against labor and the WLB."

Reuther pointed out that no UAW member who enters the armed forces is required to pay dues. He automatically continues in good standing until he resumes his former job. His re-employment is safeguarded by a clause placed in UAW collective agreements on the sole initiative of the union. Similar provisions were later incorporated in the selective service act.

CIO Proves Cost Of Living Rockets 45.3%

CIO proved this week that the cost of living has shot up a total of 45.3 per cent over January, 1941, nearly 2 per cent more than since last January. This is almost twice the living cost estimate used by the Natl. War Labor Board in determinig wage increase policy. Meanwhile, government officials reported that the 23.4 per cent increase reported by the Bureau of Labor Statistics "grossly understates the rise in the cost of living."

Back 5th War Loan—Murray

WASHINGTON, June 24—CIO President Philip Murray this week urged all CIO unions to give utmost support to the Fifth War Loan drive.

"Soon we will be celebrating July Fourth," President Murray stated, "to commemorate that day 168 years ago when the founders of our nation met in Philadelphia and pledged 'our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor' in support of our country.'

"In this critical year of the war when the forces of freedom are battling to save us from the enslaving power of the enemy, I call on the members of the CIO to renew that pledge."

The Fifth War Loan drive will give members an opportunity to fulfill part of that pledge, the CIO leader said. "We can do it by buying War Bonds and more War Bonds—not only what we think we can afford but what we can do beyond that by sacrifice."

Crack Anti-Vacation Policy in Textile Mill

New Orleans, June 24—A four-year struggle ended in victory over the Lane Cotton Mills Co. this week when the CIO Textile Workers Union won an arbitration award granting two weeks vacation and a raise in wages for the workers of this notoriously anti-labor southern employer.

The union opened its organizing campaign in 1937 when wages are reported to have been as low as 6 cents an hour. The present minimum is 50 cents.

CIO Man Wins Maine Nomination

Portland, Me., June 24—Emerging victorious in a three-way contest, Andrew A. Pettis, president of Local 50 of the CIO Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, will be the Democratic nominee for Congress for Maine's First Congressional District. Pettis ran in both the Republican and Democratic primaries.

Pettis will face the well-oiled GOP machine candidate Rep. Robert Hale, the incumbent, who defeated Pettis in the Republican primary. Pettis is endorsed by the Maine United AFL-CIO Committee.

Win Fight Against Bias

Chicago, June 24—Another area of race discrimination was pierced this week, upon the announcement of Elmer W. Henderson, regional director of the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee, that the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad has agreed to the employment of qualified Negroes as stewards in its dining car serv-

Negotiations between the company and FEPC had been instituted on the basis of complaints received from the CIO United Transport Service Employes Union and others that qualified Negro waiters and waiters-in-charge were denied positions as stewards solely because of their race.

2-1 CIO Victory

Rochester, Minn., June 24—A better than 2-1 victory was chalked up by the CIO State, County & Municipal Workers this week at the Kahler Corp. The score was 357 to 160, according to Regional CIO Director Fullerton Fulton.

Survey Shows

90% of Vets Say Unions Are OK

WASHINGTON, June 24—A spot check of 22 World War II veterans discharged and returned to jobs in industry this week proved that they know the score about labor, with 90 per cent of them declaring that unions are absolutely necessary for job protection. All of them agreed that stories about war workers' "fabulous" wages are a lot of bunk.

The survey was conducted by "Iron Age," industry magazine. It showed that only two of the veterans were opposed to unions.

The magazine said that 13 of the 22 veterans favored the closed shop "since it afforded the best worker protection and all who benefit by a union's presence in a plant should share in dues payments."

Although admitting that the small number of veterans interviewed made the survey far from conclusive, the magazine nevertheless devoted three full pages to the story.

"When asked about current wage rates," the magazine said of the veterans, "there was complete unanimity in pooh-poohing the concept of war workers' swollen purchasing power.

"Although 20 admitted that during their period of military service they believed newly rich war workers were squandering their unaccustomed wealth, they now were of the opinion that the rise in the cost of living has equalized wage increases while three thought wage earners were actually better off before the spurt in war production."

The survey found that 13 of the 22 veterans were in favor of the creation of a postwar agency with functions similar to the War Labor Board, since it "would diminish the number of peacetime strikes."

"All but two," the magazine said, "wanted to see publicized the going wage rates for all job classifications so that any one would know what were fair wage scales in a given community."

Frey Rider Passed--To Hobble Labor

Washington, June 24—Add to the things you want to talk over with your Senators and your Representative the latest anti-union deal on the Frey rider to the Wagner Act, which went through both House and Senate this week.

Under the new version of the act, all union-management contracts are sacred, no matter how collusive, unless they conflict with Section 8 (2) of the Wagner Act that defines company unions.

This is an improvement over last year's rider, which sanctified all stooge unions, whether blessed with an AFL label or not. One particularly evil feature aimed at unions is a clause saying that all complaints must be filed by an employe or employes"—that is, not by a union. This is intended to freeze out genuine unions by making it impossible for a complaint to be brought. No individual worker is going to stick his neck out by signing his name to a complaint against a company union.

Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, got the Senate to take this clause out when he appeared before the sub-committee in charge of the rider, but it was slipped back in the conference between the Senate and the House.

CIO Helps Save FSA For Farmers

Washington, June 24—CIO support helped turn a threatened defeat of the appropriation for the Farm Security Administration into victory in Congress this week.

Following an appeal from CIO Legislative Director Nathan Cowan, the House accepted a Senate proposal to continue the FSA another year, though with drastically cut funds. FSA is the one agency devoted to aiding the small farmer increase his production of war foods.

It has long been the target of the phonies in the "farm bloc" who represent big corporation farms interested in squeezing the small farmer out of business, regardless of the effect on war food output.

Thomas Talks Turkey To 75 Congressmen

Washington, June 24—Pres. R. J. Thomas, of the CIO United Auto Workers, talked to 75 Congressmen from both political parties last week at a luncheon in the Speaker's dining room, where he informally discussed labor's political and economic aims.

The UAW-CIO leader was accompanied by C. B. Baldwin, CIO Political Action assistant, and Irving Richter, national legslative representative of the UAW.

Avery Still Stalling On Ward Pact

Chicago, June 24—Again Montgomery Ward has refused to extend its contract with Local 20 of the CIO United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes and the case is back where it started from several weeks ago when two GIs lifted the venerable anti-labor, anti-democratic S. L. Avery out of his sweat-shop citadel.

In the second Ward-Union conference, the company flatly rejected every union proposal. However, the company offered a new wage schedule which the union stated would result in many wage cuts. Demands for a 40 or 42 hour week and for 3 weeks vacation for 10-year employes were also rejected by the company.

Meanwhile, on another Ward front, the WLB in Washington this week announced that it had directed the Montgomery Ward Co. to adjust the basic minimum salary rates of employes working in stores in Jamaica, New York; Detroit, Mich., and Denver, Colo.

The board's ruling, designed to correct substandard pay, establish minimum rates of $21.50 for the Jamaica store, $20.25 for the four Detroit stores and $21 for the Denver store. More than 3,000 employes are affected. The adjustments were made retroactive to Dec. 7, 1942.

Get Behind ACA Drive In Western Union--Murray

WASHINGTON, June 24—"Every affiliate of the CIO has stake in this election," CIO President Philip Murray stated this week in mobilizing the full strength and resources of CIO's organizational apparatus for the coming NLRB vote among the 60,000 employes of one of America's major line of communica-tions the Western Union Telegraph Company.

The CIO American Communications Assn. will be opposed in this election by several AFL unions which have joined together for this campaign and will appear on the ballot under the designation, AFL.

This election will be decisive in determining whether the CIO or the AFL will have effective jurisdiction in the entire communcations industry, Pres. Murray declared.

In a memorandum to all CIO international unions, regional directors, field representatives, city and state industrial union councils, local industrial unions, editors and publicity directors, Pres. Murray pointed out:

"If you reflect on the fact that 60,000 employees are scattered in every town, village, hamlet and city in the United States, you will appreciate the vast scope of the organizing problem involved here.

"The job of physical coverage, of bringing literature to and making contacts with the Western Union employes is a monumental one, and the ACA must not be left to meet it alone. In spite of the magnitude of the task, the ACA has an excellent opportunity of winning the election."

In urging full CIO support and cooperation, Murray added that the ACA will call upon all organizations within the next several weeks with specific, practicable suggestions indicating how each one can assist in this campaign.

Gene Cotton, Ex-CIO, Wins Navy Honor

Great Lakes, Ill., June 24—Eugene Cotton, 30-year-old former assistant general CIO counsel, was graduated from recruit training last week as honor man of his company at the U.S. Naval Training Center here.

Cotton was elected honor man candidate by his fellow bluejackets and selected for the honor by his company commander on the basis of military aptitude and progress. He has been recommended to attend Pre-Radio School.

Cotton, who lives at Silver Spring, Md., is a graduate of College of City of New York. He received his bachelor of laws from the Columbia Law School.

Doctors Join CIO Federal Workers

Washington, June 24—CIO entered the highly-important field of medicine this week when 41 doctors and 23 non-teaching members of the School of Medicine of Howard University joined the United Federal Workers of America.

"In becoming part of the CIO," Dr. Joseph L. Johnson declared, "the employes of the School of Medicine at Howard are joining hands with over 6,000,000 workers . . . and we are organizing to safeguard our mutual interests and thereby to contribute to the advancement of the School of Medicine and Freedman's Hospital."

The union will include the teaching and non-teaching staff of the Colleges of Medicine, Dentistry, and Pharmacy.

"We have decided to join the CIO which, under the leadership of Philip Murray, has done a splendid job in unifying all Americans, regardless of race, creed, or color, in support of our country's war effort" Dr. Johnson stated.

Win Maintenance Clause At 'Time'

Washington, June 24—Approximately 500 editorial workers of Time magazine will benefit by a WLB order this week awarding a maintenance of membership clause to the CIO Newspaper Guild of

A membership protective clause, taken from the constitution of the American Newspaper Guild, was added to the maintenance of membership order. This constitutional provision states that "no union member shall be expelled from or penalized by the union because of his convictions or because of anything he wrote or failed to write for publication."

13½c An Hr. Raise!

Washington, June 24—The National War Labor Board this week unanimously ordered the Century Brass Co., Minneapolis, Minn., to grant wage increases averaging 13.5c an hour to more than 50 workers represented by the CIO Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers. The increase is retroactive to May 10, 1942.

CIO Wins FEPC Round

Washington, June 24—National unity won this week in the Senate, but by a close margin and with a number of strings attached. The victory came on the Senate vote to appropriate $500,000 for the Fair Employment Practice Committee, which combats racial, religious and other discriminations in war jobs.

The polltaxers, led by Bilbo, McClellan (Miss.), and Russell (Ga.), put up a bitter-end fight against it, making violent anti-Negro, anti-CIO, anti-Semitic and anti-FDR speeches in which they openly suggested that lynching was the solution of "the Negro problem."

Three weakening amendments were passed, one barring action to make U. S. contracts carry anti-discrimination clauses, another barring FEPC from action that might lead to Presidential seizure of plants, and the third allowing employers ruled against by FEPC to appeal to FDR.

These were all offered by Sen. Russell. Fourteen Democrats, mostly polltaxers, and seven Republicans voted for the Russell amendments. 25 Democrats and 16 Republicans voted against.

The FEPC fund bill, part of a U. S. war agencies appropriations bill (HR 4879) now goes to House and Senate conference, and then to the President. In an earlier House vote, FEPC was puheld by a majority of four. Senator Pepper (D. Fla.) was the only Southern Senator to vote for FEPC, and against the plans to destroy it.

Security Parley Backs Wagner Bill

New York City, June 24—The Wagner-Murray-Dingell social security bill was endorsed by more than 400 representatives of trade unions and civic, educational, social service, medical, fraternal and business organizations meeting here last week at a city-wide conference on social security sponsored by the N. Y. CIO Council.

The conference called on the Democratic and Republican parties to include in their platforms planks with specific provisions for extensions of social security, and created a city-wide committee to rally public support or the measure.

CIO's Position

FDR Leadership Vital to War

President Franklin D. Roosevelt's great contribution to the nation as Commander-in-Chief must be continued another four years in the interests of the country's welfare, the CIO Political Action Committee said last week in its program for 1944.

Reciting the gains made by the people under the Roosevelt Administration, and FDR's record in prosecution of the war, the PAC called for his support by a broad front of unionists, liberal farmers and businessmen, and other progressive elements of the nation in the November elections.

The full PAC statement follows:

"Our first consideration must be the selection of the man to head our government—the President of the United States.

"By our measure, Franklin Delano Roosevelt's record is one of great and glorious achievement. When Roosevelt was inaugurated, in 1933, the American people were in dire need and in deep despair. The President acted decisively to bring about order out of chaos. Under his leadership, we then moved forward to these achievements:

"On the social security front: Old-age insurance; unemployment insurance; aid to the blind, the crippled, the needy.

* * *

"On the farm front: The raising of farm income and the saving of farms from foreclosure; the rescue of small and marginal farmers; crop insurance; the ever-normal granary; rural electrification.

* * *

"On the housing front: The saving of a million urban homes from foreclosure through the HOLC; slum clearance and low cost housing; the stimulation of private home building through the FHA.

* * *

"On the conservation front: Soil conservation; the TVA; unparalleled progress in flood control; erosion control; the conservation of all our natural resources.

* * *

"On the financial front: The insuring of bank deposits; an improved banking act; the protection of investors through SEC; the curbing of utility empires.

"On the national security front: President Roosevelt was among the first to recognize that the advance of the organized thugs in Europe, Asia and Africa threatened our own national security and to call for collective action to halt aggression. When that call went unheeded and Europe was plunged into war he led us in arming for our own defense and providing assistance to the nations resisting Hitler. As Commander-in-Chief he has given us unparalleled leadership on our march to Victory. As one of the principal architects of the United Nations he laid the foundation for the coalition of our freedom-loving nations which assures victory over the enemy and the possibility of an enduring peace.

"As President, and as Commander-in-Chief of our armed forces, he has not failed us.

"Therefore, we urge the nation to draft and elect Franklin Delano Roosevelt for another term in office as the man best qualified to lead the American people during the next four crucial years."

Sign 3,445 Voters In 6-Day Drive!

Detroit, June 24—A record 3,445 new voters were registered in a rapid six day drive by UAW-CIO Willow Run Bomber Local 50 in Ypsilanti, Michigan, this week.

Canvassing from house to house and from door to door in the Willow Run and Carver housing projects, 15 full-time workers took unregistered workers to the special registration booth established for the drive, to register. Two sound trucks and a loud speaker in a housing project cafeteria announced the registration drive.

Sam Cubeta, CIO Political Action Committee representative, supervised the drive.

Prior to the registration program, 50 girls were hired by the Washtenaw CIO Council and UAW Local 50 to break down 275,000 names of CIO members on a ward and street basis, to facilitate house to house canvassing.

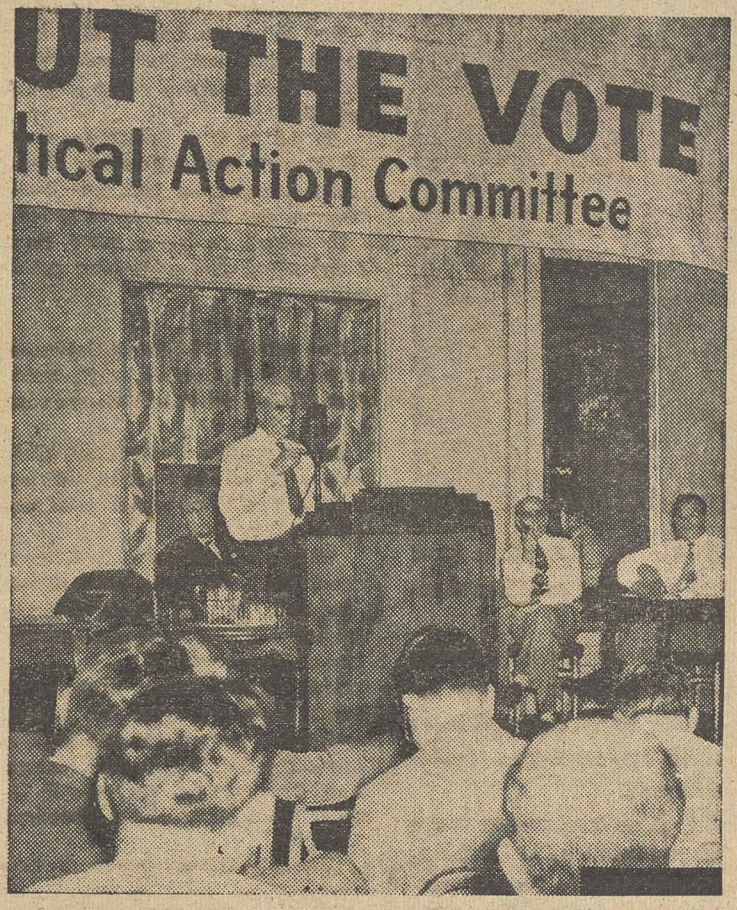
In conjunction with the registration drive, petitions to reduce the voting age to 18 years old in Michigan were signed.

Commenting on the effect of the drive, Walter Quillico, president UAW Local 50, said:

"I feel that public officers in this territory who have consistently nettled the working man are in for a rude awakening. The 3,445 who registered can swing any election here, and no one knows it better than those who fought so hard to sabotage the rights of the American workers in Washtenaw County."

Official Retires

Washington, June 24—Mary Anderson, director of the Women's Division of the Dept. of Labor has announced intentions of retiring after 24 years' service. President Roosevelt nominated Miss Frieda Miller, former New York Industrial Commissioner, to succeed Miss Anderson.



CIO POLITICAL ACTION was sparked in the nation's capital last week by a meeting of more than 300 CIO officials, headed by CIO President Murray and Sidney Hillman, chairman of CIO's Political Action Committee. Top, the meeting at the Willard Hotel. Bottom, President Murray addressing the delegates.

Montana Labor Backs Roosevelt

Great Falls, Mont., June 24—Representing 44 county organizations and 100,000 workers, farmers small businessmen and liberal professionals, the convention of the Montana Council for Progressive Political Action this week unanimously endorsed President Roosevelt and Vice-President Wallace for re-election.

The convention's platform urged full production and full employment for the postwar world and called for full protection of labor's rights, a rehabilitation program for returning servicemen and expanded social security.

CIO Forms New Natl. Political Action Group

WASHINGTON, June 24—Labor's first full dress political action conference, combined with a two-day CIO Executive Board meeting, ended here this week with a new broad national political body set up and a series of basic CIO policies set out and reaffirmed.

The new political body, to be known as the National Political Action Committee, will enroll all classes of citizens, businessmen, farmers, etc., with workers to back the objectives of the CIO-PAC in the November election.

It will be financed, according to a statement unanimously adopted at the conference, by small contributions from individuals rather than by contributions from the unions as such.

Addressing the meeting, CIO President Murray told the 300 delegates: "The Political Action Committee is strictly American. It seeks to put into effect the declarations of President Roosevelt and to rally the Nation behind him as our Commander-in-Chief.

"PAC is not a political party. It seeks only to win the quickest possible victory in this war and to build a better America. We are wedded to the ancient democratic traditions of the U. S.—the traditions of economic and political freedom."

In a speech at the close of the meeting, PAC Chairman Sidney Hillman warned the delegates of the hard work that lies ahead of all labor and all progressive citizens who want to see FDR re-elected with a liberal, win-the-war Congress to back him up.

If we fail, he pointed out, we shall see the "philosophy of Hooverism" back in power, with all that it means in poverty and mass misery for the American people and in a return to isolationism as the foreign policy of the Nation.

Hillman gave the delegates a new slogan to push their political action with, when he said: "Work hard for victory now, or be out of work after November."

Attacks on PAC in Congress and in the newspapers come from the most reactionary sources in America who hate and fear labor's political activity, Murray said.

"They can't understand labor's interest in politics," he declared. "Hence they plot to destroy labor. These people have had their 'PAC's' for generations. They contend that political action is their exclusive property. Hence the abuse and attacks on the CIO."

CIO Demands WLB Speed Action, Kill Phoney Pay Freeze

WASHINGTON, June 24—Four major policy actions marked the final day of the CIO Executive Board meeting here, which followed the PAC conference attended by some 300 delegates.

The first action sharply criticized the War Labor Board for policies which "instead of being streamlined and designed to meet wartime problems, are actually causing the most intense unrest and resentment throughout the Nation."

These include the continuance of the national wage freeze in the face of the facts of the rising cost of living, the "wage bracket" system which imposes wage rates "considerably lower than those arrived at through collective bargaining," "interminable delays in Board procedure which have made a mockery of any relief to be obtained through resort to the Board" and the Board's "abdication" of its wage raising authority to the Wage Stabilization Division of the WLB.

To meet these problems, the Executive Board set up a committee headed by President Murray to call on the Board and urge remedies. Serving on this committee are CIO Vice Presidents R. J. Thomas, Sherman H. Dalrymple, John Green, Albert J. Fitzgerald, Joseph Curran and Emil Rieve.

BACK KILGORE BILL

Second action of the Board meeting was a pair of resolutions on the reconversion problem, one urging quick passage of the Kilgore Bill (S 1893) and the other condemning the chaos in the Brewster case and demanding that the "management, plant and equipment of the Brewster Corp" be used "for the prosecution of the war and for the transition to civilian production."

Pointing out that the Kilgore bill provides help for demobilized war workers and returning veterans and sets up proper machinery for planning reconversion, the Board urged its speedy passage, saying:

"Only through adoption of the Kilgore bill can our national economy be geared to provide the maximum war production and at the same time provide adequate planning and co-ordination for reconversion and full postwar production and employment."

Tied in with the WLB and with the CIO wage cases was another resolution on the cost of living, which repeated CIO criticisms of the BLS Index and urged it be dropped as "a measurement of wartime living costs."

"These government agencies (WLB, Office of Economic Stabilization, etc.) must recognize the imperative need of granting the wage adjustment requested in the steel and other cases now pending before the WLB as necessary to meet the additional actual rise in the cost of living above the 15 per cent allowed under the outmoded Little Steel formula," the resolution said.

Charter Nine CIO Councils

Washington, June 24—Nine new CIO councils have been chartered in the last two months, it was revealed this week by John Brophy, director of Industrial Union Councils.

They are Torrington, Conn.; Boyd and Greenup Counties at Ashland, Ky.; Harrison County at Clarksburg, W. Va.; Sheboygan County at Sheboygan, Wis.; Greater Utica, N. Y.; Broome County at Binghamton, N. Y.; and three councils in Michigan — Branch County at Bronson, Macomb County at Van Dyke, and Ionia County at Ionia.

Correction

Last week's Special Legislative Supplement of The CIO NEWS erroneously listed the record of Rep. O'Neal (D., Ky.) as being anti-labor on the Smith-Connally Law vote. This was wrong. His vote was pro-labor.

Rep. O'Neal's record on this issue will be listed correctly in additional copies of the Legislative Supplement that are to be printed in the future.

The CIO NEWS regrets the error.

The BLS Agrees

The so-called "cost-of-living index" of the Bureau of Labor Statistics has been used as a weapon to keep wages frozen in the face of soaring living costs.

The CIO has proved again and again, by the most painstaking research, that living costs have risen nearly twice as much as this BLS index has claimed.

Now at last the BLS has itself admitted that its index "does not show the full wartime effect on the cost of living of such factors as lowered quality, disappearance of low-priced goods and forced changes in housing and eating away from home."

The BLS further admits that its index "does not measure changes in total living costs—that is, in the total amount families spend for living"; and that "income taxes and bond subscriptions are not included."

In other words, the BLS index of some retail prices is not a cost-of-living index at all. A gross deception has been perpetrated on the American public in passing it off as a measure of living costs.

Now this deception has been exposed and admitted, let's hope the BLS index will be scrapped once and for all as an argument for keeping down wages, so that wages may be adjusted speedily to the real increases in wartime living costs.

CIO And WLB

Present policies of the Natl. War Labor Board are playing into the hands of enemies of the administration who seek to provoke labor and create political confusion, even though it be at the nation's expense.

It is hard to exaggerate the intense and justified resentment among working people over wages that are frozen in the face of sky-high living costs, and over the endless delays and obstructions that prevent adjustment of their mounting grievances.

This resentment is held in check only by the workers' own patriotism and by the constant efforts of their unions to maintain and increase war production.

The CIO has consistently supported the WLB as the appropriate agency to resolve wartime industrial disputes. But this only makes it the more insistent that the Board really do this job, instead of creating the very unrest it is supposed to allay.

The CIO condemns the Board's policies on four major counts:

(1) Its refusal to revise the Little Steel formula in the face of living cost increases far in excess of 15%.

(2) The operation of the Board's "wage bracket" system—the bracket racket, as unionists call it—under which regional rates are set which tend to depress wages considerably below union levels.

(3) The yielding of authority over wage problems to the Wage Stabilization Division.

(4) Delays without end in Board procedure which make it virtually impossible for unions to obtain relief.

The last meeting of the CIO executive board condemned in the strongest terms these policies of the WLB and "the arrogance and shortsightedness of its administrative personnel."

The CIO demands speedy relief from these abuses as an essential step to enable the WLB to function effectively in the prosecution of our victory effort.

Kilgore Bill

Directed only to meeting industry's needs, it neglects the more pressing needs of labor, and it fails completely to provide a planned and well-rounded approach to a problem which cannot be solved in any one-sided fashion.

The Kilgore bill offers the only sane solution, by providing adequate unemployment compensation for the workers who are the first to suffer from cutbacks, and by setting up machinery for the planned coordination of policies relating to war production, reconversion and the postwar period.

Buy War Bonds

One of the easiest and most obvious ways to back the invasion is to buy war bonds.

Every dollar invested in this fashion does triple duty. It backs up the boys overseas. It bolsters the home front against inflation. And it provides the buyer with more postwar security.

Pres. Philip Murray has called upon every CIO union and member to back the Fifth War Loan Drive to the limit.

This is a duty to our country and to ourselves that no American dare neglect. Buy now, buy more and urge others to buy.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

DON'T WORRY about robot planes or the like, if strange sounds are wafted on the breezes that blow from Washington these days.

The CIO has turned the tables on them again, with the new plans adopted at its Washington political action conference.

It has gotten another boost from another knock.

★ ★ ★

The labor-baiters crowed when they got a clause into the Smith-Connally Act forbidding unions to contribute to the campaign funds of candidates in federal elections.

But they ate crow when they found this act had stimulated rather than stopped labor political activity.

It led to CIO unions forming their own Political Action Committee, instead of just contributing money for others to spend.

It helped to make labor more independent and self-reliant politically.

★ ★ ★

The effects of labor's increased activity in education, registration and getting out the vote were soon felt.

As one after another of their pals were knocked off in the primaries, the labor-baiters tried another trick.

They hollered to high heaven that the CIO was responsible for every one of these defeats, giving the PAC even more credit than it claimed.

They thought they were creating a bogey to scare the voters.

But the voters seemed to like the bogey better than its creators. And CIO political action got another boost from all the attendant publicity.

★ ★ ★

The next stunt of the labor-baiters was to demand investigations of the PAC, charging it with unlawful acts.

The Dept. of Justice investigated and found that neither the CIO nor its Political Action Committee had violated any federal statute.

The PAC welcomed investigation. Chairman Sidney Hillman appeared before a Senate committee, answered all questions and made all records available.

But at the same time, the CIO demanded that the investigations should include not only labor's political activity but also the huge slush funds of anti-labor and big business interests.

Liberal members of Congress offered amendments to investigate the many outfits from which the labor-baiters and reactionaries draw their financial support.

So this stunt too backfired.

The next hope of the labor-baiters was that they would catch the CIO with its overalls down after the political party conventions.

Once candidates were duly nominated for the federal elections, they figured they might make a case of law violation out of CIO support for such candidates.

But the CIO, at its Washington conference, declined even to get into such an argument.

It approved plans looking to the formation of a National Political Action Committee, including not only CIO leaders but also outstanding progressives from outside of labor's ranks.

It decided this committee should be financed, not from union treasuries, but by strictly voluntary individual contributions from CIO members and all other progressive Americans.

Thus financed, the new committee will be able to make political contributions in connection with the 1944 elections without any possible question of the strict legality of such activity.

But the labor-baiters have more to gnash their teeth about than the mere fact that CIO refuses to come anywhere near the traps they set. For the new plans will make labor's political activity even more effective than it was before.

(1) They will help to broaden this activity into a citizens' movement, a people's movement—as CIO has always desired—including farmers, professional folk, businessmen and all other progressives, as well as working people.

(2) The campaigns for small individual voluntary contributions from millions of labor unionists and other folks will stimulate more personal interest and activity on the part of more people than any other method of fund-raising.

They will spread political education to every home that is reached, and make every contributor realize he has a personal stake and must play a personal part in a political crusade of, by and for all the people.

No wonder the labor-baiters are gnashing their teeth. They want above all to restrict political interest and activity on the part of the common people. Yet every move they have made has had the very opposite effect.

Honor CIO Women

New York, June 24—Two young women CIO members will receive a national merit award this weekend in competition for "Miss Negro Victory Worker of 1944," sponsored by the Negro Freedom Rally.

The two are Miss Edna Rucker, of Detroit, a member of the CIO United Auto Workers, and Miss Aurelia Carter, of Yonkers, N. Y., a member of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

Thanks From Eisenhower

Chicago, June 24—Locals of the CIO United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers here this week received a personal letter of thanks from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, European invasion commander, for a copy of their special "Second Front" edition of the Chicago UE News.

The union distributed 45,000 copies of this edition to workers in 60 war plants in Chicago on the morning of the invasion.

Price Bill Is Gift To Chiselers—CIO

WASHINGTON, June 24—Final version of price control renewal as worked out this week by a Senate and House conference "will control neither prices nor rents, because it cannot be enforced," CIO Pres. Philip Murray said today.

Murray's blast was directed at the bill which, while it "compromised" on the Bankhead clothing steal and the Dirksen plan to kill off enforcement in the courts, left a number of serious crippling amendments.

These included permission to raise rents where landlords can prove increased costs or taxes, forgiveness for violators when they plead that they weren't chiseling "wilfully," and provision for court tests of regulations when a charge of criminal violation is made.

All these amendments, as Murray pointed out, help the big owner and penalize the consumer, while the small operator gets nothing. "For example," he said, "while an overcharge of $1 by a retail store may bring a penalty of $25, a manufacturer who overcharges $1,000 may get off by simply giving up the $1,000 illegally collected."

After the conference report is completed, the bill now goes back to both House and Senate for final passage, since it has to be an identical measure. It then goes to FDR for signature or veto.

FDR MAY VETO BILL

If the President vetoes the bill, Congress will require a two-thirds majority to over-ride. Then, since the present price control act runs out June 30, it will either have to pass another bill or a simple resolution extending the act as it now is, leaving the new bill until after the summer recess.

The manhandling of the price control bill is a good example of the finagling of polltaxers and reactionary Republicans that goes on in Congress. It is also a good example for studying the technique of the squeeze play.

In the beginning, the most extreme amendments were put forward, notably those by Rep. Howard Smith (polltaxer, Va.) which would have wrecked the War Labor Board and wage rates under the pretext of amending price control. These were quickly dropped.

Then the Bankhead amendment was put forward and passed the Senate, only to be dropped in the House and in the conference report. Much labor attention was correctly put on this scheme as it was on the Dirksen plan which was also dropped.

Now, after these "concessions," the House-Senate conference report comes forth with changes which Murray has said mean that price control "cannot be enforced," and which can only "result in a marked and continuing rise in prices and rents."

The present outcome of the price control fight is a clear lesson to all workers and consumers. Keeping guard over your living standards these days means keeping a close eye on everything that happens in Congress—on the major moves that go on out in front and the equally important maneuvers that go on behind the lines.

CIO-Backed Bill Would Aid Farmers

Washington, June 24 — The nation's farmers got a much needed boost when a CIO supported crop insurance bill (HR 4911) went through the House 283 to 54.

The bill as passed provides for insurance up to 75 per cent of the investment a farmer has in crops of wheat, cotton and flax. It also provides for studies on the feasibility of covering corn, tobacco, rice, beets and other crops.

The crop insurance bill was defeated in Congress a year ago July, by a combination of polltax Southerners and the reactionary Republicans. The bill now goes to the Senate.

It a real war measure, since it encourages and protects farmers in planting war crops. Write your Senators to support it.

'What Every Canvasser Should Know'

New York, June 24—Labor's political action workers were given some of the bed-rock facts about canvassing this week with the release of a CIO Political Action pamphlet, "What Every Canvasser Should Know."

The publication is the third in a series called "Every Worker a Voter," which is seeking to educate American workers about the vital issues in the 1944 elections and the proper techniques in registering and inspiring labor to vote.

Canvassers are urged to know thoroughly the important issues at stake before they visit prospective voters in their community. The voting records of Congressmen and the CIO's record in supporting progressive legislation are other vital data canvassers should have at their finger-tips—available in The CIO NEWS' Special Legislative Supplement (Publication No. 108).

Labor's political action workers are given excellent pointers on how to approach the future voter. Don't press too hard on the first visit, canvassers are told, but always ask if they and members of their family are registered. If they are not, offer to help them register.

Living Cost Rockets 45.3%, CIO Proves

WASHINGTON, June 24—Your cost of living has gone up not the 23.4% the BLS Index claims and not the 43.5% the joint CIO-AFL study showed last January, but 45.3%, CIO's latest study showed this week.

The study, issued by Philip Murray and R. J. Thomas and called "Living Costs in World War II," shows you're paying 71.9% more for food than you paid in January 1941; 76.8% more for clothing; 63.5% more for house furnishings; 15% more for rent; 14.8% more for fuel, and 22.8% more for "miscellaneous."

This contrasts with the much lower figures shown by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, which are still being used by the War Labor Board as the basis of its wage policy.

BLS FIGURES WRONG

Released the same week was the report of WLB Chairman Wm. H. Davis' special committee of experts which also found that the WLB Index was "misleading" and suggested that the BLS call it by another name than "Cost of Living Index."

The Davis committee's report, done as part of the President's Committee on the Cost of Living set up last winter, criticized the BLS for deliberately ignoring the total cost of living and selecting only a few items to study.

"The widespread opinion that the BLS Index grossly understates the rise in the cost of living is justified, if cost of living is taken to mean the amount of money a family spends for the commodities and services it buys," the report to Davis said.

Despite the increase of 44.9% in living costs, the Murray-Thomas report said that "the WLB has refused to recognize this fact, and has—with few exceptions—held wages down to the unfair and obsolete Little Steel formula.

OBSTINATE WLB POSITION

"To support this obstinate position, the WLB relies largely on the BLS Index, which hides almost half the wartime increases in living costs.

The War Food Administration, for example, uses the cost of living index of the Dept. of Agriculture in setting farm prices. This Index shows that farmers' living costs have risen 43% between Jan. 1941 and Jan. 1944.

The War Production Board, Murray and Thomas say, "in its work dealing with civilian supply and rationing, disregards the BLS Index and makes its own higher estimates of price increases.

BUSINESS DISREGARDS BLS

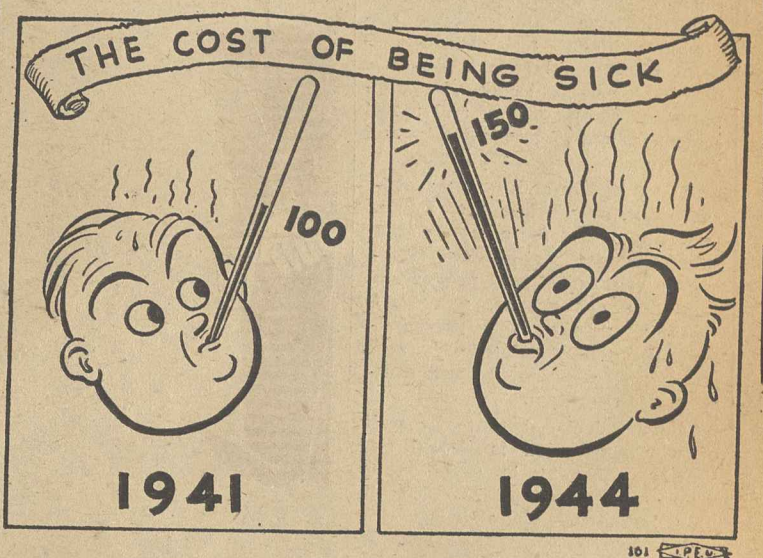
The Social Security Board also disregards the BLS "and makes its own higher estimates of price increases."

The Wall Street Journal, Business Week and other trade magazines for high-powered executives "have often repudiated the BLS Index and published their own studies showing larger increases in particular fields."

Only the WLB sticks to the discredited Index, and uses it to freeze workers' wages far below the cost of living. This is why it is important that the BLS Index be thoroughly exposed as a fake. The issue is not a duel between economists but a down-to-earth issue of bread and butter and pork chops.

As the Murray-Thomas report says, "The BLS Index is not a suitable measure of wartime living costs, and its use for this purpose in wage determinations has caused great harm to the war effort and serious injustice to the war workers.

"The WLB should discard the BLS Index as a measure of the cost of living for wage purposes, and substitute in its place this realistic—yet minimum—measure of 45.3%."



List TNT That Blew Up Living Costs

WASHINGTON, June 24—Here's how the cost of living has gone up 45.3%—almost twice the amount the BLS Index used in the Little Steel formula says it has—according to the Murray-Thomas report, "Living Costs in World War II" released this week.

Higher dollars and cents prices—chiefly in retail stores.

Quality deterioration—a shirt not only costs more, but it lasts only half as long as it used to.

Forced trading-up—cheap items have disappeared from stores, and you have to buy a higher priced substitute that's usually not so good.

No more special and week-end sales—you used to be able to save by watching for them. Now they don't exist.

More restaurant meals—war workers have to eat out more at much higher prices.

Forced purchase of homes—real estate agents unload homes at three times their real value on war workers who have to buy in order to have a place to sleep.

None of these things is covered by the BLS Index except retail prices. That's why labor demands that the War Labor Board stop using this phoney "Index" in its strangle-hold on wages.

Catholic Paper Hails CIO's Political Action Program

Columbus, June 24—Support of CIO's political action and educational program is coming from every segment of the country.

Recently the Columbus Register, official organ of the Catholic diocese of Columbus, carried an editorial aimed at the "dog in the manger" position of the opponents of labor, and at powerful financial elements who are becoming increasingly "alarmed" over the growing effectiveness o the CIO Political Action Committee.

Commenting on the CIO political action and educational program, the editorial stated:

"Thus far its funds (PAC) have been used in organizing a campaign to get voters registered, thereby qualiying hundreds of thousands for next fall's election, and for an education program aimed at informing the public on current issues. It would seem that getting citizens to perform their privilege of voting is democracy in action. It is praiseworthy, also, to educate the public on the issues of the day."

UAW Urges Save-Job Plan For Cutbacks

WASHINGTON, June 24—A four-point industrial reconversion program designed to aid the gradual return to civilian production and prevent mass unemployment as cutbacks continue was proposed today by the War Policy Division of the CIO United Auto Workers Union.

Presented by Pres. R. J. Thomas, the program asked for immediate comprehensive planning by a single government agency, development of a sound export program, dismissal wages, improved unemployment compensation, and a full scale program of public works and housing.

The program endorsed the Kilgore bill, now before the Senate, which provides for a coordinated governmental set-up for handling continued war production and the changeover, a central planning agency, labor participation throughout at all levels, and an improved unemployment compensation system.

Thomas declared that the peak of war production is passed and that employment is expected to drop approximately 1,650,000 in four industries alone before the end of 1944.

CUTBACKS LISTED

In the munitions industry, where 800,000 have already been disemployed, another drop of 1,000,000 is expected by the end of the year, he said. The other industries were aircraft, 300,000; shipbuilding, 200,000; steel and aluminum, 150,000.

In 1945, the UAW said, the reduction in employment will accelerate even faster.

Declaring that "winning the war is our most immediate task," the UAW asserted that "to achieve full production and full employment it is necessary to plan ahead for the difficult period of shifting from war production to civilian production."

The program listed specific steps that should be taken to ward off the impact of cutbacks:

1. When cutbacks impend labor and management should be notified "at the earliest possible moment—preferably 90 days in advance."

2. Planning the resumption of civilian production for both domestic and foreign markets should begin at once "in order that actual production may begin by not later than Jan., 1945, on a scale adequate to reabsorb the workers displaced by curtailment of war programs."

CIO FIGHTER: Sergeant Don Harris, tailgunner in the U. S. Air Corps, former international representative of the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, was awarded the Air Medal recently for gallantry in action over Europe. Above, as he looked in civilian life.

3. Special emphasis should be laid on the development of a sound export program to facilitate the reconstruction and rehabilitation of war-torn areas and the industrialization of relatively undeveloped countries.

Industry should not have the freedom to restrict output, the program continued, advocating that at the same time there should be vigorous enforcement of the anti-trust laws to prevent any restraint on production.

In addition the statement pointed out that the interests of small business must be protected and that "it will be necessary to retain government controls over prices and to continue necessary rationing restrictions."

Auxiliaries Mobilize To Aid FDR

Washington, June 24—Full backing for FDR's re-election and for the election of Congressmen who will support his progressive, win-the-war policies was voted this week by the Executive Board of the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries. The board stressed the need to speed the mobilization of women for the November campaign, particularly in opposition to the activity of women's fascist groups.

In other actions, the board:

1. Set up a Servicemen's and Veterans' Committee, urging special concentration on reaching servicemen and their families with voting information.

2. Laid plans for a broad aid-to-veterans program, including assistance to adjusting wounded men in return to civilian life; close contact with service familes to counteract the influence of fascist "mothers" groups; and distribution of union news through the CIO NEWS Servicemen's Edition and local union news letters.

3. Advocated formation of junior political action groups to enlist aid of unionists' children in the election campaign.

Appointment of Mrs. Louise Zinn of Indianapolis, Ind., member of the Kokomo auxiliary of the CIO United Steelworkers as a full-time auxiliaries field representatives, was voted.

Mrs. Beatrice Reeder, member of the Altoona, Pa., auxiliary of the CIO United Railroad Workers, was also designated a field representative. Mrs. Zinn will work in Indiana and the Chicago area, Mrs. Reeder in eastern Pennsylvania.

Other actions of the auxiliary board included authorization of a letter to the War Production Board on the urgent need to expand the recently announced program for the production of low cost clothing to include children's clothes and work clothes; and a letter to the Office of Price Administration urging immediate reestablishment of points on meats, canned fish and canned vegetables. Developing shortages of these foods were reported by members from all parts of the country.

White Collar Workers' School

New York, June 24—White-collar workers will gather July 8 to 22 for the 1944 session of the Summer School for Office Workers at a campus in Lake Forest, near Chicago, it was announced this week by Eleanor G. Coit, director of the school.

Emphasis will be placed on the role of the white-collar worker in the labor movement and attention will be given to such questions as prices, wages, inflation, full employment, political action, civil rights and international security, the announcement stated.

Information about the school may be obtained from the Summer School for Office Workers, 437 West 59th St., New York 19.

Women Push Plans For Postwar World

By FAYE STEPHENSON

President, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

The White House conference of June 14 on How Women May Share in Postwar Policy Making, at which I had the honor to represent the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries, emphasized the great contribution to our country and to the world which women are in a position to make. The 200 women present, representing all the major national women's organizations, felt that women could have contributed more to the war effort of the United Nations if their forces had been fully utilized.

They resolved to take the initiative in pushing forward participation of women in our American government and in all of the international conferences which will meet to work out coopration among the United Nations in order to ensure a permanent peace. They said:

"The tasks of war, of peace, of national planning must be shared by men and women alike. No part of the citizenry holds a greater stake in the democratic way of life, in plans for the reconstruction of an ordered world, than the women of the nation.

"Women have been called upon to share the burdens of war, to stand side by side with men on the production line and to complement men in the fighting services. So women must share in the building of a post-war world fit for all citizens—men and women—to live and work in freely side by side."

The conference agreed to set up a roster of women qualified for "positions of responsibility pertaining to the conduct of public affairs, national and international" from names submitted by the participating organizations. Sec.-Treas. Elisabeth Christman of the Women's Trade Union League represents labor women on the continuations committee which will prepare it.

MORE WOMEN WORKING

It was my privilege, as a representative of CIO women, to point out that more women are working in industry today than ever before and that a recent survey by my own union, the United Automobile Workers, showed that 86% of our women members want to continue working after the war.

Many of these women are wives of servicemen who have had to assume the responsibility of supporting the family while their husbands fight for democracy.

Thousands of those women will have to continue as the sole support of their children because of the casualties on the battlefields in the world struggle against fascism.

The realization of our CIO program of full employment for all who want or need to work in postwar America is the job guarantee women must work for. And the most effective way in which they can work for that program is to take an active part in the national political action drive.

COMMON INTERESTS

This White House Women's Conference brought home to me anew the common interests which unite women in all walks of life. Ruth Bryan Rhode, former American ambassador to Denmark, pointed out that President Roosevelt "has done more to open opportunities to women than any President our country has had." Most women leaders realize that, and they will be our allies in working for the re-election of Roosevelt for a fourth term.

Mrs. Roosevelt closed the conference in a speech which was the high light of the day. She emphasized the need for an international conference of women and for participation of women at the peace table.

The women of all nations are vitally interested in seeing an enduring peace follow the defeat of the fascist axis. It is up to them to take the initiative in contributing to the building of that peace.

Discuss Workers' Vision

Detroit, June 24—The visual efficiency of American workers and its effects upon industrial relations will be one of the major topics up for discussion at the National Convention of Optometrists, being held here June 25-28.

Kilgore Reconversion Bill Marks Time 'Till Aug. 1

WASHINGTON, June 24—The Kilgore reconversion bill (S 1893), which helps war workers and veterans in the change from war to peace production, will wait over until the Congress recess ends Aug. 1, it was learned this week.

The new delay means that hearings before the Senate Military Affairs Committee will not start for about five weeks. Meantime, the Kilgore bill as drafted now has met the requirements of the CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhoods, which are backing it.

As it stands, the bill provides special unemployment benefits for displaced war workers and returning veterans; pays moving costs to new jobs where workers are needed; provides six months of job training with allowances; helps in sickness and disability; includes merchant seamen and government workers, and makes all benefits last for the duration and two years thereafter.

Sens. Murray (D., Mont.) and George (polltaxer, Ga.) have a "compromise" bill (S 1730) that has been going through many washing machines in the attempt to make it meet the human needs of reconversion. So far it has failed to satisfy labor.

The present recess is a good time to make reconversion and this legislation the subject of long talks with your Senators and with your Representative when they come home for a well-earned rest.

Even if they don't come home, it's a good idea to write them about it. The way we handle reconversion now will determine the way we work and live not only after the war, but right now. Plenty of cutbacks are taking place all the time, and plenty of new "Brewster cases" are brewing.

Keep Your Eye on Your Congressman!

WASHINGTON, June 24—CIO News' original feature, "Keep Your Eye on Congress," is omitted this week due to the Congressional recess. It will be resumed when Congress returns August 1.

Meantime, your Congressman will be coming home, after he's attended his party's political convention in June. Here's a list of things you should talk to him about:

Kilgore Bill (S. 1893). This is the bill that aids workers, returning vets as well as business, in reconversion from war to peace economy. Tell your Senators you want immediate action when Congress meets again.

Price Control Renewal. Find out how he voted, whether for or against the Bankhead and Dirksen and other crippling amendments. Praise him if he voted against them, tell him what you think if he voted for wrecking price control.

"Equal Rights" Amendment. This venerable phoney is still alive, can be brought on the Senate floor any time—and late summer has long been a favorite time for its backers to bring it up. It would wipe out all labor protective laws under the pretext of "equal rights" for women. Tell your Congressman to shun it like the plague.

Federal Aid to Education (H. R. 2489). Helps raise school standards by $300,000,000 U. S. aid. More than 30 states are now too poor to have decent schools; average teacher's salary is $600 a year. Bill has been stymied in the House Education Committee (Rep. Darden, D., N. C., chmn.) for over a year. Tell your Congressman to help get it out by signing Discharge Petition No. 12, then vote for it without amendments.

Frey Rider. Find out how your man voted on this attempt to wreck the Wagner Act by OKing company union contracts. Tell him what you think.

MOST IMPORTANT: Know your Congressman's voting record, know what the issues are—and talk to him on the issues.

Get this record from the special Legislative Supplement to The CIO News published last week (June 19). Price: 100 for $2.50; 500 for $10; 1,000 for $15. Special prices for mats and very large orders. Order from Publicity Dept., CIO, 718 Jackson Place N. W., Washington 6, D.. C.

Christopher, Tennessee, reports: Another victory for the Hosiery Workers at the two plants of the McAllester Hosiery Mills, one on Williams Street (Southern Mill), the other in Alton Park (McAllester Mill), on June 8, by 229 for CIO to 163 against. Success was due to excellent teamwork of the staff and volunteer organizers. Those participating were Beulah Williams, Eugene Orton, Garland de Friese, Fred Headrick and Organizers Lena Lee and Raymond Adams. This situation was under the supervision of John J. McCoy, Nat. Rep., Am. Federation of Hosiery Workers.

Only 13 States Honor Simplified GI Ballots

NEW YORK, June 24 (FP)—What is happening in various states to assure GI Joe a vote in November shows why labor fought so hard to get a federal soldier ballot—and why the GOP-polltaxer combine in Congress insisted on leaving it up to the states. It also shows that labor is still about the only moving force doing anything about the war vote situation. Only 13 states have agreed to honor the Federal simplified service ballot.

In New York, stronghold of Republican presidential favorite Thomas E. Dewey, the legislature passed a regular "soldiers can't vote" law refusing to recognize federal ballots and providing state ballots only upon formal application from the soldier or presentation of a request in his handwriting from his family. Under the Dewey-finagled law, only 65,000 of one million men and women in the armed services have returned applications for a ballot to date.

But even this small figure—6½% of the state's servicemen—is just about twice as much as the politicians expected. The Board of Elections of New York City has appealed to the city budget director for an additional appropriation of $22,500 for temporary clerks to handle the war ballot applications which, they said, are swamping them in amounts "roughly double the estimate of the probable number of servicemen who would seek to vote."

Reason that business from the boys in uniform is so much greater than they figured on boils down to their admission that "all of the ballot requests received so far are on cards and forms provided by labor and other civic organizations interested in getting out a large soldier vote."

It happens that the Greater New York CIO Council, through a citywide shop and neighborhood campaign, has distributed 650,000 postcards for soldiers to use to apply for ballots.

Thirteen states so far have agreed to honor the simplified federal ballot, for which soldiers need make no application. It will be distributed to them wherever they are. Twenty-two states require state absentee ballots like New York's and 13 have still not decided on either system.

Report From Germany

Anti-Nazi Underground Ready For Revolution

MEXICO CITY, June 24 (ALN)—An anti-Nazi underground exists in Germany and will aid the advancing Allied armies of liberation, Paul Merker, head of the trade union division of the Latin American Free German Committee, told Allied Labor News this week.

"We estimate that there are at least 125,000 German workers organized in the underground anti-Nazi labor front," Merker said. "Approximately one million German workers collaborate in some degree with this underground organization, while an even larger number is indirectly involved in anti-Nazi tasks.

"There are also an estimated 12 million foreign workers under the Nazi lash in German factories who await only the signal to strike out aganst their Hitlerite masters."

German underground workers, Merker declared, are organized in secret councils of from three to five workers. Each council is organized independently and only an extremely guarded and limited contact is maintained with other councils.

Merker stated that reports he has received have convinced him that the secret council system of underground organization is extremely widespread in Nazi factories. Foreign workers in the Hitler Reich, he said, are organized in the same way.

"When the Nazi army breaks down in the face of smashing defeats at the hands of the Anglo-American and Soviet armies, the secret factory councils will come into the open, take over the factories and set up in each industry, city and district a preliminary committee which will begin immediately the reconstruction of workers' organizations," he declared.

POST-WAR GERMANY

Regarding the question of the post-war treatment of Germany, Merker insisted that the restoration of free trade unions there is not only possible but is necessary as a means of guaranteeing the democratization of the country and the elimination of Nazism and militarism.

Merker admitted that the reconstruction of the German trade union movement will be an extremely difficult problem. The main immediate support for a free labor organization, he said, may quite possibly be limited to men in the 40 to 60 age group, those who were active in pre-Hitler German trade unions.

The "de-Nazification of the German people, he said, "would be made easier by cooperation between the Allies and the anti-Nazi forces within Germany, while the ferreting out of war criminals will require the direct aid of those anti-Nazis who have good reason to know just who these criminals are and who will possess proof in black and white of their charges."

WARNS OF SABOTAGE

He warned that unless active collaboration is established with the German underground forces by the Allies during the period of occupation, Nazi die-hards will carry out a desperate campaign of sabotage against the armies of occupation and possibly even guerrilla warfare.

He revealed that Nazi gauleiters are already preparing a plan of hidden resistance to be put into effect when the Allied armies approach German soil. Underground organizations, he said, will be in the best position to counteract Nazi sabotage and would be ruthless in rooting out every remnant of Nazism.

Recognize Bolivia, CIO Urges U. S.

New York, June 24—The CIO Latin-American Affairs Committee this week called upon the American government to extend immediate recognition to the present government of Bolivia.

In a statement issued by Jacob S. Potofsky, chairman of the CIO committee and secretary-treasurer of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers, the committee declared that the Bolivian junta now ruling the country has given concrete evidence that it is truly representative of the Bolivian people and is supporting the United Nations in the war against nazism.

Potofsky declared that the Bolivian junta, set up in December 1943, has since divested itself of persons of pro-fascist leanings; its ministry of labor has issued decrees granting workers the right to organize; minimum wage machinery has been set up, and every facility has been offered to U. S. government agencies to procure from Bolivia vitally needed war materials.

"The Bolivian junta," the committee declared, "rounded up and delivered to the United States more than 70 prominent Nazis, many of whom held key positions in the Bolivian economy."

Labor Gives $1 Million To Underground

Newark, N. J., June 24—CIO War Relief has allocated $1,000,000 jointly with AFL to the underground trade union movements in occupied Europe, it was announced here this week.

Czecho-Slovakia has been allocated $150,000, with $300,000 going to France and $200,000 to Norway. Writing to the CIO to thank it for the gift, D. Benau, Czecho-Slovakian unionist, said:

"The Czecho-Sloak workers are since five years tortured in the Nazi slavery. It is a very long time. Their fighting spirit will be strengthened when they learn that the trade unions in the U. S. remember with love and aid their struggle."

Unions Form United Front in Italy

London, June 24 (ALN)—The Catholic, Socialist and Communist trade unions of Italy united this week to form a single General Confederation of Labor, it was learned from official sources in Rome this week.

The new Confederation, which for the first time unites all sections of the Italian labor movement, was formed at a conference in Rome attended by representatives of all unions in the liberated areas. Unions in occupied Italy were represented indirectly.

The conference elected a secretarist of three to head the Confederation, composed of Guiseppi di Vittorio, Communist; Oreste Longobardi, Socialist; and Achille Grandi, Catholic. Five from each group were chosen to form an executive committee.

Discussing the formation of the Confederation, Di Vittorio said: "The main reason for our agreement is the common concern of Catholics, socialists to and communists to unify labor's forces, to strengthen them to the maximum in order to defend the economic and moral interests of the workers. Complete labor unity in Italy, the first country liberated by the Allied armies, angurs well for the path to be followed by workers all over the world."

The agreement guarantees "the broadest internal democracy," Di Vittorio said, pointing out that "all leading positions are to be elective, all members are to have full freedom to express their opinions, and no union is to be affiliated to any political party."

There will be a single national federation for each industry, he explained, single labor councils for each province, and single provincial unions for each industrial category.

And Just Wait 'Till He Grows Up!

Bare Dies 'Snoop' Into Phone Calls

WASHINGTON, June 24—Martin Dies, the lame-duck labor-baiter, has been at it again. This time his un-American Committee, caught prying into private telephone conversations, took a spanking from one of its own members (Rep. Eberharter, D. Pa.) and other Congressmen.

The incident came at the same time that the House passed a resolution to set up still another "investigating committee" to look into CIO Political Action, and was timed, as all Dies Committee moves are, to fit into a general anti-labor strategy.

The House resolution, incidentally, didn't come off quite as its backers planned it, due to Rep. Marcantonio (ALP, N.Y.) who blocked a move to have the investigation operate on labor unions only. As the resolution now stands, it will include corporations as well as unions, and there is some fear among its Republican and polltax sponsors that the thing will backfire.

"I want it known that I had no part in this nauseating procedure," Rep. Eberharter said in denouncing the way Dies had turned over records of private phone conversations between the CIO Political Action Committee and Washington. These records were turned over to Westbrook Pegler, who made a series of columns about them, all trying to show that PAC was even "worse" than "communistic"—it was for the New Deal and was "in constant communication with the President's closest intimates."

This bit of Dies Committee snooping was done by subpena of the telephone company records of long distance calls, and the company was sharply criticized by Eberharter for cooperating "so fully and willingly" with Dies.

Dies, it will be remembered, decided not to run for re-election, in view of a 25 per cent increase in registration in his district this year. Pegler has been weeping publicly over this ever since.

Meantime, C. B. Baldwin, assistant chairman of PAC, called the Dies-Pegler deal "a gross abuse of congressional authority," and demanded a probe of the collusion between the two leading un-Americans.

Baldwin added that the appearance of the Pegler smear was the first knowledge PAC had that its phone conversations were being interfered with.

'Meet the People' Packs Real Political Punch

By HERBERT A. KLEIN

Hollywood, June 24— (FP)—Getting ready to hit the road with a load of laughs, chaff and the things organized labor is plugging for politically is the new Meet the People musical revue, after a successful run of almost a year here.

First stop early in September is to be San Francisco; then Meet the People will go on to other cities and war centers, hitting as many as possible before November 7, with its special political action number, "Let's Go Out and Ring Doorbells."

Some 200,000 people, including a lot of servicemen, saw the show here in 360 performances. USO made it a No. 1 recommendation. There's been no brighter mixture of music, lilting lyrics and political laughs—supplied by and at the expense of reactionaries—since the days of Pins & Needles and the first Meet the People.

When they weren't dancing or singing its timely, topical songs, the bright youngsters in the cast were busy backing the war. They sold more than a million dollars in war bonds, helped put over the salvage drive and contributed their theater to Russian War Relief for its "Share your clothing and save a life" campaign.

Jay Gorney's hit song, "The Four Rivers," will probably live a long time after the Rhine is bordered by United Nations flags. But for political action-minded unionists, the timeliest tune of the show is the one that set fire to these words:

"Let's go out and ring doorbells
And get the neighbors to vote!
Is your congressman stalling?
Is he getting your goat?
Let's go out and ring doorbells
And get the neighbors to vote!"

FORT WORTH, Tex., June 24—The Dallas-Tarrant CIO Council this week unanimously endorsed the local Montgomery Ward organizing drive of the Mail Order, Warehouse & Distribution Workers, affiliated with the Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union.

It Ain't Fair, Publishers' 'Mag' Weeps

Washington, June 24—Editorial comment in an Army paper that put the finger on anti-labor newspaper publishers had their weekly mouth organ all hot and bothered this week.

The comment was from Columnist John Lord, writing in the Midpacifican, and said that "most of the big daily newspapers have been lying about labor to fighting men overseas . . ."

Editor and Publisher, magazine of the trade, devoted more than an editorial column in attempting to justify the newspapers' record of "blowing up" strike news while neatly submerging credit for the outstanding production job that most American workers have turned out, and forgetting to mention that labor's no-strike pledge has been kept by better than 99 per cent.

"Gen. H. H. Arnold revealed the damage being done by one strike when he stated it was costing the armed forces about 250 fighter planes. Multiply this by the number of strikes and you have some conception of the threat to our people embodied in these walkouts."

It would be obvious to anyone except the editors of Editor and Publisher that every stoppage—many of them of brief duration involving small numbers of workers in non-war industry—does not result in the loss of 250 planes. Multiplication of this number by the number of strikes would obviously give a distorted picture of the situation—which apparently is what Editor and Publisher would like to see.

Thomas Pledges Aid To Federal Workers' Drive

Washington, June 24—A pledge of full support of more than a million auto workers was voiced by UAW-CIO Pres. R. J. Thomas this week as he told 500 members and leaders of the CIO United Federal Workers that the 3,000,000 government employes must be organized and a campaign waged for job security and pay increases.

The meeting climaxed a month of activity by the Federal Workers Union to line up support behind the wage increase resolution introduced in Congress by Rep. Scanlon of Pennslyvania. The resolution provides for a federal workers' wage board to carry out policies provided by WLB for workers in private industry, and to make comparable adjustments in governmental pay scales.

"No problems," Thomas stated, "are solved by civil service seniority." He added that social security age limits of retirement should be lowered to permit workers "to enjoy life while they were still active."

He favored a 30 hour week as a means of heading off long term unemployment in the postwar period.

Hit Cutback Chaos In Jersey Shipyard

NEWARK, N. J., June 24 (FP)—Prompt action by the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers in enlisting aid from government agencies may save thousands of workers at Federal Shipyard & Drydock Co. from layoffs and seniority losses in a complex cutback situation.

The company, a subsidiary of U. S. Steel, has dismissed more than 1,500 workers since June 12 because of destroyer escort cutbacks at its Port Newark yards.

Women, about half the force involved, were dismissed outright. Men were told they could transfer to the company's Kearney yards, which have an order with the War Manpower Commission for 4,000 workers, but were informed they would be subject to a "30-day probationary period."

Local 16 promptly appealed to the WMC, since the company's action would deprive the men of seniority rights, earned vacations and pay classifications, and it discriminated arbitrarily against the women.

In accordance with union proposals, WMC Area Director George Pfaus asked management to transfer workers outright, with seniority, vacations and classifications unchanged, and to give women equal right to transfer with length of service the only consideration.

MANPOWER FREEZE

After management failed to announce acceptance or refusal of these demands, WMC ordered U. S. Employment Service agents to withdraw from the Kearny yards.

When the company finally said it would insist on the 30-day trial period in defiance of WMC directives, Pfaus ordered freezing of manpower at the Kearny yards, placing the company under Group B employment classification so that it could not hire except for replacements.

The penalization of the company was unanimously upheld at a meeting of representatives of the Navy, Army, War Production Board, U. S. Maritime Commission and other government agencies, following which the Navy representative took steps to make management untangle the situation. Pending the outcome of Navy-company discussion, the freeze was postponed for one week.

Union officials pointed out that the company was trying to use the cutback situation to weaken the union, which is in the midst of contract negotiations.

Hailing the WMC's intervention as a distinct victory, Local 16 officers said it proved that a union can protect the rights of workers without recourse to the strike weapon.

CIO Starts Court Test of Hatch Act

WASHINGTON, July 1—U. S. Government workers are either to be classed as "second-class citizens and political serfs" or as real U. S. citizens entitled with others to take their full part in our democracy, CIO General Counsel Lee Pressman and Asst. Counsel Martin Raphael said this week in presenting the CIO's case against the Hatch Act.

The Hatch Act, which makes it illegal for Federal employes to take part in political activity, is being challenged by the CIO United Federal Workers as a violation of the U. S. Constitution's guarantees of freedom of speech and assembly.

The issue is particularly important in a war for the survival of democracy, Pressman said, pointing out that restrictions of Federal workers' basic rights as Americans is "a species of infection . . . which has a severe impact during a war such as we are now fighting."

Further, the CIO brief said in citing a decision by former Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes: "The maintenance of the opportunity for free political discussion to the end that government may be responsive to the will of the people . . . is a fundamental principle of our constitutional system."

Citing the Hartzell case, involving a writer of articles describing the war as a "Jewish plot" and urging "'the occupation of America by foreign troops until we are able to stand alone'," the brief said in commenting on the reversal of Hartzell's conviction by the U. S. Supreme Court:

"A more extreme example of the right to engage in political discussion and activity can hardly be envisioned. . . . If speech which so closely skirts the fringes of treason is permissible, it challenges every democratic instinct and all of our ingenuity to find a warrant for the extinction of the constitutional rights of three million federal workers."

Duluth CIO Members 100 Pct. Reg.!

That's this city's boast to the rest of the country this week. The perfect mark was achieved recently when a three-shift march to the registration bureau was arranged for the last 100 unregistered CIO members at the National Iron Co. here.

The drive was spearheaded by the CIO United Steelworkers and Earl Bester, political action director for District 33. A simple three-step system was used to rack up the record registration.

1. Registration lists were checked against certain union lists to see what workers in each plant were unregistered.

2. In large plants where cooperation was provided, registrars set up desks and unregistered workers filed by at the end of the shift to fill out their registration cards.

3. In small plants, or where plant management was uncooperative, the unions arranged mass marches to the city hall of all unregistered workers.

Fight Sales Tax

Detroit, July 1—In a move to abolish the Michigan state sales tax completely, three petitions advocating constitutional amendments to prohibit this method of taxation are being sponsored by the Michigan CIO Council and the CIO Political Action Committee, August Scholle, regional director of the Political Action Committee, announced this week.

HERE'S ONE FOR THE BOOK!

Lame-Duck Congressman Tells How CIO Defeated Him

WASHINGTON, July 1—Here's how to conduct a political action campaign to rid Congress of a reactionary and put a real Representative of the people in his place—and its told by one who ought to know, lame-duck Rep. John M. Costello of California.

The know-how is given in a sobbing speech Costello made in the House just before the summer recess, trying to alibi his defeat in the primaries at the hands of politically active workers, housewives and farmers. Naturally, he blames it all on the CIO and the "Communists" which to Costello are, of course, identical.

To begin with, he reminds his fellow Congressmen of the CIO-PAC and its pamphlet series, "Every Worker a Voter," and then, after this opening testimonial, he tells how they line up a "complete block-by-block organization in the cities, or a similar type of community group organization in rural districts."

LEAFLETS, RADIO

Then, says Costello, the PAC in California acquired radio time, wrote and distributed leaflets, called at workers' homes, talked to housewives while marketing, etc.

One particularly effective leaflet, Costello reported bitterly, was passed out in the grocery stores with the simple message: "If Costello had his way, that bottle of milk would cost you 50 cents."

"Workers called at every home, voters were repeatedly telephoned, literature in fact flooded the district, and the radio programs went into full swing along with continual newspaper advertisements," Costello moaned to the House.

ABSENT, ABSENT, ABSENT

He even gives an example of a radio spot that went this way: Record: (filter voice) "I was absent. I was absent. I was absent." Woman: "Good heavens! Stop that record. It must be broken. No one could be absent that many times." Announcer: O, yes. Congressman Costello actually was. He holds the Congressional record for absenteeism. On 20 vital issues Costello was absent 11 times. You pay him $10,000 a year and Costello is the champion absentee in America. He is the original little man who wasn't there!"

Costello speaks with special anguish of the way the political action people in his district used his record in Congress on such issues as the GI vote, mustering out pay for servicemen, and the like—on all of which Costello voted against the soldiers.

Its unfair, he yells, when the voters learn about a Congressman's record. Its a low-down trick to print it, as The CIO NEWS does, or to make leaflets based on the issues, or to broadcast one-minute radio spots.

Well, Costello ought to know. After January, when the new Congress meets, he won't be with us in Washington.

REPUBLICAN AT WORK: Republican Mayor Thomas Kennedy of Syracuse, N. Y., this week demonstrated that he is anxious to prevent soldiers from voting when he ordered city cops to remove a booth set up by the CIO Council to aid the campaign of distributing ballot applications to servicemen. The council, with other labor and progressive organizations, is continuing its campaign by hand-to-hand distribution.

HOME FROM WARS: Miss Rose Bush, Red Cross worker and former financial secretary of the Philadelphia Joint Board, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, discusses some of her experiences in Italy with a Red Cross Nurse's Aide in Washington, D. C., where Miss Bush is recovering from injuries received in line of duty.

CIO Girl, Back from War, Says GI Unity Encouraging

WASHINGTON, July 1—"It's good to see democracy in action." That was the reaction expressed by Miss Rose Bush, clubmobile worker hospitalized at Walter Reed here, on her return to this country after a year of service with the Red Cross overseas.

Injured near Naples while on active duty as a clubmobile worker assigned to the Fifth Army, Miss Bush was brought back to the United States in a body cast and sent first to Stark General Hospital in South Carolina. The cast removed, she checked into Walter Reed Hospital and, then, with the help of two sergeants on leave, made the trip home to Philadelphia for a two-day visit.

"One of the first things I did was to go to a meeting of the Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, whose financial secretary I was for seven years," she said. "It was truly an inspiration to hear the expression of such a variety of opinions—to feel the freedom of the American people. There is still the feeling of Fascism in Italy. I don't think I had seen one meeting in all the time I was there."

Until an accident in Italy, Miss Bush had been a teammate of Miss Rosanne Walker, former organizer with the Steel Workers and the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes, taking doughnuts and coffee to servicemen stationed in isolated spots, first in North Africa, then Sicily and Italy.

On the way to serve an anti-aircraft unit one morning, the girls were riding a weapons-carrier when another weapons-carrier collided with them, throwing doughnuts all over the street and tossing Miss Bush against the windshield and the dashboard.

Cuts on the forehead received from the broken windshield healed quickly after treatment at a nearby British Aid Station; a complicated break of the leg and kneecap, however, caused Army doctors to order her home for treatment and convalescence. Miss Walker escaped with minor injuries.

Of her impressions of the American Army, Miss Bush remarked, "We met them all—from the private to the general. It was wonderful to see American men congregate without regard of class, creed or color. This is an encouraging factor in the creation of the kind of world we hope to see in the future. The fellows stressed mostly teamwork among themselves and with other units. There is no discrimination among these men."

California CIO Plan Helps Servicemen to Get Ballots

SAN FRANCISCO, July 1—California's 700,000 men and women in the armed forces are going to have every possible help the CIO can give them in getting their soldiers' vote in time for the November election.

This is the plan of the state CIO Council, headed by James G. Thimmes, president, and Mervyn Rathborne, secretary-treasurer, to help overcome the "state's rights" red tape that the polltaxers and the Republicans in Washington wrapped around the GI's right to vote.

Under the plan, CIO locals will see that the 700,000 California servicemen each get a "War Voter's Ballot Application," printed on a postcard to mail to the Secretary of State at Sacramento.

"The CIO can perform one of its most valuable war jobs by getting these applications into the hands of every family in the State, and giving them the opportunity to send them on to their own service people," the Council said in announcing the GI vote drive.

"We know that we cannot only assist servicemen and women to vote but that their ballots will help in the tremendous job of electing candidates who are pledged to win the war and secure a peace which will provide jobs, security and prosperity for the people."

Packinghouse Parley Urges Fourth Term

OMAHA, Nebr., July 1—Reporting a membership gain of more than 39,000 since October, the Second Constitutional Convention of the CIO Packinghouse Workers Union concluded its sessions here this week, and for the second time endorsed President Roosevelt for a fourth term, with Vice-Pres. Wallace as his running mate.

The 300 assembled delegates rose to cheer the adoption of the fourth term resolution and vowed to go all-out for political education and action to make possible not only the election of Roosevelt and Wallace, but a sympathetic and supporting Congress as well.

NO-STRIKE PLEDGE

The convention pledged continued support to labor's no-strike pledge after exposing Armour and Co. and other strike-provoking packers.

Armour and Co. was accused of refusing to bargain in good faith and of following the Sewell Avery policy of contempt for established governmental procedures which are intended to eliminate strikes and lockouts during the war.

The company's policies were bitterly assailed by the delegates, who approved government seizure of the plant should Armour continue its provocations in a war crisis.

Convention speakers included: Van A. Bittner, assistant to the president of USA-CIO and vice-chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee; CIO Regional Director Fullerton Fulton of St. Paul, member of the UPWA-Big Four War Labor Board Panel; Adolph Germer, CIO representative in Denver; Jack Pierce, CIO War Relief Director, and the Rev. Michael F. Gluba. The convention was opened by Ben Henry, president of the Iowa-Nebraska CIO Council.

PRODUCTION BOARD

UPWA Intl. Pres. Lewis J. Clark, in his opening address, stressed the necessity of keeping the no-strike pledge as well as the need of "so organizing workers in the packing industry that they might effectively meet the packers in any attempt they might make to wreck the movement in the post-war era."

Clark praised the production record of the UPWA, stating that it would stand the measurement of any test, and emphasized the importance of the processing of foods in both war and peace.

He pledged all-out support to the winning of the war in the belief that this war was being fought that men and women might live with freedom in an economy of full production, full employment and a people's peace.

BACK POLITICAL ACTION

The convention went all-out for support of the CIO Political Action program as adopted in the recent Washington Conference and delegates promised a 100% registration of voters.

The convention spent considerable time discussing the problems of race discrimination, and the city of Omaha was denounced for its flagrant discriminatory policies.

Resolutions endorsed the elimination of the Dies Committee, opposed the Frey amendment to the NLRB, condemned NLRB Board member Riley, urged consumption of such products that carry a CIO union label wherever possible, offered aid to workers in Canada for progressive labor legislation, condemned race discriminatory practices and the poll tax and pledged to fight for its elimination from the American scene.

Another resolution praised CIO Pres. Philip Murray as the outstanding spokesman for labor's victory policies and urged that he be a representative at the peace table in order that his presence might assure fair consideration for the rights of collective bargaining in all nations of the world which would bring "established free labor unions in all countries."

A message sent to Gen. Eisenhower, pledged full UPWA support in the invasion and a tribute was paid to American and Allied soldiers who died in the war of liberation and pledged continued production and "everlasting devotion to the cause in which they died."

NEW YORK, July 1—A universal 40c hourly minimum will be in effect for all 21 million workers covered by the wage-hour act July 17, Wage-Hour Administrator L. Metcalfe Walling announced this week.

Walling released the final two wage orders, effective July 17, for two million men and women, of whom some 110,000 have been receiving less than 40 cents an hour.

"Although 40 cents an hour may seem low in these war-boom times," Walling said, "restitution of illegally withheld wages for the current year will exceed $17,000,000, and more than one quarter of the cases involve failure to pay the minimum wage."

The new wage orders cover 1,250,000 workers in the finance, insurance, real estate, motion picture and miscellaneous industries, of whom 60,000 workers will receive direct wage increases, and 900,000 workers in the communication, utilities and miscellaneous transportation industries, with direct wage increases for about 50,000.

Oct. 24, 1945, was set by Congress as the date when a 40c minimum would automatically go into effect for all workers under the act. Joint labor - employer - public committees were appointed to raise the minimum from 30c to 40c industry by industry as rapidly as economic conditions permitted. Completion of the program to set a universal minimum beat Congress' deadline by more than a year.

Equal Rights Still Threat

Washington, June 24—One of the oldest and most persistent phonies in Congress is the so-called "Equal Rights" amendment to the United States Constitution, still a threat right now.

Theoretically, "Equal Rights" would abolish all discriminations against women by making all laws apply equally to men and women workers alike. Actually, the amendment would wipe off the books every law that protects women workers against special hazards and bad working conditions.

"Equal Rights" is phoney, not only because it would repeal every law protecting women would be wedge for the repeal of laws protecting men, as well as against unhealthy working conditions, substandard wages, etc.

A group of rich and elderly upper-crust women with nothing better ot do have been pushing tthis amendment for 25 years. Behind them are much more important and even sinister forces—the forces that would like to destroy all social legislation.

Hit Court Ruling Ousting Bridges; Appeal Slated

SAN FRANCISCO, July 1—The deportation charge against Harry Bridges fails for lack of evidence, the Bridges Defense Committee said here this week in again urging dismissal of the proceedings.

The Committee acted after studying the opinions of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, Ninth District. The court this week divided three to two against granting the petition of the West Coast CIO leader for a writ of habeas corpus which would have ended the case.

Although holding the evidence "falls far short of being clear, unequivocal and convincing" a majority of the judges were unwilling to declare an end to the protracted litigation. They held: "The court has no power to inquire into the truth of the charge or into the manner in which the decision has been reached by the Attorney General."

In the stinging dissenting opinion by Justice William Healy in which Justice Francis Garracht joined, the lack of evidence was criticized and the action of Attorney General Francis Biddle was denounced as "the substitution of a government of men for a government of law."

"It is apparent from reading the majority and minority decisions that only technical reasons remain for continuing a persecution which already has cost the labor movement in excess of $200,000" said George Wilson, executive secretary of the Bridges Committee.

CONFIDENT OF VICTORY

"A vigorous defense of Bridges will be maintained until final victory is won. We are confident of that victory. It is regrettable that Attorney General Biddle, realizing as he must, that justice will ultimately prevail, does not act with wisdom and courage. We refer to labor's repeated request for dismissal of the deportation charge."

Striking quickly at the heart of the case, Justice Healy said in his dissent: "It is not charged nor is there evidence that the alien (Bridges) has advocated the forcible overthrow of the government of the United States. Nor was there charge or proof that he entertained views inimical to constiutional government or that he at any time possessed or distributed literature subversive to the Constitution.

"The accusation is that he was a member of or was affiliated with an organization, namely the Communist Party, which did those things. This accusation the alien has countered with a flat and unequivocal denial.

"For those who cherish traditions of American justice it is permissible to believe the alien should not be deprived of his freedom to remain here unless the truth of the accusation be fairly established. That it is not so proven must be patent, I think, to any candid person who takes the trouble to examine the record."

ATTORNEY GENL. REBUKED

The dissenting opinion sharply rebuked the Attorney-General for denying Bridges due process of law.

Justice Healy was particularly critical of the acceptance of the testimony of James O'Neil, who later went to prison for perjury.

"The showing of party (Communist) membership was of so flimsy a character as to lead the Appeals Board to reject it entirely," he said. "The Attorney General's acceptance of the O'Neil heresay as probative evidence might easily have served to tip the scale. I am satisfied it did not.

"The infirmity of the O'Neil heresay cuts across all rules. No amount of philosophizing can serve to make a silk purse out of this obvious sow's ear . . ."

Wilson announced the committee was prepared to defend Bridges in the courts and in every legimitate manner in the event Attorney General Biddle insists upon obstructing Bridges' efforts to obtain citizenship.

VAN A. BITTNER

Bill Would Make FEPC Permanent

Washington, Jury 1—Two new bills that ought to be passed were put into the Senate hopper in the last few days before the recess, one dealing with servicemen and the other with the Fair Employment Practice Committee.

The service bill is a proposal to increase unemployment benefits now in the "GI Bill of Rights," both in amount and in duration, offered by Senator Murray (D., Mont.). Murray would raise the present benefits of $25 a week by $5 for each dependent up to $35.

It would also make every service man or woman eligible for the full 52 weeks of benefits. At present only those in the service for ten months can get the two years protection.

The other bill, offered by Senator Wagner (D., N. Y.) and others, would make the FEPC a permanent agency. It is the Senate version of the Scanlon bill in the

Hoover's Party Cold to CIO's Postwar Plan

CHICAGO, July 1—CIO's program for winning the war and for the postwar period was presented to the Republican Party convention in its platform building session here by Van A. Bittner, assistant to Philip Murray as president of the USA-CIO.

Bittner presented the program to the GOP committee here after the CIO Political Action Committee's request to be heard was turned down. Committee Chairman Sen. Robert A. Taft (R., O.) said that the request had come "too late" to be received.

The statement Bittner presented was the program drawn up by CIO and CIO-PAC at its recent conference in Washington. He read it to the GOP committee in full. Following Bittner's presentation, Taft allowed that the committee "would be glad" to study it and give it consideration.

Following the hearing of CIO's program, the GOP proceeded to draw up its own labor program. This document, over 500 words in length, had general praise for the "objectives" of much New Deal labor legislation, including the Wagner Act, but was vague in its own terms on what further should be done.

AFL Pres. William Green also appeared to repeat his standard plea for crippling the Wagner Act in order to favor craft unions over industrial unions. The GOP, however, was vague even on this, to Green's disappointment.

Bittner stressed the Murray-Wagner-Dingell Social Security act now before Congress in his appearance at the committee meeting. This bill, which has lain idle in Congress for some months now, would bring a real measure of security not only to workers, white collar people, farm labor and professionals, but would also be of great help to reurning servicemen in adjusting to civilian life, he said.

The Republicans, however, had no comment on this, even though their party has a "labor committee" headed by "Big Bill" Hutcheson of the AFL which is on record for passage of the Murray-Wagner-Dingell bill.

Incidentally, Hutcheson, czar of the AFL Carpenters, ran himself a brief flurry of newspaper publicity by announcing that he would consent to be drafted for the Vice-Presidential nomination.

Hutcheson's "boom" didn't last very long, for Gov. Bricker of Ohio, who has been damningly described as "an honest Harding," got the spot. Gov. Warren of California refused it, with many commentators figuring he'd rather be a live governor of a great state than a politically dead ex-Vice-Presidential candidate after November 7.

The convention went through all the motions. It even included the living specter of Herbert Hoover, who repeated the performance he's been giving for the past 12 years—an attempted defense of the misery that came to America during his term in office.

Bridgeport for FDR

Bridgeport, Conn., July 1—The Bridgeport CIO Council this week unanimously went on record to support President Roosevelt and urge him to run for a 4th term.

Blast WLB for West Coast Lumber Ruling

WASHINGTON, July 1—The National War Labor Board, with labor members dissenting, this week denied a general wage increase in a case involving 77 Pacific Northwest pine and fir lumber operators and approximately 130,000 workers represented by the CIO Intl. Woodworkers and the AFL Lumber and Sawmill Workers. Labor members sharply criticized the decision.

With several relatively minor exceptions, the Board upheld previous directives of the West Coast Lumber Commission and reaffirmed its own directives of May 17. Among minor concessions granted were ones extending the payment of the night shift differential of 25 cents a shift to the pine industry and establishing a safety program for some operations.

Both unions had demanded general wage increases, declaring that their cases fell in the "rare and unusual" case category, and that increases beyond those permissible under regular wage stabilization standards should be granted to meet the critical needs of war production and the serious manpower shortage in the area.

In dissenting from the majority opinion of the Board, the labor members stated, "We believe that the Board can do more than offer its sympathy, and that it need not stand by helpless while an urgent problem goes begging for a solution." John Brophy served as CIO labor member in this case.

"The Board," labor members said, "confines the problem solely to one of recruiting skilled employes. This formulation of issue may simplify the burden of justifying the Board's conclusions, but it does violence to the facts.

"Retention of the present working force and prevention of turnover are objectives as important as, and perhaps even more crucial than, that of recruiting new employes. That was the position vigorously presented by the unions and strongly supported by the War Manpower Commission and the War Production Board."

"The Board is being rendered impotent by its timidity," the dissenting opinion continued. "It is obsessed with an all-pervading fear that the wage stabilization program is so fragile now that any vigorous action will shatter it beyond redemption."

FDR Signs GI Bill, Urges Aid for Merchant Seamen

WASHINGTON, July 1—Signing of the "GI Bill of Rights" by President Roosevelt this week marked the final stage in making the measure law. Originally endorsed by the CIO some months ago when it started through the Senate, the bill had a rough time in the House at the hands of Representative John E. Rankin (polltaxer, Miss.) but emerged with many of Rankin's weakening changes modified or dropped.

In signing, FDR reminded Congress that merchant seamen still lacked protection of measures such as the GI Bill and again urged that they be included. He also reminded Congress that servicemen should get all social security help such as old age benefits, etc., during the time they are in service, so their cumulative credits would not be lost.

He spoke too about the need for quick Congressional action on reconversion, asking for a bill to help in re-employment of demobilized war workers, plus unemployment benefits, re-training, etc. This would be done by passing the Kilgore reconversion bill (S 1893) which Congress left untouched for its summer vacation.

"With the signing of this bill a well-rounded program of special veterans' benefits is nearly completed," he said: "It gives emphatic notice to the men and women in our armed forces that the American people do not intend to let them down."

Sen. Wagner (D., N. Y.), Senate sponsor of the GI bill, is also sponsor of the bill to extend old age aid to veterans and of the Wagner-Dingell social security bill which would include them under new and improved benefits.

One Policy Insures Whole Family

OMAHA, NEBR.—Here's something worthy of your attention. It's an extra liberal, new "Family Group" Life Insurance Policy that insures your family, 2 to 6 persons, for less than $1 a month. NOT $1 per person, but $1 for your entire family group of 2 to 6 members!

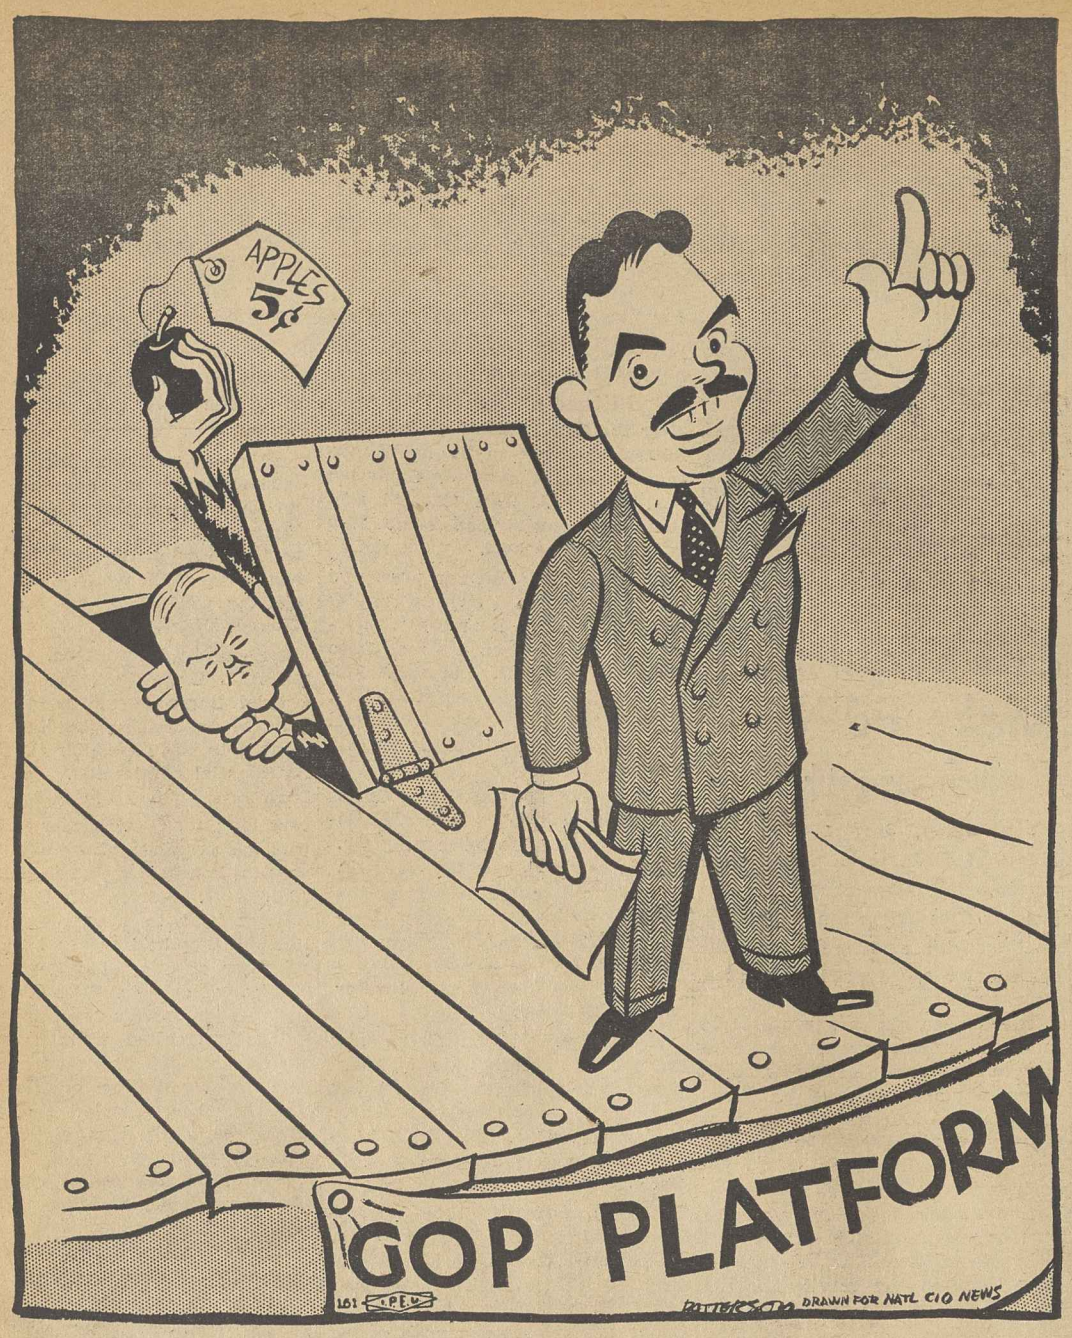
This policy is issued by an old line, LEGAL RESERVE life insurance company with assets of more than 7 million dollars. It is genuine LEGAL RESERVE life insurance and it pays for death to ANY member of your family group from ANY cause.

What's more, it pays quick cash benefits that are big enough to be worthwhile. For death due to natural causes or ordinary accident, this policy provides maximum benefits up to $1000.00—DOUBLE for auto accidental death, or $2000.00—and TRIPLE for travel accidental death, or $3000.00, all as provided in the policy. Also benefits are graded according to ages of persons covered and number insured.

The amazing part of it all is the fact that you can get this policy without medical examination. You may include parents, children (married or unmarried, whether living at home or away), grandparents, in-laws, in fact any relative in good health and between the ages of 1 and 70 years.

The cost for all is only $1 a month or $10.95 for a full year. What's more, this is a guaranteed rate, can never increase; and there can be no dues or assessments. Newcomers can be added at any time without extra cost; and the death of one member of the family does not terminate the policy. Instead it continues in force to protect those remaining, and provides continuous family protection.

Let us send you the policy itself for 10 DAYS' FREE INSPECTION. No cost. No obligation. No salesman will call. Just drop a card or letter to The Service Life Insurance Company, Dept. 9, Omaha 2, Nebraska.



Smear Jobs Used To Fight Progressive Legislation

"If you can't fight 'em fair, smear 'em," is an old trick in dirty politics. It's a trick that the reactionaries and the polltaxers in Congress have used more than once, and will get away with as long as other Congressmen and their voters allow them to.

Most notorious example, of course, was the un-American Dies Committee, which ran through six years before Dies was retired from public life.

There have been others. Rep. Howard Smith (polltaxer, Va.) is an old hand at the game. First there was his "special investigating committee" that did a hatchet job on the NLRB and tried to wreck the Wagner Act.

More recently there's been the Smith committee set up to "investigate" various government agencies. Smith dedicated this job to wrecking OPA and price control, to hamstringing the War Labor Board and sabotaging the Fair Employment Practice Committee that tried to prevent Jim Crow and other discrimination on war jobs.

Now of course the latest example of this technique is the repeated proposal to "investigate" CIO Political Action, on the grounds that it might be "illegal." The polltaxers and Republicans behind this know perfectly well CIO Political Action is legal—but they're afraid to fight fair so they try to smear.

Like other agencies of Congress, the special committee is a legitimate affair when put to proper uses in the hands of honest people. In the hands of polltaxers and other reactionaries, it's been perverted.

The special committee should be carefully watched just as ony other activity of Congress. If it looks like a set-up for a hatchet job on a progressive law or an essential U. S. war agency—tell your Congressman to work and vote against it. It's just as important as watching the bills themselves.

Flanking Tactics Featured In Passing Phoney Laws

When a reactionary gang in Congress fails to get its way by one method, it will always try another. A bill that openly set out to abolish price control, for example, wouldn't have a chance. But there are plenty of other ways of doing the same thing—and we have to be as watchful for them as we are on the main issue.

One of the ways of putting over a piece of dirty work that no Congressman would put his name to openly is by amendments, innocent appearing but full of dynamite. This is the favorite method used in both Senate and House in the attempts to scuttle price control.

Then there's the method of slashing appropriations for a government agency to the point where it can't do the job it's supposed to do. This also has been done to OPA, most notably in cutting funds for enforcement to the point where OPA has had money for enforcement agents in the ratio of less than one per county for the entire USA.

So, while you're keeping your eye on the main issue of a bill, also keep a wary eye on the Congressman who says yes, I'm for the bill, but . . . and then proceeds to trot out a series of crippling amendments, riders, appropriation cuts and the like.

The Dirksen amendment to the Price Control Act renewal is a prime example of this method. Under the apparently innocent disguise of "fair play" to people affected by OPA orders, this amendment would have subjected all OPA policies and regulations to court review. Nothing, its sponsors say, could be fairer than that.

Actually, court review would plunge price control into complete chaos. Thousands of OPA orders are issued constantly, as they have to be. To put them all through the court wringer would mean that hundreds of courts, many with reactionary judges, would give hundreds of different interpretations of the same order. You can easily guess the result—a complete snarling of any attempt to carry out price control policies.

Another favorite method is the trick rider, usually stuck onto an appropriation bill. This was done in the Frey rider that legally blessed company unions for the past year. Riders contradict every rule of sound lawmaking, because they use the appropriation power not to enable a law to be carried out, but actually to remake the law itself.

A 'Must' For Victory

By HARLEY M. KILGORE

U. S. Senator from West Virginia

THE great war of liberation is being won. Under the united blows of our forces and those of our allies, in the west, the east and the south, Hitler's armies are reeling back on all fronts. In the Pacific, our men drive closer to Tokio with every day's advance.

The victories of the United Nations are made possible not only by the blood of their armies, but also by the "miracle of production" in this country that has given them the arms in the quantities and of the quality they need for the job.

This exclusive article, written especially for The CIO NEWS, is presented this week in place of Looking Ahead, whose author, Editor Len De Caux, is away on vacation. Looking Ahead will be resumed next week.

This "miracle" is due to the strength and skill of America's workers and to the power of America's industries.

AS WE come closer to victory, we face new problems that must be solved in the interest of speeding the victory and of making our postwar world secure. These are the problems of reconversion of our industry and re-mobilizing our workers from war to peace production, or, in many instances, from production of one kind of war material to another.

These problems are already at hand. Large-scale cutbacks in war production are taking place with increasing speed. With these cutbacks, plants are made idle and working men and women are being flung out of employment. Added to that, thousands of war veterans are being returned to civilian life each month.

The problem, then, is what shall be done with these plants and what shall happen to these workers. We have, in my opinion, no choice. We cannot let either American industry or American workers slip back into the mire of Hooverism—the mire of shutdowns and unemployment.

SO FAR, our country lacks a plan for meeting these problems. Lacking a plan, we are bound to have more chaotic instances such as that at the Brewster Aircraft plants, where cutbacks suddenly threw 12,500 people out of their war jobs and left them on the streets, their tools in the factories unused.

The re-conversion bill (S. 1393) sponsored by several Senators, including myself, and by Representative Cellar in the House, will go far toward correcting such situations as that at Brewster and toward making them impossible in the future.

act on problems of production, cutbacks and re-conversion during the war as well as the postwar period. This body will have the close cooperation of labor, management, agriculture and the general public through a joint board.

For the workers, including exservicemen and merchant seamen, the bill provides unemployment benefits, plus allowances for dependents, up to $35 a week for two years if necessary. It pays all the costs of moving war workers to new jobs where they are needed. It offers six months of re-training with $50 to $100 a month maintenance.

In a word, this bill sets forth a rounded, positive plan for aiding our country's industry and its people over the difficult time of reconversion from war production to peace output.

THIS is not simply a "postwar" problem. Cutbacks are upon us now. They will increase as we come closer and closer to victory. Without a planned approach to the problem of re-conversion from war to peace production, we can find ourselves back again in the depression and misery of the 30's.

We are fighting a great war for freedom from want and insecurity. Let us not win the military battles only to return to a condition that the American people rejected 12 years ago.

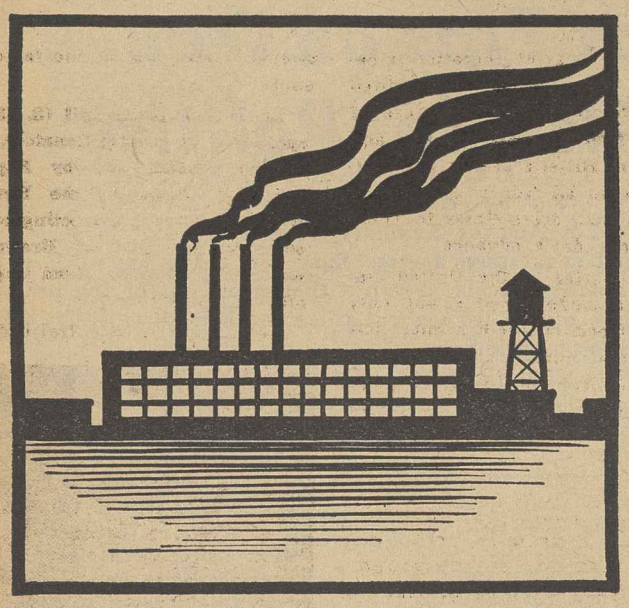
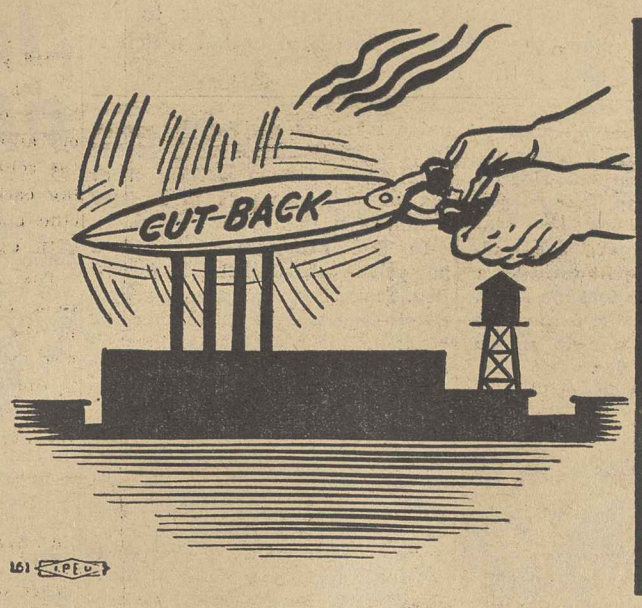
Reconversion—Chaos Or Common Sense?

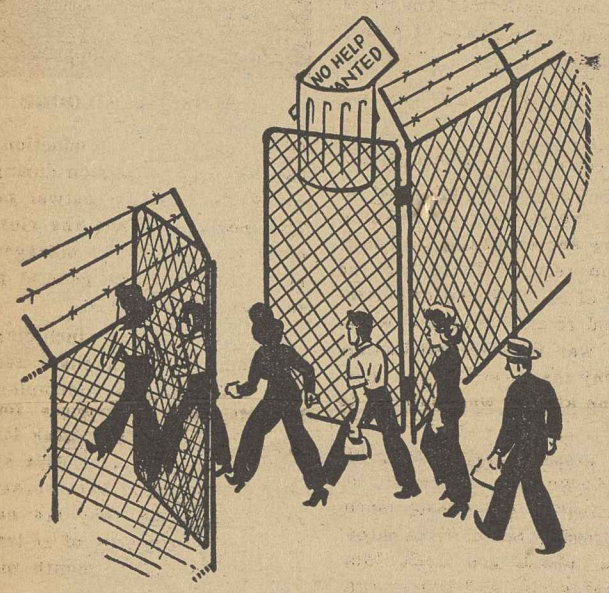


1. Here's a factory full of hard working people making war materials for the liberation armies . . .



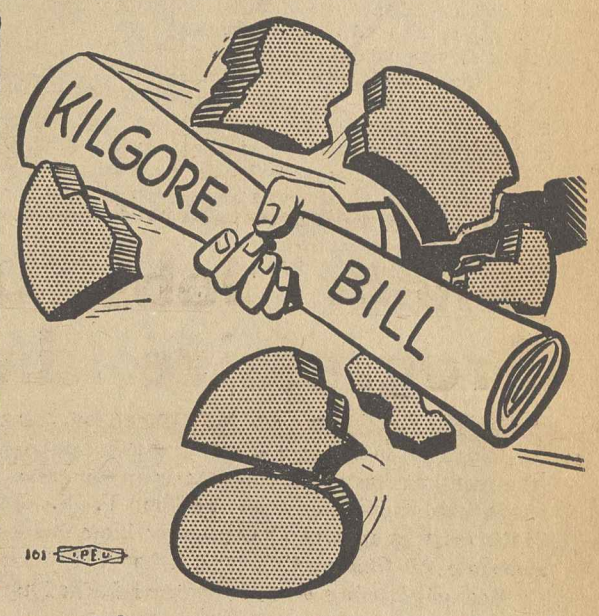
2. They work so hard they make more than the country needs of a particular kind . . . and there's a cutback . . .

3. Which means people are thrown out of jobs and the plant lies idle . . . like at Brewster . . .



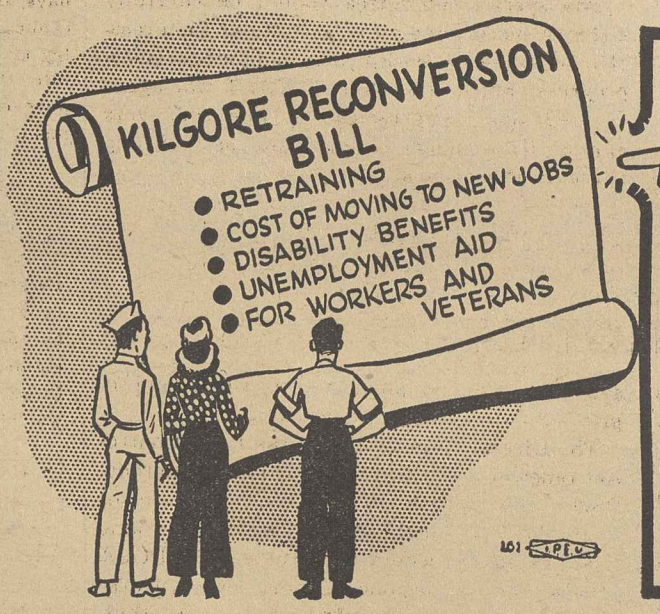
4. . . . Instead of using both workers and plant to make another kind of war material or maybe civilian goods.

5. Its a problem not only for the postwar but right now . . . what are labor, management, government going to do?

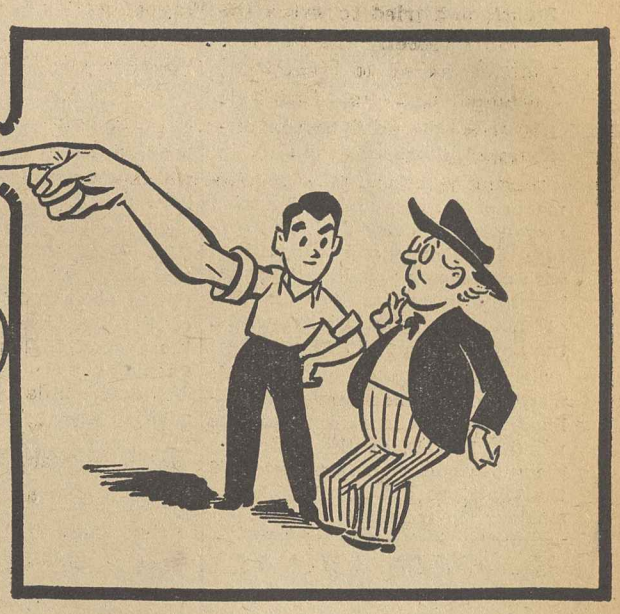


6. The answer is in a rational, simple re-conversion plan like the one in the Kilgore bill (S 1893) now in the Senate.

7. Which will put planning and common sense to work and kick chaos out . . . this will help the war and the peace to come . . .



8. And help not only industry but also take care of the human side of reconversion . . . the men and women war workers and returning veterans.



9. You'd think a sensible bill like this would go through easy . . . but Congress hasn't moved yet . . . its up to YOU to say "Get Busy!"

CONGRESS went away for a summer vacation without taking any action on the Kilgore reconversion bill (S 1893).

The vacation will last until August 1. Most of the Representatives and Senators will be home for part of that time, mending political fences and finding out what the voters think.

The Kilgore reconversion bill helps workers and returning servicemen. It also helps industry. By giving workers and servicemen unemployment aid, help in sickness and disability, re-training for new jobs, it will keep up purchasing power (read paychecks) during the turnover from war to peace production.

A sound reconversion policy that keeps people at work, and pays them money if they're out of work through no fault of their own, helps to keep the country prosperous.

Without a sound policy as outlined in the Kilgore bill, the country could slip back into the layoffs, the closed factories, the mass suffering that we knew in the years of "rugged individualism."

With it, we can take a long step toward full employment, toward keeping our industry going and our people employed in useful jobs at good wages.

Women in Politics to Stay; And Do They Love It!

By MIRIAM KOLKIN

NEW YORK, July 1—Women are in politics to stay—and they love it.

That was the impression Mrs. Verda Barnes, national director of the CIO Political Action Committee's women's division, garnered on her recent trip to the West Coast and back. In her small sunlit office on the fifteenth floor of a New York City skyscraper, home to the national PAC headquarters, Mrs. Barnes told me about the wildfire of political action which is spreading into every union home, community and shop in the nation.

"It's like a crusade," she said earnestly, "I haven't seen so much enthusiasm, spirit and downright hard work since the early days when the CIO was still in the talking stage."

And union and progressive-minded women from coast to coast are right up in front in the march to victory through political action, she said. "It's not true that women aren't interested in politics," she added. "Why, much more so than men, they're emotionally and realistically tied up with the problems involved in winning this war on the home front."

It's the housewife who has to skimp and worry about food and clothing when Congress passes a high-cost-of-living bill, she said. It's the woman in the migrant war worker's family who has to try to make a trailer liveable.

It's the woman war worker who has to go off to her job, knowing her children are roaming the streets because there aren't enough playgrounds and child care centers for them. And it's the sweethearts and mothers of the boys in uniform who got really mad when the poll-taxers and Republicans in Congress killed the soldier vote bill.

Because women—who will cast 60 per cent of the vote Nov. 77—are beginning to realize that the difference between a reactionary Congress and a win-the-war Congress can mean the difference between depression and prosperity for America now and in days to come, they've swung into action in their shops and communities to get out the biggest vote in history.

"You'll find them out ringing doorbells, talking to their friends and neighbors, doing the real Jimmy Higgins work," she said. And then her face lit up with a broad smile as she told me about the heroines already turned up by this political war to smoke out the reactionaries.

In North Carolina one girl—Helen Gregory—personally saw that 5,000 union members registered to vote. In Atlanta, Ga., Mrs. Annie Maude Creel succeeded in getting more than 1,200 new voters to register within less than two months.

In San Francisco—scene of a hot primary battle between former Rep. Frank Havenner and tory Tom Rolph—one woman canvassing her block on the night before the primary suddenly discovered that she was going to have her baby three weeks ahead of schedule. She was rushed to the hospital in the nick of time. The next morning found her calmly sitting up in bed telephoning the voters she had missed on her rounds the night before.

"We'll need plenty of that kind of spirit from now until November," Mrs. Barnes said, "before we can take a deep breath and say we've done the job of electing Roosevelt and a progressive Congress."

The PAC women's division, formed in March, is just beginning to send its organizational roots down into the rich political soil of America. But it's off to a successful start, with women's groups already set up in Michigan, Maine, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Utah and Colorado.

When it's going full steam it aims to have millions of CIO, AFL and independent union women plus their friends, relatives and members of progressive women's groups sold on the idea that political action is the people's no longer secret homefront weapon in 1944

ANOTHER CIO "first" is Dorothy Rockwell, first woman to be elected president of an American Newspaper Guild local in Washington, D. C. Miss Rockwell works on the Philadelphia Inquirer, was formerly secretary of her local.

Hot Tips on Women's Place in Politics

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

The Los Angeles Auxiliary Council has sent in some very important suggestions for auxiliary political action work. They are especially valuable because they grow out of the practical experience of the women out there in their successful work in the California primaries.

Here's what Carrie Carroll, Council Secretary, writes:

"1. Nell (that's Nell Proctor, the gal who found 41 precinct captains in the drive to defeat Costello) had a very interesting experience in one precinct. She was unable to get a precinct captain and decided to cover it herself. After speaking to several women, she found one who was very much interested in the issues and in ousting Costello. Nell told her she didn't have time to cover the whole block, and asked the woman if she would take some literature and contact three of her neighbors. The woman agreed.

"Nell worked on this angle as she went along and got a number of others to do the same. The vote in that precinct showed that Styles got 130 votes to Costello's 19.

CHAIN METHOD

"In the Auxiliary Council we have been thinking along the same lines. Our idea is to approach as many CIO families as we can, through our auxiliaries, and by appealing to union members to get their wives or mothers, and ask each woman to pledge to pass on literature and speak to five of her neighbors.

"After we've gotten them started we will ask these women to get at least one of those five neighbors to do the same. We are limiting our request to five because we know that a larger number may seem too much of a load and will prevent some women from getting started. As you know, the chain method, if it works, is the most effective way of reaching large numbers.

"2. Another idea is to organize the teen age and even smaller children to distribute literature. One successful method that was used in a previous campaign was to issue sweat shirts to both boys and girls with the slogan 'Vote for ———.' After the election the children were treated to an outing or show.

"Teen age children of several of our members distributed copies of labor's slate for the primaries to every house in several precincts the Sunday before voting day—and they loved doing it."

POLITICAL ACTION SKIT

The UAW auxiliaries have suggestions, too. They put on our auxiliary political action skit "Leave It to Suzy and Sal" at the first big women's meeting on political action in Detroit with great success. A carefully planned quiz program, with questions planted in the audience to start discussion was another effective part of the meeting.

They emphasize especially, however, the importance of having a concrete program of action ready for the women to get to work on while their enthusiasm is high. At the Detroit meeting 90 per cent of the women present volunteered to go door to door in their neighborhoods explaining the importance of the 1944 elections to their neighbors. These volunteers were registered at the meeting and their cards turned over to the precinct captains in their areas.

A one-page "Primer on Political Action for Women" is another UAW contribution to auxiliary political action work. In a few brief sentences, with attractive illustrations, it outlines the importance of political action, women's special stake in 1944, and what steps each woman must take.

Battle of Statistics Finds CIO a Winner

WASHINGTON, July 1—The U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics was reeling from a body blow delivered this week by a couple of CIO statisticians, who said publicly that a BLS method of figuring was wacky and backed up their statement with support from noted authorities.

The Battle of Statistics started when the BLS said that the CIO and AFL should have added instead of multiplied in figuring some cost of living increases. "Bad arithmetic—tsk, tsk," said BLS.

The CIO statisticians—Harold Ruttenberg and Lincoln Fairley, respectively research directors for the CIO Steelworkers and Auto Workers—said the BLS was not only wrong, it was amateurish. In a pedagogical mood, Fairley and Ruttenberg wrote:

"Accuracy beyond the requirements of the case under discussion may not only delay decisions, confuse the listeners, and burden them with unnecessary qualifications, but it may also prevent the reaching of necessary conclusions within the applicable margin of error.

"Careful abidance within this margin, on the one hand, and willingness to venture to the limits permitted by it, on the other, are the outstanding characteristics of the expert as contrasted with the amateur in economic interpretation."

The CIO experts trotted out the opinions of noted authorities in their field to back up their contention that multiplication instead of addition was the correct procedure—and also pointed out that even the BLS said that its mistaken charge of "incorrect arithmetic" accounted for only a small percentage of the difference between the 23.4 per cent BLS cost of living increase figure and CIO's report which showed that the rise has been almost twice that.

Adding a conclusive kick to the BLS defeat, the CIO experts cited the report of the Technical Committee appointed by the chairman of the President's Committee on the Cost of Living, which made it unanimous that the BLS was wrong and that multiplication instead of addition was the way to figure.

UAW Women Visit Knox

Detroit, July 1—More than 150 women war workers, members of the CIO United Auto Workers, who visited Fort Knox, Kentucky, for three days last week can give a straight answer to anyone expressing amazement over the success of our armies in all parts of the world.

During that time the women production soldiers lived as fighting soldiers—they were quartered in WAC barracks, awakened at 5:30 A.M., ate GI chow and watched, sometimes even taking part in, demonstrations of the rigorous training our men received.

Tank rides, a trip to the tank ordnance shops, watching the precision marching of khaki-clad WAC's, visiting the rifle and machine gun range and instructions in jiu jitsu were experienced by the three-day GI Janes.

They visited the realistic commando courses, with real machine guns and hand grenades popping all around them. They saw the bivouc areas where the men undergo concentrated training. They lunched with the boys in basic training with food prepared by Italian prisoners of war.

Ex-CIO MAN Writes About D-Day Fight

Washington, July 1—A former CIO News editor witnessed modern history's greatest moment, the invasion of France, 5,000 feet above it as a turret gunner with the 9th Air Force, it was learned this week here.

He is Sgt. Walter Peters, staff correspondent for the European edition of Yank, Army weekly newspaper, and a former CIO NEWS editor.

Sgt. Peters flew with the A-20s on D-Day and related the story of low invasion bombing for the June 18 issue of the European edition of Yank.

Auxiliaries Aid Fight To Re-elect Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, July 1—CIO wives, mothers, sweethearts are going all-out for FDR for a 4th term, and are mobilizing for political action through the CIO Conggress of Womens Auxiliaries.

"We need to involve both the women who are in industry and the women at home in the campaign," the Auxiliary said in a statement issued by the Executive Board.

"Although there are now close to 17 million women employed, the housewives still outnumber them. Moreover we must look to the housewives for much of the legwork and doorbell ringing since the long working hours at the plant, in addition to household responsibilities, limit the free time of our working women."

WHAT WOMEN CAN DO

Every local auxiliary should get in touch with its union and with the local PAC, the Board says, to offer the help of its members in bringing political action into the homes. Fund raising, registration drives, and getting ballots to servicemen are only some of the many ways CIO women are planning to help keep FDR in the White House and Dewey and Hooverism out.

In urging FDR to run again the Women's Auxiliary Board said:

"President Roosevelt stands for the things that are closest to the hearts of American women:

"1. Close cooperation with our allies to ensure a quick and complete victory over the Axis which will bring our boys home.

"2. Continuing cooperation with our allies once this war is won to put an end to wars.

"3. Full employment and full social security for all our people in order to make freedom from fear realities to every American.

"We have seen the President work for and fight for these objectives ever since Pearl Harbor. The successful present joint attack on Hitler's Europe from east and west is one of the results of his policies.

"We owe what economic stability our country has to his action also. On two accasions during the past year only his veto has saved us from uncontrolled inflation.

"We are convinced that no other American can guide us so well through the final stage of the war to victory and security in the peace.

"We therefore call upon President Roosevelt, in the interest of our American people, to run for a fourth term, and we pledge to him to do out utmost to elect in November, 1944, a Congress which will support his policies."

To Armed Forces

Washington, July 1—There will be another deletion in the staff of the National CIO office July 6 when Richard Bauer, assistant to Leo Tearney, chief accountant, leaves for the armed services. Bauer has been with the CIO since 1937.

German Labor Man Warns

Must Wreck Nazi Labor Front To Free Unions

(As a contribution to the vital discussion, "What Shall We Do with Germany?" Allied Labor News is publishing an interview with Paul Merker, anti-Nazi German labor leader. The first part of the interview appeared last week.)

MEXICO CITY, July 1 (ALN)—The complete destruction of the Nazi Arbeitsfront (Labor Front) is a precondition for the restoration of free trade unions in Germany, according to Paul Marker, head of the trade union division of the Latin American Free German Committee, which unites refugee German trade unionists who have found shelter in various Latin American republics.

"When the Allied armies enter Germany," Merker told Allied Labor News, "they will find all surface labor organizations in the hands of the Arbeitsfront. This Nazi machine is based on a system of regional, local and factory councils. Its original purpose was to liquidate trade unions. This accomplished, it now grinds down German workers with an elaborate system of espionage and punishments."

NAZI PLAN FLOPS

When the Nazis first took over, Merker declared, they set up a dual organization of labor, one wing of which encompassed the industrial and manual workers, the other the white collar and government employes.

Their hope was to set the two groups against each other, but when this failed the Arbeitsfront was set up under the control of Dr. Robert Ley. Each industry in Germany, Merker said, has a central Labor Front propaganda bureau under the direction of carefully chosen Nazi functionaries.

"However," Merker added, "many of the minor officials of the Arbeitsfront are secretly anti-Nazi and collaborate with the underground. In fact, when the old trade unions were outlawed, many of our workers were deliberately sent into the Arbeitsfront. A good many of them are still there and they will be of great help both in smashing Nazi influence in the reconstructed trade unions of post-war Germany and in organizing labor democratically."

MUST HAVE INT'L UNITY

Pointing out that the present underground forces in Germany will be the main allies of the Anglo-American and Russian armies of occupation, Merker suggested that organized labor in the U. S., Britain and the Soviet Union begin now the formation of liaison committees to work with the Allied authorities.

Such committees, Merker declared, "could work out re-educational methods and rehabilitation plans in liberated Germany and be the contact between German workers and the Allied occupation forces."

Stressing the German underground's need for aid from United Nations labor, Merker declared that "international trade union unity is a prerequisite without which the restoration of a free trade union movement, not only in Germany but in all of enslaved Europe, will be extremely difficult.

"Trade union unity among labor in Britain, the U. S. and the Soviet Union must be achieved if the renaissance of free labor in Europe is to be assured." In this connection, he added, the value of a world labor congress "cannot be overemphasized."

He expressed the hope that the rapidly developing war situation will shortly permit the postponed London conference to be convened, with all main labor organizations, including the AFL, attending.

Mexico Bans Sinarquist Meetings, Jail for Editor

Mexico City, July 1 (ALN)—President Avila Camacho this week ordered Attorney General Aguilar Mayo to prohibit all meetings of the National Sinarquist Union. The editor of El Sinarquista, official publication of the organization, was indicted for subversve activities.

The action is believed to be the outgrowth of an article appearing in a recent issue of El Sinarquista urging soldiers to fight workers. Although the Sinarquist organization, set up in 1937 by Nazi agents, claimed to be defending Catholicism it has frequently been denounced by Mexican Archbishop Luis M. Martinez.

The outlawing of the Sinarquists was enthusiastically greeted at a meeting last night commemorating the third anniversary of the German invasion of Russia. Labor leader Vicente Lombardo Toledano declared that "today a new phase in Mexico's life begins."

He urged all Mexicans to support national unity around President Camacho and warned that agitation by fascist reaction and the Sinarquists was reaching a critical phase. All labor and popular organizations attended the anniversary meeting.

Britain's Biggest War Union In Political Unity Move

LONDON, June 28 (ALN)—The recommendation by the executive council of the Amalgamated Engineering Union that the Labor party convene a conference of all progressive parties to secure unity in the labor movement was endorsed by the AEU national committee meeting in Edinburgh this week.

The committee's resolution—adopted after keen debate by 27 votes to 21—"welcomed and supported" the application of the Communist party for affiliation to the Labor party and urged the Labor party to rally "all progressive bodies against reaction in Britain." The AEU, with nearly 1,000,000 members, is Britain's largest union of war industry workers.

Speaking in support of the resolution, F. Lee, Salford Labor councillor, stressed the unity of the fighters in European underground movements with the British troops now in action, and the vital necessity of complete working class unity in Britain in readiness for the next general election.

Legislation compelling employers to recognize trade unions, along the lines of the U. S. Wagner Act, was also urged. The committee further requested the council to open national negotiations to protect ship stewards against victimization, and secure recognition of the convener of shop stewards as the official representative of stewards in all establishments.

An agreement with the engineering employers limiting the hours of work of all youths under 21, and making compulsory part-time education on the employers' time with full pay for youths to the age of 18, was also demanded by the committee.

Western Union DriveHot;65,000 Work for Firm

By LAWRENCE KAMMET

NEW YORK, July 1—65,000 workers in the nation's telegrap monopoly, Western Union, scattered in more than 5,000 cities, towns and hamlets all over America, will in the near future choose their collective bargaining agent in an election to be conducted by the National Labor Relations Board.

The CIO-American Communications Association, which has the largest dues paying membership of any organization in the company, is confident of winning the election, because of its record of accomplishment for the workers, because of its brilliant war record, and because it is the only union in the industry which offers a practical economic program.

Because of the importance of this election to the entire CIO, Pres. Philip Murray is calling upon all affiliated unions and councils to participate actively in the drive.

In the past few days all International unions and councils have received a communication from Pres. Murray emphasizing the CIO's stake in the election. Director of Organization Allan Haywood has already met with regional directors and has directed that all regional offices make available their facilities for use in the organizing campaign.

AID FROM CIO

In addition, special conferences with national and local CIO leaders have been held directly with representatives of the ACA. Many unions have taken complete responsibility for organizing the workers in Western Union in their own particular areas. All CIO unions will be called upon to do a similar job.

ACA's opponent on the ballot will be something called "AFL." For the purposes of the election drive four AFL unions in various regions of the country, which have been fighting each other bitterly for years—and are still fighting more than ever, but not in public—signed an agreement in Bill Green's office designating the National AFL as their representative for the Western Union election.

None of these unions has ever been able to organize any substantial numbers of workers. Officers are the same as in the old company union set-up.

The major problem, that of getting across the story of ACA and CIO to the large number of unorganized workers in the company, will have to be accomplished by the kind of teamwork which has made the CIO the power that it is in every major community. The physical job of personally contacting 65,000 employes in more than 5,000 cities will require that every CIO officer, organizer and active member be geared into the campaign.

The story of ACA is one of the most dramatic in the CIO. After several years of struggle it organized all Postal Telegraph workers in the country. It was able to win from a practically bankrupt company substantial increases which improved the standard of living of 15,000 of the lowest paid workers in America.

The ACA also represents all radio officers aboard ships sailing from every port; all employes in international cables covering such companies as RCA Communications, Mackay Radio, and others; all Western Union employes in the Metropolitan (New York) area (80.000), and all Telegraph employes in Detroit, Duluth and Salt Lake City.

WIN BACK PAY

Only recently ACA won the first War Labor Board wage case for Western Union workers, bringing millions of dollars in retroactive pay and a 17.6 per cent straight increase.

Wages in telegraph today, though low compared with other wartime industries, are a far cry from those which prevailed before ACA came into the picture.

ACA's war record is one of which the entire CIO can be proud. There has not been a single day lost due to strikes in any branch of communications over which ACA has jurisdiction.

The War Department paid tribute to ACA's war record at the last convention of the union in a speech by an Army representative who said that "invasion preparations would have been impossible if it had not been for the teamwork between the Signal Corps and ACA, the Communications War Team."

Dozens of ACA members have been decorated. Many, particularly radio officers at sea, have given their lives by sticking to their posts to the end in order to get through an SOS.

PAC Drive Hot In Mid-West

Chicago, July 1—The drive to mobilize labor's full political strength was launched in the key states of Illinois, Indiana, and Wisconsin this week as Regional Director Raymond McKeough of the CIO Political Action Committee cleared the deck for action in a message issued to PAC leaders in this area.

The mobilization order from the former New Deal Congressman was a fitting challenge to the Republican convention.

"Political action," McKeough declared, "is our Number One job. It should be the subject of discussion at every meeting of every CIO local, and in every other place where any of our members or other groups of progressive forward looking citizens meet."

Labor's on the Air, Radio Survey Shows

NEW YORK, July 1 (FP)—Tune in for the news without that big business bias, for the score about labor in the war, for politics as it hits the people—labor is on the air!

Barred from the major networks, more and more unions, CIO and AFL, are buying time on local stations for regular labor radio programs geared to their own community, and for special broadcasts in organizing drives, political action campaigns and crises where it's important to get labor's point across to the people.

In the northwest thousands listen every Sunday night to This Is Your World, broadcast over KOMO, Seattle's strongest radio station, from 9:30 to 10 Pacific war time, under the co-sponsorship of Aeronautical Lodge 751, International Association of Machinists and Local 104, International Brotherhood of Boilermakers (both AFL).

Started by the aero mechanics as an experiment about a year ago, it met with such amazing success that the union decided to continue the program indefinitely.

The boilermakers began contributing $325 a month May 1, and other leading unions are expected to join the sponsor list soon... The program is a dramatic presentation of local and national news stressing labor's part in the war effort.

Union newspapermen tell a radio audience approaching the half million mark the stories publishers keep out of the papers on The News and What To Do About It, broadcast by the Newspaper Guild of New York (CIO) every Sunday morning at 11:30 over WLIB.

What is really behind news like the Montgomery Ward case, Martin Dies' sudden illness, developments in underground France, Congress' investigation of labor's political action campaign, are revealed on the program—ending always with what the listeners can do to remedy the situation.

The Guild gets the time free and uncensored because the program has actually brought the station thousands of new listeners.

In Cleveland, Labor's Joint Committee for Political Action, composed of all CIO, AFL and railroad unions in the city, went on the air twice a week to explain the important issues of the 1944 political campaign to the citizens and urge them to vote. After the primaries they stayed on the air with a weekly program.

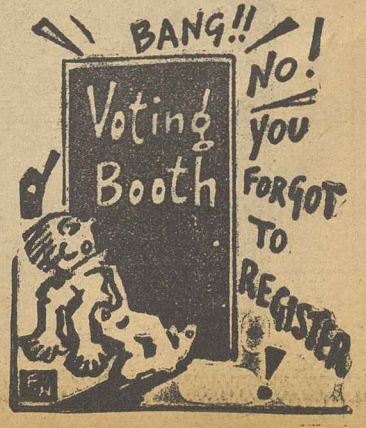
Tuesday nights at 7:30 over WHK, Toledo has Labor News and Views, begun by Local 12, CIO, United Auto Workers, over WTOL in May. Every Sunday from 12:30 to 12:45 a.m. the Toledo Union Journal goes on the air with local union news and labor news from Federated Press.

The radio-minded California union movement keeps the airways hot with CIO and AFL programs.

The CIO has its own broadcasting studio on the top floor of the CIO building in Los Angeles, from which it broadcasts Monday through Friday at 7:15 p.m. Our Daily Bread, Labor's newspaper of the Air. The station is KPAS, a 10,000-watt independent.

In Oakland, Station KLX set up microphones in the Green Room of the new Alameda County CIO building to broadcast the state CIO executive board meeting for half an hour on Saturday afternoon. The station provided radio technicians and an announcer and permitted the council to prepare the script summing up the meeting.

Over KFBW in Hollywood every night at 9:45, Pacific war time, the AFL sponsors Sam Balter, news commentator who has pressured off the air in Chicago for calling Col. Robert R. McCormick a native fascist. Money comes out of the political action fund raised by 100,000 AFL members in the area.



See Coos Bay Yarn as Flop In Phoney Try to Split Home and Fighting Fronts

WASHINGTON, July 1—Cut from the same insidious cloth as the faked Guadalcanal "strike" story circulated by the kept press last year, investigation of the U. S. Navy "Coos Bay" incident revealed this week that the crude and over-worked propaganda campaign to split the fighting front from the home front has back-fired again.

The Associated Press last week received a letter signed by "the crew of the U. S. S. Coos Bay" with the request that the AP "act as our agent to buy off the present strikers of the Wright Air Craft Corp." The letter contained $412 "to pay the wage increase the money hungry strikers are demanding." The letter was passed by Navy censors.

The letter and money were turned over to the Navy Dept. which announced that it was investigating the source of the letter and the extent to which members of the Coos Bay's crew participated in the raising of funds, and stated that "it holds no brief for strikes in war time, neither does the Navy condone expressions by its personnel of resentments, however sincere, which are in disregard of official regulations, which may be founded on imperfect knowledge of the issues, and which are handled so that they can be construed to be publicity seeking."

Following the release of the story to the press, Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO United Auto Workers, and Robert Spitzmiller, head of the Wright UAW local at Lockland, Ohio, where the "strike" took place, came forward with vigorous answers to the attempted labor smear.

They pointed out that the strike evidently referred to was authorized and had nothing to do with wage demands. It took place over the transfer of seven Negro workers into a department of the plant which had previously only had white workers.

The local had opposed the strike, and all except 600 of the workers in the plant had gone back to work at the union's request; 240 had refused and had been fired by the company, Thomas said.

"These men in the armed service have been propagandized," Thomas declared. "The people of Cincinnati at least know that there was no wage dispute involved. It was an anti-Negro issue. And they also know that our international union demanded that these people go back to work.

"Our members returned to work on our demands, but about 600 non-union people did not return to work and were disciplined by the management. Quite obviously we have no control over people who do not belong to the union."

Pieces in the anti-labor propaganda quilt began to place themselves together when it was revealed that the executive officer of the Coos Bay, a Lt. W. F. James, had previously written to at least one Congressman complaining about strikes in war plants.

The letter had been written to Congressman Ranulf Compton (R., Conn.). Compton, in replying to the executive officer, assured him strikes and home-front dissention "are not as bad as press reports would indicate."

FCC to Probe Radio's Bias Against Labor

U. S. Reports

Independents Cause Most Strikes, Not CIO, AFL Affiliates

WASHINGTON, July 8—Another monkey-wrench was thrown into the anti-labor propaganda machine this week when the U. S. Dep't. of Labor in its report on strikes in 1943 revealed that 71 per cent of the total idleness from strikes during that year involved unions not affiliated with either the CIO or the AFL.

The strikes involving unions not affiliated with either major labor group numbered 586. This represented only 1 per cent of the total number of strikes, but included nearly one-third of the workers and accounted for 71 per cent of the total idleness, the report stated.

In most of these strikes—466 out of 586—members of the United Mine Workers were involved. Other unaffiliated unions which had strikes were the Intl. Assn. of Machinists, unaffiliated before its return to the AFL in October, 1943, the Mechanics Educational Society of America and the Intl. Typographical Union, which recently voted to re-affiliate with the AFL.

More than one-fourth of the total number of strikes resulted from disputes over working conditions and company policies such as seniority, disciplinary methods, racial questions and supervision of work loads.

Vets Blast Reynolds As Pro-Fascist

Los Angeles, July 8.—Sen. Robert R. Reynolds (D., N. C.), who is "retiring" from public life next election, isn't liked by the veterans of this war and the last in this area. In fact, they called him "vigorously pro-fascist" at a recent meeting of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

"Senator Reynolds' pre-Pearl Harbor position was vigorously pro-fascist, and his record is both narrowly isolationist and definitely in favor of racial and religious prejudices," the resolution said.

"The VFW is compelled to disapprove the American Nationalists Committee (Reynolds' new fascist outfit) and urge upon its membership and the public at large a close and careful scrutiny of its real purposes, especially as such purposes reveal a determination to oppose all international cooperation in the interest of maintaining the peace, thus paving the way for World War III."

Reynolds, head of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, recently announced his decision not to run for re-election in November. His record had caught up with him.

AWOL Booklet Shows Pushers' Minds SNAFU

Washington, July 8—Hollywood stars lose sleep and weight and get upset stomachs on bond tours—therefore war workers are saboteurs when they stay at home to care for a sick husband. That's the so-called "reasoning" used by the National Foreman's Institute in their vicious, highly emotional booklet, "Women A. W. O. L."

Passing glibly over the roots of legitimate absenteeism—lack of proper nurseries, adequate transportation, planned housing, etc.—with the term "stereotyped excuses," they go to ridiculous extremes in contrasting in highly emotional language the horrors through which movie stars go on their bond tours with the "sabotage" of the mothers who stay at home to care for their babies.

The National Foreman's Institute seems to believe that this is the way that they personally can eliminate absenteeism. They perhaps believe that this is their one "constructive" contribution to the war effort.

UE Pushes Program To Aid War Vets

NEW YORK, July 8—Veterans' welfare was placed high on the immediate agenda this week of the CIO United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers Union as it outlined a program to its local unions calling for immediate action in setting up veterans' welfare committees to specialize in veterans' problems.

"Our Union realizes that the 10,000,000 veterans of this war cannot possibly be given jobs and security unless the problem of security and jobs for all people—including veterans—is solved," the UE-CIO states in the Bulletin On Veterans issued to its locals.

Based on the action of its General Executive Board, the bulletin tells the 700,000 war worker-members of the union that "we cannot consider vitally important problems which confront the veteran as apart from problems which confront all America."

UE PROGRAM

The Union outlined the following program for immediate action by all its local unions:

(1) Encourage the formation of veterans' welfare committees in local unions.

(2) Urge veterans' welfare committees to learn technical laws applying to returning veterans and to help in rehabilitation, hospitalization and employment. Such committees can serve as specialists in servicemen's and veterans legislation and encourage locals to adopt hospitals so that unions can be of direct aid to sick and wounded veterans, the UE said.

There is complete agreement, the UE said, that veterans should not seek to set up a separate veterans' organization.

More Women Voters Than Men In '44

Washington, July 8—Here's a thought from the U. S. Census Bureau to hold and act upon between now and election day.

For the first time in American history, women will outnumber men at the voting places in November, the Census says. Of a potential voting population of 88,600,000, women will account for 44,600,000.

Those are the dry figures of the Census. Behind them lies the fact that 10,000,000 men are in the armed forces, and are denied the chance to vote by the phoney "state's rights" law Congress passed.

Many millions of workers, most of them men, have left their old localities for jobs in new cities. A big proportion of these won't be able to vote due to registration difficulties.

And here's another thought; the GOP convention last month showed how the Republicans are aware of the importance of the women's vote by putting numerous Republican women on their various committees, including the arch-reactionary Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., July 8—Challenging business men and labor to give practical consideration to postwar reconstruction, CIO Pres. Philip Murray, in an address last week at Johnstown's Municipal Stadium warned that "it would be tragic if after licking Hitler and Tojo we would discover we had licked ourselves at home."

The CIO chieftain, after recalling the long struggle for unionism in the Johnstown steel mills, cautioned a large crowd of steel workers and their wives against complacency, and was roundly cheered when he declared that the United Steelworkers "cannot, must not and will not do anything that will impede the progress of winning the war."

"God forbid," Murray stated, "the day shall come when it can be said a soldier died on the battlefield because you and I were delinquent at home. It must not be said that any member of the CIO betrayed the men on the battlefield. That's an obligation I took for all of you, when I gave my personal assurance to President Roosevelt."

COWAN SPEAKS

Nathan Cowan, CIO Legislative director, accompanied President Murray and also spoke at the stadium. He outlined CIO's legislative program, organized to protect labor against the vicious attacks contained in such legislation as the Smith-Connally bill, and against the activities of anti-labor employers in the legislative and political fields.

Cowan blasted Republican Congressman Harvey Tibbott from Pennsylvania's 27th District. "Tibbott thinks with Big Business, works with Big Business, and votes with Big Business," he said.

Earlier in the day Murray was the luncheon guest of the Johnstown Flood Free Committee, a group of civic and business leaders organized to "tell the world" that Johnstown is forever free of the dangers of flood now that an eight-million dollar federal flood control project had been completed.

Murray's appearance in Johnstown marked a personal triumph for the man who for many years played a major role in the destinies of labor in this area. Veteran unionists recall in the dark days of the coal and iron police and company-controlled Republican state administrations, the CIO leader was chased out of Cambria county every time he attempted to address a union meeting.

Returning to the problems of immediate and post-war security, Murray challenged the figures of the Bureau of Labor Statistics which showed a rise in cost of living 23.4 per cent as against the carefully prepared report of the the CIO showing a cost of living bost of 45.3 per cent. He said the BLS filed a report that was neither factual nor reliable.

Referring to the CIO United Steelworkers postwar construction program, Murray said that it was the most constructive postwar plan yet developed, and stated that the way to provide full employment is to give the worker enough money for full buying power.

"Our post war plan is workable," he added. "But there are those who would scoff at our program when they themselves have nothing to offer."

Accuses Dies Of Hiring Fascist

New York, July 8 — Albert E. Kahn, co-author of the best seller "Sabotage," in an article in the July issue of "Reader's Scope," now on sale at all news stands, accuses Martin Dies of knowingly employing as an investigator a notorious leader of a fascist group.

Dies hired Edward F. Sullivan with complete knowledge of his affiliations with Dr. Hans Thomsen, Nazi Charge d'Affairs in Washington, Kahn charges in his article.

"Reader's Scope," the only digest magazine which is friendly to labor and the President, also publishes predictions in a separate section called "Inside Scope." One prediction of great interest to labor is that "The American Labor Party will roll up nearly 700,000 Roosevelt votes to insure the re-election of the President."

Another article of tremendous interest to labor is one written by Col. Richard C. Patterson Jr., a big business man who finds it necessary to urge the American people to vote for the re-election of President Roosevelt to guarantee a victorious war and a victorious peace.

"Reader's Scope" carries a great many other articles of interest to American workers—articles written by such writers as Albert Q. Maisel, Pierre Cot, William L. Shirer, and many others.

In addition to original articles, "Reader's Scope" digests many interesting and amusing articles from such magazines as The New Yorker, Madamoiselle, This Week, and many others.

85% Of War Goods From Union Plants

Washington, July 8—American workers have turned out more than $101 billion of war material since July, 1940. Of that total, more than 85 percent came from war plants having union contracts, Research Report of the UAW-CIO says in its current issue.

In manufacturing alone, workers contributed about 90 percent more man-days in 1943 than in 1939, the last full year of peace economy.

On Negro Rights

Field Littered With Broken GOP Promises

By ERNEST CALLOWAY

WASHINGTON, July 8—"Long on promises and short on deeds," was the terse and significant concensus of opinion of leading Negro spokesmen, press and labor, this week in giving their reactions to the much discussed "Negro planks" adopted at the recent Republican Convention at Chicago.

The Republican platform on Negro rights contained five points: (1) condemned appeal to racial prejudice, (2) pledged formation of a permanent Fair Employment Practices Commission, (3) favored legislation against lynching, (4) pledged passage of a fake constitutional amendment on the polltax, and (5) favored an investigation of discrimination in the armed forces.

This, perhaps, is the longest plank the Republicans have written on the Negro question, and "the most deceptive," in the opinion of Willard S. Townsend, president of the CIO Transport Service Employes Union.

"The GOP 'Trojan Horse' plank for Negroes," Townsend stated, "is in essence a bold and reckless attempt to accomplish two things. First, to split America's two largest minorities, Negro and labor. Secondly, for immediate campaign purposes, it seeks to cleanse the old elephant in the eyes of rank and file Negroes of the slime acquired in its democratic grave-digging expedition with southern 'white supremacy' poll-taxers in recent sessions of Congress."

The People's Voice, New York Negro weekly, compared the Republican words with Republican deeds and stated that "Here is a party whose Congressional leaders have gone right down the line with southern polltax, anti-Roosevelt Democrats in their efforts to scuttle progressive, win-the-war legislation, especially when it concerns the extension of Negro democratic rights."

In a word and deed "comparison of the GOP promise to Negroes, it is revealed that every single pledge has been an issue in the halls of Congress for the past several years.

For example, the GOP pledges support of a permanent Fair Employment Practices Commission. The recent record of GOP Congressmen on that will show that they joined with southern Senators in an attempt to kill the $500,000 appropriation for the present FEPC, and were successful in forcing through a number of crippling amendments. To add insult to injury, Gov. Dewey, the GOP candidate, killed outright a similar proposal (The Wicks Bill) made by his own anti-discrimination committee for New York State.

On the question of their polltax promises, their record is as indecent as that of their poalltax brothers in arms. In the recent polltax fight, two-thirds of the Republican senators voted against cloture or were conveniently absent when hte issue came to the floor. The proposal for an amendment to the constitution out-lawing polltaxes has been widely condemned as hopelessly impossible of attainment by many Negro and liberal forces who have been identified with the fight.

Walter White, secretary of the Natl. Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, in commenting on this particular Republican plank, stated, "It takes two-thirds vote of both Houses of Congress to place a Constitutional amendment before the state legislatures and it requires approval by three-fourths of the 48 states.

"Any school child," White continued, "knows that if Senators from 13 states can successfully filibuster, aided directly or indirectly by certain Northern Republicans, to prevent a vote on an anti-polltax bill which requires only a majority to pass in the Senate, the power of the anti-polltax bloc will be even more effective when it requires two-thirds vote to enact a Constitutional Amendment.

"On the question of anti-lynch legislation, their record on cloture is equally bad. They have permitted every proposal to be filibustered to death by southern poll-taxers."

White again stated that this section of the GOP plank "does not say whether it is federal, state or municipal legislation that the Republicans favor . . . and it is futile to advocate legislation unless cloture is also pledged."

RECORD CONSISTENTLY BAD

The Republican pledge to investigate discrimination in the armed forces falls flat when it is revealed that GOP leaders joined with polltaxers on the powerful House Rules Committee to block such a resolution introduced several months ago for such a purpose.

The 1944 GOP Convention pledge on the Negro issue is not the first made by the Republican party. It is merely the longest (108 words). The history of Republicanism is replete with convention pledges made on the Negro question since 1864, and it is equally over-burdened with pledges that have never been kept.

In 1920, 1924 and 1928 with Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, the GOP conventions pledged to enact a federal anti-lynch law. With 28 years of McKinley, Roosevelt (Teddy), Taft, Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, years in which the GOP dominated Congress, the Supreme Court and sat in the White House, not a single Negro pledge was kept.

Negroes Fight For Rights In Southern Primaries

ATLANTA, Ga., July 8—The first inning of the great Negro battle to break the white Democratic primary in polltax Georgia ended as primary day rolled by with several hundred Negroes seeking in an organized fashion to give meaning to the recent decision of the Supreme Court involving the Texas primary case. Results: No runs, no hits and several errors.

Polltax, white election boards had the situation well in hand, with democracy still being sold short in a series of recently devised schemes to defeat the spirit and meaning of the Supreme Court edict, which held that Negroes have the right to vote in Texas primaries.

The entire process of this new technique of disfranchising Negro voters was orderly and uneventful. Gone were the usual violent demonstrations of the Georgia white supremists when faced with the question of simple justice to more than 30 percent of their people.

Precincts in Negro areas were closed, names refused to appear in registration books and addresses were not found.

Yet, despite this first-inning victory of the white primary gang, the feeling is rising that the system is on its last legs. The growing number of Georgia white progressives and the Negro determination to push forward politically are the major reasons for this new faith in the political future of the state.

Nye Vote Still Doubtful; Service Ballots Vital

WASHINGTON, July 8—Clear proof of the importance of the GI vote is seen in the still doubtful results of the North Dakota primary, where the isolationist Sen. Gerald P. Nye's place in the Senate hangs on some 8,000 soldiers' votes still to be counted.

Nye ran only a few hundred votes ahead of his nearest rival, Lynn U. Stambaugh, former head of the American Legion, and only a couple of thousand ahead of the liberal Rep. Usher L. Burdick. The soldiers' and sailors' votes will decide the issue—against Nye, it is hoped.

Burdick's defeat is a serious loss, since it removes him from the House. He was one of the tiny faction of Republicans who voted right on the soldiers' vote, on the Smith-Connally Act, on subsidies and other win-the-war issues.

With a real GI vote law, instead of the so-called "state's rights" measure passed by the poll tax Democrat-Republican alliance, there would be no doubt of defeating the anti-war and anti-labor Nye.

Wayne County CIO Reports Bang Up Policial Job

DETROIT, July 8—The titanic task of filing the names of the 450,000 CIO members in Wayne County according to the precincts in which they live has now been completed, it was announced this week by Tracy Doll, executive secretary of the Wayne County CIO Political Action Committee.

The undertaking, considered the most important phase in mobilizing all members of the CIO and their families in the county for a knockdown battle against reactionaries in the fall election, was begun the latter part of May. More than 2,500 hours of clerical work was required before the task was completed.

'The files comprise a wedge for labor in the political arena," Doll said. "Neither of the major political parties, Republican or Democratic, has a more complete breakdown of potential voters."

Precinct captains for more than 300 of the 1,383 precincts in the county have already been armed with lists of those living in their jurisdictions.

"It must be borne in mind that ours is a double-barreled campaign," Doll declared. "CIO members are reached through two channels, their precinct organizations and their shop organizations. In both cases the organization is on a democratic basis, with leaders elected to represent the membership at conventions and conferences where the course to be followed is decided upon."

Govt. Expert Says

U. S. Diet Bad; Low Wages, Poor Education To Blame

Washington, July 8—Total food supplies are sufficient to provide an adequate diet for everyone in the United States, but low income makes it impossible for at least one-fourth of our population to be well fed, and improper selection of foods leads to inadequate diet among large numbers of people, even though income may be theoretically sufficient to provide food to meet accepted nutritional standards.

That was the main point made by Dan A. West, assistant to the Deputy Director for Commodity and Industry Regulation, at the annual conference of Consumers Union held last week here.

Subsidization of consumption, effective price control and elimination of quality deterioration and "garden variety chiseling by wartime profiteers," as well as widespread distribution of accurate information concerning adequate diet and means of achieving it, were the means suggested by West to eliminate this situation.

The progress of the past year and plans for the future of the nine-year-old non-profit consumer organization were reviewed in the morning session.

Pro-Labor Commentator

New York (FP)—The Electronics Corp. of America, which rates star billing in labor's Believe It or Not collection because of its friendly attitude toward unions, is in the news again.

The company is putting pro-labor radio commentator William S. Gailmor, prominent member of the Newspaper Guild of New York (CIO) on the air five nights a week. Gailmor will broadcast from 9 to 9:15 p. m. over Station WHN.

The United Electrical Radio & Machine Workers (CIO) has a contract with this company, which also sponsors a weekly broadcast by another liberal commentator, Johannes Steel, on Station WMCA.

FCC Hearing Slated

To Probe Radio's Bias Against Labor

By FRED d'AVILA

WASHINGTON, July 8—Sensational documentation of the shabby deal given organized labor by radio broadcasting companies in contrast to the love feast they share with the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers is due for an airing before the Federal Communications Commission August 15.

The explosive situation, with its implications of dirty politics, suppression of free speech and outright favoritism to employer interests, revolves around a petition filed by the CIO United Auto Workers Union declaring that Station WHKC of Columbus, Ohio, is not operated in the public interest. The FCC will consider cancellation of the station's license.

CONSIDERED TEST CASE

Tied in with this action—considered a test case—are:

1. The recent cancellation by the Natl. Broadcasting Co. of the CIO-AFL Labor for Victory show, because NBC contended that this program would be considered "political" in an election year.

2. The current pressure campaign of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers to force 900 stations to carry free a 13-week series of 15-minute broadcasts called "Businessmen Look to the Future," with a letter to the broadcasters signed by two men who help control more than $3 million in radio advertising accounts.

The UAW-CIO petition to the FCC charges that WHKC censored UAW broadcasts, and presents documented evidence that the opposite side of the issue on which the union wanted to speak was presented, uncensored, by a former spokesman for the NAM, Fulton Lewis Jr.

Lewis, the UAW pointed out, was allowed to smear the public housing program, while WHKC denied the UAW the opportunity adequately to defend it.

The UAW, which has been circulating state-wide petitions in Ohio demanding FCC action against WHKC, charged:

1. That the station has a policy of not permitting sale of time for programs that solicit membership, or discuss controversial subjects such as race, religion and politics.

2. That the station does not apply this policy uniformly, but only strictly in connection with those with whom the management disagrees and loosely or not at all in connection with others.

"Station WHKC," the UAW charged, "has in the past carried the venomous talk of Col. Robert R. McCormick of the Chicago Tribune, violating with impunity every one of the restraints on free speech so strictly imposed on petitioners.

CARRIES BOAKE CARTER

"Station WHKC similarly carries the daily spoutings of Boake Carter and Fulton Lewis Jr., who routinely discuss controversial issues, race, religion and politics.

"The station, while censoring the scripts of the UAW-CIO, freely carries uncensored programs entitled 'Freedom of Opportunity' put on by the Junior Chamber of Commerce."

The attitude of the station, the UAW charged, brings into sharp relief the true facts of radio discrimination, in contrast to the sanctimonious spoutings of the major networks that the industry always bends over backwards to give labor a square deal.

Further pointing up the situation is the cancellation of the Labor for Victory show for political reasons while a fair majority of the 900 stations solicited for free programs by the NAM are cooperating with an organization that has been ear deep in politics ever since its birth.

NAM STOOGE GROUPS

The NAM was exposed by the La Follette Civil Liberty Committee as using every conceivable type of radio technique, including broadcasts in foreign languages, to influence the nation against the Wagner Labor Relations Act, the Social Security act and other progressive legislation.

Posing formerly as the Natl. Industrial Council and currently as the Natl. Industrial Information Committee, the NAM has poured its propaganda into the ears of the American people with the blessings of the broadcasting industry.

In a letter dated June 14, 1944, the NAM advised 900 local radio stations that they had better get on the beam with NAM or else . . .

PRESSURE CAMPAIGN

The letter, which offered free the 13-week series, "Businessmen Look to the Future," listed Alfred P. Sloan Jr. and James S. Adams respectively as chairman and chairman of the program committee of the Natl. Industrial Information Committee, affiliated with NAM.

Sloan is chairman of the board of General Motors, which in 1943 spent $835,884 on network broadcasting, and a director of E. I. du Pont de Nemours, which that year spent $608,400.

Adams is president of Standard Brands Inc., which in 1943 spent $2,168,422 on network broadcasting.

The grand total of network advertising controlled by these accounts—with no mention made of possible sums spent locally—is $3,612,706, which might be expected to have at least a minor influence on managers of local stations.

COOPERATE OR ELSE

The NAM letter tactfully advises the station managers that businessmen in their communities will be notified of their cooperation with the NAM—and also, incidentally, of their lack of cooperation, if any.

Sloan's connection with politics has been documented in the Congressional Record. In the 1940 presidential campaign he and his family contributed $36,000 to the Republican candidates and the du Pont family, with which Sloan is connected, gave $186,780, also to Republicans.

These are but a few of the facts that, taken together, make the WHKC hearing so important to labor.

Pressing the campaign in Columbus for a square deal for the UAW-CIO—with the knowledge that their test case may have nation-wide repercussions—are UAW-CIO national and local representatives Louis Strickland, Winifield Hutchinson, Harold Cabus, Dick Evans, Paul Miley and Walter Sassaman, and George De Nucci, secretary-treasurer of the State CIO Council.

Ask Reilly Ouster From NLRB Post

Washington, July 8—A demand that Gerard Reilly be removed from the Natl. Labor Relations Board was made last week at a meeting of the Intl. Executive Board of the United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employees.

The Board charged that Reilly's stand, taken on a number of occasions, including the Montgomery-Ward case, "threatens labor's right to organize without employer interference."

The Brush-Off for Labor

Labor's demands and interests received scant attention at the Republican party convention.

Van A. Bittner received a brief hearing to present the CIO program, which the GOP policy-makers thereupon proceeded to disregard.

The AFL also received the brush-off after it presented its proposals to the resolutions committee.

Only the Bruiser Brothers, Bill Hutcheson and John L. Lewis, who represent little more than themselves politically, received consideration in the labor plank of Tom Dewey's platform.

Completely ignored were CIO's requests for a planned transition to full production and full employment after the war, for a guaranteed annual wage, and for the realization of Pres. Roosevelt's economic Bill of Rights.

Ignored too were labor's demands for protection of human as well as property rights in cutbacks and reconversion, as provided in the Kilgore bill.

Most hypocritical part of the GOP labor plank is the statement of acceptance of the "the purposes" of the Wagner labor relations act, the wage-hour act, the social security act and other similar New Deal legislation—this from politicians who bitterly fought such legislation and who have consistently tried to curtail and sabotage it!

Another booby-prize sentence is the declaration that "under the New Deal, American economic life is being destroyed." The apostles of Dewey-Hooverism must think the American people have short memories indeed.

For the fact is that in 1932, after three years of Hoover rule, the national income of the United States was only 40 billion and only 37 million persons were privately employed.

On the other hand, seven years of New Deal "destruction" increased national income to 70.8 billion in 1939 and private employment to 45 million.

The Dewey brush-off for labor is not hard to explain. His crowd realize that American working people know the score on Roosevelt's record and are not to be fooled by a few slick phrases.

So they are more concerned with proving their loyalty to their anti-labor backers than trying to placate labor voters who will oppose them anyhow.

Partisan or Non-Partisan

Many of labor's would-be advisers, including some spokesmen for the AFL, profess to view with alarm CIO's call for a fourth term for Pres. Roosevelt as dangerous to labor's long-range interests.

They declare that the CIO is abandoning labor's traditional non-partisan policy, is becoming a tail to the Democratic Party's kite, and that all sorts of dire results will follow.

No sign of such alarm is evident in CIO ranks, however, though these include many Republicans, as well as Democrats and members of other parties.

For the fact of the matter is that every CIO member knows CIO endorsements are based on a candidate's record and not on his party affiliation.

Republican candidates who have a wholesome win-the-war and pro-labor record receive CIO endorsement just as readily as do Democrats with a similar record.

As to CIO being tail to the Democratic Party's kite, that would be a surprise to many Democratic members of Congress, notably the polltax anti-New Dealers, whom CIO opposes with vigor.

The line-up on nearly every issue in recent years has not been Democrats versus Republicans, but rather Pres. Roosevelt, on the one hand—supported by progressive Democrats and some progressive Republicans—versus a combination of tory Republicans and anti-New Deal Democrats, on the other.

On price control, food subsidies, taxes, the Smith-Connally act, the soldiers' vote and most other important domestic issues, Pres. Roosevelt has led the progressive, pro-labor and win-the-war forces; while a majority of the Republicans in Congress have joined with polltax Democrats in fighting FDR's policies.

That is why Republican as well as Democratic members of the CIO have no hesitation in joining in the endorsement of Pres. Roosevelt, and do not regard this step as any departure from CIO's non-partisan political policy of endorsing candidates on their record rather than along party lines.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

THE smart and silent Dewey, who won the Republican nomination by being smartly silent now hopes to win the election by ination by being smartly silent, on the real issues.

His friends have unfurled for him a banner with a strange device: "The war is not an issue."

Beneath this banner has been reconstructed the same booby trap into which so many voters blithely walked in 1942.

This slogan is slick politics, of course. It has plausibility and a certain patriotic appeal. For certainly all good Americans, regardless of party politics, are out to win this war.

But at the same time it is a deceptive and dangerous slogan. It creates an unreal division between the country's war interests and domestic politics.

It permits shyster politicians to play lip service to patriotism while they actually sabotage the home sector of our indivisible fighting front.

★ ★ ★

The effect of this slogan on voters who fall for it is to make them regard the politics of these elections as of relatively minor importance.

It would lead them to vote, if at all, on petty sectional and factional prejudices rather than on the big issues that are closest to their hearts and their interests.

It is part of the tactics of the Dewey forces to keep the popular vote as small as possible, so reaction may win by default in 1944 as it won in 1942.

★ ★ ★

What are the real issues for Mr. and Mrs. America today?

They are (1) to win the win in the shortest possible time; and (2) to make the postwar transition to secure world peace, with maximum production and employment and the greatest possible prosperity for the greatest number of people.

The first objective demands maximum national unity, based on a square deal for all groups, on holding the line against inflation, and on relating every domestic policy to the needs of victory.

The second objective depends upon carrying forward the war unity of the United Nations into postwar international organization for the preservation of peace and the cooperative expansion of world markets.

It also calls for the planful cooperation of labor, industry and government to increase domestic purchasing power and to expand employment and production.

On both of these real issues, the Roosevelt administration is in the best position, on its record, to deliver the goods.

At best, Dewey can only promise to do almost as well as Roosevelt is doing. At worst, and more likely, he will bring internal disruption during the war, through special favors to selfish interests; and after the war, another Hoover depression along with a trend to war-breeding imperialism under the pressure of the so-called isolationists who support him.

Because he knows, as well as most intelligent voters know, that he has little, or worse than little, to offer on the basic war issues of this year's elections, Dewey seeks to divert attention from these issues to the old stand-bys of peacetime politics-as-usual.

The Republican platform is therefore a typical politics-as-usual booby-trap. Full of contradictions and obscurities, it seeks to offer sops to every kind of group interest, while slurring over its failure to offer any real program for winning the war and winning the peace.

Even the sops it offers are transparent frauds, when contrasted to the actual records of most of the Republicans in Congress and of Dewey himself.

The labor section, for instance, speaks of accepting "the purposes of the Natl. Labor Relations Act, the Wage and Hour Act, the Social Security Act and all other federal statutes designed to promote and protect the welfare of American working men and women."

Yet all of this legislation was enacted by the Roosevelt administration over Republican opposition. And since its enactment, Republicans in Congress have consistently combined with anti-New Deal polltax Democrats to curtail and sabotage it.

Similarly, the fair words in the Republican platform about racial discrimination and a permanent Fair Employment Practice Commission are belied by Dewey's own record in New York State and by Republican votes against the FEPC and against the anti-polltax bill.

CIO, AFL Unite For Leigslative Work

Rochester, N. Y., July 8—A joint permanent CIO-AFL legislative conference was established here last week right in the heart of anti-labor Frank Gannett's newspaper empire.

Pres. Anthony Capone of the Central Trades and Labor Council and Pres. John Cooper of the CIO Industrial Union Council told the conference that united action is the only road to full employment and permanent peace.

Textile Price Hike Is Lesson To Labor

WASHINGTON, July 8—One of the strongest arguments for CIO's wage case and for labor political action was furnished—at considerable expense to the workers—in the enforced raising of cotton textile prices this week.

The rise followed the order of Congress in renewing the price control act with a slightly modified version of the Bankhead amendment in it. The Bankhead amendment, opposed by CIO and the OPA, requires a cotton textile price ostensibly in line with "parity." Actually, the cotton farmers get nothing out of it—the manufacturers get all the gravy.

The new price increases directly affect the things workers use—denims, knit cotton underwear, sheets, pillowcases, cotton yarns, etc. The total added to the consumers' bill will be about $150,000,000 a year. It would have been more if OPA had not ruled that many other cotton textiles did not come under the Bankhead clause.

The amendment was put into the bill by a combination of poll-tax Democrats, led by Bankhead of Alabama and Republicans. The record of the vote on the original amendment is given in the Legislative Supplement to the CIO News of June 19, which can be ordered from the CIO Publicity Dept., 718 Jackson Pl., Washington 6, D. C.—Publication No. 108.

It would be a good idea to study this record, to ask your Senator about it while he's home on vacation. Point out to him that workers and voters don't like having an extra $150,000,000 a year added to the already soaring cost of living.

While you talk to him, remember that the Bankhead amendment was voted in the Senate, not voted in the House, but was slipped into the final conference report on the bill and became law.

Record of Senators Who Voted for Price Rise

This is the way your Senator voted on the Bankhead amendment to the Price Control Act that raises the cost of cotton clothes you, your wife and your children wear, and the sheets and pillowcases you sleep on.

The Bankhead amendment was passed in the Senate, but not in the House. It came through however in the conference committee report which was adopted by both House and Senate as the final version of the bill. Under this amendment, OPA was forced to raise prices on all work clothes, women's house dresses, cheap kids' clothes, etc.

None of the extra price you pay out of your frozen wages goes to the cotton farmer. It all goes to the cotton millowner, who pays sweatshop wages himself.

Study this record and ask your Senators to explain their votes if they voted for the amendment, congratulate them if if they voted against it.

What Symbols Mean

 Means Polltax State.*

Plus (+) means a vote for labor and the nation's win-the-war program.

Minus (—) means a vote against labor and the nation's win-the-war program.

Zero (O) means the Representative or Senator was absent or did not vote.

P+ or P— mean, respectively, paired for labor's position and paired against it. A Congressman who wishes to vote for a bill will sometimes "pair" his vote against a Congressman who wishes to vote against it.

When the voting record of a Representative or Senator is blank, it means that he or she was not in Congress at the time the vote was taken.

One Policy Insures Whole Family

Omaha, Nebr.—Here's something worthy of your attention. It's an extra liberal, new "Family Group" Life Insurance Policy that insures your family, 2 to 6 persons, for less than $1 a month. NOT $1 per person, but $1 for your entire family group of 2 to 6 members!

This policy is issued by an old line, LEGAL RESERVE life insurance company with assets of more than 7 million dollars. It is a genuine LEGAL RESERVE life insurance and it pays for death to ANY member of your family group from ANY cause.

What's more, it pays quick cash benefits that are big enough to be worthwhile. For death due to natural causes or ordinary accident, this policy provides maximum benefits up to $1000.00—DOUBLE for auto accidental death, or $2000.00—and TRIPLE for travel accidental death, or $3000.00, all as provided in the policy. Also benefits are graded according to ages of persons covered and number insured.

The amazing part of it all is the fact that you can get this policy without medical examination. You may include parents, children (married or unmarried, whether living at home or away), grandparents, in-laws, in fact any relatives in good health and between the ages of 1 and 70 years.

The cost for all is only $1 a month or $10.95 for a full year. What's more, this is a guaranteed rate, can never increase; and there can be no dues or assessments. Newcomers can be added at any time without extra cost; and the death of one member of the family does not terminate the policy. Instead it continues in force to protect those remaining, and provides continuous family protection.

Let us send you the policy itself for 10 DAYS' FREE INSPECTION. No cost. No obligation. No salesman will call. Just drop a card or letter to The Service Life Insurance Company, Dept. 9, Omaha 2, Nebraska.

CIO Unions Report Service Dues Bans, Initiation Waivers

WASHINGTON, July 8—Not a single one of seven CIO unions reporting to date on their relations with servicemen charge one penny in dues for those in the armed forces.

This preliminary report on a survey made by the CIO was released this week by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, with scores of other CIO affiliates yet to be heard from.

Of the seven international unions, four said that they have established a policy of not charging initation fees for returning servicemen who enter industry, and three others said that they are discussing the matter.

The unions that have so far replied to the questionnaire are: Steel, Rubber, Transport Workers, Office & Professional, Furniture, Federal Workers and Marine Cooks & Stewards. The unions have from 10 to 21 per cent of their memberships in the services.

Six of the seven advised Murray that they have secured clauses in contracts protecting the seniority rights of veterans, and the seventh, the Federal Workers Union, said that rights of veterans in its ranks are protected by legislation. This union does not sign collective bargaining contracts with the government.

Fairly typical of the comments on protection of seniority rights was that from the Rubber Workers, which said:

"In many of the 175 collective bargaining agreements which we now have, the degree of protection for seniority rights of members in service goes beyond the minimum requirements of the law. Practically everyone of our contracts contains such a seniority protection clause."

Practically all workers in six of the unions and an undetermined number in the seventh are covered by such clauses, the organizations reported.

A unique plan to aid veterans has been suggested by the Steelworkers, the union proposing that all members shall contribute $20 each out of whatever wage increases are granted by the Natl. War Labor Board, that steel companies shall match this amount dollar for dollar, and that the money will be pooled and distributed by management and union to steel workers in the armed services and merchant marine when they are honorably discharged, or to the dependents of those who may die in service.

Rubber Local's Keep 'Em Smiling Clubs Help Build Unity With GI Joes

DETROIT, July 8—A unique union plan to aid servicemen and to establish closer contact between home and fighting fronts is in successful operation at Local 101 of the United Rubber Workers Union, at the U. S. Rubber Co. plant here.

As outlined by URW Vice-Pres. L. S. Buckmaster, the plan revolves around operation of Keep 'Em Smiling Clubs organized in every department, that collect funds and send them and union information to GI Joes. So far they have sent $30,000 to members in service.

There's an overall club organized for the plant, and subdivisions in each department that collect 25 cents from members every week.

Out of this fund, each member in the armed forces receives a $2 check each week plus The CIO NEWS and the local union paper. A short, mimeographed note is usually enclosed telling what the men and women in the shop are doing to help shorten the war.

According to James Clynch, chairman of the clubs, replies from men in service are posted on department bulletin boards and some are published in the union paper.

"In addition," Clynch said, "we receive letters from their parents, wives and friends. Some of them tell us that they never realized before what the union was like and what it stood for. In this way we not only maintain contact with our boys, but make additional contact with their relatives."

Get Busy On Congress!

Keep Political Fires Hot for Labor Day

WASHINGTON, July 8—Latest reports from the Congress front indicate that the summer recess may be prolonged past the original date of Aug. 1 until Labor Day. Meantime, Representatives and Senators will be visiting home after the convention and thinking pretty hard about re-election.

Here's a check-list of things to urge them to do when they get back and to talk over with in view of their record. This record can be secured from the Legislative Supplement of The CIO NEWS, published June 19.

Kilgore re-conversion bill (S 1893). This is the bill that takes care of "the human side" of reconverting industry from wartime to peace production. The bill was left sitting in the Senate without even a hearing when Congress adjourned.

Tell your Senators and your Representative you want quick action on S 1893, beginning the day Congress meets again. Your job, the job of the returning veteran, depend on proper planning for re-conversion now.

Don't let your Congressman tell you he's in favor of it just because he voted for the contract termination bill or expects to vote for the Murray-George bill (S 1730). Both these bills merely look out for industry, ignore the workers' and the veterans' needs.

* * *

Permanent FEPC. Several bills to make the Fair Employment Practices Committee permanent are pending in the House Labor Committee, one in the Senate. FEPC does a win-the-war job by fighting discrimination in war plants.

FEPC had a narrow escape in both House and Senate when the polltaxers and the Republicans almost strangled it. Republican strategy is to kill FEPC and other Administration attempts to give Negroes and other minorities a fair break, then seek to blame it on FDR. Making FEPC permanent is an effective answer to this conspiracy.

* * *

Wagner-Dingell Social Security bill (S 1161). This has lain around both Senate and House without any action for months. It increases all Social Security benefits, includes servicemen, agricultural, domestic workers, seamen and others not now covered.

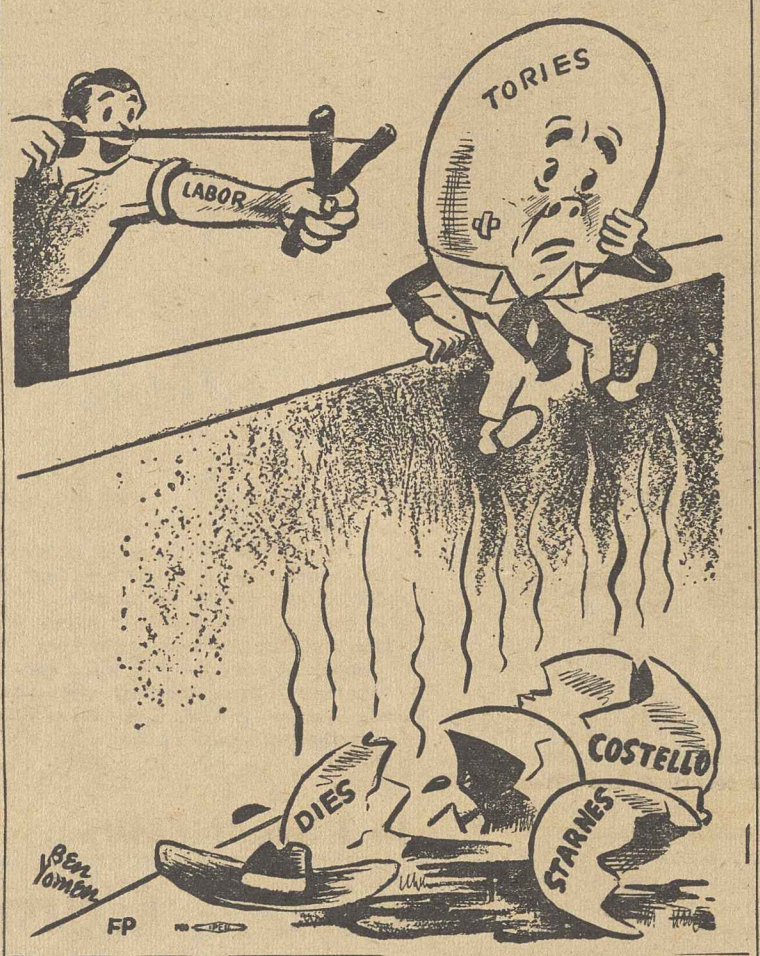
Tell your Senators and Representative that action is long overdue, urge them to demand early hearings and speedy action. It means money in your pocket in case you lose your job, and provides protection from old age, sickness, disability, etc.

* * *

Price Control renewal. You will feel the first pinch of the new amended Price Control Act within a few days, as prices on work clothes, cheap womens dresses and kids' clothes go up in response to the Bankhead amendment.

This was another job done by the polltax Democrat-Republican alliance. For your Senators, the test vote is the original Senate vote on the Bankhead (polltaxer, Ala.) amendment. For your Representative, the best test is his vote on the Dirksen (R., Ill.) amendment which would throw all OPA policies into endless court delay by making them subject to court review, thus crippling enforcement.

Ask them also about the "lowest price line limitation" clause in the renewal bill, which meant that OPA was forced to allow merchants to drop lower priced lines of goods and substitute higher priced lines. Your wife knows already how hard it is to get the lower priced stuff. It'll be even harder now.



Future Of Women Workers Is Big '?'

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

There is an interesting discussion of the future of women workers in America in two recent Washington publications. One is Action Needed! Post-war Jobs for Women, issued by the National Women's Trade Union League; the other is Women Workers in Transition from War to Peace, Special Bulletin No. 18 of the Women's Bureau of the Dept. of Labor. Their message is substantially this:

Even in 1940 women made up one quarter of our working force. There were eleven million employed, two and a half million looking for work. Today one third of all American workers—or close to 18,000,000 are women.

Some of these women will leave work when the war is over, but at least two million more women than in 1940, and probably many more, will want and need jobs.

War casualties will mean more single women, more widows, more women with dependents to support. The many new job opportunities which the war has brought to women will mean more skilled workers whose capacities and experience should be used in expanding civilian production.

The danger, of course, is that there will be a slump in employment after the war, and that women who need jobs appear to be competing with servicemen who also need them. That happened after the last war when there were wholesale dismissals of women workers. Women recognize and honor the rights of our servicemen to jobs, but they must also work for recognition of their own right to employment.

URGES UNION ACTION

Action Needed points out that more active participation of women in the union is one of the essentials for achieving that recognition. In 1940 only a quarter of a million women were union members. Today three million are, but that's still less than one-fifth of the women employed. Women must organize to gain full union seniority rights and achievement in fact of the CIO principle of the "one-wage standard" wage rates based on jobs regardless of sex. This standard should be written into all union contracts along with equal opportunities for upgrading on the job.

This equality in wage-scale and upgrading is a matter of vital interest to the union as a whole. Women's wages even during the war are "shockingly low," Action Needed points out. "Thousands of women are paid less than $15 a week, or as little as $10."

Those substandard wages must be pulled up or they will tend to pull down all wages. Even in war plants average wages for women for a 48-hour week run from $35 to $50—and that's not take-home pay. In some states women's average wages are only two-thirds of the men's average. It is easy to see the terrible danger of underbidding by unorganized women for jobs in a post-war depression.

CHALLENGE TO NATION

As Action Needed points out: "The present supply of trained woman power is a challenge to American labor, industry, and Government—not to discourage employment of women after the war but to provide jobs for them in the transition period. The country must take the safe super highway of full employment of human and material resources—not the dangerous old road of depression, unemployment, decreased purchasing power."

The immediate step in this direction which must be taken is the passage of the Kilgore Reconversion Bill, S. 1893. That bill provides for the planned changeover of industry from a war to a peacetime basis, and also makes special provisions to meet the human needs of that reconversion by setting up expanded unemployment benefits.

Women are a tremendous political force these days. Their Congressmen are at home and they will listen. Now is the time for women to speak out in demanding action as soon as Congress returns to prevent the hideous dislocation which followed World War I.

'Swell Guy' Award To UAW Gals

Fort Knox, Ky.—For the Negro soldier driving the truck, the situation was bad. Payday was two weeks off, and the civilian owner of the car he has just scraped with his GI truck was insistent that the damage be paid for immediately or he would call an MP.

The soldier was driving a truck containing ten of the 127 women war workers, members of the UAW, who toured the Armored Replacement Training Center recently.

Registration Campaign Hot

Cincinnati, Ohio, July 8—Organized labor's vote must be labor's organized vote!

That's the slogan for the CIO Political Action Committee in Ohio, West Virginia and Kentucky, where registration is steaming ahead. Regional Director Jack Kroll reports that political organization and registration will be stressed in the summer months so the voting lists will be swelled.

Kroll added that primary results in Ohio and West Virginia showed CIO members were registering in droves, but the CIO standard of 100 per cent had not been reached.

With attention focused on registration, endorsement of candidates will not be made until August.

"Register first, endorse next—Then Vote—that's our schedule," Kroll declared.

One-Woman Whirlwind Registers 5,000 Voters

ATLANTA, July 8—Registration has become the pass-word among CIO unions in North Carolina as Helen Gregory, Textile Workers Union representative assigned to the southeastern CIO Political Action region, sweeps through the state carrying the gospel of PAC's registration program.

This tireless, efficient woman has guided personally some 5,000 North Carolina workers to registration offices.

George S. Mitchell, regional director of PAC, reports that "more than 5,000 union members registered for the first time this year in North Carolina because of Miss Gregory's ability and ceaseless efforts."

Miss Gregory is definitely not the "swivel-chair" type. She knows political action must come from the grass roots, and she went to the grass roots in her campaign.

She spoke before local unions and city industrial union councils. She established local political action committees. She helped form CIO-AFL political groups. She assisted in mapping precinct organizations and contacted city and county officials for information.

The south seems to inspire individual registration campaigns. In this city, Mrs. Annie Creel, Amalgamated Clothing Workers representative, registered 1,200 workers, and Dr. George E. Towne, a retired 70-year-old Negro scholar, defied local officials to register 1,000 Negroes.

Chicago Entertains 6 ILO Delegates

Chicago, July 8—The Chicago CIO last week demonstrated CIO's participation in the worldwide labor movement in an "international labor day" program welcoming six ILO delegates to the heart of America.

The guests of the Chicago CIO Council, and the CIO War Relief Committee included Pierre Krier, Luxembourg minister of labor; Paul Finet, secretary, Belgian Federation of Labor; Konrad Nordahl, manager, Norwegian Assn. of Trade Unions; Alojzy Adamczyk, president, Polish Trade Union Congress; Liu Hsuan-tsui, secretary, Chinese Assn' of Labor, and Jan Stanczyk, Polish minister of labor and social welfare.

Tenn. CIO Urges 4th Term for FDR

NASHVILLE, Tenn., July 8—Greater cooperation between farm and labor groups in solving their many mutual problems, and the importance of promoting an interest in the election of political candidates with good records, were stressed at the fifth annual convention of the Tennessee CIO State Council, held here June 24-25.

A resolution calling for a fourth term for Pres. Roosevelt urged him "to continue as our commander-in-chief during this critical war period and the critical period certain to come following the peace."

Warning that when the war ends, "the peace will only be as good as the Congress that makes it," George Mitchell, Southeastern regional director of the CIO Political Action Committee, urged the delegates to do everything possible to get union members and others to vote and to take an active interest in political questions.

A program for cooperation with the Natl. Farmers Union, with which the CIO has a friendly and cooperative working relationship throughout the country, was adopted by the convention. Aimed at combatting the efforts of reactionary organizations which pretend to speak for the farmers and poison their minds against unions and industrial labor, the convention pledged to appropriate not less than $1,000 to go for subscriptions to the National Union Farmer, official paper of the NFU.

Tennessee elected council officials were: W. A. Copeland, Memphis newspaperman, president; Paul R. Christopher of Knoxville, executive secretary-treasurer, and Matthew Lynch, first vice-president.

698 to 2 for FDR!

New York, July 8—Members of CIO United Packinghouse Workers at the Cudahy Packing plant here voted 698 for Pres. Roosevelt and 2 for Dewey and Bricker.

German Workers Strike

MEXICO CITY, July 8 (ALN)—A series of strikes and protests broke out in Germany on the eve of the Allied invasion of France, the trade union division of the Latin American Free German Committee reported here this week.

The refugee German trade union leaders stated that 30,000 German workers struck the Schwarzkopf factories in Wildau, a Berlin suburb. The strike lasted for ten days and spread to other unnamed industries. Seven workers were shot for their part in the protest, during which organized peace demonstrations were reportedly staged.

FOOD CRISIS

From information it has received, the trade union division stated, a food crisis is rapidly approaching in Germany. The main meat product on the German market "is a sausage made of blood and potatoes, carrying a blue stamp warning that it must be eaten within 24 hours or spoil.

"In the factories, workers steal axle grease and other oils for frying and eating purposes at home. Factory managers, as a countermeasure, order poison mixed with all lubricants, causing numerous deaths."

Almost all bread now sold in the Hitler Reich, according to the Free German unionists, is mixed with potato and turnip flour, with a sprinkling of an ersatz flour made of wood, which is said to have caused the death of many consumers.

Quoting a "Diary of a German Woman" published in the Swiss newspaper St. Galler Tageblatt, the Free German statement declared that "the German housewife is forced to devote most of her time to the hunt for food. Often stocks are exhausted before one reaches the end of the line. There is no gas for cooking except for a few hours a day.

"Often it is a question of choosing between food and much needed clothing, for the same ration card is used to purchase eggs and clothing. A woman is entitled to but one pair of shoes a year. We can't even mend our old things as there isn't any thread. We haven't seen any steel needles for ever so long."

German peasants, the Free Germans disclosed, work an average of 78.8 hours a week. More than 300,000 peasant families are maintained by the wife alone, as all male members have been mobilized by the army and many of them slain.

The figures quoted by the Free Germans, they said, were obtained from a copy of the Koelnische Zeitung, which published a report of the Agricultural Institute of Goettingen University.

Give Bosses Voice In Union Paper

New York, July 8—An uncensored column, "Our Employers Say," will be a regular feature of the bi-weekly New Voices, official publication of the Local 65 of the CIO Wholesale and Warehouse Workers Union, it was announced this week.

The column will be prepared by a committee of union employers, who will express their opinion and make suggestions and criticisms on matters that arise on day to day relationship.

Hit Vote Steal Plot In South

New Orleans, July 8—A resolution condemning a "plot by Democratic parties in the States of Texas, Mississippi and South Carolina to sabotage the American electoral system" was adopted unanimously at a meeting held here this week by the Orleans Parish CIO Political Action Committee.

The Committee called this plot a trick to prevent the popular election of Pres. Roosevelt for a fourth term.

Ask Better Postwar Job Plan in Britain

London, July 8 (ALN)—The general council of the British Trades Union Congress this week acknowledged that the government White Paper on "Employment Policy" is an advance over the previous official statements, but expressed dissatisfaction with the aim of "a high, stable level of employment."

The council urged acceptance of the broader objective of full employment as defined in the Beveridge report. Trade union leaders will press the government for a clearer statement of its aims.

The government White Paper, issued on May 27, is based on the principle of expanded world trade, and recognizes that the standard of living throughout the world must be raised in order to provide a sufficient market to maintain employment in Britain.

It calls for planned demobilization of the armed forces and reconversion of war industries and foresees the necessity of extending after the war government controls over the type of goods that are produced, allocation of manpower, rationing, price control and regulation of capital investment.

It also proposes to increase the amount of public investment, and all public authorities are requested to prepare a five-year plan for capital expenditure to supplement private expenditure in the event of a slump. Although the TUC is in accord with these proposals, it says they don't go far enough.

Seek Postwar Govt. Controls in Australia

SYDNEY, July 8 (ALN)—The biggest issue confronting Australian trade unions and the entire labor movement is their campaign for transference of 14 powers to the Federal government for five years after the war in order to handle reconstruction problms.

The 14 powers sought by the government are control of matters pertaining to: repatriation; employment and unemployment; marketing; company laws; trusts, combines and monopolies; profiteering and prices; production and distribution of goods; overseas exchange, investment and taxation; air transport; uniformity of railway guages; national works; national health; family allowances, and aboriginal peoples.

Wartime regulations have provided the federal government with these powers, but they become inoperative upon the war's cessation. Reactionaries are developing a furious campaign against the proposals, including an initial fund of £100,000 (about $325,000) to defeat the referendum. They allege that it will establish socialism, bureaucracy and dictatorship and would mean the denial of personal freedom.

The New South Wales "yes" campaign began when the Sydney Trades and Labor Council, representing 300,000 unionists, established a "Convening Committee" comprised of representatives of the Labor Council, the Australian Labor party and the Communist party to coordinate its efforts with those of the Labor government's campaign.

"Yes" supporters stress the following, that without adequate federal powers, demobilization, housing and other vital post-war problems will be left to the discretion of private sectional interests, resulting in an economic social crisis similar to that after the last war.

To Put 50% Of Income In Bonds

New York, July 8—The CIO Textile Workers Union will invest at least 50 percent of its cash assets in U. S. War Bonds as an expression of its support of the Fifth War Loan and the nation's war effort, William Pollock, the union's general secretary, announced here this week.

This policy, endorsed by the Natl. Executive Board, will be followed until the end of the war, he said.

600% Gain-Canada Labor Membership!

TORONTO, July 8 (ALN)—The Canadian Congress of Labor (CIO and national unions) has increased its membership by 600 per cent in the last three years, Pat Conroy, CCL secretary-treasurer, disclosed this week in an address before the Vancouver Labor Council. The CCL membership, which numbers 300,000 as compared to 50,000 three years ago, was recruited largely among workers who never before belonged to trade unions, he said.

GI Brothers, CIO and AFL, Meet in Soviet Union

Moscow, July 8 (ALN)—Two brothers both now serving in the U. S. Air Corps met for the first time in 15 months at one of the new American shuttle bases in the Soviet Union. Sgt. George McCortney, a member of San Francisco Local 6 of the CIO Marine and Shipbuilding Workers and Pfc Igor McCortney, a member of the San Francisco local of the AFL Machinists, have both been in the USSR for over a month, but met for the first time last week.

The two boys were born in Harbin, Manchuria of Russian parentage. Their name was Prosvernin, their father had been born in Kazan and their mother in the Ukraine. Their mother later married Paul McCortney, a chief machinist's mate in the U. S. Navy. In 1932 when the Japanese came to Harbin, the McCortneys moved to Shanghai where the boys attended school.

Igor joined the Army on December 30, 1942 and George followed him on February 2, 1943. Both were sent to England after training, but they were unable to meet there since they were in different parts of the country.

On May 12, Igor arrived in the USSR. A few days later, George arrived at another Soviet air base. The day they met, there was tense excitement at George's base in anticipation of the arrival of the first armada of American planes flying from England across German-held Europe.

The roar of airplane motors above caught everyone's attention. A Douglas transport from another base was arriving with supplies. A young private was the first to emerge from the plane, and spotting someone in the waiting crowd, he yelled: "George, George!" The brothers ran to each other, and for some time after the event they were the center of attraction.

Replying to the questions of correspondents, both boys declared they felt "very much at home" in Russia. They explained that they both speak Russian and that George is being used as an interpreter, while Igor is also called upon to translate from time to time. Both boys said they were homesick for their families, and asked that the correspondents convey their greetings to them and to their fellow union members.

CONGRESSMAN DRIPP by Yomen

'Mystery' Booklet Tells Of Sleepy Lagoon Case

Los Angeles, July 8—Lovers of real-life mystery in the labor movement will be interested in a new booklet with a bright, splashy cover which seems to promise a thrilling tale inside, aimed to keep the reader breathless to the last page. It is called the "Sleepy Lagoon Mystery" and was written by Guy Endore, novelist and short story writer.

Although the booklet has all the earmarks of mystery fiction, it contains in fact the true story of a now famous case involving a group of young Mexicans caught in the meshes of the law.

It was published by the Sleepy Lagoon Defense Committee here to promote national interest and support in a case which has aroused thousands on the West Coast.

"The Sleepy Lagoon Mystery tells the story of 17 Mexican lads who were thrown in jail "for a murder that was never even established as a murder, and may possibly have been due to an automobile accident." The writer's theory is that the case was seized upon and turned into "a conspiracy to foment race riots."

This case, says Carey McWilliams, national chairman of the committee, in the introduction, "has become a symbol of the struggle of the Mexican minority to free itself from a pattern of racial ostracism and discrimination which has too long prevailed in Southern California.

"Larger issues are involved, therefore, than the immediate fate of the boys (the defendants) in this case," he declares, as it "represents the first well-organized and widely-supported effort in Southern California to bring the case of the Mexican, or the citizen of Mexican descent, to the attention of all the peoples of the area."

Sleepy Lagoon Mystery, by Guy Endore; published by Sleepy Lagoon Defense Committee, 129 W. 2nd St., Los Angeles 12, Calif. Price 15 cents a copy.

Hit Delay In Shipyard Negotiations

Camden, N. J., July 8—Backing their union negotiating committee to the hilt, 26,000 rank and file members of CIO Marine and Shipbuilding Workers Local 1 last week staged a mass protest demonstration on their own time against the delay in renegotiating a new contract caused by the N. Y. Shipbuilding Corp.

Expressing complete confidence in their negotiating committee, the members many of them with sons, husbands, brothers and friends in the armed forces, demonstrated their desire to protest and yet not violate labor's "no-strike" pledge. The demonstration took place during a change in shifts.

Thomas Saul, chairman of the negotiating committee, pointed out that many demands of the union could be settled amicably with the company without recourse to government agencies. He denounced the company for its failure to assist in speeding negotiations by removing minor causes of difference.

The contract between the company and the CIO union expired June 12 and the protest demonstration came after the negotiating committee reported that efforts to conclude a new contract were stymied after 12 meetings with company representatives.

Labor In Politics To Stay, UE Official Writes

New York, July 8—Labor is in politics to stay, Julius Emspak, secretary-treasurer of the Electrical, Radio and Machine workers says in an article "This Year Labor Means Business" in the current issue of Readers' Scope, progressive digest monthly.

"The American people understand that the combined forces of reaction in America are hoping to take over in Washington," Emspak writes. "They realize that a gallant minority of our elected representatives is fighting against great odds to give President Roosevelt the support he must have to lead us to a speedy victory and a just and lasting peace."

This support can only be secured if labor, farmers, women, white collar and business people unite around the CIO-PAC platform, Emspak adds.

Dissects 'Freedom Of Press' As Screen For Fight Against The People

New York, July 8.—"Freedom of the Press," the much abused scape-goat for chronic newspaper public delinquency and screen for its many dark deeds against the peoples interest, is dissected by Robert Lasch in his prize-winning essay in the current issue of the "Atlantic Monthly."

Corporate journalism needs a constitutional revolution and "a measure of judicious abdication," the Chicago Sun editorial writer declares.

"It needs," Lasch continues, "a transfer of power from publishers as kings to publishers and editors as prime ministers. It needs owners that will give up the prerogatives of absolutism and function as a trustee recognizing direct responsibility to the people."

The essay points out that under modern condition, the irresponsible control of our press "in behalf of a narrow economic interest is incompatible with the social purpose" of its freedom. Its primary purposes is to "give the people at large genuine representation, not only 'against' their government, but against the special interests that seek to gain their own ends through government."

Paralleling great industrial corporations, newspapers today sell their poisoned news with a host of entertainment features and journalistic side-shows which has resulted in mass circulation and at the same time a separation of reader from owner.

"What a free press needs," Lasch states, "is an owner who recognizes that he is selling circulation and prestige, not an economic point of view or service to special interests; and who, above all, recognizes that selling something is not his first obligation at all, but is subordinate to his responsibility to represent the unrepresented."

Name Clark Foreman To PAC's Staff

New York, July 8—Clark Foreman, president of the Southern Conference on Human Welfare and long identified with the New Deal as an economist and racial relations adviser, has been appointed to the staff of the CIO Political Action Committee, it was announced this week by Chairman Sidney Hillman.

The Georgia liberal, who resigned a professorship at Black Mountain College (N.C.) to accept the PAC position, became the center of a national issue in 1933 when, as an official of the Dept. of the Interior, he employed a Negress as his secretary. The action broke a long-established Washington precedent and was attacked savagely by Southern Congressmen.

Demand Dewey Give Servicemen U.S. Voting Right

NEW YORK, July 8—Restoration of the right to vote to 800,000 New York State servicemen became the battle cry of labor throughout the State as it mobilized its united forces in an effort to press Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, Republican presidential candidate, into calling a special session of the legislature to simplify the voting requirements of citizens in the armed forces.

The CIO Political Action Committee leveled its first broadside in this direction with the distribution of a half million post cards addressed to the Republican presidential candidate. The PAC also announced that a citizens' committee would be formed to add pressure for the simplified soldier ballot and the elimination of the red tape requiring signed applications for the servicemen to vote.

According to the National Lawyers Guild which is also participating in the campaign, only 65,000 out of approximately a million GI voters so far have returned the signed application for a state war ballot. This is less than 7 per cent.

This compares unfavorably with New Jersey and Pennsylvania, the Guild pointed out, where a signed application is not required and servicemen's registration is an automatic process. About 450,000 out of 500,000 servicemen from Pennsylvania have already registered. In New Jersey, it is 283,000 out of 386,000.

In pointing these figures out to Dewey's counsel, the Lawyers Guild declared that it is "unreasonable to expect men in the armed forces, fighting under conditions beyond human endurance and comprehension, to attend to a detail which even persons in civilian life frequently over-look."

Surprising to the Dewey war ballot commission, the 65,000 ballot requests from servicemen is twice the number it said it expected. Official and labor circles give credit to the drive of the CIO Political Action Committee which has distributed 700,000 post cards with printed applications for a war ballot for unions and other organizations to send to soldiers.

In commenting on the situation, the CIO declared, "When despite these measures, only one out of every 12 servicemen has been able to cut through the red tape of the state machinery for elections, then disfranchisement is only a mild word to describe what is happening."

Must Hike Wages To Provide Jobs

WASHINGTON, July 8—"Full employment after the war can be maintained only if the workers have sufficient wages to keep the wheels of industry in motion," the Economic Outlook, monthly publication of the CIO, said this week in its current issue.

To keep up workers' purchasing power, wage raises are also necessary, the Outlook added, pointing out that "Even year-round employment would bring the average factory worker only $1,600 at present wage rates."

"The War Labor Board and Congress both have a great opportunity to advance human progress and achieve economic stability by supporting the policy of guaranteed employment in collective bargaining agreements," the Outlook said.

"Bold, advance planning by business in cooperation with labor and directed to an even larger production than during the war" is needed to offset the loss in government war orders and expenditures, the Outlook explains in urging "a representative national planning agency and industry councils to help attain full employment."

In addition, Congress should take quick action on the Wagner-Dingell Social Security bill and the Kilgore reconversion bill now waiting Senate hearings, as a means of providing security for workers and returning veterans in the difficult adjustment from wartime to peace production.

"It's Dewey calling, sir . . . says HE's up a tree."

Reconversion Headache Gets Aspirin, Needs More Doctoring

WASHINGTON, July 15—The nation's potential reconversion headache was given an advance dose of aspirin this week, with a warning by CIO officials that more than that will be necessary if cutbacks in war production are not seriously to disrupt both war and civilian output.

The aspirin was handed out by the War Production Board, in the shape of an order which will assist manufacturers who are freed from war work with plans for production of peacetime, essential goods.

The warning came from Richard T. Frankensteen, vice-president and aircraft director of the CIO United Auto Workers Union. Frankensteen told the Senate Military Affairs War Contracts subcommittee that a serious slump in employment threatens American workers at the end of the war and possibly at the end of the year, and recommended a five-point program calling for:

1. Passage of the Kilgore bill for providing over-all machinery to handle reconversion and unemployment benefits to take care of job slacks.

2. Full labor participation in planning cutbacks and the resumption of civilian production.

3. Selection for preference in cutbacks of plants most readily reconvertible to civilian production.

4. Provision of severance pay for workers laid off war jobs.

5. Increased wage rates to support purchasing power, which will otherwise decline sharply as overtime work is reduced.

Frankensteen testified that employment in the munitions industry has already declined half a million, from last fall's peak, and that 3 million more workers may be thrown out of jobs unless provision is made for using their skills in non-military production.

AIRCRAFT CUTBACKS

He estimated that employment in the aircraft industry, which is now around 2 million, may fall to as little as 1,200,000 by the end of the year.

He declared that failure to plan for new jobs for those displaced by the decline in war production is harming the war effort, and pointed out that from the standpoint of continued top output it is imperative to reassure workers regarding their future jobs.

A warning that the West Coast employment situation will become chaotic unless the government acts was sounded by Lew Michener, West Coast UAW director, who proposed that labor, management and government draft a "full employment plan."

WPB ORDER

The War Production Board's order, which was supported by CIO, gives some hope for at least partial solution of the overall problem. It provides that manufacturers: (1) can make experimental models; (2) can purchase machine tools and production machinery not needed for war production; (3) can use more widely huge stocks of aluminum and magnesium where manpower is available, and (4) can as of Aug. 15 use facilities and manpower not needed in the war effort, when material is available, to make civilian articles not now allowed to be produced.

Meanwhile, CIO Pres. Philip Murray announced appointment of a CIO Reconversion Committee, authorized by the last CIO Executive Board meeting, to give

Job Bias Aids Axis, FEPC Head Warns

By MALCOLM ROSS

Chairman, Fair Employment Practices Committee

Who loses, who gains, when a Negro or a Mexican-American worker is prevented from exercising his or her top skill in a war production job? Let us get down to cases:

White and Negro workers too many times have completed a government-sponsored training course for welders, whereupon the white trainees were assigned to welding machines, while the trained Negro welders were handed brooms to sweep up the floor.

An American citizen of Mexican origin had worked in a copper mine for years. His war activity consists now in training new white applicants for skilled jobs, while he remains on the low entering wage rate.

An industrial city has a labor shortage so acute that it stands in danger of losing war contracts. A drive is staged by civic and community groups to enlist every able-bodied, local citizen in war work.

In this city-wide drive for a patriotic and essential purpose every known source of manpower is tapped except one. It had been forgotten that there were large numbers of local citizens, Negro women, ready and willing to work in war plants if given the opportunity.

Another city with a very large Negro population saw gigantic war contracts coming its way and immediately sent out calls, far and wide, for the needed additional workers. Fewer outside workers would have been needed had the existence of a local pool of available and willing Negro workers not been forgotten.

The result was unnecessarily crowded houses, buses and city parks, plus a feeling in the hearts of the unused local Negroes that their highest civilian gift to their country—their skills in war production—was rejected.

This article, written especially for The CIO NEWS, tells of the important contribution that the Fair Employment Practices Committee has made to the war production program. The committee's work will be equally important in the critical periods ahead — during reconversion to peacetime production and during the years to follow, when the nation must chart and follow a course leading to full employment for everyone if the "American way of life" is to survive. A partial answer to the problem is the creation of a permanent FEPC to guarantee that there will be no job discrimination because of race, color, creed or national origin.

U. S. Loss, Axis Gain

These are not hypothetical cases. Summed up, they show losses to ourselves and gains to Hitler and Tojo.

This is a war problem. Six months before Pearl Harbor, President Roosevelt foresaw it by issuing Executive Order 8802 which said, in effect, that the security of all of us depends on our acting as one people, and ordered an end to discrimination in defense industries because of race, creed, color, or national origin. Certainly progress has been made.

As certainly, the all-out need for manpower would have drawn hundreds of thousands of minority group workers into war plants without government intervention.

The real test is whether minority groups are being given or denied the chance to work at their top skills, and whether available and needed Negro women are given the chance to work.

The answer is that many have been upgraded, many given the chance to work where at first there was resistance to admitting them. And by and large they have made good.

FEPC, through its eleven nation-wide offices, is settling more than a hundred cases every month. Now acting under a Congressional appropriation, it will continue its efforts to see that no needed and available worker is turned away or used inefficiently.

This is not, to my mind, a "minority problem" in American industry. It is a worker's problem, a management problem. Every American above fifth grade intelligence hopes and expects that our post-war industrial relationships will be worked out within the framework of collective bargaining.

MALCOLM ROSS

Union workers, who successfully fought to establish collective bargaining as the national policy, know the dangers of having two or more groups fighting for recognition within the same bargaining unit. The Wagner Act and the Railway Labor Act in their separate fields put an end to such struggles by giving exclusive bargaining rights to the group proving itself, by secret ballot election, to be the majority representation.

Unions Concerned

Every worker who believes in that orderly procedure should be awake to the dangers of letting minority, racial or religious groups be established within bargaining units. In that way you breed wage differentials for the same work, and you encourage the splitting off of potential strikebreakers. There are enough problems ahead of organized labor without adding minority problems to them.

Specific adjustments lie directly ahead. There will be cutbacks in some war industries, expansion in others, and eventually rehiring in converted industries.

What happens to your fellow minority group worker at every layoff and at every new placement, will set a pattern in the months ahead which will determine how wisely and how fairly this problem can be handled, and to a large degree the good health of trade unionism depends on that answer.

I would hope that all parties might see the necessity of finding solutions which would fit the highest principles of American democracy. The CIO has been among the foremost in recognizing that equality of economic opportunity must be for all men and must be based on ability rather than ancestry.

CIO has also recognized that full employment cannot be achieved when large numbers of American citizens are excluded from producing and therefore from consuming and supporting the same economy which embraces the national welfare of all other groups.

Urge Expanded U. S. Health Program

WASHINGTON, July 15—A national health program bulwarked by a liberal social insurance system was recommended this week by Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon-General of the U. S. Public Health Service, before the Senate sub-committee on War-time Health and Education, as he submitted a plan calling for an expenditure of two million dollars to aid in maintaining the nation's post-war health.

Declaring that there has been "too much heat and too little light on the subject of socialization of medicine," Dr. Parran told the committee that "private health insurance is not the most effective way of meeting health needs. Their charges in proportion to services rendered are uneconomical and prohibitive to the great bulk of the population."

The purpose of the committee hearings is to survey in broad outline the nation's wartime health program and to point the way to future health planning. The committee is headed by Senator Claude Pepper of Florida.

Statements made by Selective Service officials before the committee revealed that approximately one-third of the young men examined for military service proved to have mental and physical defects.

"Out of 4,000,000 disqualified," Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey told the committee, "over 1,000,000 were rejected because they were found mentally unfit."

Col. Leonard Rowntree, medical director of the Selective Service system, stated that: "We can no longer regard ourselves as a sturdy, healthy nation. Who is to blame? I should say our modern civilization or society, the federal and state governments, the communities, the parents, the churches, the doctors and the dentists, all are involved in a condition which can only be remedied by concerted efforts."

Paul V. McNutt, War Manpower Commission director, told the committee that during 1943 accidents in industry injured 2,400,000 persons, the highest number recorded for ten years. He spoke of the expanding hygiene services in industry, but added that they have not kept pace with expansion of industry.

Dental experts testified that 95 per cent of the people in the country needed dental care.

Dr. Parran, in outlining his broad public health program, stated that this called for 247,000 hospital beds and 2,500 health centers. It provided for one or more base hospitals in every state, numerous district hospitals with modern equipment, and small health centers or outpost clinics associated with the district hospitals in remote localities.

"The physician of today will go where there are hospitals," Dr. Parran said. "There is need for a new type of family physician. In the future, medical r[illegible] more and more accustomed to working as a team and not as individual competitors."

Carey On Elections

Congressmen Hating Labor Hate Negroes

CHICAGO, July 15—"The same Congressmen who hate labor, hate the Negro," CIO Secy-Treas. James B. Carey declared this week in discussing the stake of organized labor and the Negro in the November elections at the annual conference of the Natl. Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People here.

"The same Congressmen who fight progressive legislation for labor fight progressive legislation for the Negro," Carey said. "The same Congressmen who oppose the establishment of a permanent FEPC, oppose such legislation as the Wagner-Murray-Dingell social security extension act. We often know our friends by knowing our common enemies," Carey stated.

The CIO official outlined a joint minimum program "which will benefit not only Negroes, but union members and the rest of our population":

(1) Passage of anti-poll tax legislation.

(2) Adoption of the Green-Lucas bill giving every soldier the right to vote.

(3) Passage of the Dawson-Scanlon bill guaranteeing a permanent FEPC.

(4) Acceptance of an OPA subsidy program to prevent inflation.

(5) Passage of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell social security extension bill, and including coverage of agricultural and domestic workers.

(6) Passage of HR 1995 presented by Rep. Rowan of Chicago to eliminate discrimination in the nation's capital.

(7) Adoption of S 637 and its companion House bill providing for federal aid to education.

(8) The continuation and expansion of the low rent public housing program to meet the needs of the greater bulk of low income families.

(9) Extension of appointments of Negroes to administrative offices, to include policy-forming positions in government.

(10) Defeat of Republicans or Democrats obstructing social and economic justice.

"That puts it squarely up to each voter to determine from the voting record . . . to see whether candidates have lived up to these standards," Carey pointed out.

Carey told the conference that inter-racial conflict is often the result of competition for scarce jobs, scarce commodities, inadequate housing and unsuitable school and recreational facilities. "As more and more of these goods and services are released for the benefit of the entire population, racial friction is bound to recede," he declared.

Hearings Slated On FEPC Bill

Washington, July 15—According to a report issued by the Natl. Council for a Permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee, House hearings will resume on the Dawson-Scanlon permanent FEPC bill in August as well as the opening of hearings on its companion bill in the Senate.

The Senate bill was introduced by Senator Chavez of New Mexico and was referred to the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, headed by Sen. Elbert D. Thomas of Utah. Senator Chavez, chairman of the sub-committee, will conduct the hearings.

Maritime Broadcast Airs CIO Program

New York, July 15—Postwar planning for American seamen was brought to the nation's attention this week when the CIO Maritime Committee went on the air over the Mutual network to discuss full employment and full utilization of our ships.

Participating on the program were President Joseph Curran of the National Maritime Union; Port Agents Oliver Boutte, Harry Alexander and Dan Boano, and Able Seaman Herb Tank.

The maritime program calls for full international co-operation with a freer exchange of goods between all nations, and adds:

War Boosts Steel Profits 356% Over Peace Level

WASHINGTON, July 15—Four years of war production have been mighty kind to the steel companies, with profits soaring to an annual average from 1940 through 1943 of $631,981,000—an increase of 356 per cent above the peacetime level of 1936-1939.

That was the report made this week to the War Labor Board panel considering the demands of the CIO United Steelworkers for a 17 cents an hour raise, an annual wage and other gains. The report, submitted by USA-CIO Research Director Harold Ruttenberg, showed that four war years have done the following for the industry:

1. Raised profits before federal taxes 356 per cent over the peacetime level of 1936-39, or from 138 million to 632 million dollars.

2. Made the industry eligible for federal tax refunds of from 122 million to 167 million dollars, depending on circumstances, for each of two postwar years.

3. Increased the payment of dividends by 60 per cent over the 1936-39 peace years, or from $94 million to almost $150 million a year.

4. Jumped the depreciation, etc., allowances from a peacetime annual average of 146 million to 267 million dollars for the wartime average—an increase of 82 percent though operations only increased 67 per cent.

5. Raised total assets by 22 per cent, or from a little under five billion in 1939 to over six billion dollars in 1943.

6. Boosted undistributed profits by 74 per cent, or from a total of 595 million dollars at the end of 1939 to one billion, 35 million dollars at the end of 1943.

7. Increased general reserves from 104 million dollars at the end of 1939 to 317 million dollars at the end of 1943, an increase of 203 per cent.

8. Increased total financial resources (excluding refundable federal taxes) by 110 per cent, from 703 million dollars at the end of 1939 to one billion, 473 million dollars at the end of 1943.

9. Increased net current assets—the industry's working capital—by 47 per cent from one billion, 228 million dollars at the end of 1939 to one billion, 810 million dollars at the end of 1943.

10. Increased the industry's excess of net current assets over funded debt in 1943 as compared to 1939 by 247 per cent, or from 310 million dollars at the end of 1939 to 1 billion, 75 million dollars at the end of 1943

Pro-FDR Men Clean Up in Primaries

WASHINGTON, July 15—Dress rehearsal for the big November 7 fight ended in six states as primaries closed this week in Massachusetts, Michigan, Oklahoma, Minnesota, Utah and Washington, with pro-administration forces rolling up impressive victories in many areas.

In Massachusetts, Mayor Maurice J. Tobin of Boston, backed by the CIO Political Action Committee, won the Democratic nomination for governor as he defeated the bitter anti-New Dealer, State Treasurer Francis X. Hurley.

In Washington administration supporters came through with flying colors. Representative Warren G. Magnuson won the Democratic senatorial nomination for a seat left vacant by Senator Homer T. Bone. Senator Mons Walgreen won the Democratic nomination for governor; Hugh DeLacy won the nomination for Magnuson's seat and John Coffee, Democrat, was renominated.

In Michigan, pro-Administration Congressmen were renominated in Democratic primaries. They were George Sadowski, John Dingell, Louis Rabaut and John Lesinski. All received CIO and AFL endorsements. The CIO nominated five out of nine state representatives endorsed on the Democratic ticket, including Tracy Doll, Pat Quinn, Ed Carey and Jack Fuller of the UAW-CIO, and Jack Ellstein of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. Renomination of State Senator Stanley Novak was also assured.

In Oklahoma Representative Wesley E. Disney, anti-administration Congressman, and a holder of a zero record on labor and war legislation, was trounced in the Democratic senatorial fight by Senator Elmer Thomas, pro-administration man, seeking re-election.

The Utah labor movement backed Gov. Herbert B. Maw for renomination, which was assured. Governor Maw is a Roosevelt supporter. In Minnesota the Democratic Farmer-Labor ticket nominated Byron G. Allen, who was supported by progressive forces.

CAPTIVATING CAPTAIN: Martis Jane Miller, first of 1,100 CIO members signed to act as precinct capatains in the Wayne County Political Action Committee, receives her badge from CIO Regional Director August Scholle in Detroit.

Murray Hits Steel Firms' Wage Policy

WASHINGTON, July 15—CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week took the moguls of the steel industry to task for "their adamant attitude toward the perfectly justifiable claims of steel labor" and warned them that if they pursued a course governed by "rapacity, selfishness and greed" it would be a bad thing for them as well as the workers.

Speaking before a panel of the Natl. War Labor Board, as head of the CIO United Steel-workers of America, after CIO General Counsel Lee Pressman had concluded presentation of the union's case for wage adjustments, Murray called upon the leaders of the industry to act with "proper industrial statesmanship"; and not to "blindly lead America into another apple-selling era."

"Our organization has an interest in building up a good relationship with the industry," he said. "We believe in the hope that these moguls of industry are not directing their energies toward the assassination of our organization."

"We respect our obligations and we live up to our commitments," Murray declared, referring to a charge of union "irresponsibility" made by a representative of Republic Steel.

PRODUCTION RECORD

The world-shattering production record of America's steel workers answers "the baseless, unsubstantiated charges made by industry representatives before the board," Murray said. "The record of America's steel workers speaks more eloquently than I dare do."

The labor-management cooperation desired by the steel union will be impossible "if industry continues to maintain its lofty, what seems to me stupid, attitude toward our organization," Murray said. "We hope that the industry is not girding its loins to slash the throat of our organization at the first opportunity.

"You must live with the United Steelworkers of America. I hope you want to live with us in a state of decency. That is the only way we want to live with you. We offer to you the hand of labor-management cooperation."

FDR HAS POWER

The WLB panel, which is expected to issue a decision on the case in the near future, heard Pressman, counsel for CIO and the Steelworkers, demolish management theories that the government lacks power to maintain an equitable relationship between wages and prices.

He said that the only law limiting President Roosevelt's power over wage raises is the stabilization act of October 2, 1942, which authorized him to maintain wages and prices at their respective levels as of September, 1942.

Pressman pointed to policy enprove that WLB policy is based on maintaining an equitable relationship, and pointed to WLB statements that the relationship has not been maintained because prices have risen far faster than wage increases—45.3 percent as against the 15 percent pay rises allowed under the Little Steel formula.

FDR POLICY STATEMENT

Pressman pointed to policy enunciated by President Roosevelt in September, 1942, when FDR said:

"If we are to keep wages effectively stabilized, it becomes imperative, in fairness to the workers, to keep equally stable the cost of food and clothing and shelter and other articles used by the workers."

"If you take this commitment of the President of the U. S. to the people of the nation, we ask how can it be argued that it is the government's policy not to protect wages against a rise in the cost of living," Pressman declared. "Any contention to the contrary is to fly in the face of the policy announced by the President of the U. S."

Pressman pointed out that the proposed 17 cents an hour wage increase requested by the union would have no inflationary aspects if the government followed policies of rigid price control, overall rationing, elimination of black markets and rigid taxation to siphon off extortionate profits and excess purchasing power.

The point that prices have risen actually 45.3 percent since Jan. 1, 1941 instead of the 23.4 percent reported by the Bureau of Labor Statistics was made again by Harold Ruttenberg, USO-CIO research director.

In a report on industry profits, carried in detail on this page, Ruttenberg stressed the fact that the employers' "take" in war years compared to peacetime has risen 241 percent for the industry as a whole, and that stockholders dividends have increased 60 percent.

GI Morale Tied to Mail, CIO Red Cross Girl Warns

Washington, July 15—Safe arrival cables to the national headquarters of the American Red Cross told the story this week of the assignment of Iris Littlefield, CIO girl now serving as a Red Cross hospital worker, to the spot where she wanted most to be—England.

Miss Littlefield, a member of CIO Office and Professional Workers Local 19, has already served 14 months with the armed forces in Alaska.

Echoing the advice of all military and Red Cross workers to write regularly to our men overseas, Miss Littlefield said, "I'd like to put in a word for the quality as well as the quantity of the mail and point to one case as a grim example."

A soldier in a hospital was reading a leisurely letter from his mother. In the closing paragraph the mother had written: "Son, I meant to tell you that sister Jane had an emergency operation yesterday. Several hours later she had not come out of the ether. Lovingly, Mother." No further word.

In a frenzy of anxiety, the boy, sure that his sister was dead, summoned Miss Littlefield through the doctor. The Red Cross worker immediately rushed an inquiry to the Home Service office at the Red Cross chapter in the boy's home town. Until word came that Jane was coming along nicely, there was a very sick boy in the Sitka hospital, his fears reflected in his physical condition.

"Not all cases of thoughtlessness of families or friends have as bad effects as this one," she explained, "but many people at home have no conception of the mental havoc which thoughtless, ill-timed letters can bring about. On the other hand, when families and friends write constructive, cheerful, gay letters, the high quality of morale of the men is instantly noted."

Guild Girl Runs for N. Y. Congress Seat

Rochester, N. Y., July 15—A woman member of the Rochester Newspaper Guild will oppose Representative James W. Wadsworth in the 41st Congressional District this fall.

Miss Walrath has been designated by both the American Labor party and the Democratic party of Monroe County. It is her first venture in active politics.

In accepting the designation to oppose the veteran Wadsworth, Miss Walrath announced that the chief plank in her platform will be unqualified support of President Roosevelt for a fourth term.

STAINLESS STEELS
FOR THE TOUGH JOBS OF INDUSTRY

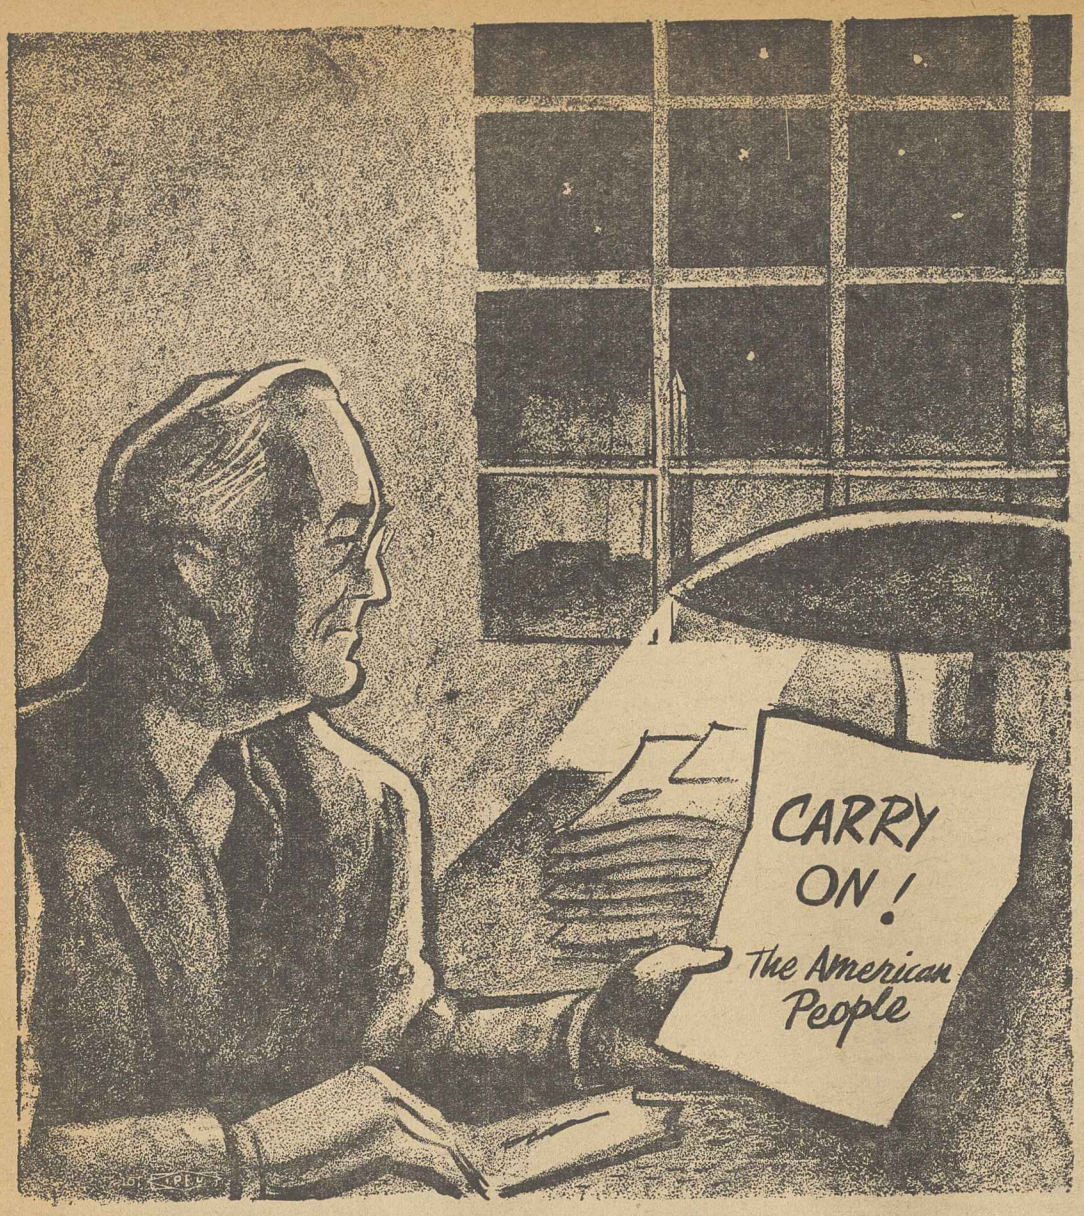
Stainless steels do the tough jobs of industry. Their superior resistance to corrosion and oxidation and their remarkable strength-weight-ratio, make them valuable in many war production applications.



Good Soldier

President Roosevelt's decision to accept the Democratic nomination for reelection is the best of news.

It proves again that he is truly a "good soldier" who will stick it out on the job assigned to him by the American people, regardless of his personal inclinations.

The President is much more than a party candidate in these elections. The unanimity with which his party nominates him reflects the overwhelming demand of the American people for continuance of his magnificent leadership until victory is won and a firm foundation is laid for postwar reconstruction.

The CIO, of course, has been in the forefront of this demand for another term for the President.

It has endorsed him not only on the basis of his splendid labor record and the achievements of the New Deal in advancing the welfare of the common people, but also for the even more important reason that his experienced leadership is essential for speedy victory and for winning the peace.

The tasks and objectives which Roosevelt himself outlines are those which comes first not only with labor but with the whole American people. They are as follows:

"To win this war wholeheartedly, unequivocally and as quickly as we can is our task of the first importance.

"To win this war in such a way that there be no future world wars in the foreseeable future is our second objective.

"To provide occupations, and to provide a decent standard of living for our men in the armed forces after the war, and for all Americans, are the final objectives."

Roosevelt is the man best qualified to lead America forward to these goals.

Postwar Insurance

"Don't lead our country back into another apple-selling era," pleaded CIO Pres. Philip Murray in his eloquent summation of the United Steelworkers' wage case before the War Labor Board panel.

He warned that many steel corporation executives are "thinking in terms of a peace production off by 30 to 35%. They are thinking in terms of the earnings of workers off 30 to 35%. That is their postwar plan."

Pointing out that "high wage levels are necessary to keep your furnaces in operation," Murray urged the employers to "provide the proper industrial statesmanship to help this country avoid the economic mire of poverty, destitution, sickness and death."

The CIO leader's plea is a challenge not only to the steel industry but to all industry and government.

The union's case for revision of the Little Steel formula to bring wages into line with present high living costs is an unassailable one.

But even more far-reaching in its importance is the need for higher wages to lay the basis for postwar prosperity and to avoid another "apple-selling era" such as followed the last war.

Industrial statesmanship of the highest order is needed right now to prevent the vicious circle of reduced production, unemployment and lowered wages catapulting the whole country into depression as war orders are discontinued.

If production is to be maintained and unemployment prevented, one of the first essentials is to adjust wages now, so that increased purchasing power may cushion the transition period and provide increased demand for the production upon which our postwar prosperity will depend.

Dewey Demagogy

The phrase in Tom Dewey's platform condemning the freezing of wage rates is revealed as the sheerest demagogy when one relates it to the accompanying pledge to "terminate rationing, price fixing and all other emergency powers."

Certainly the CIO is opposed to arbitrary wage freezing. But it is equally opposed to relaxation of present price controls and the inflation that would follow such action.

All the CIO asks in its present wage demands is that the relationship between wages and prices envisaged by the price control act, to maintain a stabilized economy, should be restored by adjusting wages to present price levels.

When Dewey proposes to let prices rise uncontrolled, he completely negates the value to labor of his vague condemnation of wage freezing.

So don't let anyone kid you into believing there is any resemblance between Dewey's stand on wage-freezing and that of the CIO. There isn't any.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

THAT famous Washington language known as "gobbledygook" has prevented a lot of folks from realizing how important are the issues underlying the recent arguments between War Dept. and WPB officials over reconversion.

It's lives and jobs they're talking about—the winning of the war and the future livelihood of milions of Americans.

★ ★ ★

The military men argue something like this:

The good news from the battlefronts is having a bad effect on the home front. War production is lagging while too much thought is given to what will happen after a war that isn't half won yet.

Actually the more we go on the offensive, and the better the war news, the greater is the need for more and more war supplies.

The troops who are fighting the Nazis and the Japs know what tough customers they are—how far they are from being licked as yet. They resent over-optimistic talk about an early end to the war.

There is a greatly increased need for heavy munitions and other special weapons, since the American command is lavish in its use of artillery to save as many of our soldiers' lives as possible.

Yet there has been a lag in recent months in the production of many important war materials, below estimated needs.

To make up for this lag, production will have to be raised to a record peak by next November. The next three months will be the most difficult yet from a war production standpoint.

★ ★ ★

War Dept. officials attribute much of the lag they report to lack of manpower for making malleable castings and forgings and other basic materials.

They declare they have no objection to the resumption of civilian production where this can be done without harm to the war effort, but that they are fearful of too much relaxing of present controls.

WPB officials and labor spokesmen, for their part, may question some of the production estimates and some of the causes attributed for production lags.

But they do not disagree at all that adequate war production must come first, that false optimism must be combatted, and that everything possible must be done to supply necessary manpower to meet all war needs.

Nor do they advocate any new civilian production that will in any way interfere with war production.

But at the same time, labor spokesmen point out that many cutbacks have taken place and more may be expected; that low wages are one cause of manpower shortages, and that another is the fear of war workers of being out of luck when cutbacks occur if they stick to war jobs.

Labor people point out further that much of the opposition to any resumption of civilian production comes from big business interests who are afraid of competitiors getting ahead in any partial resumption of such production.

Labor argues that the basic need of the day—to meet the very situation of which the War Dept. complains—is a carefully planned program of gradual reconversion to civilian production as and when this is possible without harm to war production.

This requires passage of the Kilgore bill for centralized planning and for adequate unemployment benefits for workers thrown off the job by cutbacks and reconversion.

The assurance that such a program is in effect, and that they will not be victimized by sudden cutbacks as in the Brewster case, will set at rest the minds of millions of war workers, will make them stick to essential war jobs, and will help to increase war production.

At the same time, closer planning and coordination of both war production and reconversion will remove most of the real causes of such production lags as have occurred.

Another essential step is revision of the Little Steel formula, so that sufficient wages may be paid in war industries to meet present living costs.

This is doubly essential at the present time, since the prospect of cutback layoffs and reduced working hours has a demoralizing effect on war workers who are barely getting by with wages that include much overtime.

Also essential to morale is the assurance that purchasing power will be increased, and not decreased, to make possible greater civilian consumption, production and employment as and when war orders are discontinued.

What's the Score On Cutbacks?

Shall We Have Chaos or Common Sense? St. Louis Muddle Points the Way for National Action Now!

Potent issue before American workers is the cutback problem. To find out what happens when war production gets the axe, The CIO NEWS this week went to St. Louis for the answer. Major headaches there have been layoffs of 35,000 workers, with thousands still unemployed because Congress has not yet made adequate provision for relocating war workers in other war jobs, or for switching them to peacetime production if that is feasible. The problems of St. Louis will soon become the problems of the nation. If solved at all, they will be solved nationally. Congress has the answer in the Kilgore Re-conversion bill, rejected once but due to come up again this Fall.

ST. LOUIS, July 15—Miss Mae Tinsley, single, self-supporting and a member of the CIO, was laid off six weeks ago by the largest small arms plant in the world. This week the plant called her back. She refused to return.

Her story would be worth just one inch of type in a small town paper gossip column, but for two factors:

1. More than 35,000 other workers have been laid off in this city since November.

2. Miss Tinsley—and thousands more like her—did not go back to work in war industry.

"Why go back and get laid off again?" is the way Miss Tinsley put it. "It's happened to too many people. Industrial workers should not get it in the neck. The government and business and unions should get together and figure out what's going on. It's foolish to lay you off and then call you back all the time."

Miss Tinsley's strictly personal bread and butter problem has ramifications that stretch from New York to San Diego, from Miami to Seattle. On its solution hinge the successful prosecution of the war and the sensible transition to a peacetime economy after victory.

The problems of the Tinsleys and Tuckers and Browns and O'Konskis and all the other war workers are sharply outlined in this city of nearly a million people. It has felt the pinch of unemployment and the need to do something about it.

Typical Problem

The layoffs here are typical of the production adjustments pending over the nation. These adjustments might dislocate our entire economy, hamper the war effort, and make peacetime progress doubly difficult unless some rational, nation-wide plan is put into effect to provide for sensible reconversion of war industry.

Two main factors have prevented this city from becoming a major problem area—the great diversification of production, and the pressure of labor for national and local planning for jobs.

But—and it's a big but—St. Louis has staring it in the face the ugly fact that 9,500 workers, about half of them women, are still unemployed. The figures are from the U. S. Employment Service.

Patriotic, job-conscious officials in labor, industry and local government have tried to do something about the problem, but they are stymied without national action to back them up. All they can do is make recommendations and invite new industry to establish itself here.

Cutbacks Ordered

Main cause of the local problem were cutbacks ordered by the Army at the U. S. Cartridge Co., at peak production the largest manufacturer of small arms ammunition in the world. It is still the largest in the country.

Cartridge cutbacks have affected 19,500 workers, most of them members of the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers Union. They had contributed billions of rounds of ammunition since the plant went into production in 1941—government owned, and operated by U. S. Cartridge for the Army Ordnance Dept.

Three major cutbacks forced the following layoffs: (1) 7,000 last December; (2) 10,000 last March; 2,500 last June.

What's happened to the workers? Statistics of the U. S. War Manpower Commission emphasize the gravity of the problem.

Not Enough Jobs

At the time of the most serious layoffs, when 18,000 to 19,000 workers were unemployed or faced with unemployment, the USES had openings for only 12,821.

Of these jobs, 1,855 were in commercial or professional work, and of the remainder, 5,200 were unskilled 4,090 semiskilled, and 1,800 skilled, in round numbers. Only 9,300 of these jobs were in war industry.

Even more significant, however, was the fact that only 4,000 of all the jobs offered by the USES were for women, while 7,500 women lost their jobs in one layoff from U. S. Cartridge alone. Thousands of these women were Negroes, who were forced to turn to menial or non-essential work at much lower wages if they wanted jobs.

Recent USES figures on the fate of more than 35,000 workers released from all essential industries during the cutback period show how confusion still prevails in the labor market. These figures, obtained especially for The CIO NEWS, came from the office of the War Manpower Commission Labor Market Analyst.

9,500 Unemployed

More than 8,500 workers entered non-essential jobs; 9,500 are still unemployed. About 4,000 left the city for other war production centers or for their home towns; 10,500 were called into the armed forces; and 2,500 left the labor market to return to their homes.

"Many of the workers who come to this office for job referrals just don't want any more war jobs," Robert B. Logsdon, UE-CIO international representative and president of the St. Louis CIO Council, pointed out. "Women workers with dependents are especially anxious to get into jobs where they will have some kind of security. They cannot afford to work in fear of sudden layoffs."

Logsdon said non-essential service industries are now better manned than they have been for months, in spite of a continuing need for war production workers. Furthermore, there is a definite trend of worker migration to other cities.

"The workers know what they want," he said. "They want 'safe' jobs, permanent jobs, with some guarantee of pay during the transition period."

Congress Asleep

So what's the federal government doing about the problem? Has Congress passed a law which would guarantee security for the workers during the period when some war plants are being shut down and employes are being shifted to other war plants or to peacetime jobs?

The answer is a big zero, despite pressure from all branches of labor for passage of the Kilgore Reconversion bill which would, among other things:

1. Set up a central body to act on the problems of production, cutbacks and reconversion, during the war as well as during the postwar period, with close cooperation from labor, management, agriculture and the general public through a joint board.

2. Provide unemployment benefits, plus allowances for dependents, up to $35 a week for two years if necessary.

3. Pay all costs of moving war workers to new jobs where they are needed.

4. Offer six months of re-training for workers, with $50 to $100 a month maintenance.

What's been done in St. Louis? Again, nothing sensible on a broad scale to see that laid off workers are guided to other war industry jobs where their skills are badly needed.

Hit-Or-Miss Action

"Further, there is no evidence of any efforts to find new war work for these soon-to-be-unemployed industrial facilities," UE-CIO Dist. 8 Pres. William Sentner advised Senator Harry S. Truman of Missouri in a recent letter.

"Apparently it is left to the hit-or-miss procedures of a loose labor market to see that laid-off men and women are reabsorbed—a fantastically inadequate arrangement for an area like St. Louis."

Sentner referred in his letter to repeated attempts made by UE-CIO officials to call the attention of appropriate Washington agencies to the appalling waste of industrial facilities and manpower resulting from the cartridge cutbacks.

Despite numerous conferences and an inspection by top-ranking Ordnance Dept. officials, the War Dept. insisted on maintaining the plant on a "stand-by" basis for possible resumption of cartridge production in 1945.

Union Plans

The union supported plans for immediate use of idle facilities for other types of war production with a detailed survey made in cooperation with the local War Production Board, which clearly showed possibilities for switching to other types of war production within a short period. Existing facilities could be used for radar, radio, small motors and fractional horsepower production, it was said.

The union pointed out that the main question is jobs—whether the people will be moving from job to job in an organized or unorganized fashion.

"If jobs are available, people can be matched to them," Sentner declared. "The UE has no problem of referring workers to jobs. We maintain hiring relations with all of our companies and will continue to refer people to needed war production. We are now asking for the right to assign a representative to take care of referrals in the offices of the companies affected by layoffs as well as in the office of the War Manpower Commission."

(Next week: How layoffs have affected the CIO Auto Workers and Steelworkers Unions, and what they and the CIO Electrical Workers have done on a local scale, cooperating with business interests and civic leaders, to meet the problems.)

St. Louis Chaos Is Real Bread And Butter Problem

CLARENCE J. SCHAMEL: Financial Secy. of CIO United Auto Workers Local 325, Schamel worked at McQuay-Norris' St. Louis plant from Aug., 1942 to Jan., 1944, when he was laid off on three days' notice. He took a big cut in pay when he went to work for a local newspaper. Two people dependent on him "sure feel the difference the way we live. The government," he says, "must do the planning for jobs and contract termination. Letting things go on this way would be awful. Outfits like McQuay-Norris will never plan anything for workers."

ABE L. PONYARD: Laid off at McQuay-Norris on Feb. 26, Ponyard was forced to take a new job paying 10 cents less an hour. Despite guaranteed seniority ununder a CIO United Auto Workers contract, Ponyard has seen 10 men with less service hired back by his old boss. "I don't believe the government should allow the companies to put a man out bodily," he says. "We should have at least 30 days' notice. I was out of work six weeks. Others are still out of work or have taken other jobs at much less pay so their families could eat regularly."

HARRY RYNDERS: Rynders left his last job because the company "didn't like men who are active in the union." A CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers' member, Rynders believes that unions should have a say, especially in job placement for their unemployed membership. "Union help on reconversion, like at Small Arms, where the UE figured out what the plant could make, can avoid depressions and then prosperity, and then depressions again," he said. "The government should invite the unions in on the planning."

MRS. LUCILLE ALLEN: It looks bad for a new job, says Mrs. Allen, laid off June 1 from U. S. Cartridge where she worked as a quality checker earning 77 cents an hour on day shift, 82 cents on night shift. A widow for six years and sole support of three young boys, Mrs. Allen wants "something planned for people like me. The unions should play a big part in the planning, because they improved working conditions and wages so much." Mrs. Allen is now doing some sewing for friends.

JEWELL STOUT: Plant rumors prepared Stout for notice of the June 1 layoff at U. S. Cartridge. The notice came 10 days before the actual layoff. Because he has to think of three children and his wife, he got a new job immediately. He's now a lathe operator at 80 cents an hour. He formerly got $1.06. "It makes a big difference in the way we live," he says. "We have to scrape to make ends meet. I'd like to see the government do something. A 'bill of rights' for workers? Sure, if it includes severance pay."

MISS MAE TINSLEY: A week's notice before the June 1 U. S. Cartridge layoff doesn't seem fair to Miss Tinsley. She was a guage girl earning 77 cents an hour, with 82 cents for night work. Her new job pays 70 cents. She was called back to the plant, but didn't go—"why go back and get laid off again?" Single and self-supporting, Miss Tinsley protests that "industrial workers shouldn't get it in the neck. The government and business and unions should get together and figure out what's going on."

CIO 100% for Wallace; Hillman Heads New PAC

WASHINGTON, July 15—Complete and unqualified support for the re-nomination of Vice-Pres. Henry A. Wallace as a running mate for President Roosevelt was stressed by CIO Pres. Philip Murray and Chairman Sidney Hillman of the CIO Political Action Committee this week at a press conference where they announced that the new Natl. Political Action Committee will be headed by Hillman.

The new organization, which lists 80-odd prominent liberal and labor leaders as active members, will have as treasurer Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO United Auto Workers Union, and as secretary Clark Foreman, president of the Southern Conference on Human Welfare.

The announcement of unqualified backing for Wallace was coupled with a stinging denunciation of the Republican presidential candidate, with Hillman describing him as ex-President Hoover's Charley McCarthy and warning that the real issue before the nation is whether we will go back to Hooverism and bread lines.

Stressing the fact that the new Natl. Political Action Committee as well as the CIO-PAC will be a non-partisan organization, Hillman said that it undoubtedly will support some Republicans with good records.

"Our standard for selection of the candidates we back will be whether they have given or will give full support to the war effort, will work for lasting peace, and will vote for what it takes to put the country on a basis of full production and full employment," Hillman declared.

He charged that the Republican platform calls for complete inflation, and said that if any labor union should be so irresponsible as to advance such a program, it would be denounced by the press.

LOSSES FOR LABOR

The platform, he said, virtually asks unions to scramble for higher wages in losing competition with a rush of higher prices that would automatically follow the repeal of price controls that the Hoover platform advocates.

Murray explained that CIO is wholly in favor of maintenance of price and wage controls to insure a stabilized economy, but is currently urging that the out-of-line relation between wages and prices be equalized by raising wages, so that they will have the same relation to prices as was the case on Sept. 15, 1942.

Explaining the financial arrangements for the new Natl. PAC, Hillman said that CIO-PAC funds will not be used after the nomination of the Democratic candidates, but will be held in escrow for use after November, for the continued operation of the CIO committee. Funds for the new committee will be contributed entirely by individuals, within and without the CIO, who agree with the committee's program.

EXECUTIVE BOARD

On the Executive Board of the new committee are, besides Murray and the committee's officers:

State CIO Parleys Solid for FDR, Back Wallace Nomination

MASSACHUSETTS . . .

Boston, July 15—Enthusiastic support of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Henry A. Wallace and the CIO Political Action Program was voiced repeatedly at the seventh annual convention of the Massachusetts State CIO Council held here July 8 and 9. Some 750 delegates representing 220,000 CIO members attended. Remarkable unanimity prevailed on all issues.

Delegates voted to endorse Roosevelt and Wallace for re-election, amid cheers, and called for backing for the President's second Bill of Rights. They also urged our Government to recognize the present provisional government of Italy.

The convention went on record as favoring the breaking of the Little Steel Formula, and condemned the War Labor Board as "rule-bound."

Outstanding CIO leaders who spoke included Pres. R. J. Thomas, United Auto Workers; Emil Rieve, president, Textile Workers; Sec'y-Treas. David J. McDonald, United Steelworkers; Albert J. Fitzgerald, president, Electrical Workers, and CIO Vice-Pres. Allan Haywood, national CIO director of organization.

Joseph A. Salerno, who was re-elected president of the Massachusetts CIO by acclamation, presided over the sessions. Many of the addresses were broadcast.

Mayor Maurice J. Tobin of Boston, who won the Democratic nomination for governor with CIO-PAC endorsement, spoke for Roosevelt.

The convention voted to make the Massachusetts CIO News, monthly newspaper of the Massachusetts CIO, a permanent publication.

A scorching resolution passed by the convention blasted Mass. Congressman Joe Martin, Republican floor leader, for his "consistently bad" labor record and his "blind, partisan opposition" to the President, and called for his defeat in the November election.

MICHIGAN

BY HARRY READ

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 15—The seventh annual convention of the Michigan CIO Council, representing 700,000 workers in plants that produce almost 10 percent of the nation's war material, opened this week on the twin keynotes of unity and political action.

The convention heard Mich. CIO Pres. John W. Gibson say, "We are for Roosevelt, not because he is a Democrat, but because he represents the people, for whom he stands."

Nearly 1,500 delegates flocked into town to hear a list of distinguished speakers which included Bishop Francis J. Haas, CIO Secy.-Treas. James B. Carey, Director of CIO Councils John Brophy and Pres. James Patton of the National Farmers Union.

ACTION AT POLLS

In his opening address, Council Pres. Gibson sharply defined the issues that confront U. S. workers. "They are issues that must be met at the polls next November," he said.

He pointed out that labor, as one of the earliest groups to realize the threat of fascism, was forced to make a radical change in its methods, such as surrender of the strike weapon, to maintain uninterrupted production of war material.

Gibson charged that the anti-Roosevelt forces had taken advantage of labor's pledges and sacrifices. Naming Herbert Hoover as the leader of this group, he branded them an American Front for Hitler.

"I will be accused of maligning these men by calling them Fascists," he said. "I want to explain that I do not call them all Fascists, but when I see men in that group like William Randolph Hearst, Col. Robert R. McCormick, Congressman Hoffman and Gerald L. K. Smith, I can only point out that Hoover and Dewey are associated with some men who have dodged the trial for sedition or even treason, only by virtue of their wealth and position."

Presenting the detailed CIO Political Action program at the convention were Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO United Automobile Workers and August Scholle, regional director of the CIO-PAC.

COLORADO

Denver, July 15—Re-election of President Roosevelt and Vice-President Wallace, postwar planning, and a wage adjustment in accordance with the increase in the cost of living were the main topics of discussion at the Colorado State CIO convention held here last week.

The opening address by Mayor Stapleton of Denver emphasized the importance of postwar planning if war workers and returned veterans are to be given job opportunities in the days of peace.

The convention adopted a resolution condemning the War Labor Board for "continuing the present national wage freeze in the face of the rising cost of living far beyond the 15 percent wage increase allowed under the Little Steel formula.

"The structure upon which the wage bracket system has been established creates rates considerably lower than those arrived at through collective bargaining in the various areas," the Convention said. "The principle will destroy true collective bargaining and threatens the very life of the trade union movement."

John Brophy, national director of CIO Councils, outlined a 14-point program for the postwar period in his address to the convention, calling for unionism, collective bargaining, high wages and the annual wage, cost-of-living control, comprehensive social security, taxation on the basis of ability to pay, reconstruction and decentralization of cities and more adequate housing, a comprehensive public health program, more educational opportunities, a broad program of public works, a nation-wide system of regional development and increased agricultural production, stimulation of foreign trade, international collaboration in world economic planning and stabilization, international collaboration in maintenance of peace and furthering of democracy, and a program of full employment.

Textile Women Do Swell GI Mail Job

By CATHERINE ROBLYER

President, Textile Workers Auxiliary of Cumberland, Md.

The CIO Women's Auxiliary of Western Maryland is keeping the men in the armed forces in touch with the union through a servicemen's letter league. Names of those receiving the letter are submitted by members of the auxiliary. We launched the letter by holding neighborhood teas and inviting mothers and wives of former union members now in service.

A Letter Committee meets once a month to compare notes and draw up an outline. This is handed to a member appointed to do the final writing. Another member mimeographs it and gives it to the secretary, who addresses the envelopes and mails them. The letters are in the mail less than one week after the committee meets.

All auxiliary members are on the lookout for letter material which they give to the committee at the regular meeting. We include notes on the local as well as the national union program.

We told them about the campaign in our city for a local OPA enforcement law and about the threatened withdrawal of hot school lunch funds. We told them about the new playgrounds here which were a direct result of labor's victory in the municipal election.

They are always interested in what is being done for the children as most of them have children of their own. We told them the results of the local union election and gave them information on the Servicemen's Ballot as it applied to this section.

We find that they look for news about their friends in service in other parts of the world. We always include a few names and addresses of those on our mailing list in the letter so that they can write to each other if they like. Many of them write such interesting replies that we include parts of them in the letter.

We tell them about the scrap drives, the bond rallies and results and Red Cross activities to let them know that the home front is backing them up. We also tell a little joke to make them smile.

We advertised our letter by sending delegates to union meetings and reporting on it, by posting copies of it in the factories and telling our friends about it.

Remember November! See that you, your wife and every other voting age member of your family is registered so that you all can vote.

Anti-Labor Lies Answered In Pamphlet

Akron, Ohio, July 15—A new pamphlet by Dr. A. L. Lewis, director of research and education for the CIO United Rubber Workers, gives point-by-point answers to a vicious anti-labor, pro-rich-man leaflet entitled "Ten Points," conceived by a Houston, Tex., printer and widely distributed by union haters.

Dr. Lewis' pamphlet, called "Pointed Answers to Texan's 'Ten Commandments'," exposes the hokum and lies contained in the leaflet under such points as "You cannot strengthen the weak by weakening the strong" and "You cannot help the poor by destroying the rich." Copies of "Pointed Answers" may be obtained by writing to United Rubber Workers, 503 United Bldg., Akron 8, Ohio.

UOPWA Victories

The URWDSEA-CIO Dairy Division won an election at the Fred B. Prophett Co. by a vote of 52 for URWDSEA-CIO to 4 for no union.

Helen Kingery, Dir. of publications, UOPWA-CIO reports: Metropolitan agents in Rhode Island voted 145-31 for UOPWA in state-wide election. This makes the 8th Metropolitan poll won by the union. Two Buffalo plant offices for the American Radiator & Sanitary Co. voted 52-11 and 23-1 for the UOPWA. Plant workers are organized by the United Steelworkers. The messengers and guards in the Bankers Trust Co., New York, voted 75-48, for UOPWA-CIO. Another great victory in the financial field was an arbitration award handing down increases averaging $5 per worker to 600 employes of the Title Guarantee & Trust Co., in a job classification plan negotiated by the UOPWA and the company.

The Massachusetts State CIO Council held its annual convention in Boston on July 8 and 9. It was the largest and most unified convention that they have ever held. The CIO activities in that State have been felt all around. Organization has gone on at a remarkable pace. The Political Action Committee is well organized.

The convention supported the CIO policy all the way through and President Salerno did a splendid job in keeping the convention moving and guiding the delegates. One notable event was the endorsement of the PAC-supported Mayor of Boston, Maurice Tobin, against Francis X. Hurley, anti-New Dealer, for the Democratic nomination for governor. Election results show that Tobin has a substantial lead and his nomination has been conceded by his opponent.

Indian Textile Workers Unite in Battle to Hike Pay as Low as $4 a Month

LONDON, July 15 (ALN)—In Bombay and Ahmedabad, centers of India's large textile industry, 20 per cent of the workers sleep on the pavements while the leading textile firms are making 100 per cent gross profits, S. A. Dange, president of the All-India Trades Union Congress, disclosed this week in an interview with Allied Labor News. Dange is also founder of the first Indian textile union, the Bombay Mill Workers Union, which in 1929 was the biggest single union in Asia and is still the strongest in India, totaling 84,410 members out of the 336,000 membership of the AITUC.

Skilled textile workers in Bombay, the highest paid center, work 54 hours a week and average 33 rupees a month ($11), compared to 12 rupees a month ($4) in southern India. This represents great effort by the union, Dange explained, since before the last war Bombay workers averaged 108 hours a week at the rate of 16 rupees a month ($3.33). The cost of living during this war has risen tremendously, he said, while additional allowances over the basic wage cover only 65 per cent of the rise.

Because of the low economic standards, the trade union leader continued, the prevailing average cloth consumption per head in India is the lowest in the world —15 yards of cloth a year compared to about 40 in the United States. If the Indian standard of living could be raised to that of the U. S. or Britain, he stressed, cotton consumption on the Indian market would easily be doubled, offering a vast market not only to expanded Indian textile manufacture but to imports from other countries as well.

Any trade union in India which becomes powerful, Dange asserted, is attacked by the employers and government and it is therefore impossible to build stable treasuries. Paid union officials are the exception.

Indian trade unions take a great interest in politics, he said, and almost every union platform puts forward a demand for national independence. Because of this, he added, there is hardly a trade union wherein some members of the executive board have not made a minimum of one trip to jail. Dange himself has spent 13 of the last 24 years in jail.

Despite this provocation, he declared, the trade union movement is overwhelmingly hostile to fascism. The Bombay textile workers, he said, wished to establish joint production committees so that the workers could help to increase production, but the employers and government turned down their recommendations.

Lacking machinery for quick settlement of grievances, recognition of unions and a uniform, just wage policy, the workers have sometimes taken strike action, Dange said. However, as a demonstration of their anti-fascist convictions, he pointed out that the working days lost during the war are considerably less than before the war. Only 500,000 days were lost in 1943 compared to 5,000,000 in 1939.

Argentine War Threat Seen Growing; War Roads Speeded

MONTEVIDEO, July 15 (ALN)—The possibility of an impending military adventure by Argentina is causing great uneasiness here. Argentine soldiers are being told by their officers that enemy number one of their country is the United States and that enemy number two is Uruguay. The mention of the words "democracy" and "United Nations" by Argentine radio broadcasting stations has been expressly prohibited.

Even more ominous are reports from Argentina that the construction of military highways to the Uruguayan border has been speeded up and that construction companies are being offered special bonuses for early completion of their scheduled work.

Argentina and Brazil are said to be heavily garrisoning their common frontier and Uruguay is taking precautions against possible attack, while the Argentine War Ministry has ordered all professionals from the classes of 1900 to 1920 to communicate detailed information about themselves to military districts.

At the traditional military parade on July 9, reported to be the biggest in Argentine history, an estimated 40,000 soldiers participated. Parachutists, mountain troops and a new anti-tank gun called "Yacare" were displayed for the first time. Argentine-made tanks and airplanes were seen in action for the first time as were 18 troop transport gliders.

The demonstration was significantly headed by naval troops. But most of surprising of all, in view of Argentina's official break with the Axis, was the presence of the German eagle among the military emblems appearing.

The ouster on July 7 of War Minister Peron's chief rival, Gen. Luis Besar Perlinger, as Minister of Interior is believed here to be based on the hope that by removing the most outspoken pro-Nazi government figure, he will lead the U. S., Britain and the nations of Latin America to adopt a policy of appeasement with respect to Argentine fascism.

UAW Wins At Allis Chalmers

Milwaukee, July 15—The CIO United Auto Workers this week won the biggest election held in Wisconsin by the NLRB since the war started. The score, at the Allis Chalmers supercharger plant, was: UAW 1,897, AFL 419, no union 639.

The UAW-CIO already represent the 12,000 workers at the main Allis Chalmers plant.

British-Soviet Pact

London, July 15 (ALN)—The Amalgamated Engineering Union has reached an agreement with engineering and shipyard unions in the Soviet Union whereby joint steps will be taken "to strengthen our mutual friendship and solidarity," it was learned this week.

The agreement calls for the exchange of workers' deputations—each deputation to include at least one woman—and the exchange of specially written articles by rank-and-file workers.

Unity Forces Win

London, July 15 (ALN)—Proponents of international labor unity in the Irish Trades Union Congress scored a decisive victory this week when the annual TUC conference, meeting in Drogheda, passed a resolution supporting a world trade union congress. The resolution, passed by a vote of 96 against 73, reversed a previous TUC decision.

Equador Labor Forms Natl. Confederation

Quito, July 15 (ALN)—More than 1,300 delegates, representing more than 65,000 members of the Natl. Committee of Ecuador Workers (CNTE), participated in Ecuador's national labor congress, which opened here on July 4, and immediately voted to set up a Confederation of Ecuador Workers.

The new confederation, which will affiliate to the Confederation of Latin American Workers, will be headed by CNTE secretary Pedro A. Saad, a member of the provisional government formed in Guayaquil following the overthrow of former President Arroyo del Rio's government on May 28.

Pres. Jose Maria Velasco Ibarra addressed the congress sessions. Minister of Labor Alfonso Calderon Moreno opened the meeting, declaring that the government favored a strong labor movement.

All previous efforts to form a united labor organization were forcibly suppressed by the ousted President.

Partisans Tie Up 8 Nazi Divisions

London, July 15 (ALN—The French Forces of the Interior have liberated five areas in France, virtually isolating the German rear on two sides, according to a communique from the Supreme Headquarters of the Allied Expeditionary Force this week.

The five southern regions which the underground forces are credited with seizing are Doubs, Ain, Vercors, Ardeche and Gers and include rail lines vital for supplying German troops on the Normandy front.

In addition, a French spokesman has reported that French partisans are engaging about eight German divisions that would otherwise be in action in Normandy.

In another tribute to the accomplishments of the French underground army, an SHAEF spokesman described their assistance to the Allied armies as "invaluable."

Back Ban On Sinarquists In Mexico

Mexico City, July 15 (ALN)—President Manuel Avila Camacho reviewed a two-hour parade of more than 100,000 Mexicans on July 9 in support of the government's drive against the fascist National Sinarquist Union. All labor organizations participated in the demonstration as well as the National Peasants Federation, the government's Party of the Mexican Revolution, the Popular Federation and the Committee Against Reaction.

In a statement addressed to Fidel Velazquez, secretary of the Confederation of Mexican Workers (CTM), President Camacho said: "I am highly impressed by the way labor is supporting the administration." Velazquez declared that "the CTM first pointed out the Sinarquist danger and we are most strongly with the president now when action against the Sinarquists is finally being taken."

Banners carried by the marchers in the July 9 parade urged further action to exterminate Sinarquism, attacked the National Action Party, which is considered to be the "respectable" wing of Sinarquism, and charged profiteers with sponsoring the Sinarquist movement.

Others suggested that the Sinarquists join Hitler's army if they desire to fight for fascism and urged Catholics not to be misled by Sinarquist propaganda.

CIO Radio Handbook

New York, July 15—A Radio Handbook, which will serve as an effective guide to local unions in gaining radio time and which describes techniques of radio broadcasting, is nearly ready for distribution by the CIO Political Action Committee.

The manual outlines in simple language most of the information necessary to present a union's case in an interesting way to a radio audience. It discusses what is known as the Code of the National Assn. of Broadcasters.

The U. S. merchant marine is now supplying the United Nations on battlefronts all over the world. It is estimated that 200,000 American seamen will be needed in 1945 to bring the implements of war to Allied fighting men and the material for reconstruction to liberated countries. (OWI chart via Federated Pictures.)

CIO Pushes Social Security for Seamen

Washington, July 15—CIO is lining up with the Natl. Maritime Union to correct one of the worst injustices Congress has put over—leaving merchant seamen out of all Social Security benefits.

Writing to all CIO affiliates, Legislative Director Nathan Cowan urged them to support a bill now before the House Marine and Fisheries Committee and known as Committee Print No. 4, saying:

"Our merchant seamen face a difficult postwar period without even the protection of unemployment insurance. For six years legislation has been stalled in Congress.

"Certain ship operators, state unemployment insurances officials and Congressmen are at present preventing consideration of a satisfactory proposed measure.

"The combined strength of American labor can break this deadlock. CIO seamen need your support to win this most elementary social insurance guaranteed shoreside workers. Back the seamen in their fight."

Cowan asked affiliates to send letters to Speaker Sam Rayburn, to Rep. Robert L. Doughton and their own Congressmen urging quick action on the bill.

More than 5,000 CIO seamen, members of the Natl. Maritime Union, have died to "keep 'em sailing." Elementary decency requires that tens of thousands of other men who have risked their lives for their country should get a fair break along with other workers and veterans.

500,000 N.Y. GIs Face Loss of Votes

NEW YORK, July 15—A warning that 900,000 New York state servicemen and their families await a decision by Governor Thomas E. Dewey on extension of federal soldier ballot rights to members of the armed forces was sounded by the Natl. CIO Political Action Committee this week.

In a telegram to the Republican presidential aspirant, CIO-PAC Chairman Sidney Hillman urged him to accept by the July 15 deadline provisions of the recently passed law according federal ballot rights to servicemen, providing their states approve the plan.

Hillman pointed out that less than 80,000 of the 900,000 New Yorkers in the armed forces have applied to the State War Ballot Commission for the right to vote.

"The cumbersome election laws of New York State, as you are aware, require such application—perhaps made out in a New Guinea foxhole—before a ballot can be forwarded," Hillman wired.

"Acceptance of the Federal ballot by you," Hillman declared, "will open the way to voting in the crucial November elections to the vast majority of New York's representatives in the armed forces.

"If you do not accept the Federal ballot by July 15, it is virtually assured that more than one-half million soldiers, sailors and marines will be completely unable to participate in the most democratic of all our institutions—voting for their candidates for public office."

Hail War Ship Job By U. S. Workers

New York, July 15—The million American workers who created an epic in American industry by overproducing landing craft quotas for the invasion of Europe were commended this week by Secy. of the Navy James V. Forrestal.

The CIO Marine and Shipbuilding Workers Union was given special mention by the Navy head, who said that workers "laying it on the line" have far surpassed the halfway mark of the original goal set for World War II landing craft and are already up to the half way mark of an increased goal.

Construction of 80,000 landing craft was set as the goal last November which was later raised to 100,000. Through the first week of July, 48,267 had been built. The remaining will be needed for the Pacific theater.

Forrestal also praised the CIO Auto Workers Union whose aircraft workers manufactured the planes that helped win the recent victory over the Japanese fleet in the battle of the eastern Philippines and in the Mariannas area.

The plants involved were the Eastern Aircraft Division of General Motors (Avenger torpedo planes), Douglas (Dauntless dive bombers), and Curtiss-Wright in Columbus, where the Helldivers are made.

Newspapers Fast Becoming Nation's Number 1 Problem

The following article contains excerpts from an editorial by Irving Brant carried in a recent issue of the Colorado Editor, publication of the Colorado Press Assn. Brant is a former editorial writer for the Chicago Sun, the St. Louis Star-Tribune, St. Louis Star and the Des Moines Register and Tribune.

Taken as a whole, the newspapers of the U. S. A. are now moving toward a proud distinction. They promise soon to because the number one problem of the country. Perhaps they are that already, because of the way they are hindering, instead of helping, an economic transition which in the next half century will make the present world unrecognizable.

At a time when all the channels of information should be freely open to thoughts upon the manner and nature of this change, and when editors should be probing the political and economic realities of a changing world, American journalism allies itself stubbornly with those who refuse to admit any change is coming.

Thus it helps to convert evolution into chaotic frustration and heightens the likelihood of its going from that into revolution.

During the year of crisis, 1944, the U. S. A. will go through a test almost without precedent among the great powers of the world. It will undertake both to win a war and conduct a national political campaign.

GAMBLE ON WAR

There are few Americans and few newspapers (outside of the fascistic and traitorous "poison press" which is protected by the freedom it would destroy), who would consciously subordinate the winning of the war to political considerations. But who will challenge the truth of the following dual assertion?

1. Many politicians and many newspapers are willing to gamble on a possible loss in the war in order to gain an assured personal or party advantage in politics.

2. Few politicians and few newspapers are willing to risk a possible political loss in order to gain an assured advantage in the war.

We have seen American newspapers, as a class, build prejudice against labor unions, not by seeking out and dealing with the real sins in some of them, but by treating the one quarter of one per cent of time lost through wildcat strikes as if these microscopic work stoppages represented general sabotage of the war effort.

Labor's no-strike pledge was fulfilled 99.75 per cent in 1943. That makes it just .31 per cent purer than Ivory soap. How many newspapers have put that fact before their readers?

By failing to tell the truth about labor, or rather by creating an impression opposite the truth, they have jeopardized the war effort.

They have done so not only by imparing the morale of labor in the face of a rising cost of living, but building up inflationary forces which hope to drive that cost still higher by weakening organized labor as a force against inflation.

CIO Living Cost Booklet Ready

Washington, July 15—"Living Costs in World War II," by CIO Pres. Philip Murray and UAW-CIO Pres. R. J. Thomas, is off the press and may be secured from the CIO Publicity Dept.

The 240-page publication gives an overall view of the rise in the cost of living between 1941 and 1944. It points out with supporting facts that the cost of living has risen 45.3 per cent during this period.

It concludes that the Bureau of Labor Statistics retail price index is not a suitable measure of wartime living costs, and that its use for this purpose in wage determinations has caused great harm.

Cost of the booklet is 50 cents a copy.

War Dept. Warns Biggest Production Job Just Ahead

Washington, July 15—The first of a series of War Dept. conferences with the labor press was held this week, with nearly a dozen union representatives learning officially that the United States is entering the toughest production period of the war and that no major cutbacks can be foreseen now at least until next November.

Responsible for the statement was Maj. Gen. Lucius D. Clay, director of materiel for the Army Service Forces, who said, however, that he could not speak about possible aircraft cutbacks.

The labor press representatives also learned:

1. That, based on a two-front war, the war production program for the first six months of 1945 will not represent any overall reduction from the last six months of this year.

2. That major needs for the current period are heavy ammunition, bombs and tanks.

3. That manpower shortages drastically affecting production are occurring in foundry and forge shops, where the work is backbreaking and hot, and where wages are lower than in other war industries.

4. That no instance has been reported of U. S. troops lacking ammunition or equipment because of any strike.

A warning that "the period when news is the most optimistic of all will be the period when our demands are the heaviest" was sounded by Gen. Clay.

It was learned that the demand for heavy ammunition has been caused by a switch from the theory that air power was going to in large measure replace the work of artillery.

Developments in North Africa proved in very short order that difficult weather and landing fields covered with mud made artillery much more reliable than bombing planes.

full-time consideration to the problem. The committee includes:

Ted F. Silvey, chairman, and Harold J. Ruttenberg, Lincoln Fairley, Gladys Dickason, Neal Brant, Leo Goodman, Tom Owens, Michael Ross and John Edelman, with at least one more to be named.

Silvey hailed the WPB order, pointing out that it will help to prevent formation of pools of unemployment, and explaining that it cannot harm war production because the manufacture of "gadgets" that would be of no use is positively prohibited.

ONE MAN

Into Montgomery-Ward's big store,
Deputy Marshals, a dozen or more,
Carried their country's flag one day,
Heedless of warnings to keep away.

Sacks of potatoes and bags of flour
Hindered their way in that fateful hour.
Harness for horses and gear for mules;
Bales of gingham and blacksmiths' tools;
Ladies' dresses and misses' coats;
Baby buggies and motorboats;
Silks and satins and hillside plows;
Fishing tackle and food for cows;
Undergarments and laundry soap;
Wilton carpets, cravats and rope;
And, at the head of the barricade,
Old man Avery, unafraid.

Into the face of the Law he stared,
Wondering much that his country dared
Interfere with Montgomery-Ward.

His voice was shrill and his face was hard.
Whether from principle, hate, or pride,
Government's orders must be defied!
The Union may be all right, of course,
But a Labor Union's a pinker horse!
War and the Unions are both unfair,
Especially so to a millionaire!

So the Marshals left, and the soldiers came:
Sewell's position remained the same.
"Your orders are outside the Law," said he;
"If you carry them out, you must carry me!"

Then they carried him out and set him down
On a sidewalk there in Chicago Town
The cameras pictured his old gray head.
"You—you—New Dealers!", the old man said
As he gnashed his teeth in synthetic rage,
While the story broke the world's Front Page
And jammed the airwaves from every mike,
Of Avery's one-man sit-down strike.

MORAL

Barbara Fritchie had gray hair too,
But she was poor folks, like me—and you.

Demo Parley Shows Labor Packs Punch

America this week awoke to the fact that labor wears political long pants. CIO and AFL leaders packed more punch at the Democratic Party convention than ever before, and took active steps to help guarantee that FDR would be overwhelmingly nominated, and would be supported by a progressive platform that materially would aid his battle for re-election.

Gung-ho Marine Raider Praises U. S. Unions

By HERBERT A. KLEIN
Head, Western Bureau, Federated Press

SAN DIEGO, Calif., July 22—Lean, lincolnesque Lt. Col. Evans F. Carlson, outstanding war hero and fighter against tyranny in all forms, this week lay in bed at the great Navy Hospital here, recovering from Japanese machine gun bullet wounds received in the battle that resulted in the capture of Saipan. His answers to questions of this correspondent were pointed toward members of organized labor, and reflected the fighting democratic faith of an officer who enriched American military traditions with the "Gung-ho" concept of all-out cooperation for victory.

Only a few hours separated the Marine hero's answering of questions from the visit to his bedside of the wife of his Commander-in-Chief, President Roosevelt. The questions and his answers follow:

SUPPORT TO FIGHTERS

Question: How can U. S. workers render the utmost support to our Pacific fighters?

Answer: Cooperate to the utmost of their ability in producing and shipping materials of war to our troops on various fronts. The sooner we defeat the enemy on all fronts, the sooner we'll be able to address ourselves to perfecting the processes of peace, and expanding the democratic pattern of life.

Poll Shows FDR 5-4 Choice

Washington, July 22 — More than two-thirds of the American people think Roosevelt will defeat Dewey, according to Fortune Magazine's latest poll of public opinion.

Fortune's opinion testers, in putting the question, "Regardless of what you hope, who do you think will win—Roosevelt, if he runs, or Dewey?" got this national answer:

Roosevelt, 66.4 per cent; Dewey, 21.9 per cent; don't know, 11.7 per cent.

In answering the all important question, "If the election were being held today and Roosevelt were running for President on the Democratic ticket against Dewey on the Republican ticket, how do you think you would vote?" Roosevelt received 50.1 per cent; Dewey, 43.7 per cent, and 6.2 per cent didn't know.

On the same question in 1940 Roosevelt scored 44.3 per cent against Wendell Willkie's 40.8 per cent.

Dewey Kills Chance Of 500,000 N. Y. Servicemen To Vote

NEW YORK, July 22—"Unlimited financial resources are playing politics with the right of New York State's fighting men to vote," was the weak-kneed alibi given by New York Gov. Thomas E. Dewey this week for his callous refusal to extend the simplified federal soldier ballot rights to New York's 900,000 fighting men.

With the July 15 deadline for acceptance of the federal ballot form passed, the GOP candidate virtually disfranchised more than a half million Empire State citizens who are doing a fighting and dying job to keep America free and democratic. It was done in polltax fashion—plain unvarnished indifference to the needs and will of the people.

Dewey's "charge" was contained in a statement filled with anonymous references to "campaigns of deceit" and an effort to justify and palm off the complicated state soldier vote law. Under the state regulations, less than 20 per cent of the soldier citizens will be able to participate in the November elections, according to figures revealed by Dewey's own War Ballot Commission.

Sidney Hillman, chairman of the CIO Political Action Committee, in a telegram to the governor pointed out last week that less than 80,000 of the 900,000 New Yorkers in the armed forces have applied to the State War Ballot Commission for the right to vote.

With the July 15 deadline, the federal ballot is lost to the state. However, efforts can be made to liberalize the state law which may give more time for return of the ballot and may eliminate the need for signed application requests.

States which have adopted the federal ballot as well as the state absentee ballot are: California, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Oregon, Rhode Island, Texas, Utah, Vermont and Washington.

States that failed to adopt the federal law, but use the state absentee ballot only are: Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Delaware, Idaho, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

3 More CIO Meets All-Out For FDR

GLASS

St. Louis, Mo., July 22—Delegates to the sixth biennial convention of the CIO Federation of Glass, Ceramic & Silica Sand Workers in session here this week voted to back Pres. Roosevelt and Vice Pres. Wallace for re-election.

Intl. Pres. Joseph Froesch took the chair after the convention was called to order by Carl Priest, president of Local 63. Froesch welcomed the 100 delegates representing some 50,000 members of the federation, and introduced Vice Pres. Leland Beard, Secy.-Treas. Lewis McCracken and Exec. Board Members Willard Pelican, Edward V. McVann, Ralph J. Reiser and Herman Leiner, all of whom addressed the convention.

URGE POLITICAL ACTION

CIO Vice Pres. Allan S. Haywood and CIO Natl. Representative Adolph Germer spoke, both stressing the need for strong political action. "American labor is waking up and is going to take a more and more active part in politics," Haywood told the delegates.

Asserting that the election of Dewey as President would be a "disaster," Germer called him an agent of the "anti-union money power."

"Dewey's nomination is a challenge to organized labor which calls for organized political action to back up organized economic action," Germer said.

George Cole, representative of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, charged that the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers maintained a policy of seeking to discredit organized labor, and that "fascist-minded people want to shackle a free labor producing for victory by imposing a labor draft."

The Navy Dept. was represented by Pfc. Donald Dexter, Marine paratrooper, who told of his experiences at Tarawa and Bougainville, and Seaman 1st Class William Parrish, who fought on three fronts and received a Presidential citation for saving 90 lives.

MICHIGAN

Detroit, July 22—The seventh annual convention of the Michigan CIO Council, held in Grand Rapids last week, put in the greater part of four days discussing the necessity for political action by labor, reaffirmed the no-strike pledge, and endorsed President Roosevelt and Vice-President Wallace for re-election, as well as all CIO-supported candidates.

It also endorsed national CIO political policy, which opposes a third party, and outlined a voluntary political action contribution plan to be handled by local unions.

John W. Gibson, member of Local 83, United Dairy Workers, Detroit, and former chairman of the State Dept. of Labor and Industry, was re-elected president of the council by acclamation.

In a spirited contest, Barney Hopkins, financial secretary of UAW Dodge Local 3, defeated Ben Probe who has been secretary-treasurer for three years.

The convention, after spirited debate, re-affirmed its no-strike pledge by an overwhelming majority.

Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO United Auto Workers Union congratulated the delegates for reaffirming the no-strike pledge.

August Scholle, Michigan CIO regional director and chairman of the sixth region Political Action Committee, warned that "a lot of people think that if we got rid of the pledge we would have fewer strikes because management would not take advantage of us. All I have to say," he added, "is that revocation of the pledge would lose us the election this fall. And if we lose that election we'll have ample opportunity to strike."

Representing the national CIO at the convention were Secy-Treas. James B. Carey and John Brophy, director of Industrial Union Councils. In a speech stressing the importance of political action by labor, Carey told the delegates that "there is not a man serving in Congress today who can be considered a working man."

The present make-up includes 290 lawyers, 58 businessmen, 33 publishers or their representatives, 19 professional politicians, 17 educators and eight professional men, Carey said.

Brophy touched on the problem of reconversion in his speech, pointing out that there is a danger in changing to peace-time production in that "reconversion can carry a new wave of unemployment to fantastic heights."

"To make our people prosperous we must double our pre-war production and keep it at that level," he declared. "That is the only way we can provide markets for things . . . We know the great corporations are making plans to produce only as much as they can sell at the highest possible profits. It is high time that the people insisted that these corporations plan for the entire nation instead of for themselves."

GEORGIA

Atlanta, Ga., July 22 — The splendid growth made by CIO unions in Georgia during the past year was outlined in the report presented by Pres. Charles Gillman to the annual convention of the Georgia State CIO Council held here July 15-16. The top victory, he reported, was the successful drive of the CIO United Auto Workers Union, which organized the huge Bell Bomber plant, and won an NLRB election as sole bargaining agency for the employes.

The convention passed resolutions praising Pres. Roosevelt and Vice-Pres. Wallace and calling for their renomination by the National Democratic convention. The resolutions also praised the action of Gov. Arnall and the Georgia Democratic Committee, in urging Georgia delegates to the Democratic convention to work for the renomination of Roosevelt and Wallace.

BACK KILGORE BILL

Other resolutions passed urged support of the Kilgore Bill; a renewed organizing drive in Georgia; participation in the work of the CIO Political Action Committee to carry the program to all local unions; support of the Natl. CIO War Relief Committee; revision of the War Labor Board wage policy, and endorsement of the Warner-Murray-Dingell Social Security Bill.

Pres. Gillman, who has headed the Council since it was organized five years ago, was re-elected for another term. Other officers elected were: First Vice-Pres. R. E. Starnes, Steelworkers; Second Vice-Pres. Garland Brooks, Textile Workers, and Lloyd A. Gossett, TWU, re-elected secretary-treasurer.

The convention paid tribute to CIO Pres. Philip Murray and pledged "fullest support to the cause of the United Nations in the prosecution of the war."

Mayor William B. Hartsfield, in an address to the convention, congratulated the CIO in having "a man of Charlie Gillman's calibre" as head of the Georgia Council.

Members elected to the Executive Board were: Annie Maude Creel and Daisy Pennington, Amalgamated Clothing Workers; J. B. Kirkpatrick, Packinghouse Workers; C. H. Webb, Federal Workers; D. B. Scoggins, Auto Workers; Roy Dyer, Hosiery Workers, and Otto Crowe, Steelworkrs.

Court Throws Out Avery Suit Against WLB

WASHINGTON, July 22—Justice and common sense continued to work against the anti-labor Montgomery Ward empire and Sewell Avery, its Machaevellian master of hate and public irresponsibility, when the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals here this week unanimously dismissed a suit brought by the company, which sought to evade War Labor Board directives granting maintenance of membership, seniority and arbitration to employes at stores located at Detroit, Denver and Jamaica, N. Y.

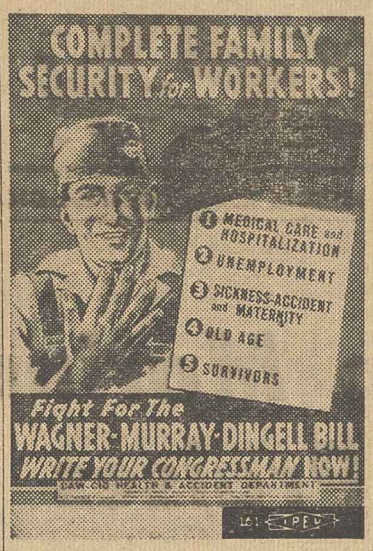
The decision reaffirmed the Court's position in the New England Motor Freight Carriers case in which it ruled that WLB directives are not subject to court review. It was rendered by Judge Henry W. Edgerton and concurred in by Justices Justin Miller and Thurman Arnold.

With this decision, one strategic rat hole in the Avery Formula (Delay, Deny, Disrupt, Defame) against labor and government has been pegged. The use of the courts as a delaying tactic has been an integral part of the anti-union formula, and the prospect of the company's appeal to the Supreme Court is certain since so much of the formula depends on this tactic.

The company in its position had also challenged the powers of the Office of Economic Stabilization, granted by President Roosevelt's Executive Order 9370, under which the director had authority to apply economic sanctions against companies refusing to comply with government directives. The court ruled that this also did not constitute grounds for court action.

Meanwhile, the WLB in a unanimous decision this week directed wage increases of 5 cents an hour, maintenance of membership, seniority and arbitration of grievance clauses to Montgomery Ward printing department employes at Chicago.



SAMPLE of the campaign being conducted by the CIO United Auto Workers Union for better social security protection is the poster, above, plugging for the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill.

Dies At It Again

New Orleans, July 22—Dixie's most-hated man—Rep. Martin Dies—is signing off in New Orleans with an "investigation" of the local CIO Political Action Committee for its activities in organizing white and Negro Louisianians to oust bourbon congressman of his stripe.

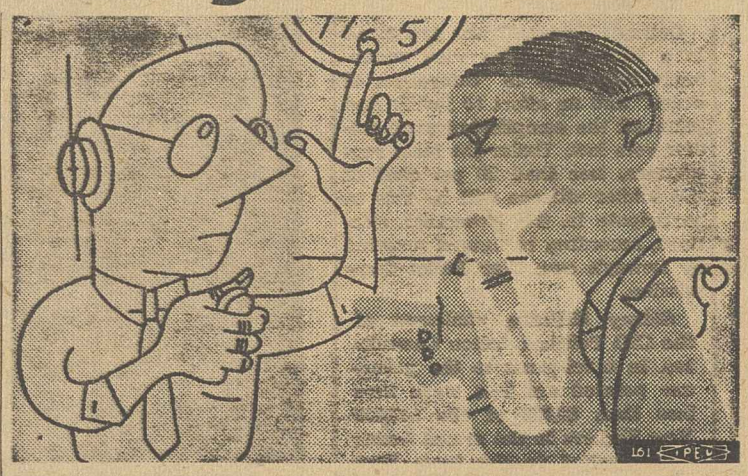
The Orleans Parish CIO Political Action Committee has openly defied Dies and his "investigations" and challenged him to hold an open public inquiry of the Committee, its activities "and the men working with it"—the sooner the better.

Announcing that this "investigation would be his final act in the folding comedy of the Dies Committee, the nation's No. 1 red baiter and Negro baiter seemed pretty sore because labor and progressives in Beaumont, Tex., convinced him that he should get out of Congress before voters of his district threw him out.

Radio Belongs To The People—Use It!

Nine out of every 10 Americans listen to the radio, an average of five hours a day. In education, in entertainment, in boosting war morale, radio has played a major part. It's use by labor, however, has not been fully developed. To help develop labor's use of the air, the CIO Political Action Committee has published a 48-page Radio Handbook. The CIO NEWS this week starts a series of articles, based on.. excerpts.. from.. the.. Handbook, as a contribution toward the extension of knowledge about labor's radio rights. Readers who wish the complete 48-page Handbook should write CIO-PAC, 205 E. 42nd St., N. Y. 17, N. Y.

The air belongs to the people. As long as the broadcasting companies put on programs that serve the interests of the people, they are given the privilege (in the form of a license for limited time) to use the air waves. As soon as the companies fail to serve the people and abuse their privilege, their license may be revoked.



We, the people, have the exclusive right to the air, and we, through our elected government, can grant the privilege to broadcasters to use our air, for as long as they serve us well.

Since the air belongs to the people, broadcasters are obliged to carry programs of a public service educational broadcasts, forums, and discussions of all questions of interest to the general public. Naturally labor problems are of public interest.

The government agency in charge of radio is the Federal Communications Commission. Commissioner James Lawrence Fly of the FCC tells us: "Those entrusted with the facilities of radio cannot impair the freedom to listen by restrictions imposed at the transmitter end."

Of course you understand that that means: Any trade union, like any civic organization has the right to use the radio to discuss workers' issues which are of public interest.

If you have never used the radio before you may think of "free time" as a handout which you, as a labor representative, cannot get. Actually, your chances of getting free time are just as good as getting paid-for time.

Here is the reason why:

Every station, when it obtains its license, commits itself to provide freedom of speech on the radio. If the station presents a public issue, that station is obliged to present all sides of that issue fairly and without bias.

However, in many controversial issues, one side might be rich, and the opposing side, poor. Then only the rich man's side would be presented to the public. That, obviously would not be to the "public interest."

For this reason, fairness requires that on all vital public issues a non-profit organization get free time on the radio to refute arguments presented by opponents.

Unions Are News

Your union is legitimate "news" in your community. The things it does, the campaigns it conducts, are an important part of the life of community. You must see to it that your local radio stations are kept informed of all developments within the union which would be of general interest to the entire community.

When your union adopts and fulfills a quota in the War Bond Drive, that's news your radio stations should know. They should know about the new production records your members set; the campaigns you conduct for the Red Cross Blood Bank or against absenteeism; the methods by which you maintain contact with your members in the armed forces; the public meetings you hold, etc.

Activities such as these have a news value to the community at large, as well as to your own members. These activities are in the public service.

And out of such activities can come the content of scores of different radio programs. Some stations will use them as news items. Others may be persuaded to invite an official of your union to a program on which he is interviewed, and the story told in that manner.

You may be able to get portions of your public meetings broadcast. And there is always the possibility of interesting a station in giving your union time to present a dramatic program of its own.

These are public service activities for which a radio station will give free time on a sustaining basis. But you must supply the initiative and the follow-through.

Your radio stations will not come to you to offer you free time—but in many cases you'll find they won't close the door on you, either, when you go to them with practical suggestions on how your union can contribute worthwhile program material to their schedules.

Demo Parley Shows Labor Packs Punch

By LEN DE CAUX

CHICAGO, July 21—Labor's influence this year made itself more strongly felt in the Democratic Party convention than ever before in American political history.

The almost unanimous renomination of President Roosevelt, by 1,086 to 90 votes, was in itself a special labor triumph as well as a thumping victory for all progressive elements in the party.

For it was the CIO, both nationally and in every state, that early took active leadership in the pre-convention movement for a fourth term.

This movement gained such sweeping popular support that by the time the convention met, Roosevelt's nomination was amply assured and the loud anti-FDR shouts of the James Farley followers and the Southern reactionaries had faded into a feeble though still spiteful whine.

MAIN BATTLE

The main battle therefore at the convention raged around the Vice-Presidential nomination. With all the anti-FDR, anti-liberal and anti-labor elements concentrating on stopping the renomination of Vice-President Henry Wallace at all costs.

The fine showing made by Wallace, far exceeding all pre-convention predictions, was largely due to the unremitting efforts of the CIO, which played a leading part in every stage of the fight against these forces and against the northern political bosses who sought to appease them.

The strength of the labor and popular support thus maintained for Wallace blasted the hopes of the anti-FDR and appeaser elements to nominate reactionaries and led to the final choice of liberal Senator Harry S. Truman as Roosevelt's running mate.

PAC CUTS TEETH

The CIO Political Action Committee cuts its political teeth at this convention and proceeded to use them to good effect, to the dismay of the reactionaries.

Somewhat disconcerted too were the old-time political bosses of the northern industrial states, when this lusty youngster rejected the pap usually handed to labor and demanded stronger meat.

They found themselves caught between their desire and need for CIO support and their reluctance to grant labor an increased voice in decisions hitherto sacred to their innermost machines.

Led by CIO President Philip Murray and PAC Chairman Sidney Hillman, CIO delegates, who were present in larger numbers than at any previous convention, played an active and leading part in many of the state delegations and caucuses and on the floor of the convention.

Vice-President Wallace's fortunes were at a low ebb on Monday, when the Democrats began gathering in Chicago. Most of the press had dismissed him as an effective contender, due partly to the wishful thinking of anti-New Deal publishers.

BOSSES ANTI-WALLACE

There was strong opposition to him from the south, with the notable exception of Governor Arnall and the whole Georgia delegation, Florida and the pro-FDR delegation from Texas. Political bosses like National Chairman Robert Hannegan, Ed Flynn of New York, Mayor Hague of Jersey City, and Mayor Kelly of Chicago were actively opposed to him.

And Wallace himself had not asked the President to give him active support in any fashion that would appear like dictating to the convention, preferring to stand on his own legs to fight it out at the convention.

But after the CIO delegates got busy, lending backbone and new courage to his other supporters, Wallace's stock began to rise. James Byrnes, who was at first boomed as the leading vice-presidential candidate, was soon eliminated for fear of labor opposition.

MURRAY LEADS FIGHT

CIO President Murray led the fight in the Pennsylvania delegation which put it on record for Wallace, and both he and Hillman before and during the convention were in constant touch with every important party leader, urging support for Wallace and rejecting all compromises or trades.

At a press conference on Tuesday, attended by more than 150 reporters, Murray and Hillman emphatically denied all dope stories alleging they were considering any second choice and reaffirmed their unqualified support for Wallace, both on his record and as the strongest possible teammate for FDR.

Meanwhile CIO delegates were also instrumental in putting the Michigan delegation on record for Wallace. UAW Vice-Pres. Richard Frankensteen was elected chairman of this delegation, which also included UAW President R. J. Thomas, Secy.-Treas. George Addes, Sheldon Tapps, Ben Probe and Pat Quinn among its CIO members.

CIO DELEGATES

CIO delegates in the California, Georgia, Minnesota, Washington, Wisconsin and other delegations were active in swinging their respective states back of Wallace, and CIO delegates everywhere else were on their toes in his behalf.

At a special caucus of CIO delegates on Wednesday, plans were made for continuing and intensifying the Wallace campaign and the effects of this campaign were clearly evident on the convention floor Thursday and Friday, in the huge and enthusiastic demonstrations for Wallace and in the increased votes for him in the first rollcall.

On the Credentials Committee, CIO members supported the pro-Roosevelt delegation from Texas and helped to secure adoption of the compromise which enabled them to split the vote with the so-called "regular" anti-FDR group. This resulted in 36 votes for Roosevelt from Texas and in 27 votes for Wallace which he would not have otherwise received.

The Resolutions Committee also felt the weight of CIO influences, through the vigorous testimony of President Murray against racial discrimination, wage injustices and anti-labor legislation, and on behalf of the general CIO program.

The platform finally adopted reflected this influence in the plank on an international organization "with power to employ armed forces when necessary to prevent aggression and preserve peace"; in its call for legislation assuring equal pay for equal work regardless of sex, for "adequate compensation for workers during demobilization," and for other progressive steps.

Noteworthy was the defeat of the southern "white supremacy" group, who sought to include in the platform clauses opposing the right of Negroes to vote in primaries, contrary to the Supreme Court decision, and upholding the power of states to discriminate against Negroes in educational and other matters.

ANTI-BIAS PLANK

The platform, as finally adopted, declared: "We believe that racial and religious minorities have the right to live, develop and vote equally with all citizens and share the rights that are guaranteed by our Constitution. Congress should exert its full constitutional powers to protect these rights."

One clause inserted in the platform over labor and progressive opposition, including both CIO and AFL, called for a so-called "equal rights" constitutional amendment for women. The Republican platform includes a similar plank, though labor points out such an amendment would result in annulment of much protective legislation on behalf of women workers.

In his speech seconding the nomination of President Roosevelt, (see page 4), Vice-President Wallace threw down the gauntlet to reactionary and anti-FDR elements in the Democratic Party, declaring it can only win if it is a liberal party, since its strength is in "the plain people, the ordinary folks."

Thanks to the increased labor influence in evidence, substantial progress was made at this convention in liberalizing the Democratic Party.

ANTI-FDR FORCES WEAK

The limit of open anti-FDR strength was the 89 votes for Senator Byrd of Virginia (plus one for Farley from New York), drawn chiefly from Louisiana, Mississippi and Virginia, with some minority votes from Texas, Alabama and Florida.

The Solid South is no longer solidly reactionary. Some of its delegations included CIO members for the first time, and there was strong support for Wallace from Georgia, Florida, Texas and other southern states, where CIO organization has made much headway.

AFL delegates worked along parallel lines with the CIO in many instances, supporting Wallace in most cases, despite some opposition from top leaders.

In many of the northern and western industrial states, labor is becoming a leading influence in Democratic councils, thanks largely to the campaigns of the CIO Political Action Committee for registration and getting out the vote.

This convention showed the party bosses paying respectful attention to this influence, though not always yielding to it.

Body, Boots And Britches 'Agin' Smith-Connally

Chicago, July 22—Philip Murray told the Democratic platform-makers just how he felt about the anti-labor Smith-Connally Act, passed by polltax Democrats and tory Republicans over Pres. Roosevelt's veto.

"I'm 'agin' it," he said. "I'm 'agin' it body, boots and britches. I'm asking Congress to have it stricken out."

Amplifying his reply to Daniel Tobin, AFL Teamsters leader and member of the resolutions committee, who asked if he joined in William Green's earlier denunciation of the Act, Murray declared:

"The Smith-Connally Act has encouraged strikes, not stopped them. It is an instrument of evil. It has helped malcontents who are interested in confusion and disruption."

MURRAY AND HILLMAN outlined the position of CIO and American liberalism at a press conference attended by nearly 200 newspapermen at the Sherman Hotel, Chicago

S. R. O. Sign Up as CIO Leaders Give Program to Democrats

CHICAGO, July 22—There was standing room only, and not too much of that, when CIO Pres. Philip Murray and CIO Political Action Chairman Sidney Hillman presented labor's program to the Democratic resolutions committee. Committee members sat up and took notice, press tables became filled and many party leaders joined the throng.

Murray ripped into the Republican platform and called for a Democratic platform "worthy of the man you are going to nominate for President."

"The people of America will overwhelmingly reject a return to the discredited policies of the past," he said. "They want no part of Mr. Hoover's doctrines—domestic or foreign."

"They want no part of any narrow nationalism or any thinly disguised imperialism that can only lay the basis for another world slaughter in our lifetimes.

"They want no part of the inflationary anarchy promised them by the Republican platform. They want no part of irresponsible and insulting appeals to self-interest, war-weariness and prejudice."

Murray read to the committee the comprehensive program of the CIO Political Action Committee, as adopted by the CIO executive board and the Washington PAC conference.

Then he pushed his papers aside and hit out from the shoulder against wage and living cost injustices, against racial and religious discrimination, and against the Smith-Connally Act.

Emphasizing CIO's stand for effective economic stabilization, Murray pointed to the guaranteed profits provided for corporations in the tax laws, to the parity guarantees for farmers, and asked the committee:

"What sort of a declaration will you make to guarantee American wage earners a decent living?"

The CIO leader received unexpected support when he declared living costs had risen more than 45% and assailed the discredited estimates of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Senator McCarran, a committee member, interrupted at this point, saying: "Your statement will be supported by every housewife in America."

Murray took issue with race-baiting reactionaries in Democratic ranks, when he demanded "a strong declaration on racial, religious and minority discrimination—a declaration that will be understood by all the American people.

FIGHT DISCRIMINATION

"We are fighting, and our soldiers are shedding their blood and giving their lives to end all acts of discrimination of this character," he said.

"God help America if, when this war is won overseas, we should find ourselves plunged here into a terrible war of hatred on account of race, religion or color."

Earlier the CIO United Office & Professional Workers called upon the Democratic platform-makers to include a special plank "to overcome the serious economic disadvantage which white-collar and professional people have suffered during the war."

The UOPWA proposal included relaxation of the Little Steel formula to permit increases of at least 35% for salaried employes; a special White-Collar Commission within the War Labor Board; a planned reconversion program; special taxation relief; and expanded social security legislation.

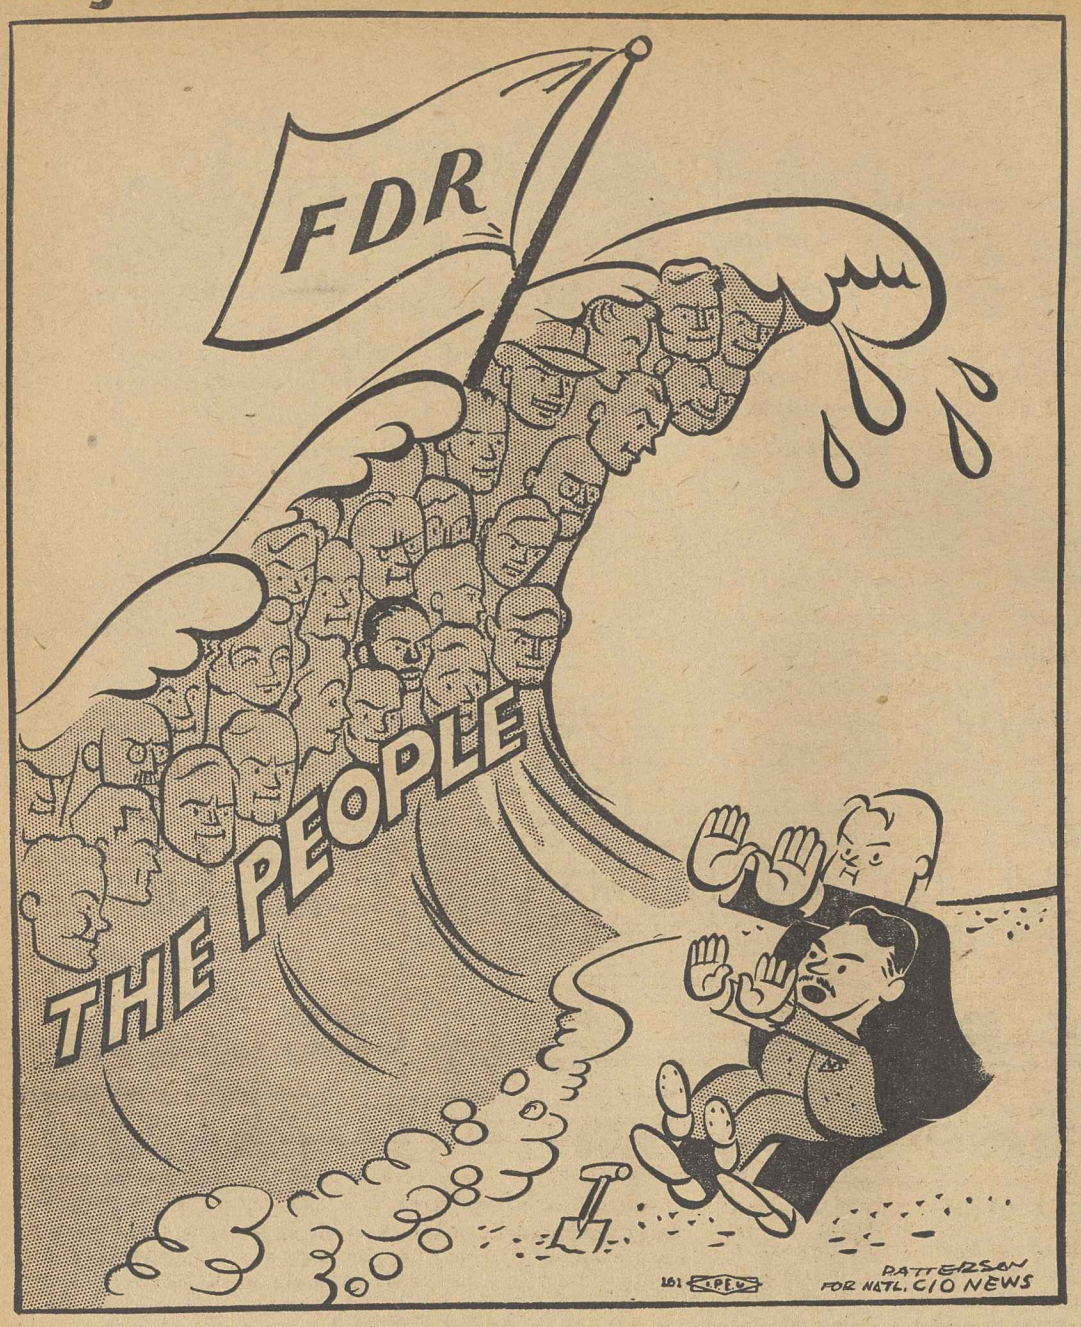
King Canute Failed, Too!



FDR Greatest Living American—Wallace

BY VICE-PRES. HENRY A. WALLACE

As chairman of the Iowa delegation I am deeply honored to second the nomination of the greatest living American—Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The strength of the Democratic Party has always been the people—plain people like so many of those here in this Convention—ordinary folks, farmers, workers and business men along Main Street. Jefferson, Jackson and Woodrow Wilson knew the power of the plain people. All three laid down the thesis that the Democratic Party can win only if and when it is the liberal party.

Now we have come to the most extraordinary election in the history of our country. Three times the Democratic Party has been led to victory by the greatest liberal in the history of the United States. The name Roosevelt is revered in the remotest corners of this earth. The name Roosevelt is cursed by Germans, Japs and certain American troglodytes.

The first issue which transcends all others is that complete victory be won quickly. Roosevelt in a world sense, is the most experienced military strategist who has ever been President of the United States. Roosevelt is the only person in the United States who can meet on even terms the other great leaders in discussions of war and peace.

It is appropriate that Roosevelt should run on the basis of his record as a war leader. He is successfully conducting a war bigger than all the rest of our wars put together. He must finish this job before the nation can breathe in safety. The boys at the front know this better than anyone else.

The future belongs to those who go down the line unswervingly for the liberal principles of both political democracy and economic democracy regardless of race, color or religion. In a political, educational, and economic sense there must be no inferior races. The poll tax must go. Equal opportunities must come. The future must bring equal wages for equal work regardless of sex or race.

Roosevelt stands for all this. That is why certain people hate him so. That also is one of the outstanding reasons why Roosevelt will be elected for a fourth term.

President Roosevelt has long known that the Democratic Party in order to survive, must serve men first and dollars second. That does not mean that the Democratic Party is against business—quite the contrary. But if we want more small business men, as the Democratic Party undoubtedly does, we must modify our taxation system to encourage risk capital to invest in all rapidly growing small business. We want both a taxation system and a railroad rate structure which will encourage new business and the development of the newer industrial regions of the South and West. Rate discrimination must go.

The Democratic Party in Convention assembled is about to demonstrate that it is not only a free party but a liberal party. The Democratic Party cannot long survive as a conservative party. The Republican Party has a monopoly on the conservative brains and the conservative dollars.

By nominating Franklin Roosevelt the Democratic Party is again declaring its faith in liberalism. Roosevelt is a greater liberal today than he has ever been. His soul is pure. The high quality of Roosevelt liberalism will become more apparent as the war emergency passes. The only question ever in Roosevelt's mind is how best to serve the cause of liberalism in the long run. He thinks big. He sees far.

The world is peculiarly fortunate that in times like these the United States should be blessed with a leader of the caliber of Roosevelt. With the spirit of Woodrow Wilson but avoiding the pitfalls which beset that great statesman, Roosevelt can and will lead the United States in cooperation with the rest of the world toward that type of peace which will prevent World War III.

Issues that will be with us for a generation, perhaps even for a hundred years, will take form at this Convention and at the November election. The Democratic Party and the independent voters will give Roosevelt their wholehearted support, because of his record in peace and war.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

THIS year's Democratic convention was different.

On the surface there wasn't so much change. The trimmings were all the same—the milling around the lobbies of the Stevens Hotel—the ballyhoo. The flags, the music, the oratory and the demonstrations at the Chicago Stadium—the same kind of stuff in the same places as at the Republican convention and the 1940 Democratic convention. Even the war made little difference, except in the tone of the speeches. The baldheads at the GOP show spoke of "accent on youth." But there wasn't much of it there nor at the Democratic convention, if your idea of youth is military age. There were few men in uniform around.

Liquor flowed freely. Food was plentiful. The parties, both private and public, were much the same.

The same party bosses met in the same hotel rooms to pull strings in much the same old way, while most of the rank and file went out for the same kind of good time.

Hundreds of newspapermen hunted around as usual for meager morsels of news and kept the wires humming with millions of words of speculation, color and gossip when there wasn't any news.

But still this convention was different. A strange new murmur ran through the lobbies, caucuses and committee rooms, puzzling the bosses exciting the delegates and making new copy for the newspapermen.

American labor was finding its voice, was learning to talk politically and was being heard from.

★ ★ ★

At past conventions, labor received little attention.

A labor leader or two connected with the particular party might be consulted in drafting the labor plank. Then wih a platform already drafted, a politely bored committee listened to some official statements of labor's position. And that was all.

Of course, there have been a few union delegates at past conventions. But for the most part they have been there primarily as Republicans or Democrats, with little influence and with little to distinguish them from other delegates.

★ ★ ★

But at this Democratic convention, thanks chiefly to CIO political action, labor was a real force.

The surface indications were many. Hardly a news story was written that did not refer to labor's influence, and CIO was frequently in the headlines.

When Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman appeared before the resolutions committee, the room filled to capacity for the first time and important party leaders came to cock an ear. When they held a press conference, between 150 and 200 newspapermen showed up to question them.

Repeatedly, before and during the convention, the party leaders consulted the labor representatives on strategy, policies and nominations.

There were more labor delegates at this than any previous convention, notably from the CIO; they played a more active, leading and concerted part, as labor men.

Murray led in the caucus fight that put a majority of the Pennsylvania delegation on record for Henry Wallace. R. J. Thomas and half a dozen other CIO men were leaders in the Michigan delegation, whose chairman was Richard Frankensteen.

In the California, Illinois, Minnesota, Ohio, Washington and many other state delegations, CIO delegates were a force to be reckoned with.

★ ★ ★

In a convention that devoted 90% of its time to picking the candidate for Vice-President, the CIO from the first furnished the most solid, consistent and active support for Vice-Pres. Wallace.

While many lukewarm New Dealers were selling him short, the CIO delegates stood by their guns, rejected all trades, refused to consider any second choices, stiffened the backbones of his supporters and swung many of the middle-of-the-roaders to his side.

Though Wallace failed of renomination, the CIO fight on his behalf helped mightily in preventing the nomination from going to one of the less progressive candidates and assuring the naming of liberal Senator Harry S. Truman.

Two final observations on the convention:

(1) The vice-presidential scrap was only one phase of the basic conflict between the poltaxers and anti-New Dealers on one hand and the real supporters of FDR's policies on the other. Labor's influence also made itself felt in a hundred other ways on the progressive side.

(2) With all their skill and determination, the CIO leaders and delegates would have cut little ice, if the politicians had not known they spoke for millions of registered voters, organized politically and educated on the main issues.

The source of labor's growing influence is in the grass roots—in the wards and precincts—where the main job of getting out the vote to assure the election of FDR and a progressive Congress still remains to be done.

What's The Score On Cutbacks?

U. S. war production cutbacks will be one of the major issues before the American people within the next 12 months. The certain victory that we will win over the Axis is clouded by the not-so-certain battle for full production and full employment. The need for national planning to guarantee sensible transition from wartime to peacetime production is plainly evident to anyone intimately acquainted with the disorganization, inefficiency and unemployment that lack of planning causes. Sample of such chaos is the current situation in St. Louis, where thousands of workers are out of jobs through no fault of their own. This is the second of two articles about the city's problems.

ST. LOUIS, July 22—U. S. war production is losing nearly one half million man hours of labor a week through lack of planning in this community alone. This staggering total is caused by the fact that more than one fourth of 35,000 workers laid off in war plants here since last November have not been re-employed. The total is magnified by the fact that many of those who have found jobs have got them in non-war industry, where the fear of pending cutbacks in military production is non-existent.

As Allied armies sweep on to victory the problem of what to do with workers no longer needed in war plants will rise to plague not only St. Louis, but the entire nation.

The problem can be handled on a local level—as it has been handled ineffectively to date in St. Louis—or Congress can live up to its responsibilities by passing legislation like the Kilgore Reconversion Bill calling for over all planning to guarantee jobs and full use of plant facilities based on a program of full production.

Because Congress has not yet provided the necessary planning, thousands of CIO workers in St. Louis, whose skills are usable in war production, have frankly stated that their personal bread and butter problems are forcing them to seek stable employment in peacetime industry which will not feel the shock of unplanned reconversion.

One of the unions that has been affected by layoffs in this area is Local 325, CIO United Auto Workers, whose members were employed at one of the McQuay-Norris Manufacturing Co.'s bullet core plants.

McQuay-Norris, working under contract with the Army Ordnance Dept., was ordered to end production by February 29 of this year. The company then began negotiations for a Navy contract.

3,500 Affected

The shutdown, UAW officials estimate, affected 3,500 workers. Of these, about 350 were transferred to other McQuay-Norris plants here, where bullet cores and piston rings are manufactured. Major cutbacks are expected at these plants within the next 60 to 90 days, officials said, although no confirmation has yet been forthcoming.

About 50 per cent of the women formerly employed at the shut down plant want to go back, said Walter E. Schilling, sub-regional director for the UAW. "The majority have expressed a definite desire to continue with war work, for which they have been trained. They want to contribute to victory through production."

UAW sub-regional and local officials agreed that, besides the unemployed, hundreds of other former McQuay-Norris war workers are in nonessential occupations. The majority of those still floating on the labor market are housewives and women workers. Negro men also find getting new jobs difficult, although some of them have been absorbed by small machine shops and establishments paying lower wage rates than those prevailing in the big plants.

Workers Leave City

Still another union which felt the effects of the March layoff season was the CIO United Steelworkers, 400 of whose members were made jobless by the shutdown of a Sheffield Steel "booster" plant, a small order shop making billets, angle irons and other small steel products.

Ninety-five per cent of the workers have left the city, according to Robert McVey, local organizer. While no plans for transferrals were made prior to the layoff, the company later arranged to transfer some workers to its plants in Kansas City and Houston. Still others went to plants in other areas, and some were absorbed by local steel plants.

USA in St. Louis, McVey pointed out, has contracts with 28 plants, all of which are fabricating plants. "As such," he said, "they now have more orders than they can handle. Steel labor is in demand. We find job referral a minor problem."

Both the UAW and the CIO Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers (with 19,500 workers laid off since last November) have detailed programs of action for meeting the local situation.

UE is concentrating on two main points in contract negotiations and amendments:

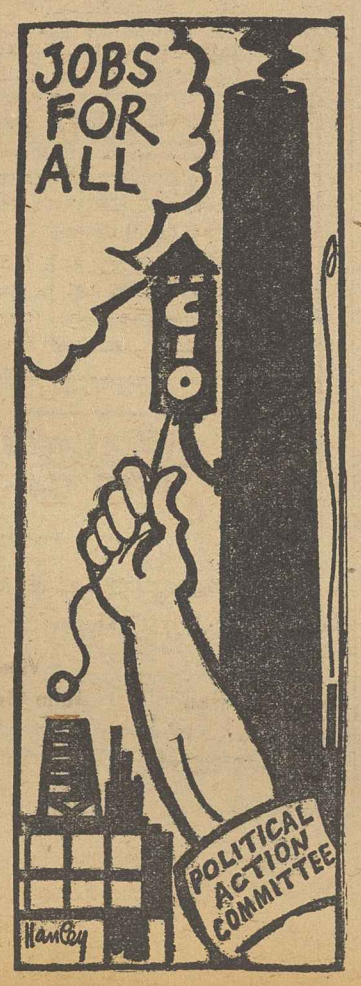
Seek Protection

First is contract protection against abrupt layoffs, calling for contract cancellation or severance pay to be treated in the same manner as government contract cancellations.

Second is sufficient notice before layoffs, with "establishment of joint labor-management in-plant information bureaus to aid workers in receiving proper layoff consultation.

UE also calls for full union representation on whatever agency handles reconversion or transfer problems for "the full period necessary to take care of the workers affected."

The UE has pointed out that "the position of the War Department seriously hampers our city from making its full contribution to the war effort. It is the antithesis of the recommendations of the Baruch-Hancock report. . . . The War Dept. has no program to meet its responsibility to workers affected by the cutbacks. . . . Relief for workers affected by the cutbacks has been entirely neglected. Congress and the War Dept. have a responsibility to guarantee protection for workers against unemployment due to cutbacks and shifts in war production."



Severance Pay

Negotiations with the U. S. Cartridge Co. (where most UE layoffs have occurred) in regard to severance pay for workers affected by the June 1 layoff are now in progress. Union and company have agreed to a sliding scale up to four weeks, and their demands will be presented to the War Dept. in the near future.

UAW plans for the future include pressing for liberalized War Manpower Commission rules allowing local boards more leeway in applying instructions from Washington. Cutbacks should be made wherever possible in cities where labor shortages exist, UAW officials said, if only in order to avoid "too much migration from the city."

"Workers, who are taxpayers and voters, should not be forced to migrate in search of work if it can be avoided," they added. "The only real solution will be found in over all national planning, with labor participating actively in the planning on all levels, national and local."

Specific immediate plans include a program of information for the workers, especially in view of the anticipated heavy cutbacks in at least two UAW plants here. Next, UAW wants an immediate start on a bill guaranteeing "equal rights for small business," to ensure that small plants have equal access to machinery and materials released from the war program now and in the future.

Praise was voiced by CIO officials for the planning work of the Mayor's Committee on employment, although the Committee can do little more than arouse the citizens to the dangers of widespread lack of jobs.

The Mayor's Committee, which figures very large in local postwar thinking, was formed early in March after CIO leaders had pressed the Mayor for action on cutback problems. Represented are: CIO, AFL, business and civic interests.

Praise Mayor's Group

The Mayor's Committee started work with consideration of a broad memo on employment and production in the city, drafted by labor members. The memo pointed up the futility of allowing machinery and floor space here to remain idle in the face of increasing demands for war production, and prodded for vigorous action to ensure maximum production for victory.

On labor's "must" list, also, was a series of needed municipal projects, including housing, hospitals, recreation centers, parks, roads, etc., to be financed with funds available from municipal bond issues. Labor then called for allocation of approved civilian production to plants here equipped to turn out needed civilian goods.

Three concrete achievements have already come out of the Mayor's Committee meetings:

1. Edward W. Wagner, district manager of the Smaller War Plants Corp., visiting California with the full backing of the Committee, arranged for the diversion of about $50,000,000 in war contracts to St. Louis plants. These contracts represent "surplus work" for the jammed California plants.

2. UE leadership, backed by the Committee and aroused civic feeling, pressed the War Dept. into maintaining some experimental and repair work at U. S. Cartridge, pending final disposition of the huge facilities still idle there.

3. The Committee has obtained civic sponsorship for a mass meeting on employment and reconversion problems now scheduled for the latter part of July. Philip Murray, William Green and Eric Johnston, president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, will be invited to speak at the meeting, where national as well as local problems will be thoroughly discussed.

Unsolved Problems

Also fitting into the agenda of the Mayor's Committee are the plans of the Committee of 600, another broadly representative group which, for the past several months, has been working out municipal projects to be financed by $24,000,000 of available bond funds and flotation of a new $45,000,000 bond issue.

This committee has approved projects ranging from construction of airstrips along the Mississippi riverfront to expansion of hospitals. The bond issue goes before the voters on August 1.

Civic and business leaders active on this committee say that its plans are being made "so that the city will be past the blueprint stage and will have thousands of employment opportunities available the day the war is over."

In spite of all the efforts of local agencies and individuals, the St. Louis problem is still unsolved. Facilities are still idle. Thousands of skilled men and women are still unemployed. Perhaps most serious, workers needed for war production have shown themselves wary of taking war jobs because of fear of unemployment following sudden cutbacks.

Migration from St. Louis to the labor shortage areas of Kansas City and Chicago is increasing, and the local labor market is being further raided by employers from other parts of the country.

"The problem so far has been badly handled," said UE Dist. 8 Vice-Pres. William Sentner, "because the agencies of the government have refused to recognize the problems growing out of the necessary shifts of production or stoppages of other production, or the increases in other urgently needed production according to the needs of the fighting fronts."

Kilgore Bill Needed

First, passage of the Kilgore bill; second, passage of the bill for the protection of small business; third, strict adherence to the principles of reconversion outlined in the Baruch-Hancock report; and fourth, passage of a "G. I. Bill of Rights" for workers.

Meanwhile, in Washington, the War Dept. this week complained to the WPB that its goal for war goods are not being met. Among the items in which it listed production shortages are electronic and radio products, for which St. Louis has outstandingly good facilities, with other plants here that can be converted to the manufacture of such products in short order.

It is more obvious than ever, from the St. Louis experience, that the final solutions to the problems arising from the changeover from a war to a peace economy will depend on the outcome of the November elections.

Labor, management, and the city government here, have cooperated smoothly on most issues stemming from the city's crisis. All have substantially the same goals. But the moot question of whether provision of postwar jobs will be solely in the hands of private enterprise on a city-by-city basis or under government control through effective national planning must be decided by the people's ballots.

The labor consensus is that local experience with both planning and planlessness, as evidenced in the work of the Mayor's Committee and in the irresponsibility of the War Dept., shows that the primary need for the transition period is coordination of production, employment, contract termination, and resumption of civilian production.

So far the only plan advanced which includes rounded consideration of the human and economic needs of industrial workers is the Kilgore Reconversion bill.

UE Starts Postwar Job Check

NEW YORK, July 22 — The CIO Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers Union this week initiated a union-wide survey of its industry to determine post war job prospects.

The union's 700,000 workers will be directly and indirectly involved in this overall survey as every UE-CIO affiliate is being asked to participate in the survey which is to lay the groundwork for serious practical planning for jobs during the reconversion period and after the war.

As part of the campaign to provide a factual basis on the question of post war employment, the union's publication stated that the "survey . . . will be used immediately . . . by the UE and the rest of CIO to secure legislation, such as the Kilgore Bill, to prepare in advance to provide full employment after the war, and to help handle the problems of reconversion without mass employment and suffering."

The union has issued questionnaires to every local union seeking information dealing with present production and employment, peak employment, post war planning, effect of past cutbacks, cutbacks being planned, jobs available during reconversion, the local's view on the general problem, plants financed by the government, prime and subcontractors, seniority of veterans, and employment of women now and after the war.

"The UE survey is not being approached in the spirit of a demand upon industry," the UE paper stated, "but as a seriously meant effort to co-operate with industry in helping to prepare for and successfully overcome a problem that faces not labor alone, or industry alone, but the entire nation."

Longshore Maps Policies to Speed War

San Francisco, July 22—An analysis of the current status of manpower utilization in the Pacific Coast longshore industry was submitted this week by the CIO Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union to the Pacific Coast Maritime Industry Board with recommendations that will "substantially aid in the full prosecution of the war."

"A manpower crisis faces the Pacific Coast longshore industry today," the Union's memorandum stated. "It is partly a false shortage that can be met and overcome if the proper steps are taken to fully utilize existing civilian labor forces."

The union recommended that a single committee representative of the Army, Navy, War Shipping administration and the respective union and employer organizations signatory to the labor agreement governing the industry, be established.

The purpose of such an overall committee would be: to consult on the allocation of ships and cargoes to Pacific Coast ports; to establish definite procedures and mechanics for moving experienced registered longshoremen from port to port; to recommend to the Natl. Housing Agency that suitable housing facilities be made available for the exclusive use of longshoremen and their families; to recommend to the War Food Administration that in congested port areas in-pier feeding facilities be established for longshoremen and related maritime workers; to investigate the possibility of establishing a minimum weekly wage guarantee; and to consult on any proposed changes in operational methods employed in the loading and discharging of vessels that would speed up the turnaround of ships.

CIO Award To Honor Contribution To Vets

NEW YORK, July 22—An annual John A. Bushemi award, named in honor of a CIO Newspaper Guild cameraman who was killed in action in the Marshall Islands, will be awarded shortly by the Natl. CIO War Relief Committee to the CIO union making the most outstanding contribution to the welfare of American veterans.

The award will be a silver plaque carrying the inscription: "To the men and women of the (name of union) who have honored the American soldier by their outstanding service in behalf of the American veteran."

Before entering the army, where he served as a combat photographer for Yank, the army magazine, Sgt. Bushemi was staff photographer on the Gary, Ind., Post-Tribune and was a member of the Newspaper Guild. He comes from a union family, his father and brothers being members of the CIO Steelworkers.

Sgt. Marion Hargrove, author of the best seller, "See Here, Private Hargrove," in which Sgt. Bushemi was a principle character, sent his "heartiest congratulations" to the National CIO War Relief Committee on their foundation of the award.

SGT. BUSHEMI

Posthumously awarded the Bronze Star medal "for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against the enemy," Sgt. Bushemi had served in campaigns on New Georgia, Guadalcanal, Munda, Vella Lavella, Tarawa and Kwajalein before he was killed at Eniwetok.

Postwar Plan Democratic 'Must'—UAW

Washington, July 22—The pattern of the postwar world is already taking shape and "may be completely solidified by the time the war is actually over" warns a pamphlet, "Fruits of Victory, Poverty or Plenty," published by the CIO United Auto Workers union.

If economic democracy and the political democracy which depends upon it are to survive after the war, points out the UAW pamphlet, "the American people must learn to control the distribution of purchasing power and the accumulation of wealth."

To do this, it states, America must: Have a wage policy deliberately designed to put adequate purchasing power into the hands of the workers; keep prices within reach of the people's ability to buy; have a tax program borne by those most able to pay; enlarge the volume of purchasing power through government expenditures and encourage consumer-oriented programs and business structures such as cooperatives and credit unions.

"We must plan these programs on a continuous basis," concluded the pamphlet, "so that from here on in, the people will have at their command the purchasing power necessary to provide jobs for workers, customers for business and industry—comfort, security and peace."

'How High Is Up'—New CIO Pamphlet

Washington, July 22—A new CIO pamphlet called "How High Is Up" will be ready for circulation next week. It presents in brief popular form, facts and figures showing that a 45.3 per cent chunk has been taken out of the pay of America's workers by an increase in the cost of living during the past three years.

"How High Is Up" gives the highlights of a 76-page report in popular, simple language, enlivened with illustrations. It may be obtained from the CIO Publicity Department, 718 Jackson Place, Washington 6, D. C., price 10c a copy, 100 for $5.50, 500 for $20. The complete 76-page report is 50c a copy.

Red Cross Does Swell Job, CIO Man Says

CUMBERLAND, Md., July 22—"That question is the easiest one I have ever had to answer," was the response Claude McIntire of Local 26, United Rubber Workers of America, CIO, received this week from his soldier son when he requested first-hand information as to "what the Red Cross is doing for our boys."

"Take it from the time we started overseas," Pvt. Charles McIntyre wrote from England. "At the port of embarkation, the Red Cross was on hand although it was late at night. They were giving the soldiers hot coffee, cookies, and candy bars. This helped us all very much, not because we were hungry, but just to know they were doing it for us. It made departure much easier."

"After we had been at sea several days, each fellow was given a carton of cigarettes that some club or company had donated to the Red Cross to give out. Next they gave us a cloth bag filled with a lot of useful things.

"The day we disembarked, they again had hot coffee and doughnuts for us, and gave us the first copy of a newspaper we had seen for weeks. This time we were hungry, tired and worn out from our long journey, and the coffee sure put new life into us all.

"Since that day, the Red Cross has been by best friend over here," he continued, describing their services in obtaining lodging and furnishing meals and recreation for the soldiers on furloughs and passes, and serving coffee, doughnuts, cigarettes, and chewing gum from the clubmobiles at camp. "They tell us it's not from the Red Cross, but from the folks back home, which is true.

"Being in the hospital at Christmas time, I really got to see the Red Cross girls work long and hard hours to see that everyone got candy and cigarettes around Christmas Eve and sang carols which made some feel good inside and others homesick.

"There are many things the Red Cross does that I have not mentioned, but it does not take very much to convince anyone of the wonderful work they are doing over here and every other place where GIs are located."

NMU Asks Wage Hikes

New York, July 22—Granting of wage increases to seamen now "is a sound postwar investment" for shipowners, the national council of the Natl. Maritime Union said in a resolution approved at its semi-annual meeting here.

Pay raises will stabilize the maritime manpower market in wartime and will also guarantee shipowners "a stable highly skilled manpower supply at the end of the war, which will put them in a most advantageous position to resume private operation in the expanded postwar market," the council asserted. Furthermore, a stable postwar economy requires an increase in the consumer power of all the American people, it said.

The manpower utilization program outlined by the council also called for accelerated upgrading of experienced seamen and use of union hiring halls and the War Shipping Administration's recruitment & Manning Organization for controlling employment.

Hit AFL Talk on Intl. Harvester

Washington, July 22—CIO members of the Natl. War Labor Board this week denied that the Board had either nullified or modified the maintenance of mmebership provision at any of the Intl. Harvester plants as satted by the AFL members of the board.

The CIO members described as "false and misleading" the AFL members' statement that the CIO Farm Equipment Workers had been guilty of "misconduct" in an organizing drive at Intl. Harvester.

The CIO members charged the AFL members with committing a "provocative and irresponsible act" in issuing their statement which "is bound to cause confusion and strained labor relations."

Although the AFL requested modification of the maintenance of membership provision at Intl. Harvester, the CIO members said that "the Board flatly refused to grant the request."

The Board decided only to send a letter to the unions involved declaring that the AFL "is no longer bound to refrain from soliciting or accepting as members employes of the company at the plants for which the Farm Equipment Workers has been certified and that it is free from any obligation to refain from seeking rights of representation at any such plants."

There was no warrant or excuse, the CIO members stated, for interpreting this language as a nullification of the maintenance of membership clause now in effect."

Predict Argentine Attack On Uruguay

Montevideo, July 22 (ALN)—An attack on Uruguay by the Argentine Colonel's Lodge (GOU) is possible at any moment, it is believed here, following reports that about a week ago the so-called nationalist militia now training in Entre Rios province, which borders on Uruguay, landed on an unidentified Uruguayan island on the Uruguay River and hoisted the Argentine flag.

The militia, which is being carefully drilled and trained, is said to have withdrawn shortly afterwards and to have taken the flag with them. This is considered as a possible rehearsal for forthcoming actions.

At the same time, an influx of Argentine tourists in Uruguay is noted. The strong nationalist influence in Argentina continues to grow, particularly in the army, despite the resignation last week of Gen. Luis Cesar Perlinger, most outspoken nationalist, as Minister of the Interior. The ascendance of GOU Chief Col. Juan D. Peron to the presidency in the near future is reported from Buenos Aires.

Events throughout Latin America make clear that the GOU is casting shadows on the entire continent. This week's kidnaping of President Alfonso Lopez of Colombia is said here to indicate the spread of the GOU's contamination. The local pro-Argentine nationalist newspaper El Debate enthusiastically welcomed the attempted coup in Colombia with the headline "Eighth Tyrant Overthrown."

Says Rep. Hoffman Is Master 'Smear' Artist

Benton Harbor, Mich.—Answering Rep. Clare Hoffman's charges of CIO "smearing," Irving Richter, CIO United Auto Workers national legislative representative, described Hoffman as an expert in smear techniques in a speech before UAW Local 709, in Allegan, Mich., Rep. Hoffman's home town.

"A smear is anything Hoffman can't answer, or doesn't choose to answer," Richeter said.

Colombian Kidnap Plotters Tied To Fascist Falange

Bogota, Colombia, July 22 (ALN) President Alfonso Lopez, who returned here Wednesday after failure of a military plot to seize his government, named Dr. Laureano Gomez, head of the Conservative party and a Falange leader, as instigator of the plot. Before Dr. Lopez's return, acting-President Dario Echandia removed Gomez from membership in the Foreign Relations Commission, thus revoking his immunity to prosecution.

Speaking to a demonstration of more than 50,000 persons assembled before the Presidential Palace, Dr. Lopez thanked the citizens of Bogota for their support and declared that reaction will not succeed in overthrowing Colombian democracy. He praised the overwhelming majority of the army as loyal and said that only a small minority of army officials were involved in the rebellion.

Dr. Lopez, who was kidnaped by Col. Diogenes Gil while reviewing a military parade in Pasto, department of Narino, was freed by loyal army forces and the people of Consaca, a hamlet near Pasto. The President himself seized Gil and his aides.

The subversive movement, initiated in Pasto and extended to Ibaque and Bucaramanga, has been completely suppressed. The rebellion in Pasto was crushed after a short fight by loyal army men and with the aid of the local population.

Throughout the country demonstrations in support of the President took place both during and after his rescue. Led by the Confederation of Colombian Workers (CTC), the President's own liberal party and the Communist party, the demonstrations pledged unrestricted aid to Dr. Lopez' regime and pledged to work with the army and local police.

Inside Story Of Soviet Guerilla Warfare Against Nazi Army

BY RAYMOND ARTHUR DAVIES

MINSK, July 22 (ALN)—Most of the Soviet guerrilla detachments, which kept the Germans out of more than 80 per cent of Byelo-Russia during the period of enemy occupation and rendered tremendous military assistance to the Red army in its offensive, were led by working men and trade union members. The astonishing facts about these partisans, who in the Minsk region alone numbered about 60,000, are now coming to light.

This correspondent spent many hours this week discussing the operations of two partisan brigades with their leaders, electrician Georgi Mashkov and metallurgical engineer Savell Leshchenia. Also present was Minsk railway worker Alexander Sarkevich, who edited the partisan newspaper which did not miss a single issue during its entire existence. The printing press was never discovered by the Germans, despite furious efforts and the offering of huge monetary prizes to informers.

"From the very first days of German occupation," Mashkov said, "the people rose up against the enemy. Even in the very beginning, when advance sections of German troops were moving ahead, the workers and farmers took apart bridges and wrecked highways."

A tall, determined-looking man, Mashkov told his story before many members of guerrilla brigades and world press correspondents, in a house near Minsk, taken only two days before. The roar of airplane motors could be heard; in the distance, came the crackle of machine-gun fire and the roar of a heavy gun or the explosion of a bomb. These were the Soviet troops going after the Germans surrounded in the forest.

The front line was many miles west, but the Germans, not knowing the situation, were trying to break through to Minsk, hoping to find safety there.

"There are plenty of arms for all of us now," Mashkov said. "But when we started, there were no weapons. It was not until July, 1941, that we found some rifles and bullets. It was hard and we lacked experience. We watched the battlefields on which the Red Army was trying to stem the German advance. After the battles, we would emerge and take whatever weapons were left on the field.

GUERRILLAS GAIN STRENGTH

By the fall, our guerrillas were stronger. In September and October, 1941, we watched highways and side roads and attacked isolated motorcyclists and cars. This added to our experience and gave us some weapons. We managed to buy some guns and hand grenades. Some bandit German soldiers were always glad to swap guns and grenades for eggs. For 10 eggs, the partisans obtained as many as three rifles and cartridges. A tommygun was worth a kilogram of bacon.

"All through 1942, the partisan movement kept growing. By the middle of the summer, each detachment was gaining from 10 to 12 members daily. As soon as there were four to eight detachments, brigades were formed with as many as 300 to 400 men in each detachment and 1,200 to 3,200 men in each brigade."

Calif. Plane Layoffs, Pay Cuts Threat to Unions

BY HERBERT KLEIN

LOS ANGELES, July 15—Alarming shrinkage in the number of workers employed in California airplane plants is forcing union action to counteract management's "silent layoff" policies.

The major companies here and in San Diego have pursued a slick method of shrinking their payrolls without any large amount of actual "firing," so that today employment in the state's "airframe" plants is down some 50,000, or 20 percent, since 15 months ago, and perhaps 40,000, or 16 percent, since a year ago.

Deliberate policy of the companies has brought heaviest decreases in the employment of older workers, women, Negroes and other minorities.

The silent layoff works like this:

1. New hiring is reduced below the level of "quits," so a steady reduction in personnel results.

2. The rate of "quits" is stepped up by tactics ranging from simple shabby treatment to outright provocation of workers whose services the companies wish to dispense with.

These provocative acts have been accompanied by a "take it or leave us" attitude—and many workers have left.

DIMINISHING MANPOWER

Result: the following picture of diminishing manpower on the job in Los Angeles and San Diego plants: April, 1943—274,000; November, 1943—252,000; May, 1944—232,000; beginning of July, 1944.... 222,000 (approximately).

The major companies are responsible for a large part of the high quit rate because of their stiff-necked opposition to the over-all wage increase proposals which all aircraft unions unite in supporting—the CIO United Auto Workers, AFL Machinists and independent Welders.

The high turnover rate and the excess of "quits" over "hires" has raised vast barriers in the path of union organization and action for betterment of the situation:—

1. The provocations of management—especially those involving witholding of wage increases or outright wage cuts—have multiplied the number of grievance cases, swamping the union's facilities for dealing with them in an orderly way.

2. Union membership has been swept away too in the flood of workers lost through high turnover, thus forcing constant organizational drives.

3. Workers who have been provoked into quitting because of abuses, have lost their seniority rights.

4. Companies have bucked the unions at every bend in the road during the past several months, throwing simple cases into arbitration, blocking arbitration to the WLB, and then appealing WLB awards. Only a policy of union-busting by attrition could account for such stiff-necked anti-cooperation.

The UAW has accepted the challenge of the companies with whom it deals—Douglas, North American, etc.—with the following program:

1. Searching out of grievance cases by the shop stewards before the workers involved can get disgusted and quit.

2. Carrying all legitimate grievances to management by means of a greatly expanded grievance machinery.

3. Launching of the biggest organizational drive thus far attempted on the coast.

4. Using all government agency facilities and decisions to block the wage-cutting campaign.

PAC Ads Ask Funds To Help Win Election

NEW YORK, July 22—"This is your fight, Americans!" is the challenge issued by the newly-created Natl. Citizens Political Action Committee to workers, farmers, business and professional men and women in a series of newspaper ads appealing for contributions to carry on the home front fight for "total victory, lasting peace, full production and full employment."

The ads, appearing in more than 30 papers throughout the country, state that the "Old Guard has patched together the Republican platform—the same old privileges for the few, and no hope for the rest of us. The Old Guard has picked its candidates—the same old stooges for Hooverism and the Old Deal," and "they are raising huge campaign funds—millions on millions—to elect their candidates.

"This new Committee needs funds," the ads state, "funds to register and get out the vote on Election Day. Funds to present the cause of progress, and jobs for all, to the people. Funds to help candidates, irrespective of party, who stand for total victory, a just and durable peace, and full employment." The election of Roosevelt and a progressive Congress is the only way this can be achieved, the appeal states.

Contributions should be mailed to the National Citizens Political Action Committee, 205 East 42nd St., New York 17, New York.

CIO Takes Wage Security Issue to American People

WASHINGTON, July 22—The CIO went to the American public this week to present its position on two major problems affecting the immediate welfare of a great majority of the people.

The CIO's position on a guaranteed annual wage for America's working men and women, and the effects of frozen wages under the out-dated Little Steel Formula, was presented this week in two advertisements appearing in 70 daily papers throughout the country.

The ad on frozen wages and unstabilized prices gets at the heart of the disastrous results of the broken six points of the President's seven-point stabilization program with a housewife seeking to balance her budget but giving up in frustration with the simple but all-important conclusion: "I try so hard . . . but I just can't make ends meet!" Since January, 1941, the actual cost of living has been permitted to increase 45 per cent, with wages frozen by the Little Steel formula, the ad points out.

The ad states that in fairness to all "wages should be adjusted to bring them in line with today's cost of living. Then all seven points, under the re-established line, must be rigidly held through strict control of prices, rationing and profits along with continued stabilization of wages."

"A Common Sense Plan for Prosperity" is the title of the ad on a guaranteed annual wage, which puts "purchasing power into the hands of the people without giving them charity . . . building a post-war world on common sense . . . placing a firm foundation under every wage earner, his family and his children," the ad states.

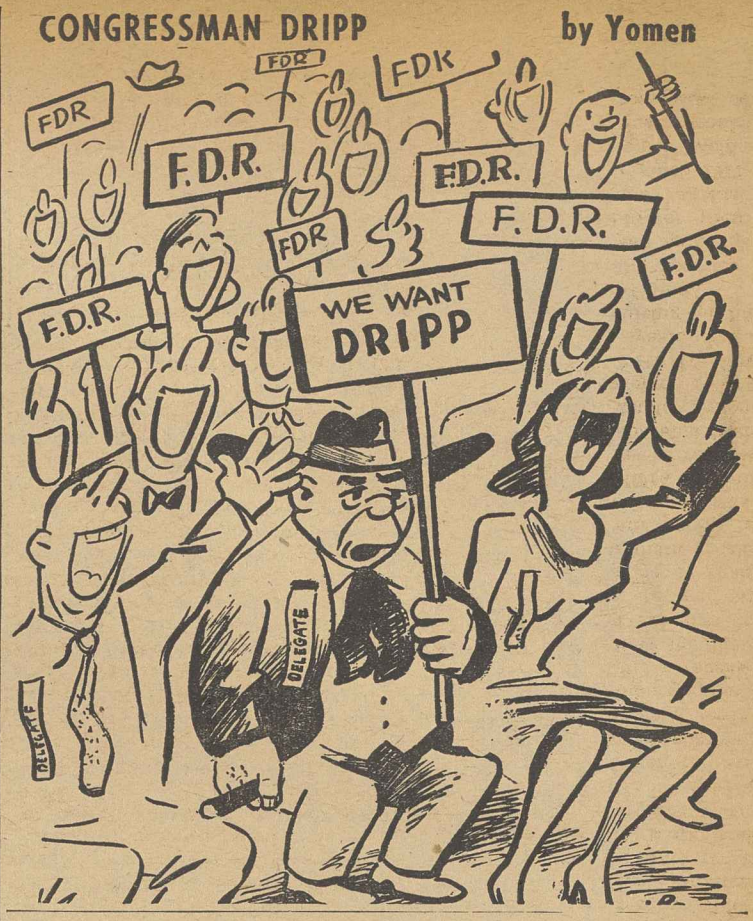
The guaranteed annual wage means relief from worry for the homemakers, a steady job for the wage earners, sound credit for the merchants and stimulated business through moss purchasing power for the community, the ad points out..

PAC Names Woman Field Representative

New York, July 22—Miss Anne Mason, newspaperwoman, teacher and Negro welfare worker, has been appointd a field representative for the Women's Division of the CIO Political Action Committee, it was announced this week by PAC chairman Sidney Hillman.

Miss Mason is from Cincinnati, where she was staff correspondent for the Pittsburgh Courier and a teacher in the public schools.

As chairman of Cincinnati's "Double V" Council, she worked in cooperation with CIO unions toward the integration of Negro women into industry and the elimination of unfair and discriminatory practices.



CIO Textile Man Wins GI Gallantry Award

WASHINGTON—For exposing himself to enemy fire and talking a numerically-superior unit of enemy troops into surrendering after he and other members of his company had been almost completely encircled, German-born Sgt. Richard F. Stern, 45-year-old member of CIO Textile Workers Local 179 in New York, has been awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action by the War Dept.

"During the assault Jan. 7, 1944, on Mt. Porchio, Italy," his citation reads, "Sgt. Stern and other members of his company were pinned down by enemy machine gun and rifle fire. A complete enemy encirclement seemed imminent."

"Standing erect in full view of an enemy machine gun nest, Sgt. Stern demanded in German that the opposing force surrender. Although the machine gunners refused and resumed fire, Sgt. Stern stood erect until ordered to take cover.

"Later in the engagement," the citation continues, "the forward elements of the company were ambushed, and several men were wounded. Seeking once more to save the situation by ruse, Sgt. Stern ran from the center of the contested area, shouting to the enemy and to his own men to cease fire. He then persuaded the enemy troops that they were surrounded, and further resistance was useless. At this point six members of the ambush party dropped their weapons and surrendered.

"Sgt. Stern's coolness and presence of mind under fire enabled his company to continue its advance."

Although he was entitled to obtain a release from the army because of his age, Sgt. Stern preferred to remain in service. His sister, Mrs. Martha Romberg of New York, explained that he passed up the opportunity to return to civilian status "because of his fervent desire to fight the Nazis and to pay back for the terrible injuries the Nazis have inflicted upon him, our family and the whole human race."

enemy without American labor's magnificent efforts on the home-front, which have provided them with materials of war. They have wholehearted respect for the achievements on production lines during the past two years.

There has been much criticism in the armed forces of "strikes." The general feeling is that production should continue without interruption so that the day may be hastened when internal home problems can get primary attention.

UNION GIs

Q.: What kind of fighters do men with trade union backgrounds make?

A.: It's my observation they make well-disciplined, determined, tenacious fighters — because of their clearly defined understanding of the advantages and responsibilities of the democratic way of life. They fight with deeper conviction than those accepting democracy's benefits as a right which they understand nebulously, feeling indebted to none.

STATEMENT FOR HOME

Q.: In view of the admiration and respect your name commands among American workers, have you a statement for union men and women?

A.: In solving problems, my adage is do first things first. Our paramount problem as Americans is to win the war as quickly as possible. In order to accomplish this it is incumbent on all American citizens to work together with utmost harmony, with all the intelligence, talent and energy each possesses.

I am unable to recommend a better slogan for the home front or the armed services than that I gave my raider battalion: "Gung-ho" (Chinese for "work in harmony"). It implies the obligation of each individual to consciously remove all points of friction with his comrades which might impair cooperation with them. It implies tolerance of ideas; of individual foibles, eccentricities; and racial and religious tolerance.

Many years of observation and experience convince me that no power on earth can match power of a people honestly living and practicing the tenets of true democracy. However, it must be remembered that the democratic pattern of life imposes serious responsibilities on the individual citizen—including self-discipline. One chief difference between a fascist state and democracy is: In the former a small ruling class imposes discipline, whereas in a democracy it must be self-imposed by each citizen. Only thus can there be orderly, effective government by the people.

FEARS OF SOLDIERS

Q.: What concerns and fears regarding home conditions are most indicated by the United States fighters in areas where you have seen service?

A.: Life's pretty grim to young Americans in the throes of battle. It's shorn of all frills and superficialities and reduced to fundamentals of life and death. These men offering themselves for sacrifice are primarily concerned with defeating the enemy and getting home. They are a good deal concerned with the apparent easy, carefree attitude of home folks towards war and towards the institution of freedom which is at stake.

They are naturally concerned with postwar economic security for themselves and their families. Mostly they have learned to think straight and to value truth and honesty in dealing with each other.

They are suspicious of leaders speaking in terms of generalities as well as in the evasive language of diplomacy. They've become accustomed to meeting problems squarely and unflinchingly, and to speaking straight from the shoulder. They are accustomed to sharing things sustaining life, as well as dangers and hardships. Hence, their greatest concern is for plain speaking honest planning and action in the postwar world which will assure the greatest welfare for all the people, because each realizes his own welfare is inseparable from the welfare of the whole nation.

Another question referred to the situation in China, where Lt. Col. Carlson spent many years as a military observer, resulting in his book, "Twin Stars of China."

"The world," he said, "particularly America, is deeply indebted to the Chinese people for their magnificent resistance against Japanese imperialism since 1937. But for this resistance our Pacific position visavis the enemy would be quite different from that of today."

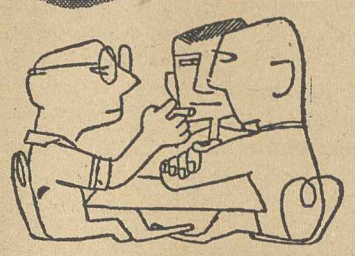
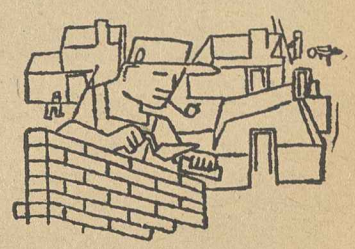
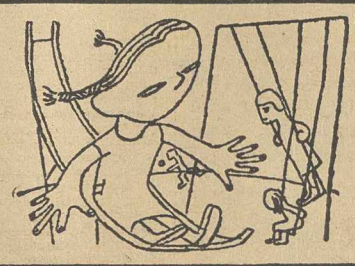
THE ROOSEVELT RECORD

JOB LINES, NOT BREAD LINES





UNION RECOGNITION



HOMES FOR WORKERS

CHILDREN'S "NEW DEAL"

FARMERS' SALVATION

FINANCIAL REFORMS | VAST PUBLIC WORKS

The Roosevelt record is one of continual aid to the American people. Under Roosevelt, workers' lines replaced bread lines. Employment rose from 37 to 45 millions. The Wagner Act ushered in collective bargaining. Labor's rights were recognized and protected. Low-cost housing for workers followed. The HOLC saved a million homes.

In the Republican 20's, child labor, slums and sweat shops were rampant. Under Roosevelt, the Fair Labor Standards Act reduced child labor. Slum clearance projects gave the children play space and sunshine. Under the Farm Security Administration, 950,000 small farmers were freed from the shackles of farm tenancy. Climaxed by Hoover, bank failures totaled 5,770. Roosevelt restored confidence, eliminated failures and insured all depositors. "Public works for the people's benefit" said Roosevelt. The New Deal did this. Remember the reduced electric rates the TVA brought?

U. S. Weapons OK, Says Wounded CIO War Vet

WASHINGTON, July 29—It's bouquets for the Army's 60 mm. mortar from Pvt. Mike Gaza, a member of the CIO United Steelworkers at U. S. Steel's Clairton, Pa., plant before he enlisted in the Army three years ago. Gaza learned the hard way, in a year's service overseas, to evaluate guns and weapons, both American and German.

Now at Walter Reed General Hospital in Washington, D. C., Pvt. Gaza is learning to walk on an artificial leg and hopes to be released soon and go back to steel mill work.

"The 60 mm. mortar," according to Gaza, "will put anything in a 100-yard radius out of business. I had the same mortar in five months' fighting in Africa and towards the end its spring was weak and the mechanism worn, but it always performed accurately for me. A mortar and 60 shells would knock out 20 machine guns because you would be absolutely sure you'd get each one on the third try.

"American soldiers are proud of their weapons," Gaza explained, "but they don't underestimate German products. They know they are deadly and dependable. The Germans prepared for this war long before we did. It's going to take a lot of guns and a lot of shells to lick them.

"My former buddies in the CIO and the other men and women who are manufacturing war supplies are doing a fine job. Tell them to keep the stuff rolling."

In November, the ship carrying him to Algiers for the African invasion was torpedoed. He was taken to land by a rescue vessel, and fought with the infantry up to the final attack in April that ran the Germans out of Africa.

That attack cost Gaza his left leg. After being hit by a German shell he lay on the battlefield for two days and one night, dead and wounded soldiers all around him.

Medics gave him morphine and applied a tourniquet but stretcher bearers and ambulances could not remove the wounded because of German artillery on a nearby hill.

The Democrats Need More of 'Em!

Washington, July 29 — Chalk up Hobart H. Hart as possessor of the strongest political convictions in the nation!

Hart, principal storekeeper at the Quartermaster Depot at nearby Cameron, Va., walked into the CIO United Federal Workers' office this week, saw he was among friends, although he is not a union member, and informed UFW officials that he wants to get released from his job because under Hatch Act restrictions he can't campaign for FDR while employed by the federal government.

The War Dept. has denied Hart a statement of availability needed for him to take another job. He is appealing the decision to the U. S. Employment Service, with the UFW intervening as a "friend in court."

CIO 100% For Truman—Murray, Hillman, Thomas

CHICAGO, July 29—CIO Pres. Philip Murray declared he was "eminently satisfied" with the nomination of Senator Harry S. Truman for Vice President, at a press conference immediately following the Democratic party convention. Truman has "an excellent labor record," he said. His statement was strongly seconded by Chairman Sidney Hillman of the CIO Political Action Committee and by Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO United Auto Workers Union.

"We are deeply conscious of the fact that liberal elements in the Democratic party made splendid progress in this convention," Murray continued.

"The party is presenting two liberal candidates in President Roosevelt and Senator Truman.

"It shall be the avowed purpose of the CIO to lend every possible degree of support to elect them."

Hillman joined Murray in his statements and outlined plans for the election campaign.

He said that present funds of the CIO-PAC, which came from union treasuries, will be "frozen" until after the elections, in order not to conflict with legal restrictions on the political use of such funds once federal candidates have been nominated.

VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTIONS

The CIO-PAC will be financed during the campaign by individual voluntary contributions from CIO members, with 50c of each dollar contributed being retained by local committees.

The newly-formed National Citizens Political Action Committee, will be financed by individual contributions from persons outside the CIO, Hillman said. This committee will meet in New York early in August, possibly August 5, to draw up its own plans for the campaign.

THOMAS HAILS TRUMAN

Thomas later joined Murray and Hillman in a strong endorsement of the selection of Truman.

"The CIO never opposed Truman even while it fought for Henry Wallace," Thomas said. "We know Truman from first-hand dealings with him, to be an honest, hard-working, progressive man.

"His work on the Truman Committee, his campaign for a modification of the wage freeze, his fight for such vital legislation as the Kilgore reconversion bill, price control, FEPC, and the Farm Security Administration, show him to be one of the handful of genuine liberals in the present Senate.

Thomas asserted that "labor is waking up politically, along with the rest of the American people. That spells victory for Roosevelt," he added.

"The Democratic convention showed this awakening. The CIO was but a minority among hundreds of delegates who fought for Wallace. They all recognized that Wallace had become the target of Roosevelt's enemies. As Senator Pepper pointed out, Wallace carried in his back many daggers which were meant for Roosevelt.

"We are proud that the CIO fought and worked for Wallace. We are proud that our work helped prevent the nomination of a candidate by a handful of Southern Bourbons."

W. Va. Parley Hears Officials Hail CIO

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., July 29—Some 300 delegates attending the West Virginia State CIO Council convention held here this week heard their Governor and one of their U. S. Senators praise labor's war efforts and stress the importance of political action.

Senator Harley M. Kilgore, sponsor of the CIO-supported Reconversion Bill that bears his name, stressed the importance to labor of postwar plans and praised labor's efforts on both the home and the fighting fronts. He urged labor to work actively to send progressive representatives to Congress in order to hold and add to labor's gains.

GOVERNOR HAILS LABOR

Gov. M. M. Neely praised labor highly, especially the CIO, for the way it has measured up during the present crisis, and called upon the big interests to do their full share as labor is doing.

Referring to the CIO Steelworkers organizing drive at Weirton Steel, Neely declared that as long as he was governor, the state police would protect the workers in their efforts to organize.

CIO Vice-President Allan S. Haywood told the delegates of the CIO's fight in political and organization fields and stressed the importance of protecting their unions and strengthening them to meet postwar problms.

State Council President John B. Easton stressed the necessity of political action to protect labor's rights and to safeguard legislation passed in recent years. Easton was later elected as delegate to the coming National CIO convention.

The present Council officers will remain in office during the coming year, as they were elected for a two-year term at last year's convention.

Urge Re-hearing On Bridges Case

SAN FRANCISCO, July 29—Failure of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals to weigh properly the evidence in the Harry Bridges deportation proceedings was cited today by attorneys for the West Coast CIO leader in requesting a rehearing.

The petition, which cited seven reasons as legal grounds for having the Circuit Court review the case, declared the three judges submitting the majority opinion erred in replying on "any" and "some" evidence instead of "substantial" evidence in ruling against Mr. Bridges.

Counsel for Bridges filed the petition 30 days after the court had handed down a 3-2 split decision upholding the deportation order of Attorney General Francis A. Biddle.

Action on the petition will determine if the case will be taken immediately to the U. S. Supreme Court or will be reargued before the lower court.

Many court decisions were cited in the petition in support of the contention of the Bridges defense that the same rule of evidence should apply in deportation matters as governs other administrative agencies of the Federal government.

Listed as additional reasons for asking the rehearing were:

1. Error of the court in accepting the testimony of James O'Neil, convicted perjurer, whom the defense had no opportunity of cross examining.

2. Denial of equal protection of the laws in holding Bridges deportable because of alleged affiliation with the Marine Workers Industrial Union. (Except in the Bridges case, affiliation with the MWIU has never been grounds for deportation.)

3. Failure of the Attorney General to permit briefs or verbal arguments before over-ruling the Board of Immigration appeals which had, by unanimous decision, found Bridges innocent on all charges.

New 'Comic' On Postwar

Washington, July 29 — The CIO Education and Research Dept. has just issued an eight-page, four-color pamphlet done in "comic" stripe style and dealing with reconversion problems.

The pamphlet, "With Victory," is issued with an aim of reaching "many who would not ordinarily study a lengthier and more serious presentation," according to J. Raymond Walsh, Dept. director.

Based on the CIO Post-War Planning Committee's recommendations as embodied in the pamphlet "As We Win," the pamphlet will be mailed to a selected list of more than 42,000 leaders of public opinion.

"With Victory" creates the characters of Joe Worker and his family, including Brother Bob in the South Pacific, and through a series of 40 some scenes has them discuss the possibilities of a prosperous post-war world.

WEAPON FOR DEMOCRACY

Negro Press Is Close To People's Problems

By ERNEST CALLOWAY

WASHINGTON, July 29—Westbrook Pegler, top dog among the labor-baiters, took a short holiday two years ago from his regular swill columns against the New Deal, Mrs. Roosevelt and labor, to launch upon a sneak attack against the Negro press. He unconsciously did more to awaken Negro editors and newspapermen to the fact that the enemies of labor and progress were the same people who maintained bargain counters in race prejudices, anti-Semitism and group division in our national community.

Pegler's inadvertent exposure of the combination of reaction and intolerence, plus the continuous tirades of Southern congressmen against labor and the Negro, have aided greatly in breaking down the isolation and mutual ignorance of each other's presence that has existed between areas of the labor movement and the Negro press.

Today the growing bond between the two gives evidence of the new role of cooperation both must play in the progressive extension of democracy.

By way of figures and reader extent, there are 230 Negro newspapers with a total circulation of 2,500,000.

The "Big Three" of the Negro press are the Pittsburgh Courier (circulation, 229,720), the Baltimore Afro-American (circulation, 200,000) and the Chicago Defender (circulation, 167,000).

Large national circulation plays an important part in the circulation figures of these three papers. The Courier prints several editions in various sections of the country where circulation warrants it, and today more or less dominates the Middle West.

In similar fashion, but with independent news, advertising and circulation staffs in several cities along the eastern seaboard, the Afro-American gets into more homes in this area than any other newspaper.

The Chicago Defender prints a local and national edition. It has the right of way in that highly important industrial center and has a large circulation in the South. The Courier and the Defender vie with each other for the West Coast reader market.

SMALLER PAPERS

Trailing these three papers in circulation, which is confined mostly to their home areas, are the Norfolk Journal and Guide (51,000), the New York Amsterdam Star-News (48,000), the popular tabloid New York Peoples Voice (45,000), the Houston, Tex., Informer (30,000), the New York Age (29,000), the Michigan Chronicle (25,000) and the Chicago Bee.

Community pressure plays a much more important role in the policies of the Negro newspaper than it does in the daily paper. It serves primarily as an interpretative news source and is free of the many "entertainment" features that play an important part in the circulation of the daily paper.

Its greater dependence on subscription and sale income than on huge advertising revenues is another significant factor in its susceptibility to community pressures. Here, editor and publisher, for the most part, must maintain a constant vigil in the community for new trends and group reaction and seek to reflect and interpret these developments.

UNION INFLUENCE

The growing influence of the trade union movement in the Negro community is reflected in the sympathetic news handling and editorial treatment of activities of CIO unions and other progressive trade union organizations.

It is highly significant that three Negro publishers are members of the new National Citizens Political Action Committee. They are Roscoe Dungee of the Oklahoma City Black Dispatch, Carter Wesley of the Houston Informer and P. B. Young of the Norfolk Journal and Guide.

THE FACTS of life on a war worker's budget were told to a panel of the War Labor Board by Mrs. Walter Zach, wife of a CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers member. Mr. and Mrs. Zach, with Robert, 5, and Barbara, 18 months old, brought living testimony of the need for a wage raise in hearings on UE's Weshtinghouse case.

The Facts Of Life On $42.50 A Week

BY C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, July 29—Barbara Zach sat quietly on a big chair in the green and gold hearing room at the War Labor Board this week. She looked around and saw men—lots of them—leaning forward and listening to a familiar voice.

Barbara Zach is 18 months old. Her mother was talking to the men, telling them about Barbara's clothes and her food and the way the doctor charged more nowadays. Barbara's mother was saying:

"Our food and clothes cost so much I don't know what to do. The clothes are just terrible. I haven't bought myself any clothes this year—we can't afford it. But I have to buy clothes for the children.

EXHIBIT A

"A simple little pinafore that I used to buy for 75 cents or a dollar costs more than two dollars, and the material is just like cheesecloth, it's so flimsy. I used to buy her panties for 20 cents and they were good ones. Now they cost 50 cents and they are just no good. I have to buy several pairs of them at a time and the expense means a lot to us. Look . . . "

Barbara's mother picked her up, turned her over to show the members of the WLB panel just what she meant, heard people laugh and one of the men at the head of the table say: "We'll take your word for it."

Barbara, though she probably didn't know it, was a star witness for daddy's union, the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, in its first presentation of its case before a panel of the War Labor Board for a 17-cent wage increase, for a guaranteed annual wage, and for other points in line with CIO's wage policy to meet the skyrocketing cost of living.

The demands, presented by a battery of UE leaders including Pres. Albert J. Fitzgerald, Secy.-Treas. Julius Emspak, Counsel David Scribner, Reps. Neil Brant and Eddie Matthews, will go from the "fact-finding" panel of three men to the full WLB, as the demands of the Steelworkers and other CIO unions have done.

FITZGERALD OPENS

Introducing the case, Fitzgerald wasted no time in bringing Barbara, her father and mother and other rank and filers up to the table to tell the WLB just why UE members, along with all other workers, need a raise to keep going.

"You've all read in the newspapers a great deal of statistical information about the rising cost of living, full of figures and percentages, indices and tables, as if the whole question were an argument among statisticians," he said.

"I want you to hear direct from some typical Westinghouse employes what our wage demands mean to them, not in terms of statistics and percentages, but as it affects their struggle to make ends meet."

The next witness was Barbara's father, laying it down cold turkey to the panel and completely demolishing the myth that war workers' wages are up on the silk shirt level.

"I can't bring home enough pay, even working 48 hours a week, to take care of my family's expenses," he said. "My wife keeps telling me she has to have more money to run the house. With the wage freeze I have to keep telling her that I can't get it. I certainly need that 17 cents an hour."

And here's what another Westinghouse worker, UE member John Gorman of Hillside, N. J., had to add to Zach's testimony and to the more formal presentation of the UE's case by Fitzgerald and Emspak:

"I used to buy a pair of overalls for $1.98," he said. "They were guaranteed not to tear. I had to buy a pair only a few weeks ago. They cost me $2.98, and I tore a big rip in the leg the first day I had them on. I was so mad I wanted to sue the company that made them.

"I used to buy safety shoes, with steel toes. Now, if you can find them, they cost half again as much as they did. I used to get new soles and heels on my shoes for a dollar and they would last me six months. The last time I had it done they cost me $2.25 and the soles wore out in two months."

Summing up in a story of a losing fight to keep up with the cost of living on frozen wages, Gorman said:

"When I went to work for Westinghouse three years ago, I had $300 in the bank. Now I'm down to $8."

ANNUAL WAGE

The UE argument for the guaranteed annual wage was presented to the panel by Emspak, who pictured it as the key to the nation's security now in winning the war and after the victory.

"United Nations victories bring tne question of security more and more to the forefront," he said. "This security, won through the guaranteed annual wage, will step up war production by removing the fear of insecurity that haunts all workers today—and will haunt them more as the cutbacks in war orders mount up.

"The guaranteed annual wage is no glorified relief proposition. It can be a success only if all workers are in productive work, not in made work or relief.

"No country can hope to gather the fruits of victory if we get mass unemployment, starvation, insecurity. Job security is the key to the future of our nation."

More Phonies Bite Dust In Primaries

WASHINGTON, July 29—Hot weather primaries down in the deep South brought small comfort to polltaxers and reactionaries, and a welcome breeze to labor and all progressives interested in a better Congress next January.

Perhaps the most relief came in the defeat of "Cotton-Ed" Smith, aged reactionary from South Carolina, who lost out to Gov. Olin D. Johnston. Johnston campaigned on support of FDR. Smith, one of the most intemperate enemies of everything FDR and the New Deal stand for, campaigned against FDR and for "white supremacy."

In Arkansas, primary votes retired Mrs. Hattie Caraway from the U. S. Senate, denying her the Democratic nomination that is equivalent to election. Mrs. Caraway's record, while quieter than Smith's, was just as much anti-labor and anti-FDR.

Mrs. Caraway will be succeeded in the Senate by Rep. J. W. Fulbright, best known as sponsor of the Fulbright resolution in the House that expressed Congressional approval of international cooperation after the war.

Best spot in the rest of Fulbright's voting record is his vote for the Federal ballot for the armed forces. Otherwise, his record is negative. Fulbright also campaigned on support of FDR—proving once again that the voters tend to regard this as a touchstone of a candidate's merits.

Further South and West, the voters in Texas—scene of the abortive "revolt" against FDR by a handful of convention delegates—made a contribution by retiring Rep. Richard Kleberg of the King Ranch dynasty. The King Ranch is the largest in Texas, and Rep. Kleberg's job in Congress was to help it along by fighting price control at every step, concentrating particularly on meat.

The rest of Rep. Kleberg's record was just as negative, showing a string of wrong votes and two absences on the seven major issues listed in the CIO NEWS Legislative Supplement of June 19, 1944.

The voters also retired Rep. Nat Patton, a veteran of 10 Congresses, and re-nominated House Speaker Sam Rayburn and Rep. Hatton Summers by fairly close margins. Down where Martin Dies lost his nerve some time ago when he decided not to run, they put in Judge J. M. Combs to take his place.

SOMETHING NEW

Something new came into the Texas and Arkansas primaries that will grow and develop as time goes on—the emergence of the Negro citizen as a voter. Spurred on by the recent Supreme Court decision outlawing the "white primary," Negro citizens paid their polltaxes and exercised their rights as free men in a number of places.

Dies, acting the way a lame-duck red-baiter could be expected to act, celebrated the primary results with sitll another attack on CIO and on citizens political action. This latest bit of jet-propulsion, however, was scarcely off the launching rack before it was seen to be a dud.

A New Beachhead for Freedom—Build PAC!

Union Starts Social Aid Plan

NEW YORK, July 29—Local 100 of the CIO Transport Workers Union, in cooperation with three accredited family and social welfare agencies, this week established a Personal Service Bureau to aid union members and their families.

The new department of the union will offer aid in connection with problems of servicemen, veterans' finances and personal or family difficulties.

It will give advice on how to use free and low cost medical, dental and nursing facilities and assistance with general problems of child care, housing, rent and care of the aged.

VFW, Labor Take Steps To Protect War Veterans

WASHINGTON, July 29—Increasingly friendly relations between labor and veterans' organizations is indicated by discussions which have been underway for some time between representatives of the two groups, looking toward a common understanding on jobs for returning servicemen.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars this week announced a tentative understanding reached with representatives of both CIO and AFL in regard to seniority, union initiation fees and other aspects of veteran placements.

VFW Commander Carl J. Shoeniger declared he was "gratified by the cooperative spirit" of the labor representatives and believed "a great forward step in relations between labor and veterans has been taken."

CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, a member of the CIO committee on veterans problems, whose chairman is Clinton S. Golden, pointed out that the statement released by the VFW is "a declaration of intent, an expression of joint good will," rather than a final agreement.

MUST BE RATIFIED

He pointed out that any agreement to be effective would have to be arrived at through collective bargaining, and that General Hershey and other government authorities on veterans' employment would have to be consulted, as well as employers' representatives, before an effective agreement could be reached.

It was also noted, in the VFW release, that any agreement would have to be approved by affiliated CIO and AFL unions to become effective.

The proposals embodied in the VFW statement are:

(1) Agreement that persons who have served in the armed forces "should constitute a citizenry to whom the nation owes consideration by reason of such service."

(2) Acceptance of "the right of labor to organize and bargain collectively," as written into federal law.

(3) Agreement on preference for veterans in federal, state and local employment.

(4) Agreement on unions granting full membership to discharged veterans "at a cost not to exceed the admission fee charged by such union prior to Jan. 1, 1940, and that the dues shall be no higher than those of all of the members doing the same work."

(In regard to this point, CIO spokesmen noted that Pres. Philip Murray has asked all CIO unions to admit discharged veterans without any initiation fee whatever, and that most CIO unions have already adjusted their regulations accordingly.)

(5) Crediting of veterans with seniority rights on the basis of one month of seniority for each month of military service subsequent to Sept. 1, 1940.

(6) Provision that a disabled veteran who cannot perform his former job "should be given another job which he is able to perform at the prevailing wages for the job he receives."

"It is agreed that the welfare of the nation's veterans is ultimately dependent upon the well-being of the whole of the community of the country," the statement concluded.

Victory and Lasting Peace

President Roosevelt's dignified and patriotic acceptance speech to the Democratic convention has set the keynote for a real people's campaign to re-elect him.

This is no ordinary peacetime political campaign in which party, factional, sectional and group divisions and prejudices can be given free rein.

Roosevelt does not intend to campaign in the ordinary political sense. He realizes his first duty is to the whole country, which he must lead to victory through these most critical months of the war.

Similarly, all good Americans must curb their factional feelings in this campaign. We must concentrate on the main goal of electing a President and Congress that will assure the most effective leadership of a united nation through victory to lasting peace, with full production and jobs for all.

The CIO joins with countless other organizations representing all groups and all classes in campaigning for the re-election of President Roosevelt precisely because he is the man best fitted, on his record and experience, to furnish such leadership.

We are heartened by the outcome of the Democratic party convention. It reflected the overwhelming popular demand to keep FDR at our country's helm. It demonstrated, as all the Southern primaries have done, the weakness of the much-touted "Southern revolt" against him.

Deeply as most progressives, including the CIO, regret the convention's failure to renominate Vice-Pres. Henry Wallace, we join with him in hailing the nomination of Senator Harry Truman.

He is a fit running mate for Roosevelt, a staunch liberal, a friend of labor and, above all, an experienced supporter of Roosevelt's policies for mobilizing America for speedy victory and postwar peace and prosperity.

The campaign for Roosevelt and a progressive Victory Congress is one in which every American can and must play a part.

CIO members already have effective political machinery for this purpose in the CIO Political Action Committee. But this Committee must now depend on their individual voluntary contributions for its finances.

Every CIO union must therefore get busy at once to promote this fund-raising campaign. Every individual member must realize that his help and his dollar are urgently needed to offset the huge slush funds of the anti-FDR reactionary, isolationist and defeatist forces.

But this people's campaign is much broader than the CIO. That is why the National Citizens Political Action Committee has been formed, to enlist the support of non-CIO workers, farmers, businessmen, professionals and all other groups. This committee too depends on the contributions of the many to offset the wealth of the reactionary few.

We've got the right candidates, the right program and the right organization for a real people's victory in November. There's work for everyone to do. Let's go!

Unfinished Business

Congress is coming back this week for a token re-opening, with one of the biggest pieces of unfinished business ever placed on its agenda. The token re-opening lasts until Labor Day, after which Congress hopes to get down to continuous work.

The unfinished business is the Kilgore reconversion bill (S 1893) that Congress ran out on, in its haste to make the convention deadlines in June and July.

The Kilgore bill looks after what Philip Murray calls the "human side" of the reconversion of industry from war to peace production. It helps demobilized veterans and demobilized war workers alike with unemployment benefits, re-training, moving expenses, etc., as well as helping business. No other bill so far offered does this.

Reconversion is already going on, without regard for the human side. Cutbacks of war contracts are mounting. Thousands of people are faced with the possibility of a sudden loss of jobs and nowhere to go.

The Kilgore bill affects your immediate future and the immediate future of the thousands of service men being demobilized each month. It's our—and their—ace in the hole against insecurity.

Our boys in the Army can't play this ace. We can play it for ourselves and for them—if we greet the returning Congressmen with a flood of letters telling them to get busy on Unfinished Business No. 1 by passing the Kilgore reconversion bill.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

PARDON the doubletalk, but we're just adding up what our critics say about CIO and the Democratic convention.

They say: CIO took a licking, dominating the convention throughout. It is now firmly in the saddle of a party that repudiated it emphatically.

They say: AFL, hewing to Gompers' policy of not taking sides, succeeds in nominating its candidate for vice president, though it had no candidate, being non-partisan in presidential elections.

★ ★ ★

They say: CIO packed the galleries with entrance tickets passed out by Chicago Mayor Kelly, a stop-Wallace leader. Resulting demonstrations for Wallace so antagonized the delegates that twice as many as expected voted for him.

They say: The party is now dominated by a combination of CIO'ers and bosses like Kelly, working hand in hand as they fight each other tooth and nail.

They say: Southern anti-New Dealers showed their control by defeating New Dealer Wallace and nominating New Dealer Truman. Southern revolt against FDR was so successful that all but three Southern delegations voted for him, the pro-FDR voters including half the anti-FDR delegates from Texas.

★ ★ ★

They say: CIO has huge funds to corrupt the voters, drawn from voluntary contributions of the folks without money. This is tough on the monied classes, who have only the big money and the millionaire press on their side to do the customary corrupting.

They say: The politicians resent CIO support as the "kiss of death" to such an extent that they're selling their souls and betraying Democratic traditions to get it.

They say: The CIO label so antagonizes voters that CIO-endorsed candidates have been largely successful in the primaries. This threatens to give government control to the masses of the common people, if we don't watch out.

★ ★ ★

It seems CIO's foes are torn by conflicting emotions. Like the undertaker who married a midwife, they want to get us coming and going.

They want to make a bogey of CIO by exaggerating its influence and to sneer at its lack of influence.

They just can't make up their minds which they enjoy more, damning CIO for its success or damning it for its failure, so they do both at the same time.

From this writer's seat at the convention, things looked much less confusing than to CIO's critics.

The CIO didn't take a licking and it didn't dominate the convention. With more delegates than ever before and proved influence among the voters, it was a powerful force on the progressive side.

The unexpectedly strong showing made by Wallace, with CIO help, prevented the nomination of a reactionary in his place and assured the naming of liberal Harry Truman, staunch FDR man, who is eminently satisfactory to CIO and labor generally.

The anti-Wallace sentiments of some AFL top leaders were not shared by the rank and file; most AFL members and delegates rooted and voted for Wallace.

The Wallace demonstrations were genuine popular expressions by delegates and galleries alike, in which CIO'ers played a minor part numerically. A majority of the delegates would have preferred to vote for Wallace, if freed from caucus discipline.

★ ★ ★

The convention was more democratic and less boss-ridden than most, certainly than the Republican convention. The experience and skill of the so-called bosses was effective, but most were influenced by rank and file sentiment and were strongly pro-FDR.

The "Southern revolt" against Roosevelt fizzled out. Clashes in Southern delegations indicated the first real challenge by liberal Southerners to the anti-New Deal and anti-labor cliques so long in control.

CIO Pres. Murray expressed the conclusion of most objective observers when he said that "the liberal elements in the Democratic party made splendid progress in this convention."

★ ★ ★

CIO political action was effective in the convention, as in the primaries, not as a narrow partisan force but as part of a broad people's movement including all win-the-war progressives.

This movement cannot command the huge slush funds at the disposal of reaction. It depends on small individual voluntary contributions—on the faith of the many, not the pelf of the few.

As to "CIO label" talk, CIO has no exclusive candidates. Its endorsement is evidence of broad popular support, as shown by many primary victories.

Petitions Ask FCC Action

Columbus, O., July 29—Discrimination by radio station WHKC against the CIO United Auto Workers Union has aroused thousands of residents of this state, who have signed petitions which will be presented to the Federal Communications Commission Aug. 15 when the FCC is to hear the UAW's case against the station.

The petitions, circulated through the Ohio CIO Council, state that the signers believe that WHKC "has deliberately and consistently followed a policy of presenting the news and issues of the day in a biased, unfair and distorted manner," and urged "corrective action" by the FCC.

The UAW charges that the station has censored UAW broadcasts, has refused the union time to solicit membership on the air, and has imposed other restrictions—all of which have not applied to other broadcasters.

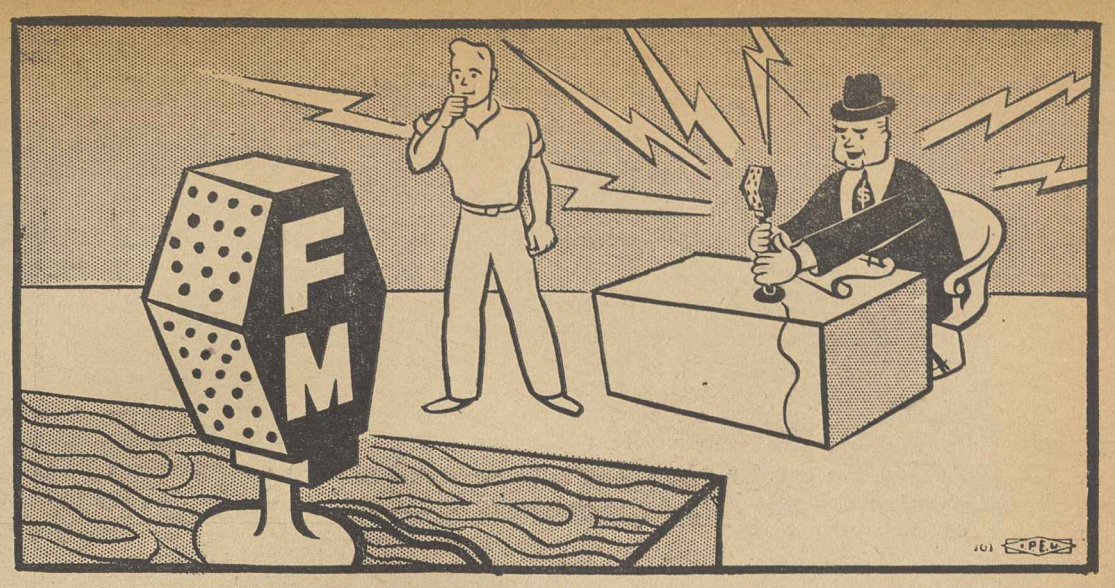
FM—Future Voice of The People?



Bend an ear to a startling new development in radio that may give labor a chance to compete successfully with the soap operas! The name is Frequency Modulation, the listening is good, the costs are low and the possibilities are breath-taking.

To those keenly aware of the crying need to take labor's case to the people . . .

To those who have pounded desks in vain while commercial broadcasters have ruthlessly blue-penciled union copy . . .

To those who lack the half million bucks it often takes to "muscle in" on regular radio . . .

FM is the answer to a dozen prayers.

FM means Frequency Modulation broadcasting. Its technical aspects can be disposed of on a postage stamp: FM electrical waves transmit sound just as in regular Amplitude Modulation broadcasting, but FM depends on the frequency of the waves to provide differences in sound while AM depends on the amplitude of the waves.

Field Wide Open

More important to rank and file labor people are these facts:

1. The FM field is wide open. Trade unions and other people's organizations that act NOW can file applications for FM broadcasting licenses for use after the war.

2. FM costs are low. In contrast to the half million dollars that has paid this week for a low power AM station in Washington, D. C., $15,000 is enough to build everything needed for operation of an FM station.

3. FM transmission is good. Tones are better, more of them are reproduced than in AM broadcasting and static is virtually eliminated.

4. FM is small time stuff now, but it's going to be big time stuff after victory, with NBC and CBS planning nation-wide chain broadcasts and with a new chain, the American Network, scheduled to enter the field on an exclusive FM basis.

FM is such a shining hope for the future largely because of the fact that the big commercial interests have such a stout grip on AM broadcasting. There are roughly 900 AM stations "serving" the nation and 90 per cent of them take in the welcome mat when they see labor coming up the steps.

On a sharply political basis, they've thrown the CIO-AFL Labor for Victory program off the air.

They've denied labor time to solicit membership. They've censored local broadcasts. They have effectively prevented labor from stating its case, while allowing every conceivable type of anti-labor commentator to peddle his poison along with the cereal plugs.

Just 44 FM stations are actually in operation according to the Federal Communications Commission—and most of these are controlled by profit making organizations. And of 154 FM applications pending, all except five are from commercial interests.

While several thousand FM stations can be operated over the nation—each with a potential effective listener radius of roughly 150 miles—only a limited number can be licensed within a particular area. Just as in AM broadcasting, FM stations must be sufficiently spaced so that signals do not overlap.

Hence it is absolutely imperative for labor and other people's organizations to get in their applications NOW to FCC if they are not to be left out in the cold in FM broadcasting. Delay will mean that commercial interests will sew up the field, and labor—if it wants to buy time or stations—will find itself confronted with all the old censorship restrictions and with prices prohibitive for all except the wealthy.

The possibilities of FM as a people's voice for progress and democracy are enormous. A group of FM stations, dedicated to free speech and public service, could make available to the public true consumer information rather than the hokum of commercial copywriters, could develop children's programs designed to inspire and to educate rather than to rasp the nerves of youngsters, could provide the people with public health information, instead of phoney patent medicine blurbs.

For Labor Use

Such stations could be used directly by labor in at least three ways:

1. As organizing mediums. An FM station can tell a trade union's story to prospective members just as effectively as commercial radio now booms the virtues of Wheaties, General Electric, du Pont and the National Association of Manufacturers. The code of the National Association of Broadcasters prohibits sale of time for solicitation of membership, but there is nothing in the law nor in FCC regulations which imposes such a restriction.

2. In times of labor-employer disputes, FM can ensure labor a chance to get its story to the public. Commercial radio is monopolized by employer interests and inevitably favors their side.

3. On all major issues—cost of living, full employment, reconversion, international affairs—labor can use FM to make its views known and its position appreciated. The NAB code today forbids the sale of time for such union program, but again, no governmental regulations restrict it.

Radio Belongs To The People—Use It!

This is the second of a series of excerpts from the CIO Political Action Committee Radio Handbook. Industrialists have long been using radio to further their thinly-disguised political wares, while labor has lagged in making full use of that medium. Readers who wish the compete 48-page handbook should write CIO-PAC, 205 E. 42nd St., New York 17, N. Y.

Paid-for-time is precisely that. The station charges so much per minute, depending on the size of the audience and the time of the day when the program is given. The scale of prices for all stations is published, and you can ask for a table of radio time charges.

Just as labor has a right to expect free time for programs of general public interest, so has labor a right to buy time to present topics of specific union interests. For example, the union side of a local labor dispute or an organizational drive in the campaign preceding a labor election, can be presented on paid time.

Most stations will require you to submit written scripts well in advance of each broadcast, which they will read to eliminate libel, obscenity, or other infractions of law, and will insist that you stick to the script as written. This is a reasonable procedure.

Some stations, however, may use this advance scrutiny for libel and obscenity as an occasion for a censorship of ideas of which the station does not approve. Such censorship of ideas violates our basic principles of free speech. Don't accept such censorship. If you are forced to submit send the script rejected by the station to the CIO Political Action Committee for further protest.

Some stations may refuse to permit you to seek new members over the air, or to discuss controversial issues on time which you have paid for, or to dramatize controversial issues, on the ground that such programs are prohibited by the Code of the National Assn. of Broadcasters.

The National Assn. of Broadcasters Code is a private document put out by some broadcasters, and has no standing whatever in law or before the Federal Communications Commission; indeed, it may be seriously questioned under the Anti-trust laws.

This Code contains many provisions which violate the most fundamental rights of free speech, and in practice the Code has become a dead letter—except in the hands of a few stations which still drag it up as an excuse for denying labor a fair break on the air.

Right To Reply

The broadcasting industry, under pressure from Congress and the FCC, is beginning to recognize the right of one side to reply to statements made by the other side over the air. The valuable time given to Martin Dies to reply to Walter Winchell is a case in point.

The CIO Political Action Committee proposes to demand the right to reply with respect to nation-wide network programs. You can similarly demand it with respect to programs, whether local or national, broadcast over your local station.

If any commentator or program broadcast over your station attacks labor, or the fundamental principles for which labor stands, ask for and insist upon equal time in which to reply. Only thus can radio become the fair and impartial vehicle for all points of view.

Ask for Time

There are many occasions when a labor union may ask for radio time and expect to get it:

When an officer of a national or an international union visits your local union, he should be interviewed over the local radio station in the same way as a visiting Chamber of Commerce official.

When your local celebrates a birthday or any other important occasion, it deserves radio time.

When a member of your union returns from an important labor convention, or from a trip to Congress, or to the state legislature, his report should be of interest to the community.

When a national issue is being discussed, such as the poll tax, the annual wage or subsidies, you should have a speaker over the radio either participating in a round-table discussion, or presenting his views in a talk.

Any union that has developed a good dramtic group should, from time to time, present dramatizations of the union's part in the war effort, labor's participation in local health or housing programs, labor's plans for postwar community developments.

Above all, in this election year, your local should be given a sufficient opportunity to present its views on current political issues.

Ways Proposed

There are many ways in which ideas may be presented over the radio. Here are some of them:

Straight talk, round table discussion, spot announcement, and dramatic radio play.

Straight talk sounds easy. But it isn't. In fact, a good radio speaker is a rarity. The reason for this is not that it is very hard to give a good radio talk, but that most people make it hard for themselves by preparing to talk to a large audience—and that makes it stilted.

One of the things that makes good radio is the feeling that the fellow at the other end of the microphone is talking directly and naturally to you just the way he would talk if he were leaning over the back fence on a Sunday afternon.

You want to practice talking that way when you prepare a radio speech.

Americans are notably good story-tellers. You probably have several members in your union who are great talkers. When they tell a story at the lunch hour or at a meeting, everybody listens. They keep everybody laughing. They have a sense of humor which is different. They have a quaint way of expressing themselves.

Try a Dialogue

If you have such people in your union, put them on the radio. Warn them not to change their style but talk over the air just as they tell stories at the lunch hour or over a beer. If they are self-conscious all alone in front of the microphone, try a dialogue between two of them.

Barbers for FDR

NEW YORK, July 29—Support for President Roosevelt and Senator Truman in the coming election campaign was unanimously voted this week by the General Executive Board of the CIO Barbers and Beauty Culturists Union.

The Board also voted to support all candidates for Congress "who are in sympathy with the constructive program and policies of our Commander-in-Chief."

OPA Head Hails Labor's Role In Checking Prices

CIO members and their wives in the Auxiliaries have played and are playing a key role in bringing price control to your neighborhood. Without this day to day and block to block volunteer work, price control enforcement would be impossible. No one gets paid for the work Chester Bowles, Office of Price Administration chief, describes in this exclusive article for The CIO NEWS.

By CHESTER BOWLES

Administrator, Office of Price Administration

Labor has done and is doing a magnificent job in price control. I know of no other group which has demonstrated greater and more widespread support for OPA. Labor was among the first to demand the creation of an agency with broad powers to control prices.

Each time when Congress has debated the extension of the Price Control Act, it has been the leaders of labor who have testified most strongly for the continuation of price control, rent control and rationing.

Union members and their leaders, nationally and locally, have a vital stake in the job of keeping prices down. They realize it will take the full weight of their vast membership to do the job.

Generally speaking, union men and women are consumers who are more fully concerned with the importance and the difficulties of the task which faces us. This is because labor has seen to it that its membership is enlightened concerning our achievements and our shortcomings.

As Administrator of OPA, I frequently meet with the Labor Policy Committee and am very conscious of the many contributions made by labor.

WELCOME LABOR AID

Labor Policy Committee recommendations have been welcomed by OPA. They are carefully considered in establishing our various policies and regulations.

As an indication of labor's willingness to help make OPA really work, there are 102 Labor Advisory Committees now functioning in that many OPA districts or in highly industrialized areas.

Serving on these committees, which are doing a real job, are 1,225 union men and women. They meet regularly with their OPA district directors and other key officials.

These Labor Advisory Committees provide a direct channel to more than 50,000 local unions and then fan out to union membership of between 10 and 15 million.

On the hundreds of local War Price and Rationing Boards, more than 4,500 labor people are enthusiastically doing their share, as volunteers, in administering wartime controls which OPA must enforce.

Many thousands of other union members are serving on price panels and in the vast consumer army of price checkers who are weekly checking compliance in food stores in all parts of the country.

Labor members are also serving on an estimated 39,000 plant transportation committees which review and certify applications from workers for gasoline and tires in America's industrial plants.

Another important phase of labor's work for more effective price control and rationing has been the establishment of three-man cost-of-living committees in many local unions. These committees are composed of a price control and rent control expert, a rationing expert and a general information man.

Other contributions for which labor can be proud include: support for the subsidy program, which has brought millions of dollars in savings to consumers; frequent requests for tight price control which has constantly kept the agency's enforcement department on its toes; practical proposals which led to the setting of definite dollars and cents or popular "Market Basket" ceiling prices on essential food items; and widespread union-member educational efforts.

Organized labor has demonstrated its intense interest in controlling the cost of living by conducting its own study. Although the results of this study differ from the official government figures, it contains many leads and suggestions which have been most helpful to OPA.

Organized labor is doing a magnificent job in supporting effective price control, rent control and rationing!

Prosecute Hotel For Negro Ban

Camden Auxiliary Political Whirlwind

By DORIS SMORODIN

Legislative Chairman, Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, Ladies Auxiliary, Chapter 1

In the 1943 fall election we gained our first experience in political action. Brother Deith, a member of our parent local, was nominated for State Assembly on the Democratic ticket and it was natural to go to bat for him. A Women's ABC Committee, consisting of CIO, AFL, and Brotherhood women was formed. The secretary of the ABC Committee is the present president of our auxiliary. The main function of this committee was to present the issues of the election campaign to the women of Camden and to campaign for the labor candidates. The fact that Deith was elected gave our sisters inspiration and confidence that hard work brings results.

BACK ROOSEVELT

Since then, we have participated in political action. Our auxiliary was the first organized group in Camden to pass a 4th-term-for-Roosevelt resolution. We made the front page in the Courier Post with this.

The auxiliary set up stands on the two busiest shopping corners of Camden asking the public to sign petitions for Roosevelt. Thousands of signatures were collected. Incidentally, many registered Republicans signed our non-partisan petitions.

We keep in touch with our Representative and Senators on every major issue before Congress. We made sure to have some of the correspondence publicized in the press and earned a special editorial of praise, "Women Take the Lead," in connection with the fight for genuine price control. Our members, of course, have been working consistently as price panel assistants.

MORE POLITICAL ACTION

When the county PAC was established our auxiliary was invited to participate. Two of our sisters, Marge Frazier and I, are on the County Committee. We have had splendid cooperation and encouragement from the chairman of the county PAC, Mort Bloom.

More and more the sisters are becoming interested in political action. As a result of her talk we had many more women volunteering for getting people to register for the coming election.

We have discussed plans which we hope will rally a great many women in our county toward participation in PAC work. We have:

1. Urged a Women's Conference of all unions, CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhoods, to establish a Women's Division of the ABC Federation.

2. Divided our membership list into wards, checked them for registration and hope to have a 100 per cent registration within the next two weeks.

3. Planned meetings of our members in each ward to elect leaders.

4. Proposed to our local's education committee that at our next quarterly meeting, a family affair, there be a speaker from the Women's Division of the National PAC.

5. Plan to publish and mail in September a four-page newspaper to the women who are related to the 27,000 union members.

Our auxiliary pledges to do its utmost to re-elect President Roosevelt and elect a Congress which will work for a rapid and complete victory.

Movies—Radio—Labor Education

CIO Locals On Radio

A CIO union in New York bought radio time last week to tell its story to the public. The story was "The Case of the Burchell Workers", by Local 1225, CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

It's a story of 900 workers, members of the local, who lost their jobs on three hours' notice because of the sudden cancellation of a contract by the Navy. In its broadcast the union told not only what this lay-off meant to the workers, but also what such planless cutbacks may mean to the nation.

"You have to have a plan so that people will have jobs," the narrator said. Such a plan already exists, he pointed out, in the Kilgore Bill, which among other things, "sets up machinery to keep war production going and at the same time provides jobs at decent pay when war production.

A soap opera with a backbone is a rare thing. That's the reason it will be worth your while to tune in to the pro labor, anti-discrimination, anti-fascist radio program, Green Valley, USA, at 5 p.m. every Sunday on the Mutual Broadcasting System.

Green Valley's backbone to express opinions unfortunately so rare to the air waves can be attributed to its producer-sponsor, Himan Brown, producer of the Inner Sanctum, the Thin Man, Bulldog Drummond, Nero Wolf and Joyce Jordan.

Speaking through the mouths of the folksy citizens of Green Valley, Brown comes out for equal pay for women, against discrimination, better understanding of labor and similar issues, usually strange to the air waves.

The CIO's program for political action was presented last Sunday on the University of Chicago Roundtable radio program by J. Raymond Walsh, director of the Natl. CIO Dept. of Research and Education. Subject of the discussion was "Should Labor Unions Aim for Political Power?"

CIO Takes To Movies For '44

BY HOLLACE RANSDELL

Something new in movies is the animated cartoon, "Hell Bent for Election," produced by the CIO's biggest union, the United Auto Workers. The film had its premier at the Democratic Convention. It was made by members of the AFL Screen Cartoonists Guild.

The group that worked on the cartoon was headed by Zack Schwartz and comprised some of Hollywood's top animators and idea men. Screen Actors Guild member Karen Morley was assistant in production.

The animated cartoon, done in full colors, shows, two personified trains racing to see which gets onto Track 44 and so thorugh to the end of the line. One is the outmoded 1929 limited, pulling a Jim Crow car, an apple stand and other junk. The other is the smooth-running Win-the-War express, carrying arms for the battlefronts.

Joe Worker is at the switch—a hand switch bearing a round disk with a cross in the middle like a ballot. A sinister reactionary congressman lures him aside, trying to befuddle him with drink, cigar smoke and double talk.

It looks bad for the express and the future, but Joe recovers his wits just in time, yanks the switch and Win-the-War speeds past looking more than ever like FDR, while 1929 goes on a sidetrack of history and disintegrates.

After seeing a preview of the film in Los Angeles, West Coast CIO leaders hailed it as "a powerful voice for labor-endorsed candidates" which in 15 minutes of laughs and excitement "tells the foundation facts on which the whole political action pro gram is based."

A short dramtic film about native fascism called "This Precious Freedom," after two years on MGM's shelf, has been bought by three independent producers for expansion into a feature and release through some other film outlet, reports Ted Taylor, Federated Press' Hollywood correspondent.

The picture will be called "Terror on Main Street." Claude Rains will star.

In defense of freedom of the screen, the 18-member bodies of the Council of Hollywood Guilds and Unions have sharply rebuked the Washington Times-Herald for criticizing sight unseen the 20th Century Fox motion picture, "Wilson," film biography of the late president.

"We freely concede that any newspaper has the right to criticize a motion picture after release, but to launch a partisan political attack in advance of its exhibition is to threaten the basic freedom of the screen," the Council said.

"Brief for Invasion," a 30-minute motion picture produced especially for American war worker audiences, has just been released, the War Dept. announces. It may be obtained for union showings.

The film was produced to tell men and women in war industries their role in the invasion. It includes scenes of fighting now in progress and captured Nazi shots of German fighting tactics.

High point is the footage of combat action by Armed Forces photographers who went right in with the first wave of troops.

Big Shoe Workers' Victory

The United Shoe Workers report a significant victory at Hannibal, Mo., where agents of District 50 had been for some time: Intl. Shoe Co., Bluff City plant: CIO 1229, against 83.

Frank Bender, Reg. Dir., Maryland, reports: NLRB payroll check with membership cards of the 11 guards employed by Cambridge Shipbuilding Co., Cambridge, Md., gave the IUM&SWA-CIO a 100 per cent victory.

Intl. Rep. N. A. Zonarich, USA-CIO, reports: Aluminum Co. of America, Jones Mills Works, Lake Catherine, Ark.: CIO 332, AFL 279.

CIO Regional Director E. L. Sandefur of the Carolinas, reports: Newly established Local 289, CIO Furniture Workers, was certified as collective bargaining agency by card check among 50 employes of Sheppard Veneer Co., Winston-Salem, N. C. Representative Hiatt was in charge, assisted by the CIO Regional Office.

An election among Palmer-Bee employes at Winston-Salem resulted in a 48-48 tie, with the four challenged votes. The company carried on a subtle antiunion campaign preceeding the election, during which some 35 men were fired and 27 laid off. In case challenged votes do not break the tie or go against the union, protests have been filed in behalf of USA-CIO, the petitioning union. Special Representative Akridge worked with Regional Director Sandefur in this campaign.

This week I addressed the West Virginia State IUC convention. The convention had more unanimity than any previous one. Delegates enthusiastically applauded endorsement of President Roosevelt for re-election. Governor Neeley, who has stood for civil rights in Wheeling, and Senator Kilgore, member of the Truman Committee which has done such fine work, also addressed the convention. President John Easton's report showed splendid growth. The convention endorsed the CIO's program in its entirety and set out to activize its membership to effectuate same.

Says Full Employment Answer To Problem Of Disabled Veterans

WASHINGTON, July 29—Continued full employment to solve problems of World War II disabled veterans was stressed this week by CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey as he clashed headlong with Robert M. Gaylord, Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers president.

"Labor can insist on continuation of full production and full employment," Carey said in an American Forum of the air broadcast on "Jobs for Disabled Veterans."

"Otherwise, all our good intentions will go for nothing," Carey declared. "Labor can also seek, through the promotion of practical and sound legislation, to help veterans as labor did in the GI Bill.

"We can also cooperate with management to see that disabled veterans are given and keep jobs that will help them to live according to American standards. We can also see to it that the non-cooperative employers will be required to meet decent standards that the enlightened employers will be anxious to establish in American industry."

Opinions clashed as Gaylord asserted: "I think enlightened management today realizes that it has to do more than merely hire the cream of the crop, that it wants to get a cross-section of the community.

"Didn't we have enlightened management after the last war?" Carey shot back.

"Industry," Carey added, "taught us a great deal and it taught us one thing, not to depend on American industry to provide jobs for all the normal, able people, let alone disabled people and the aged. With the record of American industry of putting people on the ash heap after the age of 40, I just question whether or not the enlightened section of American industry will govern the policies of employers in this country."

Gaylord later on sidestepped Carey's query whether he thought that the Government ought to provide partially disabled veterans disability allowances when industry refuses to employ them.

Senator Robert F. Wagner (D., N. Y.), another forum speaker, stepped into the discussion, saying:

"I was going to say that if industry can't take care of them the Government must. They certainly must be taken care of."

World Roundup

United Nations' Labor Report Shows Unity for Victory

World labor news holds the spotlight as fighters and workers of the United Nations press forward to victory over labor's greatest enemy and work out solutions to problems of the postwar period.

Believing that these problems can be solved with the full cooperation of international labor, The CIO NEWS this week begins a new service of summarizing and commenting on developments in United Nations labor during the week.

Gandhi's New Plan

Recent proposals of Mohandas K. Gandhi—the "Mahatma" of the newspapers—for an agreement with the British to help in winning the war are hailed by Indian opinion as making him "the greatest Indian of our times," according to an Allied Labor News report from Bombay.

Gandhi's proposals to the British authorities call for formation of a "national provision government," ALN says, for permission to see the British imprisoned Indian Congress (independence) leaders, and for "speedy solution of the problems of production and the food crisis." In return, Gandhi pledges complete support to the Allied war effort—a reversal of his position of 1942.

Postwar Britain

British workers are just as much concerned about the future of huge government paid-for industrial plants after victory as we are here, an article quoted by ALN from the Amalgamated Engineering Union's Journal reveals.

The Journal, organ of Britain's million-strong war workers' industrial union, says emphatically: "We dissent entirely from the government's proposal that war plants built with public funds should be sold to private enterprise or should be allowed to cease production.

"These plants should remain in full production and help create the enlarged national income required for postwar employment. We hold strongly that the government should remain the owner of the plants, even though they may be leased to independent producers.

"They must not be disposed of in any way that might strengthen monopolistic tendencies in industry." Adding that "these matters affect employment and therefore cannot be ignored by the unions," the AEU Journal urges the unions and the Labor Party to press this program on the government.

Maritime Meet

A further sign of the way the interests of United Nations workers lie in is seen in the reply of C. Jarman, secretary of the British National Union of Seamen (NUS) to a letter of Pres. Joseph Curran of CIO's Natl. Maritime Union, urging a meeting of the NMU and the NUS on common postwar shipping problems.

Worldwide shipping, on which Britain depends for its very life and on which the U. S. will depend to carry the huge foreign trade we must have for full employment, is a United Nations' problem that will have to be settled by international unity of all parties, workers, owners and government, Curran had written.

In his reply, released by the NMU here, Jarman revealed that an international shipping conference would be held "for the purpose of discussing and planning the future of the men who have done so much, and for whom, unless I misread the signs, so little will be done unless we are in a position to insist that the full the Nations undoubtedly owe to seamen is paid in full."

Business Group Hears Labor Men

Chicago, July 29—The Committee for Economic Development, a recently created bloc of progressive American businessmen interested in postwar planning, full employment and taxation, last week concluded its annual meeting in Chicago with three representatives of labor participating in its sessions.

CIO Secy.-Treas. James B. Carey, Secy.-Treas. Victor Olander of the Illinois Federation of Labor, and Lincoln Fairley, Washington research director for the CIO United Auto Workers, were the representatives presenting labor's point of view.

Organized in 1942 by a group of business leaders headed by Paul Hoffman, president of the Studebaker Corp., the CED's economic program as taken from its official statement is to "seize the opportunities for unprecedented peacetime prosperity in the postwar era and to avoid the real perils of mass unemployment or mass government employment."

The organization says that it is non-political and operates on a non-profit basis. Its activity is in the field of preparing studies of economic problems affecting the entire country and servicing local CED committees with advice on production design, advertising and sales programs, and training of sales personnel.

Carey, in addressing the group, extended thanks for its work, and declared that in the "tremendous task in building the production necessary to win this war it was necessary to tear up the industrial road beds of America."

"Well, the job is not finished even when the military end is over," Carey continued, "because we have to straighten out the industrial highways of America and we have to build those roads wider and smoother than ever before to carry the traffic that will be necessary here in America."

Official Army Paper Gives Labor 'OK'

Camp Shelby, Miss., July 29—"Reveille," an Army paper published here, this week showed that you "can't fool all of the people all of the time" in an editorial that eloquently answers the bile of the labor baiters and those who seek to split the home front from the fighting front for their own selfish purposes.

The editorial, entitled "Labor is People," exposes the false conception that John L. Lewis represents American labor.

"Labor is people, and most of them are working harder than they ever have in their lives," the editorial states. "They're the people next door. They're brothers and sisters of soldiers, mothers and fathers, your sweethearts and friends."

"Like the Army, like yourself, labor isn't perfect. Not by a long shot. There have been strikes, and people wanting more money. But strikes haven't caused any appreciable loss in production. The time lost last year was one-seventh of one per cent . . . And the wages, in spite of pressure . . . haven't gone up for most of the workers," the Army paper declared.

"Labor isn't doing anything similar to what our troops are doing in the Pacific or in France. It can't because its job is one of production. But it is doing that job. Most of the folks at home are doing their part with the same loyalty with which American soldiers are fighting on the other side. Think it over," the editorial concluded.

Open 2nd Front Against Dewy Anti-GI Vote Bill

NEW YORK, July 29—Aroused over the callous refusal of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey to extend the simplified soldier ballot to New York's 900,000 servicemen before the July 15 deadline, a concerted citizens' and labor drive was opened this week with the distribution of more than 1,000,000 application blanks requesting state war ballots, in an effort to avert the Dewey-inspired attempt to disfranchise thousands of fighting men from the Empire state.

The new drive, stimulated by house-to-house canvassing by CIO members with more than 4,000 other citizen volunteers at street intersections, beaches, parks and railroad stations, has been met with tremendously favorable public response as servicemen and their friends and relatives snatched up the huge stacks of post card requests in the first days of operation.

Meanwhile, on another sector of the New York ballot front, Natl. Maritime Union Pres. Joseph Curran revealed that the GOP presidential hopeful's state excludes more than 23,000 merchant seamen who need to vote from overseas.

Curran stated that in addition to merchant seamen, all overseas representatives of the Red Cross, United Service Organizations and United Seamens Service were excluded from the state bill.

Curran's charge was admitted by N. Y. Attorney General N. L. Goldstein, who stated that members of the Merchant Marine are not eligible to use limited N. Y. absentee ballots for servicemen under the state constitution because they are not part of the military forces.

Fight Wage Freeze

New York, July 29—Regional directors of three CIO unions, spearheading the fight to abolish the discriminatory Little Steel wage formula, met last week to lay plans for mobilizing the labor movement and for carrying out a broad nonpartisan public program in this and the New Jersey area in support of the unions demands.

Leading the fight against the formula, which restricts basic wage increases to 15 percent despite a 45 percent rise, cost of living are the CIO Steelworkers, Auto Workers and Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers.

The regional directors' conference of the three unions August 9, and to institute a petition campaign within the entire CIO in support of the demands. The committee is also taking steps to enlist the support of municipal bodies, religious, community and business organizations.

Delegates from more than 100 locals of steel, auto and UE are expected to attend the August conference.

Needed After V-Day —60 Million Jobs

WASHINGTON, July 29—Sixty million Americans "will probably want gainful work" after the war, which will require 12 million more jobs than in 1940. That was the forecast made this week by the Economic Outlook, monthly publication of the CIO.

Pre-war levels of production, the Outlook adds, "would leave 20 million people unemployed after the war." This would involve, according to estimates based on 1943 figures, a cut of 75 percent in payrolls in the Pacific coast area and nearly 60 percent in such states as Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan.

Present wage levels, held down by the Little Steel formula, average less than the amount required for "a decent standard of living," and will go lower if present rates are reduced due to reduction in overtime, premium pay, etc.

The key to the solution of this problem of full employment at decent wages lies in political action, the Outlook says, pointing out that government today "regulates wages and farm prices, runs schools and hospitals, builds roads and dams and airports, levies taxes, makes provision for the unemployed, the needy, and, directly or indirectly, determines how many job openings there are."

"As we vote, so shall we live. For by our votes we directly influence the kind of homes we live in, the food, education and fun our kids get, and their opportunity for developing and using their abilities," the Outlook says.

LOSS TO NATION

A return to pre-war levels of production and employment will mean the loss of a huge national income, the Outlook points out, citing the "91 million man years of productive work and $260 billion worth of goods forever lost to the nation through unemployment in the 1930's."

This lost employment could have produced 15 million new houses, aided in education, health, conservation and scores of other projects, and have left $95 billion, the Outlook adds.

At the same time, the Outlook calls for action to smooth the reconversion process, to aid workers in the readjustment period, and for early action on needed improvements to the social security system proposed in the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill.

IUC Rescinds Action

Fort Worth, Tex., July 29—Following representations by a delegation from the Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes, the Dallas-Tarrant CIO Council this week rescinded previous action endorsing the local Montgomery Ward organizing drive of the Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union to maintain neutrality between the two CIO unions.

CIO Regional Director Timothy Flynn approved the step on the grounds that the Council should "not get involved in a jurisdictional dispute."

'Supermen' Cool Off Quick, Ex-CIO Reporter Writes

By FRED ROSS

Washington, July 29—One of the most vivid descriptions of German prisoners captured in Normandy has been written by Sergt. Walter Peters, YANK correspondent and former CIO NEWS reporter. Peters, 26 years old, is also a flying fortress gunner, comes from a trade union family, and was at one time a member of the CIO Textile Workers Union.

He not only reports history, but makes it. A member of the Newspaper Guild, Sergt. Peters participated in the historic raid by the Flying "Forts" on Germany's second largest ballbearing plant at Schweinfurt, in the low-level bomber attacks on the Germans on D-Day and in the capture of Cherbourg.

NO GOOSE STEPS NOW

"The prisoners march by the forward battalion CP (Command Post). They walk in columns of twos. There is no snap, no goose-stepping, no sign on their faces or bodies to indicate they are members of the master race."

Although the privates appear thoroughly licked, the non-coms still retain their arrogance, says the ex-CIO News reporter. German officers wear clothes "in good order" as if "they took time out to have them cleaned and pressed before surrendering."

SNIPERS SCORNED

Peters relates that the Americans' special scorn is directed toward snipers. Says a Texas sergeant: "I wonder how many of our guys those rats knocked off before deciding to give up for the comforts of an American hoosegow?"

The prisoners are taken to an enclosure. The story continues:

"A stocky blond, blue-eyed master sergeant stands in the center of the field. The sergeant is Jewish and he wears the uniform of the country that proclaims all men are born equal.

"The prisoners of war march toward him and you begin to wonder at the irony of it all. In perfect German the sergeant—M/Sergt. Henry A. Samuel of Newark, N. J.—orders the prisoners to halt.

"They react like robots: bodies stiffen, eyes look straight forward. They haven't forgotten what years of Nazi training have taught—to obey orders."

SERGT. WALTER PETERS
Reports Nazis Puzzled

SURRENDER WEAPONS

The prisoners are asked to surrender hidden weapons and personal possessions, which soon constitute a pile consisting of toilet articles, money and letters. In the pile is the propaganda leaflet in German and Polish calling on the enemy to surrender. Sergeant Samuel is quoted:

"It's amazing how effective these leaflets are. A good number of the prisoners say the leaflets helped them to make up their minds to surrender.'"

An officer's articles include "a couple of pictures of girls in Paris with intimate greetings on the back and letters from the wife in Germany. The wife sends her love, saying she knows he is loyal to her and that she will 'ever be a loving wife.'"

PUZZLED BY TREATMENT

After the prisoners are ordereed to take off their shoes to reveal the hidding places of knives and military papers, the Newark sergeant questions the prisoners, some of whom disregard the scornful looks of their non-coms to reveal military information.

Most of the prisoners believe they will be shot. After their private articles are returned to them, "trucks pull into the enclosure and the Germans pile in. Once the trucks start rolling out on the road their faces brighten.

"They haven't been shot by these American gangsters. They are puzzled."

Anti-Semitic Talk Exposed By Jewish Welfare Board's 'Fighting For America'

Of all the many forms of prejudice and intolerance in America, anti-Semitism is perhaps the most subtle and pernicious. Whispers, furtive comments, inneuendoes are the principal techniques used in spreading the many vicious contradictory rumors against this religious group.

The spreading of this virus of intolerance is often unintentional on the part of well-meaning people, who have unconsciously fallen into a trap which plays into the hands of those who peddle anti-Semitism as a part of a well-organized movement to divide race against race, religion against religion and brother against brother.

RED CROSS WORKER DEAD: Eleanor Liss, who died while on active duty with the ARC in the Far East was one of the first women to serve in the Chinese war theater. One of the founders of New York City Local 1 of the CIO State, County and Municipal Workers, she will be paid a tribute at memorial services to be held in August.

The Natl. Jewish Welfare Board has released a new booklet, "Fighting for America," which gives much valuable information in combatting smears against the Jewish people.

In addition to several stories dealing with the heroism of Jewish soldiers on the battlefronts of this global war, the 169-page booklet contains a list of the servicemen of the Jewish faith who have received honors and awards for bravery in the fight against Nazism.

In Trenton, N. J., it was found that 22.7 per cent of Jewish men between 20 and 40 were in the service compared with 20.4 for non-Jews in the community.

In Portland, Me., where Jews form 3.5 per cent of the city's population, Jewish men of draft age form 4.4 per cent of the total number eligible for service.

Other cities showed similar percentages.

Murray Lauds TWU Opposition To Philly Strike

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5—The Transport Workers Union was lauded yesterday by CIO Pres. Philip Murray for its vigorous opposition to the outlaw strike at the Philadelphia Transportation Co., in adherence to the CIO no-strike policy.

On Thursday night Pres. Roosevelt ordered the Army to take control of the system, and at press time service was resuming in Philadelphia, where the crippling of the transportation system curtailed war production.

Since the strike's inception, the Philadelphia local and national officers of the Transport Workers Union, authorized bargaining agent for the transportation company employes, not only opposed the strike but did everything in their power to get the strikers to return to work.

LIMITED SERVICE

Following a meeting of the union's shop stewards Wednesday limited service was resumed.

The strike was caused by the company's decision to employ eight Negroes to operate street cars, after it had been ordered to do so by the Fair Employment Practices Committee and the War Manpower Commission.

The Transport Workers Union charged that the strike may have been a deliberate piece of sabotae, instituted either by enemy agents or the agitators of race-hate groups.

MURRAY'S STATEMENT

Murray in a statement yesterday said:

"In the interest of our Nation's war effort, let me urge all employes of the Philadelphia Transportation Co. to return to work and to help restore their city to normal and full productive capacity.

"The CIO adopted a wartime policy that is wholly in the best interest of every working man and woman during this country's fight for survival. It is the everlasting credit of the Transport Workers Union that they upheld the principles of the CIO.

"The Union's adherence to CIO policy will pay the membership dividends in the future as it has in the past. Those who prevail upon decent American workers to strike in wartime inevitably bring grief and serious loss to such workers.

"I am sure all of the employes of PTC will resume their duties and continue to lend every possible degree of support to our country in this, its greatest period of trial, and join with millions of other CIO members in their forward march to a better life."

QUILL BACKS FDR

TWU Natl. Pres. Michael J. Quill issued this statement following the seizure of the system by the Army:

"The President and Commander-in-Chief has taken measures which he deems necessary to restore transportation service to the City of Philadelphia. The Transport Worker Union pledes to the President its fullest cooperation to the end that full war production will be resumed at once in the City of Philadelphia. We therefore urge upon all PTC employes as soldiers of the home front to respond to the call of their Commander-in-Chief."

GI Sheet Blasts Press For Over-Playing Strikes

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5—A GI publication this week took the employer press sharply to task for playing up strike news while failing to mention the outstanding production job that has given American fighting men all the weapons they need to crush the enemy.

Critic of the press for "attempting to drive a wedge between those fighting on the home front with lathes and drill presses, and their brothers-in-arms in Italy, Normandy and the Pacific" was "The X-Isle," overseas publication of U. S. Construction Battalion Maintenance Unit No. 559.

Said the paper in a front page editorial column, "Facts and Fancy":

"We hold no brief for any wartime strikes, but neither do we approve of the way the nation's press has been playing up those which have taken place, rather than emphasizing that American management and labor, working as a team, are performing a miracle of production the like of which the world has never seen.

"While it's true that strikes have occurred in essential industries, the percentage of time lost this way is so small as to be almost negligible.

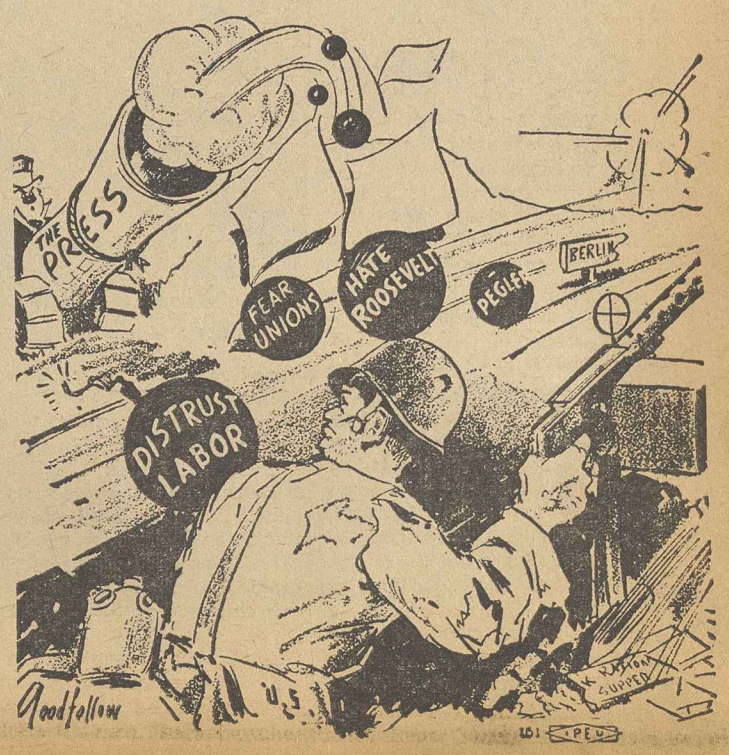
"Official U. S. Govt. figures put labor's record in war production between 99.92 and 99.96 per cent. That's a batting average of .999! We wonder if Army and Navy personnel, including those lads on the Coos Bay, can tie that—taking into consideration time lost through misconduct, AOL and AWOL.

PRESS DRIVES WEDGE

"Most of the big daily newspapers, however, seem to be attempting to drive a wedge between those fighting on the home front with lathes and drill presses, and their brothers-in-arms in Italy, Normandy, and the Pacific.

"With this daily barrage of anti-labor lies it's surprising that our servicemen are not completely poisoned by this propaganda. But they're not.

"In fact, the service newspapers are warning their men that it is the press back home which is crooked."



6 Unionists To Visit Fighting Fronts

Washington, Aug. 5—Three CIO officials named by Pres. Philip Murray, together with three AFL representatives chosen by AFL Pres. William Green, will visit the European war areas to get a first-hand picture of our weapons and war equipment in action, the War Dept. announced this week.

CIO leaders designated to make the trip are Pres. R. J. Thomas, United Auto Workers; Pres. Sherman H. Dalrymple, United Rubber Workers, and Secy.-Treas. David J. MacDonald, United Steelworkers.

The AFL representatives are Frank P. Fenton, director of organization; A. L. Wegener, Electrical Workers, and Eric Peterson, Machinists.

"The visitors will have an opportunity to observe the destructiveness of modern war and the necessity for constant replacements to sustain the force of our offensive," the War Dept. announced.

"They also will discuss supply problems and the performance of equipment made by American workers with Army personnel from doughboys and flight mechanics to generals."

Farmer-Labor Unity To Back Roosevelt Urged by Wallace

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 5—Vice-President Wallace this week issued a call to farmers and workers to unite in the "battle for full production and equal opportunity" be re-electing President Roosevelt.

The tocsin for farmer-labor unity was sounded by Wallace as permanent chairman of the Iowa State Democratic Platform Convention here in his first public appearance since the National Democratic Convention. He said:

"The liberal cause has not been defeated and will not be. It merely is in the process of being reborn. I ask you to look up—not down; ahead—not backward. When we battle for full production and full opporunity we battle for the common man.

"That cause cannot die no matter what may happen temporarily to certain individuals."

"Another function (of the Democratic party) is to keep farmers and labor united," he said. "In carrying out this second function the Democratic party in Iowa should preach to the farmers every day in every county seat town in Iowa:

" 'Your income from hogs, butter, eggs and cattle goes up and down precisely with the total payrolls of labor. The moment labor gets into trouble you get into trouble also. You must have a sympathetic understanding of labor's problems if you are to understand your own.' "

Haywood Asks Halt To PRR Firings

Washington, Aug 5—The third request by the CIO to halt suspensions by the Pennsylvania Railroad of equipment maintenance workers joining the CIO Railway Workers Union was sent this week to the National Mediation Board.

Allan S. Haywood, CIO vice-president and director of organization, wired the board that the company discriminates against maintenance employes after learning through its "espionage system" that they have joined the union.

He said the facts had previously been brought to the attention of the board to "avoid any stoppage of work" and the CIO has "endeavored to maintain in a scrupulous manner its no strike pledge."

Haywood added that there is no indication that the board has sent a mediator to investigate discrimination and suspensions.

The CIO leader asserted that he hoped the "board will see fit to assume the responsibility with which you are charged under the Railroad Labor Act to do something in this situation to avert what may develop into a very serious matter."

Mexicans Aided by CIO Group

New York, Aug. 5—CIO's good neighborly concern for the welfare of Mexicans working in the United States is demonstrated by the activities of a special subcommittee of the CIO Latin-American Affairs Committee, announced this week by Chairman Jacob Potofsky.

This subcommittee is making a special survey of the living and social conditions of Mexicans in U. S. railroad camps.

Cooperating with the War Manpower Commission, the Mexican Embassy and the railroads, it has already helped to iron out some grievances in regard to food, start classes in English and arrange for social events.

Members of the subcommittee are Martin C. Kyne, chairman, of the CIO Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes; Dr. Obermeier of the Natl. Maritime Union, and Miss Scordino of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Name USA Man To OPA Labor Policy Group

Washington, Aug. 5—John M. Thornton, Negro field representative of the CIO United Steelworkers, was nominated this week by CIO Pres. Philip Murray as a member of the Labor Policy Committee of the Office of Price Administration. The appointment was confirmed by OPA Administrator Chester W. Bowles.

JOHN M. THORNTON

Thornton, who comes from Pittsburgh, Pa., has been active with the Steelworkers since 1936. Until 1940 he was vice president of Local 1212, Midland, Pa., where he was employed at the Crucible Steel Corp.

Since 1940 he has been a member of the union's organizing staff. He has worked in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Maryland and West Virginia.

Lame Ducks Never Give Up

Washington, Aug. 5 — It's an axiom around Congress that lame ducks never give up. As their time on the Hill runs out, they keep squawking until the day of the new Congress carries them out still yelling "we wuz robbed."

This is what's happened to Martin Dies, the man who ran a career of labor and FDR-baiting to the point where he was afraid to face the voters for another two years' whirl.

Dies has just announced a new "investigation" of CIO-PAC. On the committee to this Nth attempt at a smear job he has placed two of his busted buddies, Rep. John M. Costello (D. Cal.) and Joe Starnes (polltaxer, Ala.). Both Costello and Starnes, though they had more courage than Dies in actually facing their voters, were defeated in recent primaries.

To add to this dish of lame duck mulligan, Dies has issued an "ultimatum" to the Attorney-General. If Biddle doesn't prosecute CIO-PAC within 30 days, Dies says, his committee will really let go.

Dies has added a new horror to scare the political wits out of the voters. It seems he found out that Sidney Hillman, PAC chairman; C. B. Baldwin, assistant PAC chairman, and Raymond S. McKeough, former Congressman and now PAC director in Illinois, all worked for the government at one time or another.

Mr. Dies, of course, was on the U. S. payroll for a number of years himself.

Radio Notes

Debate Political Action

A hot debate on a question which has stirred up a storm of controversy—"Should Organized Labor Take Sides Politically?"— sizzled over the air waves recently with a CIO representative presenting the political action program.

Kermit Eby, assistant director of Education for the Natl. CIO, who took on Maurice R. Franks, national business agent of the Railroad Yardmasters of N. America, Inc., in the radio debate, found some strange statements handed him to answer.

Franks, who said that "the foundation strength of the (labor) movement lies in the more gradual development of the older labor unions," argued that labor leaders had no right to "coerce" workers politically.

DEMOCRACY'S CHANCE

"How in the world can a labor leader coerce a man under a secret ballot system?" demanded Eby. Pointing out that only 28 million people voted in 1942 out of 81 million eligible, Eby said that "democracy has a chance to win in direct proportion to the number of people who vote," and that labor should educate its members to shoulder their responsibilities as citizens.

But Franks continued to talk about "coercion," saying at one point: "There is enough intelligence in every working man in this country for each of them to function individually without dictation by Sidney Hillman or any other labor leader."

"Mr. Hillman," may I repeat for the third time, replied Eby sharply, "does not go into the voting booth with anyone."

The Negro American—His Stake In The 1944 Election

By ERNEST CALLOWAY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5—Not in 75 years of Negro participation in American politics have the issues been so clearly defined as they are in this critical year of 1944.

With the victorious Allied armies building a ring of hot steel around Hitler's inner fortress and the hurried calls at home for immediate Congressional action to determine the road and the goals of a post-war America, the political issues and stakes of the 1944 election becomes more apparent with each succeeding day.

For the millions of working people, farmers, small business men and those in the professions, the minimum stakes are postwar security, a just and durable peace through international co-operation and the wholesale extension of the democratic process at home.

These are the issues and any demagogic evasion on the part of office seekers will clearly reflect a complete ignorance and callous disregard of the aims and aspirations of the common people.

With a clearer definition of the issues, the Negro's stake in this election is perhaps greater than in any since the Civil War. It will be at the polls in November that much of his future will be decided.

This is truly a year of decision for the two million vote-conscious Negroes in northern and mid-western industrial centers, who must carry the ball of progress for themselves and their 11 million disfranchised brothers, sisters, fathers and mothers who must face the hell of humiliating injustice, jim-crow, poverty and disease in the slave sectors of the old south.

THE ISSUE

The issue is not Republican versus Democrat. The force of recent events and the trends of the present time have created a more logical common denominator in determining one's real interest in the type of people we select to plan our future and to engage in the gigantic task of constructing a new world of peace, dignity and full employment.

Today, the test is determined by a new yardstick. It is determined by an honest recognition of responsibility to the all-inclusive democratic welfare of the people versus the antiquated, evasive concept of representing special interests, which are contrary to the broad win-the-war interests of Negroes, labor, farmers, business men and other minorities of the U. S.

A vote against anti-poll tax legislation, the soldier vote bill, OPA subsidies, Farm Security Administration, FEPC appropriations, anti-lynching legislation, federal housing appropriations, health and education bills are votes against the interests of Negroes as well as others and clearly place such legislative representatives in the old special interest category, whether they are Republicans or Democrats.

The stake of the Negro in this critical election of '44 is wrapped up in the struggle to extend the democratic process. This struggle is reflected in the legislative activity of the CIO and the newly formed National Citizens Political Action Committee, which for the first time in our political history gives the Negro a powerful and effective vehicle to prosecute his demands for security and justice in cooperation with labor and liberal minded citizens.

Thirteen million American Negroes have a first class stake in this new people's realignment of political forces in America, and they must come in on the ground floor where their voices can be heard.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

Congress is back this week, with a major item of unfinished business before it. This is the Kilgore re-conversion bill (S-1893) which Congress refused to act on before the summer vacation.

Sen. George (polltaxer, Ga.) is trying to shove a completely inadequate bill (S 2051) through the Senate in place of the Kilgore bill. This bill merely "recommends" that states pay unemployment benefits to demobilized war workers and veterans. It says nothing about rates, about allowances for dependents, or duration. No state can be bound by it.

This is pure demagogy. George's hope is to trick the American people with this phoney measure, while the Kilgore bill gathers dust and is forgotten.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Kilgore (S 1893)	Provides plan for reconversion of industry; aids workers, veterans in transition period.	Senate Military Affairs Committee to meet this week on S 1893. "Feeble and synthetic" George bill out of Sen. Finance Committee.	Wire Senators for Kilgore bill as only rational approach to re-conversion problems; against George bill.
Green-Lucas amendment. (S 2050)	Amends soldier vote law to remove ban on political news to troops.	To Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections.	Write your Senators to support.
Equal Rights Amendment	Wipes out social laws protecting women workers under guise of "equal rights."	Has passed Senate Judiciary Committee, is on Discharge Petition in House. Watch for new drive by tory women to put this over, endorsed by Dem. and Rep. conventions.	Write Senators and Representative to stay strictly away from this.
Federal aid to education (HR 2489)	Helps raise school standards by U. S. aid; more than 30 states lack decent schools now.	Held up in House Education Committee.	Write Rep. Darden, Education Comm. chmn., to start hearings; write your own Representative to support.

FDR Men Win Sweep In Primaries

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5—Support for FDR and a progressive foreign policy paid off again in primaries this week, as anti-Roosevelt and anti-labor men went down in New York, Kansas and Missouri to pro-FDR, pro-labor opponents.

In New York, the Rev. Adam Clayton Powell, pastor of the largest church in the world, Harlem's Abyssinian Baptist Church, won all three major party nominations, American Labor, Democratic and Republican for Congress.

Also in New York, Rep. Vito Marcantonio made the same record for the second time running and clinched his own fifth term in Congress. Both men had united labor support, campaigned on their record and on support of the President.

Among other candidates backed by labor in New York, Rep. Charles A. Buckley and Rep. Donald O'Toole won the Democratic nomination for Congress. Both ran against machine men.

MISSOURI TOO

Out in Missouri Sen. Bennett Champ Clark, with a 12-year isolationist record in Washington, lost by 19,000 votes to state Attorney-General Roy McKittrick, who was endorsed by labor. Clark promptly tried to alibi his defeat by blaming the CIO and the city voters, who registered in unprecedented numbers after a strong CIO-PAC drive earlier in the campaign.

Kansas voters defeated Republican Rep. Wm. P. Lambertson, who made a specialty of labor-baiting in the House and who wormed his way down to a new low in FDR-baiting when he attacked the war record of the President's sons.

Upstate New York gave the notorious Rep. Ham Fish, associate of convicted Nazi agents, the hottest race of his career to win the Republican nomination, which he got by 3,000 votes, narrowest margin in his 24-year career.

Political experts give his opponent, Augustus A. Bennet, who will run on the Democratic and ALP tickets, a good chance of beating him in the election.

Servicemen Tell Stand On Jobs

NEW YORK, Aug. 5—A sharp taste of the way servicemen feel about jobs and wages now and after the war was brought to the War Labor Board panel hearing CIO's third largest union in its case for a raise and an annual wage from the General Electric Co.

It came from three ex-servicemen presented to the WLB by Albert J. Fitzgerald, president of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers. All three of the men are UE members, all work at GE in Schenectady, all wear the Purple Heart for wounds received in action. They're married, one is the father of a small child.

One of them, former S/Sgt. Donald V. Surdam, wounded by shrapnel in the Solomons, acted as spokesman. This is what he said:

"It was a shock to me to find out when I got back how little my pay would buy. My wife and I barely manage to get along on my wages."

His wages, he explained, averaged around $44 a week, working 48 hours at 84.5 cents and hour. Before he went to war, he got $1.17. His wounds have kept him from doing his old job, though lately he's been trying it again.

POSTWAR CONCERN

Asked by Pres. Fitzgerald what was the main postwar concern of his comrades still in the armed forces, Surdam replied without hesitation: "The men I left in the Solomons are concerned for jobs. They are interested in what kind of jobs there will be for them when they get back."

They're also interested, along with workers back home, in the annual guaranteed wage that is part of UE's case and of the Steel and other CIO cases now before the WLB, Surdam pointed out.

SECURITY FOR THE NATION

The annual wage will give security not only to the workers but also to the nation, since it will keep purchasing power up and prevent unemployment, UE Representative Joseph Dermody, arguing on this demand, told the panel.

"The purchasing power of the people will determine the extent of the domestic market," he said. "A guaranteed weekly income cannot be considered the special interest of labor alone, but the interest of the entire country.

"To those who may say, 'Show us the orders, show us the customers,' we can say, 'We will show you a quarter million potential customers right in these two companies (GE and Westinghouse) if full employment is maintained.' "

The GE case, based on similar demands and arguments to those in the Westinghouse case heard last week, goes after panel recommendations to the full WLB for final decision.

Winchell Pays Off

New York, Aug. 5—A four-year court battle to win damages and retractions for libelous remarks against the Natl. Maritime Union made on a Walter Winchell broadcast and in his newspaper column has finally resulted in a partial victory for the union with payment of $9,000 for damages.

The suit was filed after Winchell, in 1940, attacked members of the NMU as "saboteurs." Those sued were Winchell, the Natl. Broadcasting Co., Jergens Lotion Co. and the New York Daily Mirror.

Committee Delays Kilgore Bill Action

Washington, Aug. 5—Congress moved close to a showdown on reconversion as it reopened this week after the summer vacation. The action came in two Senate committees, Finance and Military Affairs, on two widely different bills to deal with the problem of cut-backs and the changeover from war to peace production.

First action came in the Senate Finance Committee when the George bill (S 2051) was hurried through as an offset to the Kilgore bill (S 1893) and to a similar measure offered by Sen. Murray (D., Mont.).

The George bill is "a feeble and synthetic" thing offered only "to confuse the issue and solve nothing," CIO Prs. Philip Murray said in again asking the Senator for quick passage of the Kilgore measure.

Sen. George's (polltax, Ga.) bill merely recommends that the states pay unemployment compensation to war workers, veterans and government employes. It says nothing about rates or duration of the benefits. It fails to set up the national agency needed for orderly reconversion.

The new Murray bill, similar to the Kilgore bill in everything except the disposal of surplus war property, was in the Senate Military Affairs Committee as The CIO NEWS went to press, with indications of a quick favorable report. This comes after long stalling on the Kilgore bill, which was left as Unfinished Business No. 1 on the Congressional agenda at the time of the recess.

The Kilgore and Murray bills provide for a national, planned approach to the re-conversion problem, as well as providing help to demobilized war workers and returning veterans.

It is this part of the bill that bothers George. Just as polltaxer Rep. Rankin fought the "GI Bill" in the House because its unemployment benefits were too big for his taste, so George is trying to choke off the Kilgore bill for the same reason.

The Kilgore and Murray bills provide up to $35 a week benefits for a worker with dependents. To George and his fellow polltaxers, this is revolution. Its even possible that workers in the polltax South might get ideas about their wage scales from it.

Meanwhile, CIO members are urged by Pres. Murray to keep plugging for the Kilgore bill as the best approach to a rational plan for the change-over from war to peace production and as an aid to war production now.

'Slush Fund' Myth, Hillman Tells Press

NEW YORK, Aug. 5—Enemies of CIO-PAC and the National Citizens PAC simply don't make sense when they talk about "huge slush funds" of millions of dollars being raised to "buy" the election, Sidney Hillman said this week in an interview with the New York Times.

Nor do they make sense when they alternately charge the PAC with being a "third party" and trying to dominate the Democratic Party, he added, pointing that "they can't have it both ways."

"We are supporting President Roosevelt because we believe in the goals he has set, the Atlantic Charter, the Bill of Economic Rights and the full use of our resources for the benefit of all the people," he said. "If that is partisanship it is on the side of the great masses of our people."

ON THE RECORD

PAC supports candidates on their records, not on party labels, he said, pointing to support for Wayne L. Morse, successful Republican candidate for the Senate in Oregon and to PAC's opposition to Sen. D. Worth Clark, defeated for the Democratic nomination in Idaho.

The "slush fund" brickbat is like the "communist" smear thrown at PAC, it was explained—simply the familiar attempt to litter the trail with red herrings. PAC, Hillman pointed out, will not collect anything like the dream figures of three to six millions carried in all the newspapers.

Labor political action, he explained, will be financed by small contributions from the workers and other progressives who want FDR re-elected, mainly on the slogan of "a buck for Roosevelt."

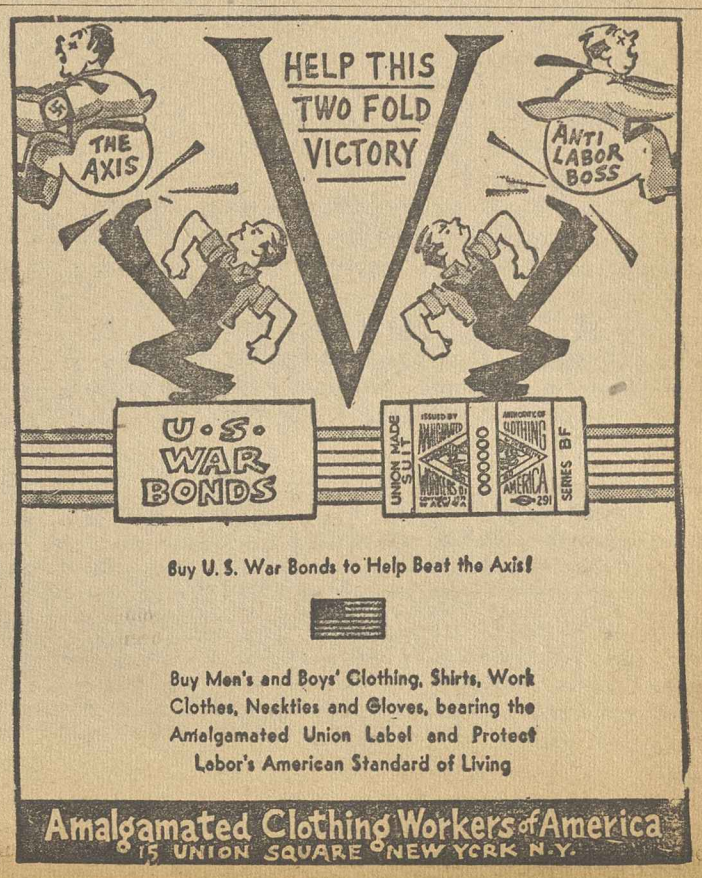
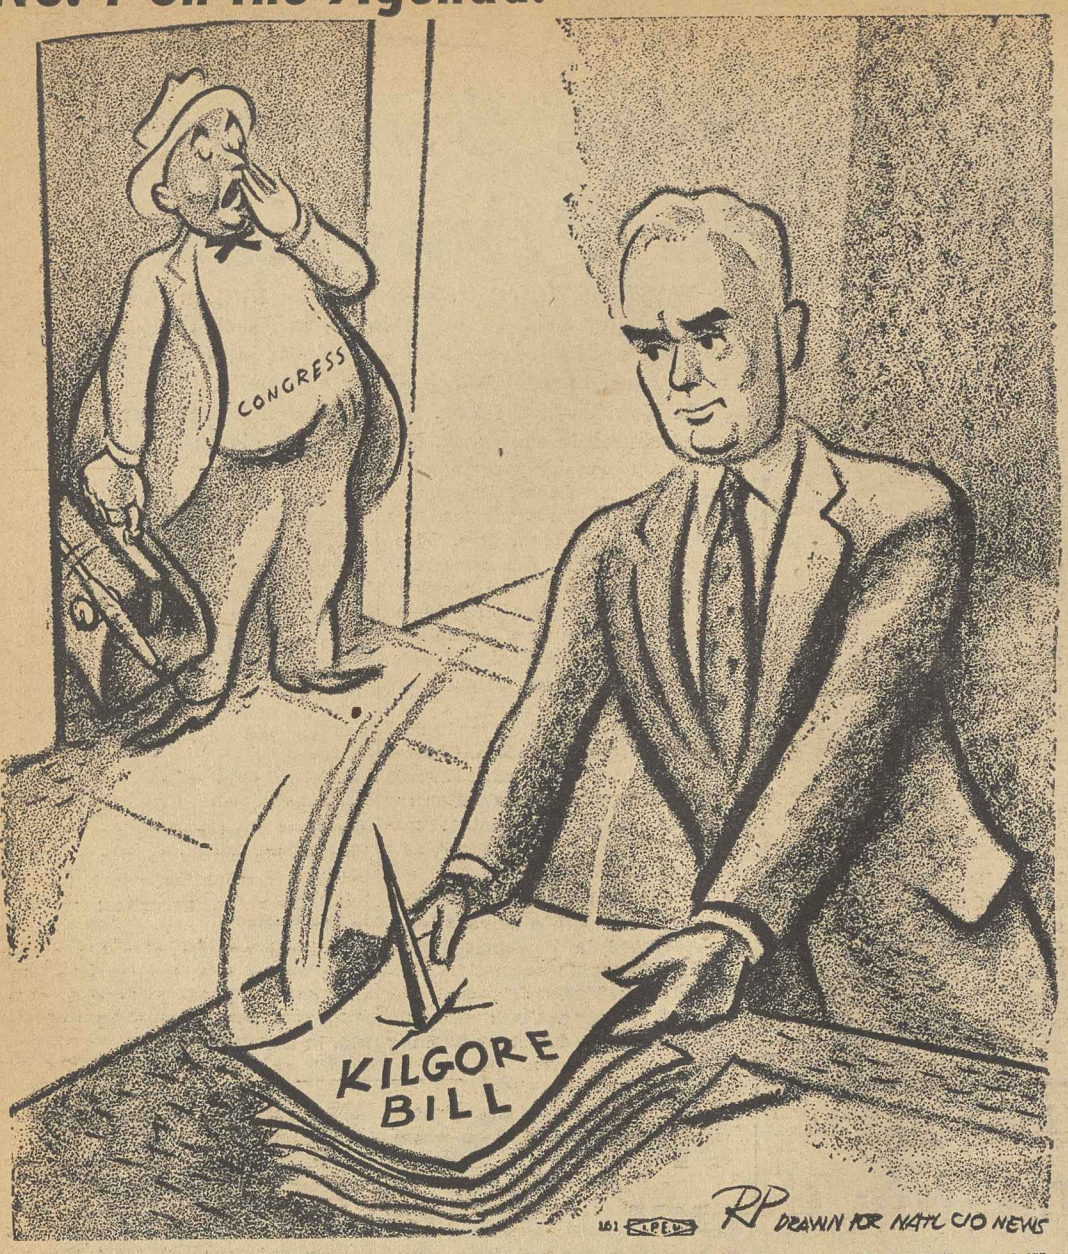
Work! Fight! Vote For Democracy Now



No. 1 on the Agenda!



Action Needed

Lieut.-Gen. Somervell's warning against production lags in certain essential war materials, and against over-optimism on account of military successes, is one to which all parties concerned with war production should give close heed.

It should particularly be taken to heart by the members of Congress now considering reconversion legislation.

For unquestionably one of the chief manpower and production problems today is the uncertainty of war workers about the duration of their jobs and the lack of any adequate planning and protection for them when cutbacks occur.

This not only leads some to look for more permanent peacetime jobs but also adversely affects the productive morale of those who continue on war jobs.

Congress now has before it the only effective solution for this problem in the Kilgore bill (S. 1893).

This bill provides the machinery for careful planning of all future cutbacks, so that there may be no further Brewster cases in which workers were thrown off their jobs at a moment's notice; and so that war workers displaced by cutbacks may be transferred at once to other war jobs or provided with adequate unemployment compensation.

Once this bill is passed, war workers will be freed from their present fears for their families' future security and war production is bound to benefit.

The "sense of urgency" for which Somervell calls should be felt not only by industry and labor but also, and above all, by the Congress of the United States.

Our speedy victory and the lives and future livelihoods of many of our fighting men depend upon Congress acting promptly and effectively. It must not stall or play politics.

"Unless Congress acts soon," CIO Pres. Murray declares, "America faces the prospect of mass unemployment and suffering while the war is still on.

"The feeble and synthetic George bill will only confuse the issue and solve nothing.

"Our members want action on real demobilization legislation which will promote maximum war production during the transition period, and furnish adequate emergency unemployment compensation for servicemen and war war workers."

All CIO unions and members should contact their members of Congress at once, urging the speediest possible passage of the Kilgore bill.

Get Out The Vote

The CIO's democratic faith in the American people is demonstrated by the fact that the major activity and purpose of the CIO Political Action Committee is to get as many people as possible to register and vote.

The CIO is confident that Roosevelt will be overwhelmingly reelected and a progressive Congress returned to Washington, if enough Americans go to the polls in November to reflect the real sentiments of the American people.

Its only fear is that the difficulties placed in the way of soldiers voting by the Roosevelt opposition, the migration of millions of workers to new war jobs, and other similar factors, may result in a small vote which is not truly representative of the people's wishes.

This belief and this fear find confirmation in a recent Gallup opinion poll which indicates that three out of every five persons who have left their home states prefer Roosevelt to Dewey.

Of these and other people who haven't voted before in their present election districts, 59% favor Roosevelt and 41% Dewey, according to this poll.

To assure Roosevelt's reelection and a Victory Congress, therefore, the first essential is to perform the democratic duty of all good Americans—to register yourself, to get your neighbors and fellow-workers to register, and to see that as many people as possible go to the polls and vote.

Where Credit Is Due

An imposing list of anti-labor, anti-New Deal and isolationist members of Congress have been retired from public life in both Democratic and Republican primaries; and an equally imposing list of progressives have won nomination.

Far be it from us to disclaim all the credit so freely given to the CIO for these splendid results. The efforts of CIO political action groups in getting workers to register and vote have unquestionably been a most important factor.

But, to give credit where credit is due, it is the American people, the voters of all groups, not just the CIO, who have defeated the reactionaries and nominated the progressives.

The CIO is merely proud to play its part in a broad people's movement which reflects the thinking and wishes of most good Americans.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

THE CURRENT propaganda against CIO political action reminds us of Shirley's Baby.

Shirley has imagination too—and a Baby that's frankly terrific.

How she managed to have a Baby at the age of four is a question no adult should be so indelicate as to ask.

Suffice it to say, Shirley's Baby has been with us nearly a year now, unseen but always at Shirley's beck and call.

★ ★ ★

Shirley herself, she freely admits, is a model child. She always drinks her milk, never takes cookies when she shouldn't , never touches sharp knives, and is responsible for no damage around the house.

But, oh, that Baby of hers!

If Shirley's untouched milk glass gets knocked over, or cooky crumbs tell their silent story, she will sigh and sorrowfully report, "My Baby did it."

In fact, Shirley's Baby does everything Shirley shouldn't do, and much that she couldn't or wouldn't do.

It plays with sharp knives, gets stuck on the neighbor's roof, and if you walk with Shirley by a traffic-crowded street, you may be startled by a sudden shriek that "my Baby is crossing the street!"

★ ★ ★

It has been known, according to Shirley, to hurl her from the upstairs porch into prickly bushes below.

On another occasion, Shirley ran from the room, fell to the floor and reported with real tears that her invisible Baby had chased her and knocked her down.

Only once has Shirley's Baby shown signs of reform. It happened while Shirley was eating her breakfast. A blissful smile of relief stole over her face, and she explained: "My Baby stopped hitting me."

★ ★ ★

The anti-labor press (bless its infantile mental processes!) also has a "Baby"—which it calls "CIO."

The Scripps-Howard press, employing its multi-million dollar facilities in political campaigning against the New Deal and labor, shrieks that CIO is trying to "do it with dough."

For this imaginary purpose, it supplies the CIO Political Action Committee with an imaginary fund of five or six million dollars, which the PAC neither possesses nor aims or expects to possess.

The Hearst press and Chicago Tribune, whose millions are spent in political campaigning against Roosevelt, and whose propaganda has not been untinged with pro-fascism, likewise view with alarm the "corrupting effects on our democracy" of workers pooling their pennies to get out the vote.

Should anyone accuse these papers of disrupting the war effort, they look innocent and say, "The CIO's doing it."

The DuPonts and Pews and their ilk may feed Dewey's campaign with hundreds of thousands of dollars, at $5,000 a head for each member of their prolific families and each of their numerous executives.

He will be aided by the millions spent by the NAM and similar groups for political propaganda, and of course by the millionaire anti-Roosevelt press.

But it's not the DuPonts and the Pews and the NAM that are "trying to buy a political party," according to Dewey's crowd. It's that "Baby," the CIO!

Reaction's "Baby" is always bullying people twice its size.

Remember how the fully-armed anti-union corporations, with countless gunmen and labor spies at their command, followed up the slaughter and manhandling of scores of unarmed CIO unionists by accusing the CIO of "violence."

Remember how they defied and broke the Wagner Act, firing union men wholesale and refusing to bargain collectively, and then accused the CIO of "lawbreaking."

But one of the richest figments of reaction's infantile imagination is the present charge that CIO is taking an unfair advantage of big business (with all the press, radio, slush funds and politicians that its billions can command) by inviting individual voluntary political contributions at $1 apiece.

★ ★ ★

This column has been definitely unfair to Shirley. So we hasten to add that the parallel between her "Baby" and reaction's "Baby" breaks down in many important respects.

For instance, the CIO is one real and growing baby that will never "stop hitting" reaction.

Furthermore, Shirley honestly admits her Baby is not an innocent second party but an expression of her own misdoings or her own suppressed desires. She recently announced:

"Do you know my Baby's name? It's Shirley!"

America's Number 1 Problem

By C. W. FOWLER

I

Re-conversion is America's No. 1 domestic problem now. Cutbacks and cancellations of war contracts are increasing every day. The defeat of Germany, it is estimated, will cut back war production by as much as 40 per cent. The change-over from production of cannon and machine guns to steel rails and washing machines will affect every worker who wants security, every serviceman who wants a job, every consumer, every businessman and every housewife in the nation.

CONGRESS STALLS

So far, Congress has done nothing to see to it that we approach reconversion with a national plan. The Kilgore bill (S 1893) has been deliberately ignored in the Senate Military Affairs Committee. The Kilgore bill offers a rational, planned approach to both the industrial and the human problems of reconversion.

Rather than take up the Kilgore bill, the Senate Finance Committee headed by Sen. George (polltaxer, Ga.) this week reported out the George bill (S 2050). The George bill is a meaningless gesture that simply "suggests" that the States pay unemployment compensation to Federal employes, that they borrow money to keep up general payments when their reserves go down and that merchant seamen be included.

This is not even a serious approach to the problem; it is simply an attempt to deflect America's attention from the job that needs to be done now.

EFFECT ON WAR OUTPUT

Failure to plan for reconversion now not only affects civilian production but current war production as well. War workers, watching the sudden layoffs of thousands of their fellow workers, as at Brewster Aircraft, get nervous about their own future. They have a natural desire to quit and look for the nearest civilian job where there seems to be a little less insecurity. Already scores of thousands of workers have started travelling in search of jobs with a longer apparent lease on life.

The system on cut-backs in practice now is no system at all. Labor is not consulted or represented in the cut-back process. No attempt is made to plan cut-backs so that the plants and workers involved can go on with other war work or can go into producing needed civilian goods.

BARUCH'S WARNING

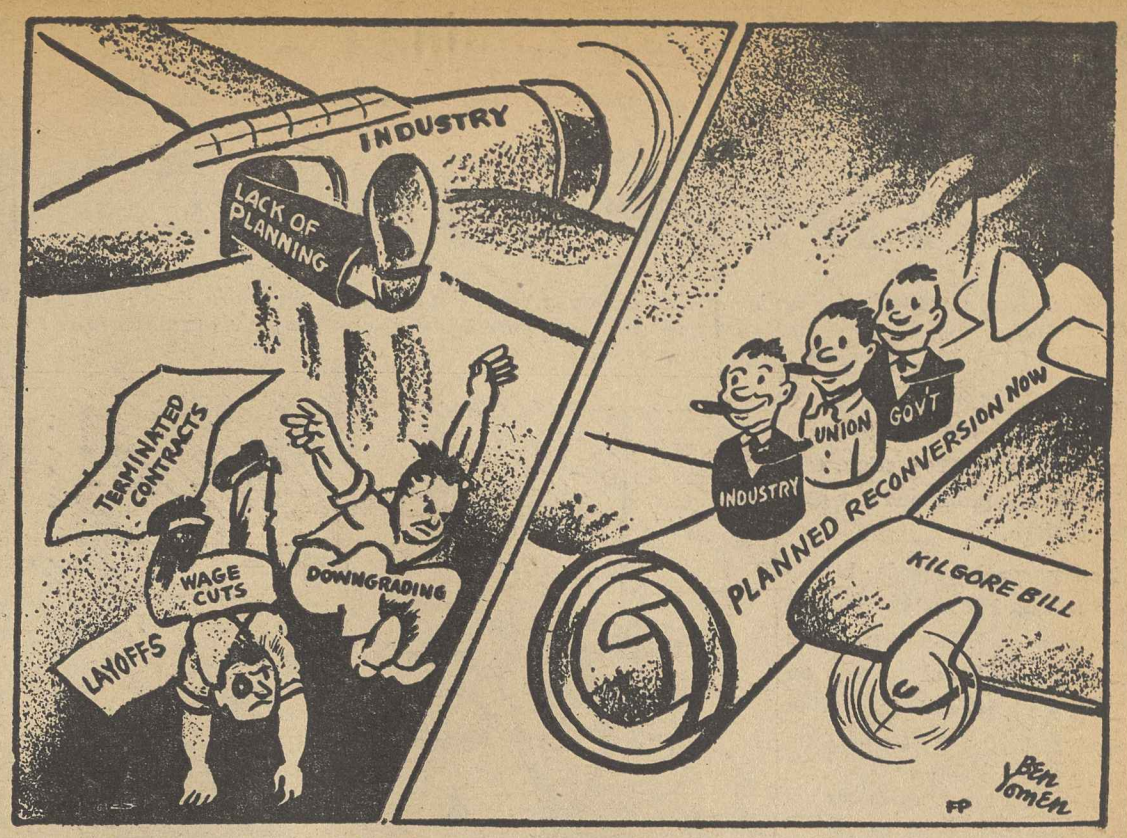
Last June, Bernard Baruch, co-author of the Baruch-Hancock Report on war and postwar production, warned the country and Congress:

"The nation is still months away from being prepared to meet the great adjustments that will come on X-Day when one of our enemies is defeated . . .

"For the good of all of us, but mostly for the sake of our soldiers and sailors, let us hurry, hurry, hurry, not only in winning the war, but in being ready for the peace.

"If this transition is to be handled without unnecessary unemployment, without further inflation and chaotic confusion, the Government must be ready for the swiftest action . . .

"Further delays will turn the adventure in prosperity that lies within our grasp into an adventure in adversity."



Who Is Affected?

II

Who is affected by reconversion?

Every worker now employed on a war job is affected most immediately, and then every other worker, consumer and housewife in the nation.

Take the steel industry. At first glance, you might think that basic steel would be little affected by reconversion, that it would just go on making steel, war or no war, with perhaps changes in the shapes and some of the kinds of steel produced, but that's about all.

But steel is used by the manufacturing industries now producing direct war supplies—the automotive industry, electrical, radio, shipbuilding, etc. If these industries are not reconverted to civilian production rapidly and efficiently, as war needs allow, the market for steel will shrink, mills will close, workers find themselves out of jobs.

If reconversion is allowed to go through without a national plan, workers will not be able to buy the thousands and one things made out of steel. They'll hang on to whatever money they have because they'll be afraid of a repetition of the unemployment and misery of the '30's.

EFFECT ON UNIONS

What about the effect of reconversion on hard-won union gains of the past few years?

If reconversion is bungled, if we have long periods of unemployment, anti-union employers will take advantage of this to hack away at union gains.

Unions don't flourish during depressions. Strong and successful unions are based on members working at productive jobs, not on relief clients. Some employers are looking ahead to a period in which they hope to take back the concessions they've had to make during the past few years.

Union wages, union security, union seniority, all the things that make unions strong are at stake in the reconversion process.

How about the consumer, worker, farmer, businessman or housewife? How will he fare after the war?

A fairly good hint of what some industrialists hope for in an unplanned reconversion period is seen in the preliminary angling for higher prices now going on.

Here again they're using the argument that "higher wages" won in war production jobs make higher prices necessary after the return to civilian output.

Piano manufacturers are already making this demand. Piano makers made gliders until the need for gliders was filled. Everybody will want a piano after the war. But if piano makers get a price rise after reconversion, why not radio makers, washing machine makers, auto manufacturers?

Without a rational, planned approach to this as well as to other problems of reconversion, we can have the makings of a first class inflation. Remember, the worst of the inflation of World War I came after 1918.

Would you like to go through it again in 1945?

Why Is a National Plan Needed Now?

III

Why do we need a national plan for reconversion? Isn't it a problem for industry—or for industry and labor together?

We need a national plan and Federal legislation for orderly reconversion just as we needed a national plan for war production and mobilization.

Industry can't and won't do the job alone. Already many big industries, pre-occupied with war orders, are trying to keep smaller plants from reconverting to needed civilian goods, so they can monopolize the market after they're through with war production.

UP TO CONGRESS

We have the basic elements of a national planned approach to reconversion in a bill before Congress now. This is the Kilgore bill (S 1893), supported by CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhoods.

The Kilgore bill provides:

1. A central government body to organize cutbacks on a national basis, utilizing all plants and workers laid off for other war work if needed, allocating civilian production as needed.

2. Help to war workers and servicemen coming into industry by giving them unemployment benefits when needed on fairly decent levels; by re-training those that need it for new jobs with cash allowances, including dependents; by transportation to new jobs; by sickness and disability benefits.

The Kilgore bill is No. 1 item on the unfinished business agenda of Congress. It's up to us as workers, consumers and citizens to get action NOW, before more cutbacks and the longed-for defeat of Nazi Germany catch us unprepared.

Your War Job With Congress

Congress is straggling back to work. Most of the Senators and Representatives don't have their heart in it as much as they have their heart in politicking back home.

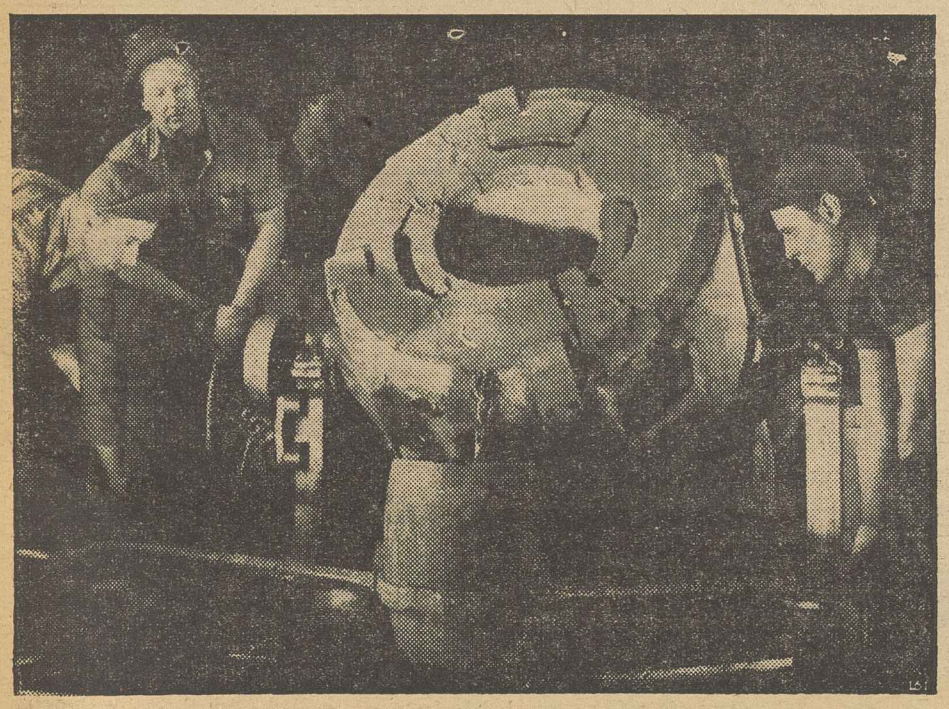
In an ordinary election year, maybe we wouldn't mind too much. But this is not an ordinary year—and Congress has left its No. 1 piece of business still undone.

This No. 1 piece of business is passage of a sound and rational re-conversion program, as outlined in the Kilgore bill (S 1893). The Kilgore bill is the only approach so far made to the problem of putting our war industries back on a peacetime footing, without dislocation and without mass unemployment.

Your Senators and your Representatives are supposed to have finished their summer vacation. They're back on the job.

Tell them that you want quick passage of the Kilgore bill, (S 1893) to smooth the reconversion road, protect your job and your security and the returning servicemen and women during the change-over period.

Write to them now—your job and welfare depend on what Congress does.



PRODUCTION OR POVERTY? All-out production with full employment, or breadlines—that's the future that faces the United States. Federal planning for reconversion of War industries will help them to switch smoothly from production of weapons to production of civilian goods, eliminating the necessity for picket lines, like the one right above, that was formed to demand jobs during the last depression. The best solution to the reconversion problem is the Kilgore Bill.

FM—Future Voice Of the People?

This is the second of a series of articles on a new development in radio — Frequency Modulation broadcasting—that offers tremendous potentialities for people's organizations to take their rightful place on the air waves.

Three of the outstanding features of FM broadcasting are the clarity of reproduction, certainty or reception, and low cost of operation.

Really good records broadcast over an FM station have all the clarity and tone effects that live programs broadcast over an Amplitude Modulation station possess.

While the process of recording music and voice on records has not yet developed to the stage where every sound can be "put on" a record, this is a hope for the near future, according to Miles Loucks, Washington, D. C., manager of FM Broadcasters, Inc.

Certain Reception

FM is certain too because it depends on the frequency of waves instead of the amplitude of waves to transmit sound. The static which bothers AM broadcasters is no headache at all to FM broadcasters because most atmospheric disturbances are of an amplitude modulation type which FM receivers do not respond to.

A good example of this was reported by R. F. Hoffman, manager of W3XO, the only FM radio station in Washington, D. C. According to Hoffman, the station which has only 1 kilowatt power, is heard within a five to 15 mile radius regardless of bad weather, while Amplitude Modulation stations of higher power are barely audible.

FM stations are much less expensive to construct and operate than are AM stations. Both the original and maintenance costs are lower.

Estimated Costs

The following estimated costs for construction of stations were given by FM broadcasters: 1,000 watt station—$30,500; 3,000 watts—$38,250; 10,000 watts—$61,000; 50,000 watts—$130,000.

Broken down for a 1,000 watt station, the cost includes:

FCC filing fee, $2.500.
Transmitter, $10,000.
Antenna, $6,000.
Studio control, $4,000.
Installation, $2,500.
Measuring equipment, $2,000.
Proof of performance, $2,500.
Miscellaneous, $1,000.

Loucks, however, said that these estimates are very rough and decidedly dependent on what postwar advances will bring in the way of better equipment, mass production and lower prices.

The estimates are also dependent on the location of the station. One broadcaster may be able to cover the area he wishes to reach by locating his antenna on an office building roof, while another may have to erect his antenna on a nearby mountain top to get the kind of coverage that he wants.

As an example of this, Loucks cited estimated costs, power and coverage of four stations, two in the high power class and two in the lower power, that have filed applications with the Federal Communications Commission.

A 50,000 watt station at Columbus, Ohio, will locate its transmitter eight miles outside the city, will cover 12,400 square miles with its signals, and will cost from $200,000 to $225,000.

Another 50,000 watt station in southwest Michigan will cover 18,250 square miles by using an antenna 420 feet above the ground, at a construction of only $93,000.

A 3,000 watt station at Abilene, Texas, will locate its transmitter on a hotel roof 263 feet above the ground, will cover 6,936 square miles, and will cost an estimated $25,000 to build.

A 3,000 watt station at Long Beach, California, will locate its antenna on a mountain peak 3,640 feet high, will cover only 64 more square miles, but will cost more than twice as much—$53,860.

Prospective FM broadcasters who want further information can write to the Radio Division of the CIO Political Action Committee, 205 E. 42nd St., New York City, or to The CIO NEWS.

FM broadcasting will cause concern to those interests who have monopolized AM broadcasting, preventing labor from using the air waves.

Boy's Death Spurs Child Care Project

By DORIS DAVIDSON
President, United Federal Workers Auxiliary, Philadelphia, Pa.

Down at the Passyunk Project for Philadelphia Navy Yard workers the children were playing. School had just let out and it was a sunny day. Johnny had come home from school too but he had nothing to do. So, he decided to walk down to the railroad yard and watch the trains. He started across the tracks but, be-fore he could reach the other side, a locomotive came rushing toward him. For Johnny the sun will never shine again at the Passyunk Project.

Everyone at the Project talked about the accident. If such a thing could happen to Johnny it could happen to Mary and Joe and all the other children.

The United Federal Workers Women's Auxiliary at the Project talked about it too but they had ideas on how to keep the sun shining for the children, and at the same time release many more women for defense jobs. They spoke to their neighbors about setting up nurseries and playgrounds and the neighbors were interested.

So the Passyunk Child Care Committee came into being and secured eminent community leaders as sponsors—Brigadier General Roland Walsh of the Philadelphia Quartermaster Depot; Rudolph F. Vogeler, director, Industrial Council, Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, and L. E. Tempest, president, UFW Local 118.

The committee circulated petitions among the residents and submitted these along with a carefully drawn up brief to the Board of Education in preparation for hearings on the situation. All this good work had its effect and the Child Care Committee won a clear cut victory when the Board authorized the establishment of a nursery for children from ages 2 to 12.

Favorable action is anticipated on the Committee's other requests for a teen age canteen and increased recreational facilities at the Project.

Out of the Passyunk Child Care committee has emerged a broader organization, the Passyunk Representative Assn. An Auxiliary member, Mrs. Mildred Feigenbaum, was unanimously elected its chairman.

The new association has already won rent decreases for wives of servicemen and is now campaigning for the opening of the food stores at the Project.

Passyunk families are beginning to learn a valuable lesson—that there is no limit to the benefits people can win for themselves if they work together. The Auxiliary members also learned a valuable lesson. They too have won these benefits and one more thing. Their membership has quadrupled in three months and they now have a considerable working staff with whom they can win further benefits for all.

'Whale of a Big Job' to Do, Is Army Warning

Washington, Aug. 5—It will be "a whale of a lot bigger job" keeping our armed forces supplied in the last half of 1944 with munitions and other material they need than it was during the same period in 1943, Lt. Gen. Brehon Somervell said here this week.

Speaking at a press conference in the enormous Pentagon building, the Commanding General of the Army Service Forces declared that the demand for increased production will continue until Germany surrenders.

"We are on the home stretch," he said. "We've shoved the other fellow up in the corner. Now we've got to deliver the knockout punch."

Calling for "a sense of urgency" to bring production up to the level needed, General Somervell asked the people at home to give the armed forces the supplies necessary to give the enemy this last punch.

How soon the war ends, he said, depends on the quick flow of these needed supplies. He praised both labor and management for doing a fine job, "though there are some things it's hard to understand," he added.

Waive Initiation Fees

New York, Aug. 5—All local unions of the CIO Barber and Beauty Culturists Union of America will be instructed to waive all fees in admitting to membership any barber or beauty culturist who shows an honorable discharge from the U. S. armed services, by action of the union's General Executive Board.

Radio Belongs to the People—Use It!

One of the major questions affecting the health of our democracy is whether radio shall continue as the voice of reaction or whether it shall become the voice of the people. The answer depends in large part on labor's aggressiveness in demanding that it be given a chance to present its program over the air waves. To aid this cause, the CIO NEWS herewith prints the third of a series of excerpts from the CIO Political Action Radio Handbook, designed to give labor the "know how" it needs to get on the air. The complete 48-page handbook can be obtained from the CIO-PAC, 205 E. 42nd St., N, Y. 17, N. Y.

Round Table Discussion

If you are planning a round table discussion, do not get more than four speakers. It is difficult for listeners to follow too many personalities. One leader and three speakers is a sufficient number to bring out different points of view.

The topic under discussion should be announced at the start. It should be casually repeated by the leader from time to time so that the listener who turns on the program after it is under way will know what you are discussing.

A round table discussion should never be less than 15 minutes long, nor over 30 minutes.

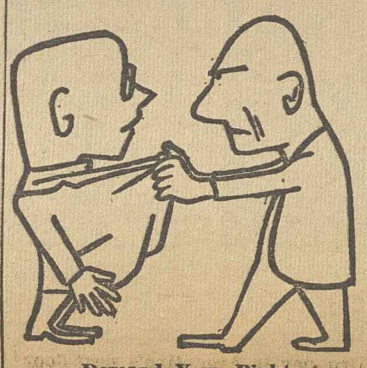
Don't allow the discussion to become merely a debate. The round-table discussion should add information on a given issue and clarify it. It is not the place for speakers merely to argue their pet points of view.

The Radio Play

The dramatic radio play is one of the most effective means of presenting the issues and the problems you wish to bring to your audience.

You may wish to try your hand at a dramatic skit, and prepare the script in your own union. If you have no experience in this field, we suggest you try out skits in make-believe radio broadcasts.

If your local union has some good singers or musicians in its midst, they should be used for radio programs. You may combine the five-minute dramatic skit with ten minutes of music of interest to labor.



Demand Your Rights

It may be possible in the near future to call on the services of professional actors and writers in your region to help you with your stage or radio presentation.

A progressive new organization called "Stage for Action," which has for its aim the dramatization of home-front issues, is establishing units in various parts of the country to help the people understand the vital problems before them. Some of the recorded programs are now being prepared for broadcast in your area were written, acted and, produced by members of this organization.

Suggested Topics

Here are a few suggested topics:

1. Labor's War Record
2. Labor's War Bond Record
3. Jobs for returning servicemen.
4. Full employment after the war
5. Why we are for the Wagner-Murray-Dingell Bill
6. Housing for workers after the war
7. Health for workers after the war

10. Why we are for FDR
11. The need for Farm-Labor Unity
12. The Negro in 1944
13. Women War Workers

If you need material for any or all the topics given above, or any topic you may develop, write to us and we shall try to send it to you promptly. We are planning to prepare a number of radio programs. We wish to hear from you what topics you are particularly interested in and how you would like to see them treated, to guide us in the preparation of radio scripts.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

Returning from the W. Va. state IUC convention last week, I stopped in Weirton, W. Va. With Natl. Rep. Robert Davidson, director of the USA drive, I met with a number of the workers and addressed the organizing staff. The town is not incorporated and is like every other company-owned town. Spotters are on the street prepared to do the bidding of the Weirton Steel Corp. and prevent, if they can, organization of the workers in a bona fide union. Brother Davidson and staff know all obstacles, are prepared to meet them, and determined that the job will be done.

Martin Dies is singing his swan song. He exhibits his hate for trade union movement, particularly the CIO, by his last public declaration. Martin couldn't give a fair investigation if he tried to. The CIO Political Action Committee does not fear any impartial investigation but request that corporations likewise be investigated. The record of Martin Dies and his colleagues, including Cotton Ed Smith, would be a good collection for the museums of the future.

Mason City has been under the city manager form of government for a number of years. Our members conducted a campaign against this form of government and were successful in petitioning an election to decide whether the people of Mason City wanted a city manager or council form of government. They were successful in defeating the city manager plan. An election will be held in March, 1945, to elect a mayor and councilmen to govern the city affairs. UPWA Rep. Douglas McMannes, and CIO Rep. British Gals Get a Break

AT REST-BREAK HOUSE: Hundreds of British women war workers, suffering from nervous strain, have spent a happy fortnight at this vacation home in the quiet English village of Walton-on-the Hill, Surrey. It was established with the aid of CIO and AFL labor and was formally opened last spring by Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labor and National Service. Picture directly above shows the lounge where soldiers are invited every Wednesday for dancing and games. On the first morning each guest has breakfast (top right) in bed at 9:30, served by one of the other visitors. Later they get to work on their laundry (top left).

Spanish Undergrground Still Fights Fascism

NEW YORK, Aug. 5 (ALN)—Spain's underground army which is today fighting the France regime, numbers between 50,000 and 100,000. It was formed by many soldiers in the Republican Army who could not escape Spain when the war ended in 1939 and has been augmented by thousands of young Spanish democrats.

Guerilla organizations are not new to Spain. They are rooted in the country's history. At the time of the Napoleonic invasion of Spain, they were used with much success.

The present phase of guerilla fighting is characterized by increasing coordination of the activities of fighting units and their growing cooperation with labor centers. The peasants are in consant touch with the guerillas and supply them with food and other necessities.

For a while, it is reported, France closed down all windmills because the guerrilas were taking the wheat being prepared by the farmers before the Falange could confiscate it.

UNDERGROUND PRESS

Spanish Republican soldiers forced to retreat to the hills took their equipment with them. They have set up illegal printshops and have their own radios. They operate two illegal radio stations, one in Levanto in the Mediterranean area and the other in the Pyrenees.

Spains guerrillas have four principal objectives: (1) to attack war plants, engage in acts of sabotage and prevent war supplies from reaching Germany; (2) to settle accounts with the Falange; (3) to release anti-fascist prisoners and those condemned to death; (4) to obtain arms from the Falangists to continue and increase their fight against fascism.

The following brief reports indicate that the defeat of Spanish Republicans in 1939 was by no means complete and that France's new Spain is not the tranquil country he speaks of.

In the city of Alicante on July 31, 1943, an army dynamite storehouse was blown up by guerrillas. In Austrlia some sections of a large metallurgical plant, situated in the mining area and producing war materials for the Germans, were blown up. Here the guerrillas were aided by anti-Franco workers in the plant who drilled holes in iron bars about to be put into the furnace and filled the holes with dynamite.

Also in Asturias, the del Viesgo electric line, which supplies many important industrial plants with electric current, was cut at many points and posts were blown up. In Puente Genil, Cordoba, a big gunpowder deposit was blown up on August 10, 1943, destroying at the same time a nearby ball bearing plant. On August 11 in Niebla, Huelva, another munitions deposit was blown up and two important railway lines tied up.

New York, Aug. 5—In one of the largest units of technical employes ever to participate in an NLRB election, the engineers and draftsmen of the General Electric Co. at its Philadelphia works, chose the Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians, CIO. The FAECT received 251 votes to 61 for no union.

NMU Asks Shipping Talks To Build Security

CIO's Natl. Maritime Union wants a world shipping parley along the lines suggested by FDR in his message to the recent international monetary conference, Joseph Curran, NMU president, said this week in a letter to the President.

"We urge that an international conference on shipping be placed first on the agenda," he wrote. "Only with stable shipping conditions can industry turn to peacetime production with assurance of world markets. We look to your leadership in this crucial matter."

Among the problems NMU would like discussed are "fair distribution of the world's tonnage," an end to "spheres of influence" and an approach to ending present big differentials in seamen's wages and other conditions, "especially with regard to the Chinese and the Hindu."

Fight Argentine Fascism

Support for U. S. Secretary of State Cordell Hull's condemnations of pro-Axis activities of the fascist clique in Argentina poured in from Latin-American sources reported by Allied Labor News.

Among Latin-American unions hailing Hull's stand were the Confederation of Costa Rican Workers, the General Workers Union of Uruguay and others. Meantime, Argentine militarists openly paraded in the streets of Buenos Aires shouting the slogan: "Let us kill one Jew today! one Uruguayan tomorrow."

Uruguay is Argentina's next-door neighbor, very small and with a pro-United Nations government of a strong, progressive labor movement.

'Greetings' Slap Lewis

The British Miners Federation, announcing that it would send General Secretary Ebby Edwards to John L. Lewis's convention in September, on his invitation, released a greeting to its host somewhat off the usual routine of such messages, AIN reports.

Announcing Edwards' trip, Federation President Will Lawther said: "We have never held aloof from the struggle against the Nazis. Nor have we adopted the isolationist attitude that was unfortunately adopted by John L. Lewis until Pearl Harbor."

Lawther and Edwards said they hoped the U. S. miners would join the British-Soviet miners' alliance now in existence.

Mass Jailing Fails

When 60 native South African workers descended on a jail where their leaders were under arrest, they got results—though they had to go to prison themselves to do it, an ALN story from Capetown tells.

Their leaders, heads of the Commercial and Distributive Workers, were thrown in the jug for demanding a wage increase of $7 a week. Hearing of this, 60 union members demanded to be put in jail too, and also to be tried.

Harrassed magistrates had to let them go within a day or two—the jail wasn't big enough. As another result of the demonstration, they got a conciliator appointed to at least hear their demands.

CIO Delegate To Visit Italy

Washington, Aug. 5—CIO help to union workers of Italy will be given without "gratuitous advice on how the Italian unions should run their affairs," George Baldanzi, executive vice-president of the Textile Workers said in announcing that he would make an early trip at the request of CIO President Murray.

Baldanzi, who is going over as officially designated by CIO, said his assignment "is to meet and talk with trade unionists, government leaders, the Allied authorities and the plain people of Italy.

"We have no special interest in the Italian trade union movement other than to find out how best we, as American workers and union members, can help them in their gigantic task of reconstructing their fascist-ravaged country."

Baldanzi, who also heads the Free Italy Italian-American Labor Council, will go to Italy as soon as military authorities arrange transportation. His passport application has been cleared by the State Department here.

His statement contrasted sharply with those of Luigi Antonini, of the AFL Ladies Garment Workers, who told New York newspapers that he was going over to "clean up" Italian unions, with particular stress on what he called "Kremlin influence."

New Booklet Tells of FDR Aid to Nation

The record of "a fighting President" is presented in a new illustrated pamphlet just issued by the CIO's third largest union, Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, under the title "UE-CIO Looks at FDR."

"From the dark days of 1933 when depression gripped the United States," states the pamphlet, "President Roosevelt has established a record, unequalled in American history, of fulfilling the needs of the American people."

Made up in chart form with lively sketches illustrating each point, the 24-page pamphlet shows Roosevelt's record from 1933 to 1944 on 22 selected issues, all vital to the welfare of the American people.

Opening with his stand for the Four Freedoms as the goals for which Democracy fights as outlined in 1941, each following page portrays his position on such issues as balancing the cost of living with wages, jobs, social security, racial discrimination, help for the farmer, housing for the people, the right to organize, aid for the underprivileged and economic security.

Fair Play On Air Hailed by Murray

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5—Praise for the work of the Ohio CIO Council and the CIO United Auto Workers Union in attempting to force radio station WHKC in Columbus, Ohio, to give labor a "break" on the air was voiced this week by CIO Pres. Philip Murray.

Referring to censorship of UAW-CIO scripts which form the basis of a complaint made by the union to the Federal Communications Commission, Murray said:

"This is of importance to all of labor, since it will furnish a test of discriminatory policies against labor which are common in the radio broadcasting industry.

"The censorship of which the UAW-CIO complains was decidedly not in the best interests of the public, which ought to be allowed to hear all sides of all questions," Murray added.

TO INFORM PUBLIC

"Presentation on only one side of a problem over the radio leaves the public only partially informed and hence incapable of making an intelligent decision on questions that affect the national welfare."

Meanwhile, in preparation for an Aug. 15 hearing before the FCC, the UAW-CIO has been securing signatures to "fair play" petitions at the rate of 1,000 a day from Ohio residents anxious to see that labor is given a "break" on the air.

The petitions, which note that the case affects the relations of all labor with the radio industry, point out that "WHKC has deliberately and consistently followed a policy of presenting the news and issues of the day in a biased, unfair and distorted manner." They declare that the station "has not operated in the public good" and ask corrective action by the FCC.

Asks FCC Hearing

Evansville, Ind., Aug. 5—The Federal Communications Commission should make certain that labor gets a fair share of time to present its case to the public over the air, the Evansville CIO Council said this week in a resolution which specifically asked that the CIO United Auto Workers Union be guaranteed "the privilege of using radio station WHKC at Columbus, O."

Report from Reed

General Courage Winning Battle For GI Health

WALTER REED HOSPITAL, Washington, D. C., Aug. 5—Mike and Sam, without fuss and fanfare, have served their country well. A guy couldn't go through the hard North African campaign or take the terrific pounding at the Anzio beach-head without doing honor to the fighting spirit of his country.

Mike, with his disarming, friendly smile, and Sam, in his quiet dignity, wouldn't consciously consider themselves as heroes, because more than anything else they are anxious to get back home and settle down to the business of living the everyday life that was interrupted by the war.

But, don't let anyone kid you—these two Pennsylvania boys are heroes in the finest sense of the word. Each lost a leg in the war, but each has conquered the enemy within himself and now devoid of the physical handicaps of self-pitying complexes that sometimes follow loss of limbs.

However, before Pvt. Mike Gaza returns to his home and mother at Clairton, Pa., where he was a CIO steelworker, and Cpl. Samuel King to his wife and job as a baker in Philadelphia, they must go through the well organized and highly scientific reconditioning program at Walter Reed Hospital.

Mike, who has five brothers in the service, lost a leg in North Africa as an Infantryman, and Sam, a Negro soldier with the 387th Engineers, lost a leg at Anzio.

The Army Medical Center, which includes the Walter Reed Hospital, is one of the largest and most important medical and surgical centers under the supervision of the Army Medical Dep't. It is here that Mike and Sam will get the finest treatment available, and nothing will be spared to restore their health, confidence and usefulness as good American citizens.

Surgery is performed here by some of the most eminent specialists in the country with physical therapy, occupational therapy, fever therapy, radium and x-ray therapeutic treatment in constant use by the hospital. Extensive radium research is conducted at the Center and radium treatment equal to that at the finest civilian hospitals is at the disposal of soldiers.

With the extensive advancement made in military medical service, and the development of blood plasma, penicillin and the sulfa drugs, the Mikes and the Sams of World War II have a much better chance of returning to civilian life free from any damaging results than had the doughboy of 1917. The Walter Reed Hospital is one of the several anchor points in this overall design of military medicine in its well organized function of saving the lives of American soldiers.

Mike and Sam are now at the Hospital's convalescing center, which was formerly an exclusive finishing school for young women. The atmosphere here is unlike that of a hospital. It has more of the comfortable home surroundings.

Mike and Som received their new legs from the hospital's orthopedic shop. Then walking classes became the most popular session in the day's routine. In these walking classes under the expert supervision they have begun to learn how the new leg operates with the least possible friction, and in a short period walking becomes a habit, and going home becomes the greatest thrill a guy can experience.

$ Diplomacy Out, Pressman Tells Mexico

Mexico City, Aug. 5—"Dollar diplomacy" and the idea that industrially retarded countries make good buyers of U. S. products are fading out in the minds of progressive American businessmen, Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, said in a speech delivered for him at a conference of the Inter-American Bar Assn. here.

There is "a new and encouraging recognition on the part of forward-looking sections of industry that the old dollar diplomacy and the old fallacy that our best customers come from the most industrially backward countries have outlived their time," Pressman said.

American business, and in fact all the American people, "are going to be in desperate need of foreign markets—huge foreign markets—when the war is at long last won," he added.

"We cannot get such markets unless Latin American labor, as it becomes industrial labor, is fully protected in its right to organize and bargain collectively, in its right to a wage-scale that gives it purchasing power with which to acquire the augmented flow of manufactured goods, and unless the health, educational and cultural standards of all your peoples are raised to a new level."

Pressman's speech praised the program for Latin American industrialization laid down by Lombardo Toledano, head of the CTAL, in which he called for labor-industry-government supervision in the interests of the workers, of private enterprise and of the nations concerned.

Radio Code Gag Gets Body Blow; Credit to UAW

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12—A body blow was struck this week at the Natl. Assn. of Broadcasters code, which frequently keeps labor unions off the air by banning the sale of time for broadcasts on controversial issues.

The punch was thrown by radio station WHKC, at Columbus, Ohio, needled into action by the CIO United Auto Workers Union.

The union has charged that the station, which has censored UAW-CIO broadcasts, is not being operated in the public interest. The union's complaint is scheduled to be heard by the Federal Communications Commission here on August 15, when the FCCC will consider renewal of the station's license.

In its answer this week to the UAW-CIO's charge, the station told the FCC that it was impossible to operate under the NAB code and that henceforth WHKC would not do so.

CONTROVERSIAL BROADCASTS

According to UAW-CIO Attorney Ernest Goodman, the station said that it will sell time to anyone to broadcast almost anything, provided that the program stays within reasonable limits—that it does not slander anyone, or criti-

U.S. Probes Anti-War Plot In Philly Transit Strike

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 12—Uncle Sam is hot on the trail of the plotters and perpetrators who engineered the transportation tie-up in Philadelphia for the purpose of influencing the national election and the course of the war for their own sinister ends.

The walkout was branded a conspiracy by many government officials and by the CIO Transport Workers Union which from the very beginning charged that the plot was also aimed to wreck the TWU, selected sole bargaining agency by the 9,300 Philadelphia Transportation Co. employes in a labor board election last March over the vicious opposition of the company.

CITES ELECTION

In charging the federal grand jury which opened its investigation of the recent PTC tie-up, Judge George A. Welsh said that its job was "to investigate not only a crime or a series of crimes, but something else." The judge described the events in Philadelphia as "amounting to a conspiracy," and reminded the jurors that they occurred at a time "when a national election is impending."

Earlier Attorney General Francis Biddle said that he also believed that this was a "conspiracy." Federal Prosecutor Gerald A. Gleason declared that the government "will pull no punches" in ferreting out those responsible.

International and local officers of the TWU exposed the use of the government's order to upgrade Negroes as a smoke screen to claim that there was a strike of a majority of the employes. Actually a small group of company union elements and company officials tied up the service through collusive action.

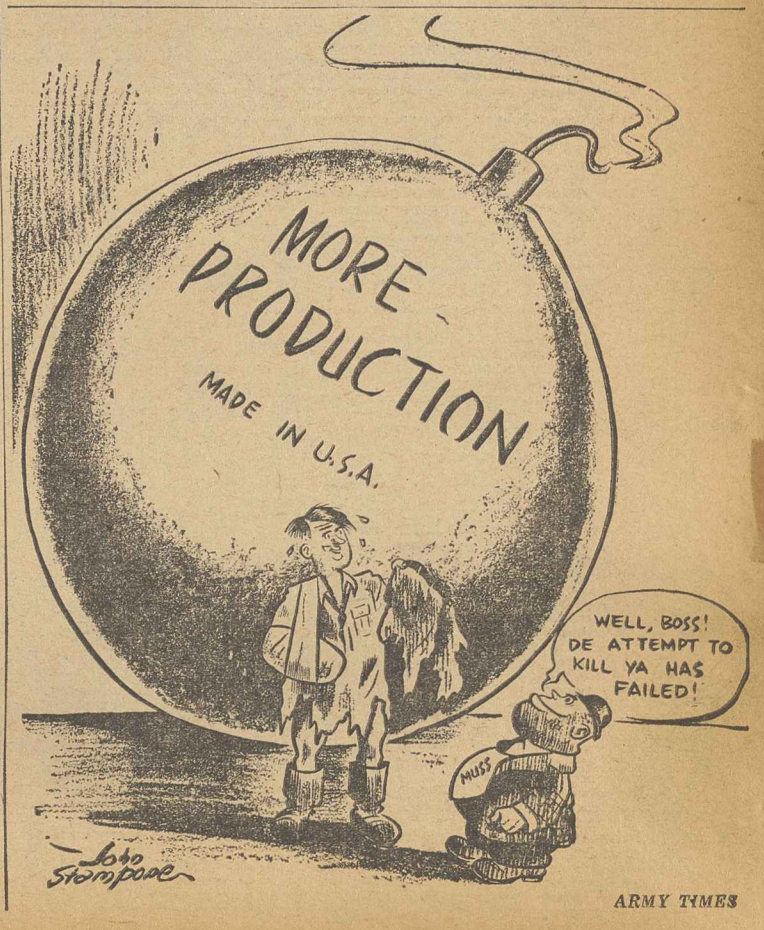
"As the rank and file leaders intimately associated with the men and women of PTC, we can assure you that the vast majority of these workers are devoted, loyal and understanding Americans," the TWU statement declared.

"They did not want any part of this plot. The national and local leaders of our union condemned this work stoppage. We are unqualifiedly against strikes or other interruptions of work in wartime. We are even more emphatic in our opposition to defiance of the policies and orders of our own government.

"Most PTC workers uphold the American principles and progressive policies of the TWU and of the CIO."

The collapse of the plot brought to an abrupt end the company's stalling tactics which have drawn out the signing of the contract for over a month, in the obvious hope that TWU would be smashed and the gains won by the union would be cancelled.

On August 9, the same day on which the grand jury investigation began, the first contract between the Transport Workers Union and PTC was signed. The contract, unanimously endorsed at a mass meeting of PTC members on July 1, brought gains amounting to three million dollars a year. It is retroactive to Feb. 11, 1944.



'Ike' Hails Negro GI's

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12—At home and abroad, the Negro soldier was up for some well deserved attention and citations this week.

In France, praise came from Gen. Eisenhower to two Negro units which had took part in the D-Day operations in Normandy. One was an anti-aircraft battalion which landed "under artillery, machine-gun and rifle fire" and despite losses "carried out its mission with courage and determination."

The other was a quartermaster company which went ashore under fire, salvaged most of its equipment, and within three days had 90 percent of its equipment operating on a 24-hour basis.

Meanwhile, in Detroit, Local 600 of the CIO Auto Workers Union was paying tribute to Major George Spencer Roberts, Negro leader of the famous 99th Air Squadron which distinguished itself in North Africa, Sicily and over the Anzio beachhead.

The UAW local presented the Negro airman with a check of $1,000 as a gift to all the men in the 99th, with the recommendation that it be used as a cornerstone for a fund out of which annual awards could be granted the individual who contributed most to understanding and cooperation between the races.

For This We Fight

Public Housing: U. S. Democracy In Action

By ERNEST CALLOWAY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12—You have seen these areas!

Among the lofty towers of great American cities, they rise as "ghettoes" and worm their way with tremendous social impact into the lives of every single citizen. In small towns they are the nationality and racially restricted areas just across the railroad tracks near the factory. In the broad expanse of our agricultural areas, their lonely existence presents the horrible picture of need in the midst of abundance.

For newspapers, they produce good copy. For sociologists and teachers, they produce dramatic statistical material. For artists, their poverty produces enduring art. For social workers and ministers, their problems produce jobs and sermons and for private real estate interests, the areas produce great profits.

They are the slums of America!

JUVENILE DELINQUENCY

Here in the blighted areas of sub-standard living, the health, dignity and confidence of one-third of our people was lost in the mad rush of indifference. Here disease inter-mingled with low incomes, crime courted ignorance and prejudice and juvenile delinquency carried on illicit relations with the high rate of infant mortality.

As one housing expert said, "Either democracy will destroy the slums or the slums will destroy democracy."

This was the depressing picture of an America before 1937 when the U. S. Housing Act became law, and President Roosevelt declared, "We are launching an attack on the slums of this country, which must go forward until every American has a decent home."

With the passage of the Housing Act and the creation of the U. S. Housing Authority, the New Deal made its boldest move in its recognition of the new responsibility of government to the people.

LONG STRUGGLE

It was here in the long struggle for decent low-cost housing that one of the first anti-people's coalition was formed between the northern reactionary Republicans and the southern polltax Democrats—a coalition that was led by Joe Starnes of Alabama and Republican Congressman R. B. Wigglesworth of Mass.

When GI Joe left for the front, the American people were slowly but surely winning the war against the slums. The slum clearance program has been suspended for the duration because of the tremendous need for temporary war housing. When GI Joe comes marching home, the fight for decent low cost housing will be resumed with greater vigor and understanding than ever before.

Before the war, it was estimated that this country needed approximately 900,000 new homes a year for the next ten years. The need was equally divided between the top, middle and low income groups.

Private enterprise was building at the rate of 360,000 homes a year for the top income group and 60,000 a year for the middle income group. Private industry ignored the lowest group and built practically nothing for them. It was here that the federal low cost housing program stepped in to raise the ante from nothing to 60,000 homes a year.

NEGRO NEED GREATEST

The greatest need for adquate, decent low cost housing is found in the Negro community. Victimized by restrictive covenants, high rents and low income, the Negro housing need is much greater than his population ratio.

This fact has been recognized by U. S. public housing officials, and from a racial minority point of view this program has given greater attention to Negro community needs than any other government venture.

Out of a total of 132,548 dwelling units in 230 or more public housing (non-war) projects, 46,300 or 35 percent are occupied by 160,000 Negroes.

Of the 65,000 war dwellings for essential Negro war workers, 24,000 are of permanent construction which brings to a total of 70,000 the low-cost dwellings occupied by 280,000 Negroes.

Within the U. S. Public Housing Authority, there exists a well integrated race-relations division which perhaps has made a greater contribution to government understanding of this problem than any other similar division or advisor on these matters in other branches of the federal government.

Under the direction of Dr. Frank Horne, this division carries the responsibilities of assisting in formulating policies and procedures to assure equitable provisions for minority groups and to review applications and plans submitted by local communities in order to evaluate adherence to racial policies and standards.

INTER-RACIAL UNITY

Under the public housing program, great progress has been made in inter-racial occupancy and in numerous areas different racial groups have proven that Negro and white can live side by side in peace, harmony and mutual respect for each other.

In an analysis of the patterns of racial occupancy of public housing projects jointly tenanted by Negro and white residents, it was revealed that out of a check of nearly 62,000 dwelling units in 45 inter-racial projects more than 13,000 Negro and other minority families and 49,000 white families were living in comparative peace and quiet.

An interesting story is given on how these problems work themselves out. In one project where the first families to move in were white, it became the fashion to welcome new residents by serving tea. When the first Negro family moved in, everyone suddenly lost the taste for tea.

Several days later, a group of the women called on the housing manager and stated: "We do not feel quite right about not welcoming the new Negro families. They are some of the nicest families in the project. We think they ought to be made welcome as we did the others."

The suggestion was endorsed by all and shortly thereafter white families were serving tea and welcoming the new Negro families to the project.

CIO Fights For Vet's Job

Newark, Aug. 12—The CIO is asking a Federal district court in New Jersey to order Joseph Grasso's old boss to reinstate him to the job he had before he entered the Army.

Grasso, 26, received a medical discharge from the Army. His old boss, the leather tanning firm of A. J. Crowhurst and Sons, Belleville, N. J., said he is of no more use because he has flat feet.

Grosso said that he had flat-feet for several years while he worked for the firm. His flat-feet, he declared, did not prevent him from completing 20-mile marches in the Army, with 70 to 100-pound packs on his back.

With Grasso's permission, Attorney Irving Abramson, CIO Allied War Relief Committee chairman and New Jersey CIO Council president, has filed a "friend of the court" brief in court in Grasso's behalf.

TALKING POLITICS at the National Citizens Political Action meeting in New York are four of the leading labor representatives on the new broad political group: CIO Pres. Murray, Martin Miller, legislative representative, Railroad Trainmen, Chairman Sidney Hillman, and Allan S. Haywood, vice president and director of organization. Miller was representing A. F. Whitney, Trainmen's president.

Senate Rushes Phoney Reconversion Bill; Ignores 'Human Side'

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12—The fight for a planned, rational handling of war production and reconversion to civilian output headed for a first major showdown in the Senate this week.

As the CIO NEWS went to press, the Republican-polltax alliance was ready to force a vote on the wholly inaedquate George bill (S 2051) that ignores the needs of war workers and returning veterans for protection against layoffs and idleness as the result of cutbacks in war orders.

Aim of the reactionary coalition was to block the Kilgore-Murray-Truman bill (S. 2061) that provides unemployment benefits and other security for workers and demobilized servicemen in favor of a measure that protects property rights and nothing else.

IGNORES WORKERS, VETS

The George bill, launched through a strong smokescreen of "states' rights," makes no provision for workers out of a job through war contract cancellations or for the thousands of veterans already coming back to look for jobs in industry.

The reactionary alliance back of the George bill was sharply denounced by win-the-war pro-FDR Senators such as Pepper (D., Fla.), Kilgore (D., W. Va.) and Murray (D., Mont.). George (polltaxer, Ga.) defended his bill, joining with staunch reactionaries like Taft (R., O.) and Russell (polltaxer, Ga.) in long tirades on "individual liberty,"

While the Republicans and their polltax pals were straining to rush the George bill through to a vote, Sen. Kilgore (D., W. Va.) had a few embarrassing questions to ask them.

How, Senator Kilgore asked, would the Honorable Senators like to be living now on an income of $1,620 a year? And how would they like the idea of losing that job and going on unemployment compensation at $15 a week or less?

How would they like to live on an annual budget that permitted them one suit of clothes a year, one pair of shoes a year, one overcoat every nine years?

The Republicans and their polltax friends didn't have any answer.

"bureaucracy" and the like.

Republican strategy, led by Vandenberg of Michigan and aided by polltaxers such as George, has been to drive through on the George bill under the pretense of a great concern and a great rush to pass some kind of re-conversion legislation. Even Dewey has been ordered by GOP bosses to speak out for haste in the process.

Concealed behind the GOP haste is a panting desire to write a pure and simple property rights protection measure into law while leaving the workers and the servicemen out in the cold.

Labor forces, united in joint CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhood action on the problem, are determined that the issue shall not be shunted aside by passage of the George bill.

Indications in Washington are that the re-conversion issue will be brought before the public as a No. 1 election campaign issue.

One Objective

New Political Action Group All-Out For FDR, Truman

NEW YORK, Aug. 12—Labor, farmers, Negroes, women, businessmen and just plain liberals got together this week with their eye on one common objective—the election of the FDR-Truman ticket and a decent Congress to go with it.

The occasion—in the progressive tradition of American political history—was the initial meeting of the executive board of the new National Citizens Political Action Committee (NCPAC), whose honorary chairman is ex-Sen. George W. Norris of Nebraska.

"In 93 days the American people will make a decision on which will depend the peace of the world, the prosperity of our country, the health and well-being of our families," the NCPAC's first formal statement to the press said.

NEED FOR FDR

"We need a President who has the confidence of the people of the world. We need a Congrss which will pass laws ensuring continuance of the great progressive measures of the past 12 years, which will work toward the goals of freedom from want and fear.

"The NCPAC calls for the support of all progressive Americans. Such committees for the protection of our liberties and the improvement of the general welfare are as old as our nation, are a vital part of our democratic American tradition, and never more important than now."

The executive board of the new committee, chaired by Sidney Hillman, is composed of Philip Murray, R. J. Thomas and Van A. Bittner for CIO; A. F. Whitney for the Railroad Trainmen; James Patton, head of the Natl. Farmers Union; James G. McGill, manufacturer of Evansville, Ind.; Dr. Robert Weaver, director of the Mayor's Committee on Racial Relations in Chicago; Clark Forman, secretary; former Gov. Elmer Benson of Minnesota; Freda Kirchway, publisher of The Nation; James Loeb, secretary of the Union for Democratic Action, and Verda Barnes, women's director, CIO-PAC.

Objects of the NCPAC, which is a non-partisan organization, are—1) to bring "the issues of this election to the people of America—the great issues of war, peace, full employment and full production;

2) "To bring to their attention the records of the candidates—their promises kept and unkept—on these vital issues.

3) "To urge all eligible voters to register and vote, and to press for the adoption of methods which will permit the men and women in our armed forces to exercise their right of franchise.

4) "To cooperate with all groups and organizations which share our common objective."

FUND RAISING

Explaining the question of funds to the press after the meeting, Chairman Hillman said that NCPAC's goal would be a top of $1,500,000—which would be sought from all groups and classes of people.

"Money is not the objective of our campaign," he said. "We will achieve our aims not by the aid of large contributions or substantial funds, but by bringing the issues to the people. We are confident that they will act on progressive, win-the-war lines when they realize what is at stake."

Bares Bias Of U S Cartridge

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 12—The U. S. Fair Employment Practices Committee opened its hearings here this week where it was charged that the U. S. Cartridge Co. was discriminating against Negroes by engaging in the prevalent Jim Crow practices in industry.

The charge was made by William Sentner of the CIO Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, who stated that the discriminatory policy had been adopted by anti-labor employers in an effort to "bust unions and maintain low wages."

John Brophy, director of CIO Industrial Union Councils, served as a CIO representative on the President's FEPC at the two-day hearings.

Malcolm Ross, chairman of the committee, stated that testimony showed that the problem of employing Negroes is not alone a Negro problem, but a community problem.

With cutbacks and layoffs already occurring, he said, one group must not be discriminated against if a dynamic democratic society is to survive.

UAW Head Says:

War Job Cut Proves Need For Kilgore Bill

DETROIT, Aug. 12—Need for the enactment of the Murray-Kilgore reconversion bill is underscored by a 16% drop in the nation's war employment, Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO United Auto Workers said this week.

Cutbacks and lack of planning were blamed by the head of the largest CIO union for the decrease of employment.

A survey by the UAW showed that approxomately 160,000 had been dropped by July from the payrolls of plants where approximately 1,000,000 had been employed at the peak of war production, Thomas said.

Of the 447 plants covered in the study, there had been cutbacks in 197.

Thomas said that only a handful of the 197 cutbacks had been carried through with any substantial notice to the workers and that "none of them had been carried through with effective planning for the transfer of laid-off workers to other war plants suffering labor shortages."

The UAW leader added that thousands of war workers have returned to farms, to homes, or to civilian industry where their wartime skills have been lost to the nation.

He said that the answer to this problem will not come through attacks on the patriotism of workers or through loud assertions that our war production program is lagging. Workers know that schedules on all items save a few on which military requirements have been recently increased have been and are being fully met, Thomas declared.

"The answer can and must come through the enactment of the Murray-Kilgore Bill which will make possible the full planning of civilian and military production and allow for the balancing of labor shortages against labor surpluses," Thomas said.

Dies Analyzed In First 'Biography'

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

Although the flamboyant oratory of Martin Dies will no longer boom forth in Congress after January, his record will not soon be forgotten. His evil influence on the American scene is made very clear in a recent book called "Martin Dies" written by William Gellermann, associate professor of Education at Northwestern University.

In 300 pages, Gellerman analyzes the Texas demagogue who was appointed chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities in 1938, and in the years that followed did more than any other legislator to undermine democracy—all in the name of protecting the "American way of life."

Searching for the clue to Dies' behavior, Gellermann looks into the career of his father, Martin Dies the first, who was also a Congressman, and found it was a case of "like father like son."

LIKE FATHER LIKE SON

One of the favorite subjects of Martin Dies Senior, who served in Congress from 1909 to 1919, concerned the "dangers of foreign immigration."

"I love this great Republic of free men, and I pray the God of Nations that free government may not perish from this land," Dies the first cried in a speech in 1910. "I am not an alarmist, Mr. Chairman, but it is my deliberate conviction that our free institutions are in danger."

Martin Dies Junior took over the line of his father, fear of foreign ideas and influences and adapted it to his time.

In his study of the present Dies activities, Gellerman reports that he read every speech made by Dies in Congress to be found in the Congressional Record, every word spoken by him and recorded in the hearings and in all the reports of his committee.

DIES' IDEAS

This reading, he said, made it clear "that Dies had very definite ideas on subversive and un-American activities and propaganda long before his committee came into existence. The Dies committee later investigated and found out what Dies knew even before the investigation began.

"The hearings were organized as an agency to prove certain things that Dies wanted to prove; consequently he often rejected witnesses whose testimony might have led to other conclusions than the ones which he had in mind at the outset."

To show this bias, Gellerman quotes extensively from testimony given at the hearings to bring out one of the favorite propaganda techniques used by the Dies Committee—the card-stacking device.

Witnesses sympathetic with the red-baiting policies of Dies were permitted to testify practically unrestricted, but after charges against groups and individuals were made, those accused were refused the right to be heard in their own defense.

RED-BAITING MAIN AIM

In brief, says Gellerman, "Dies has used the hearings, the reports, his press releases, speeches, radio address and his book to red-bait the Roosevelt administration and all progressive organizations.

"He has capitalized throughout on the popular conception that Congressional committees are fact-finding, when a matter of fact, the Dies Committee has done little more than to declare its own basic prejudices as if they were 'facts' revealed by careful investigation."

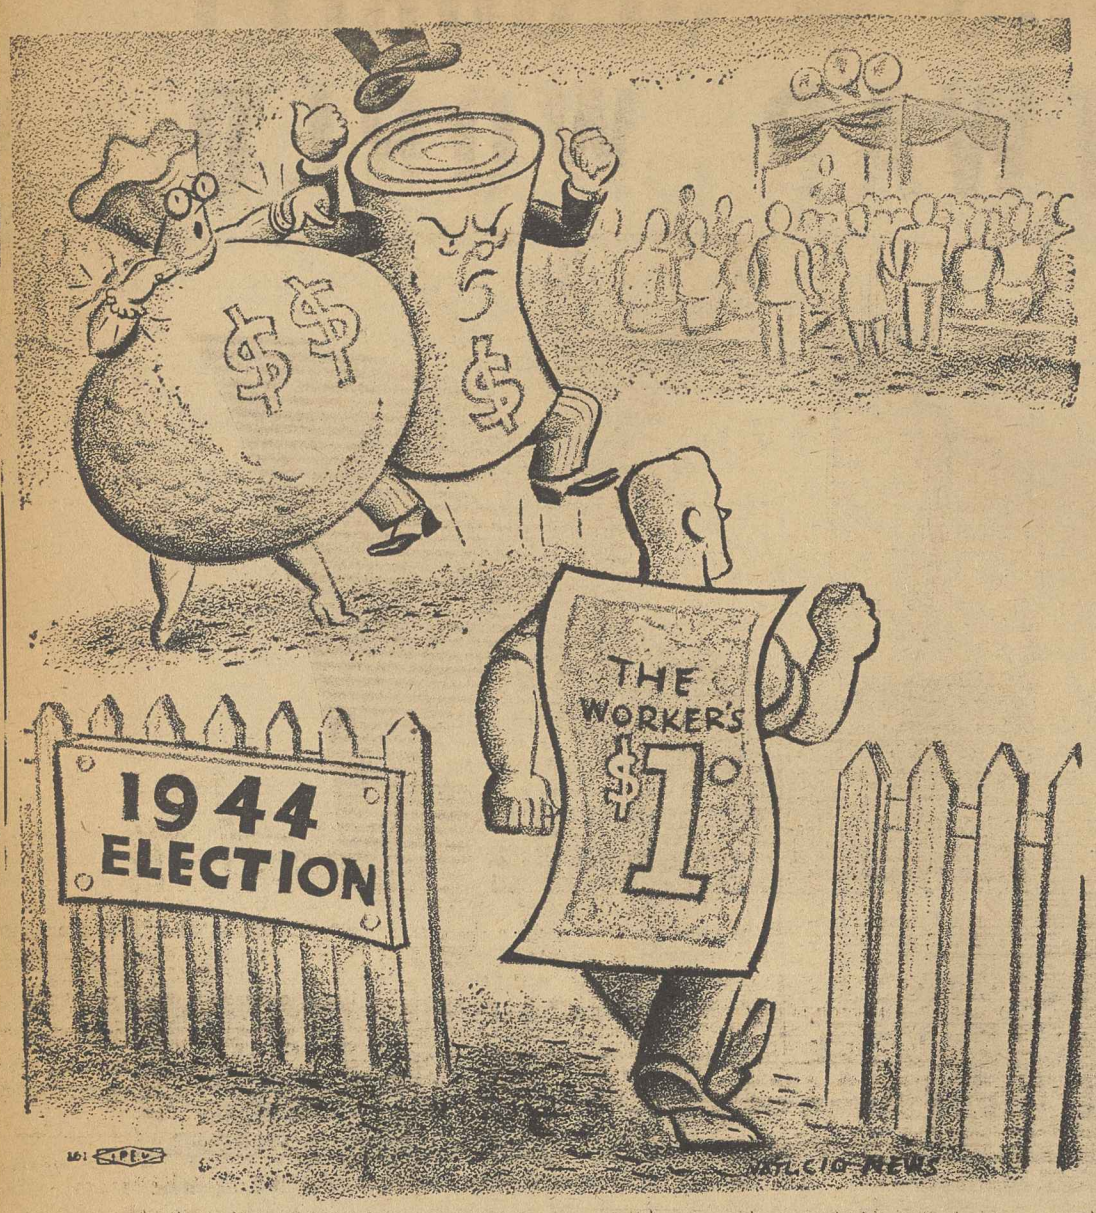
'Heavens! The Proletariat!



Chaos or Common Sense?

As this is written, the Senate is moving toward action on re-conversion. This action is a vote on the wholly inadequate George bill (S. 2051), which ignores the "human side" of the re-conversion problem and also fails to do a proper job on the planning aspects.

The Kilgore-Murray-Truman bill (S. 2061) did take care of the "human side" as well as the business and planning side. It outlined a real offensive against economic dislocation, unemployment and against a return to the Hoover brand of human misery after the war.

The fight is still on, not only in the House version of the Kilgore-Murray-Truman bill but also before the American people. In fact, the campaign to take this most important of war and postwar issues to the people will now get under way full steam.

Though the initial credit for bringing reconversion forward as a national issue goes to labor, and particularly to the CIO under Philip Murray's leadership, the issue did not remain simply a "labor" concern.

Farmers, through the Natl. Farmers Union, church groups, housewives and businessmen have joined with labor in pressing for a rational, planned approach to the problem of maintaining war production and of the change-over to civilian output as it becomes necessary.

The entire labor movement has been united throughout the campaign, first for the Kilgore bill and then for the present Kilgore-Murray-Truman measure. CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhoods stand together on this issue more than on any previous one.

The Republicans and their polltax allies in the Senate have tried to befuddle the American people with their George bill and their false slogans about "state's rights." They have not succeeded. The voters are aware of the real issue behind the demagogic smokescreen put up on the Senate floor and in the Dewey newspapers.

The real issue is simply this. Shall we have a rational, planned approach to war production and re-conversion — an approach that helps industry, the workers, the returning veterans and the whole of America?

Or shall we have the Republican-polltaxer approach that means chaos, unemployment, misery and national disunity that will make Hoover's first depression look like a picnic?

The answer is in the hands of the American people—and will be given in the continuing fight for a Kilgore-Murray-Truman bill and in the election on November 7.

No Need to Read?

Word comes via Associated Press that U. S. troops in Britain are not to be allowed to buy British newspapers in their camps until after the U. S. election in November. This was done, according to the AP story, in conformity with the soldiers' vote law which says in Title V: "No member of the U. S. armed forces shall have his vote influenced in any way."

Acting under this, the Army has already forbidden U. S. soldiers from reading American newspapers—on the ground that they might seek to influence their votes. Senator Taft (R., O.) was the author of Title V of the phoney soldiers' vote law that he and fellow reactionaries put through Congress.

We have a doubt and a suggestion to plant in Senator Taft's mind. The doubt is this: Why forbid soldiers from reading U. S. newspapers, the majority of which are for Dewey and against FDR? Isn't that undoing your own purpose?

The suggestion is: Why not ask the Army to lift its ban on illiterates since you seem to think that the armed forces shouldn't be allowed to read anything?

'To Be Regretted'

Former Senator George W. Norris, veteran of 50 years of liberalism in American public life, wrote this letter to the Natl. Citizens Political Action Committee meeting in New York this week. After regretting his inability to attend and lead the meeting as Honorary Chairman, Senator Norris made this damning indictment of Dewey-Republican sabotage of the soldier vote:

"I cannot understand how any patriotic American can afford to be classified in this campaign of hate against our President, the Commander-in-Chief of our fighting men all over the world.

"It is to be regretted of course that the action of an unfriendly Congress has made it difficult and perhaps impossible for thousands of these men to express their wish at the ballot box. I do not see how the American people can stand idly by and do nothing on this question."

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

IN LESS than ten years the CIO has led two great forward marches of labor that have been startling in their rapidity, sweeping in their success and far-reaching in their scope.

It has unionized the basic industries of America, and it has made labor politically effective.

The parallels between CIO's original industrial drive and its present political drive are numerous and striking, particularly in the type of opposition they have excited.

★ ★ ★

There was nothing new or revolutionary about the idea of union organization or industrial unionism when CIO set out to organize the unorganized millions.

But this natural development had been artificially retarded by the great open-shop corporations, their company unions and their anti-labor terror, and by the crazyquilt craft policies of the AFL.

So, when the CIO broke through these artificial barriers, the river of progress surged forward in such a flood that many folks thought a revolution was under way.

★ ★ ★

The anti-union employers launched a campaign of counter-propaganda that rose to hysterical frenzy.

They inflated CIO successes into a bolshevik bogey, they called every setback a collapse and every strike a revolution.

At the same time they combined their anti-CIO propaganda with anti-New Deal propaganda, charging the administration and labor with all sorts of conspiracies.

Special efforts were made to divide and conquer labor, and some AFL leaders fell into this trap by repeating the ridiculous propaganda of labor's enemies.

Yet every thinking unionist knew CIO's aim was simply to promote collective bargaining; the AFL membership welcomed the wave of union organization; and AFL as well as CIO unions benefited from the general labor advance.

★ ★ ★

Looking back now, everyone can see how fantastic was the propaganda against CIO union organization.

As corporation after corporation signed collective bargaining agreements, as CIO unions became a recognized part of community life, the anti-CIO lies disappeared into thin air.

What remains for all to see is a labor movement that has doubled and tripled in strength, thanks to the general forward march led by the CIO.

Today, CIO is leading another great forward march—the march of labor political action.

Again there is nothing new or revolutionary in this idea. Labor has always sought to play a part in American political life.

All CIO is doing is to make labor's political activity more effective, to get more workers to register and vote, and to unite labor politically with other progressive voters.

But this natural evolution, common to all democracies, has been artificially retarded in America by the before-mentioned lag in union organization, by the sluggish labor leadership and by other factors.

So, now that CIO has cleared away old barriers and given an intelligent lead, American workers are becoming active politically with such a surge of enthusiasm that again many think some kind of a revolution is under way.

★ ★ ★

Once more all the forces of reaction have taken alarm and launched a campaign of fantastic and hysterical propaganda.

All the old anti-CIO lies are trotted out again. Every time labor aids in a people's victory at the polls CIO is pictured as some kind of a monstrous red menace. Every weakness is hailed as a sign of collapse.

Anti-labor propaganda is again combined with anti-Roosevelt propaganda, and again special efforts are made to divide and conquer the advancing labor forces.

Again some labor leaders fall into reaction's trap and repeat the silly lies of labor's enemies.

★ ★ ★

But now, as before, this propaganda is really a tribute to labor's growing strength.

The vast majority of AFL, Rail Brotherhood and other union members, as well as all other progressives, want to see Roosevelt and a progressive Congress elected.

They are delighted that labor is playing a more effective part politically and are working jointly with the CIO, or along parallel lines, for purposes which are common to all forward-looking Americans.

And when the shouting dies away, and the present lies disappear like pricked bubbles, everyone will look back on 1944 as the year when American working people first rose more fully to their democratic responsibilities and began to assume the place in America's political life to which their numbers and their citizenship entitle them.

Murray Says 3 R's 'Must'

Washington, Aug. 12—Support for a National Go-To-School Drive sponsored by the U. S. Children's Bureau and the U. S. Office of Education was urged this week by CIO Pres. Philip Murray.

"Our boys and girls are the foundation upon which we build our hopes for a better tomorrow," Murray said in a letter sent to CIO affiliates and officials with a copy of 20-page handbook for communities prepared by the two government agencies.

"To protect the future, we must see that our boys and girls carry on with their education now. So won't you, in whatever capacity you speak, write or act for the CIO, encourage the boys and girls in your community to return to school when school opens, to attend regularly, and to study hard?"

The handbook, addressed to parents, teachers, students and all other citizens concerned with the future of our Nation, urges aid in efforts to "enroll and keep the nation's boys and girls of high school age in school, either full time or in a school and work program.

TRADE—FOR JOBS & SECURITY IN THE POSTWAR WORLD

Bretton Woods: Key to Postwar Trade Expansion

By C. W. FOWLER

Jobs for five million Americans a year from exports will be a postwar reality—if plans worked out at a meeting in a little New Hampshire resort town are carried out by the U. S. Congress and by the parliaments of 43 other nations represented at the meeting.

The meeting went under a long official name—"United Nations Monetary and Financial Conference"—shortened in the press to the name of the town where it took place Bretton Woods.

Behind the long official name lies an attempt on the part of the anti-Axis nations to make sure of two things for the future peace of the world: (1) jobs and prosperity based on expanded world trade, and (2) prevention of imperialism and the fascist economic preparation that preceded World War II.

Needed: Postwar Jobs For 60,000,000

Let's look at the jobs angle first. The "miracle of production" created by American union workers to meet war needs has enormously expanded the productive power of American industry. For postwar prosperity and stability, we will need to find jobs for a working force of some 60,000,000 or more men and women. These jobs can't be found unless we expand our export trade far beyond the highest point it reached in 1929.

Europe and the rest of the world need our goods. It can't buy them unless it has the purchasing power and the financial and political stability to do so. Bretton Woods laid the foundations to make this possible, by laying out the plans for full and unfettered world trade.

Control and Stability For All Currencies

How was this done? To begin with, the Bretton Woods conference laid the basis for the control and permanent stabilization of world currencies. Foreign exchange will no longer be at the mercy of selfish financial or reactionary political interests. It will be controlled by all the United Nations, through the "International Fund" and the "Bank for International Reconstruction and Development" set up at the conference.

Those who remember the '30's will recall how countries deliberately drove down the value of their own money in order to gain an illusory advantage in world trade by being able to undercut prices. In the end, of course, their own workers paid the cost in debasement of living standards at home.

Remember Hoover and World Depression?

Those who remember Herbert Hoover and the long world depression will also recall how the private bankers of wealthy countries used loans to enforce their will on less powerful nations.

Nazi Germany, for example, forced unwanted goods or "blocked marks" on smaller nations in return for the raw materials the Nazis were stockpiling for war. The threat of holding up credit has been used in the past to compel a change in the political complexion of nations needing loans—as was done during the Popular Front days in France and earlier in Spain.

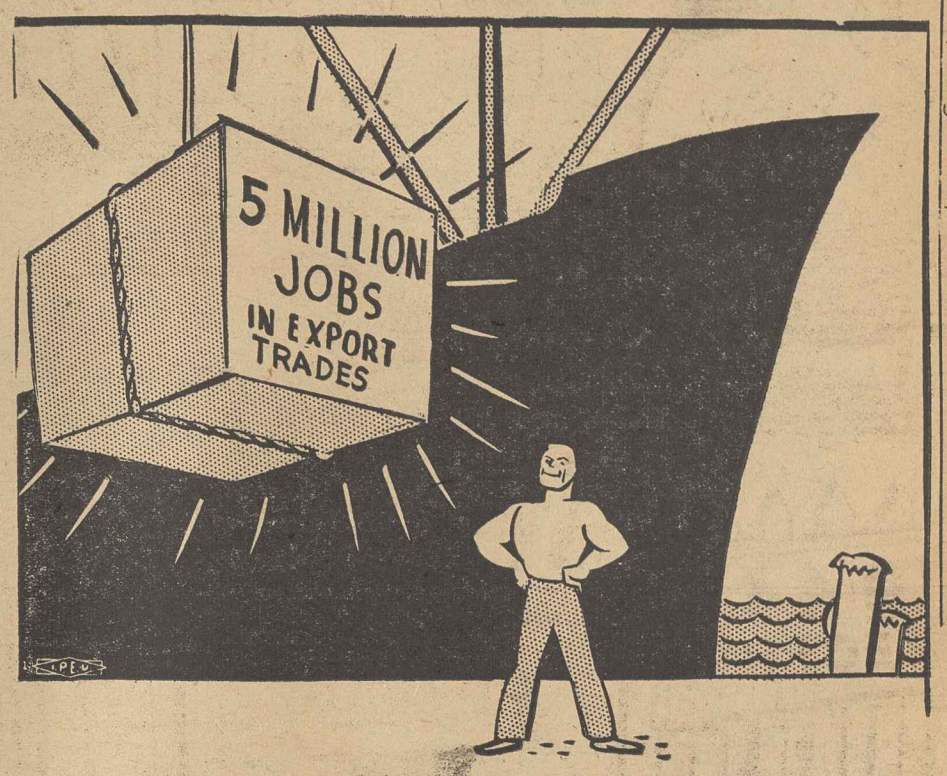
The currency manipulation of the '30's resulted in the complete destruction of world trade, reducing what was left of it to a primitive system of barter. Each nation sought to outdo the other in debasing its money, with the result that none profited except the fascist powers that were planning and preparing for war.

Stable world currencies, backed by a world bank ultimately controlled by the governments and peoples of the United Nations, will remove this strangling effect on trade and will substitute freedom and security for fear and oppression.

Long Term Loans for World Industrialization

But the world will need more than stable currencies to buy our goods and keep 5,000,000 of our workers on the job. It will need long-term loans at fair interest rates. Nazi destruction and the heroic scorched earth policy of our Allies mean not only a tremendous need for American goods but an equally pressing need for help in buying them.

Here again the "Bank for International Reconstruction and Development" comes in. Long-term loans will be guaranteed by the Bank with security both for the lender and the borrower. Control of the loans will be not with one banker or a crowd of bankers, but with the United Nations—which will see to it that loans do not mean imperialism and oppression.



Loans will be guaranteed not only for reconstructing a devastated country. They will be made, as Henry J. Morgenthau, U. S. Secretary of the Treasury and head of the U. S. delegation at Bretton Woods, said:

". . . also to promote sound industry and increase industrial and agricultural production in nations whose economic potentialities have not yet been developed. It is essential to us all that these nations play their full part in the exchange of goods throughout the world."

One hope for full employment in the U. S. lies in the industrialization of non-industrial areas such as China, Latin America, and a big expansion of industrialization in the Soviet Union. American workers making machine tools, for example, can be kept busy at present and greater levels for years, simply supplying these nations.

Need Not Fear Competition to U.S.

We do not have to fear competition from such nations. In a peaceful and stable world, made possible by the kind of economic and financial cooperation outlined at Bretton Woods, the fact that millions of industrial workers have well-paid, year-round jobs in other countries will mean more year-round jobs in our country.

The welfare of American workers and of our returning war veterans is at stake in the success or failure of the Bretton Woods plan. As Secretary Morgenthau said:

"The results will be of vital importance to everyone in every country. In the last analysis, it will help determine whether or not people will have jobs and the amount of money they are to find in their weekly pay envelope.

The Veteran's Stake In Export Jobs

"More important still, it concerns the kind of world in which our children are to grow to maturity. It concerns the opportunities which will await millions of young men when at last they can take off their uniforms and can come home to civilian jobs."

What will all this cost the American taxpayer? Will it saddle us with more and more debt, all for the benefit of a bunch of foreigners, as Senator Taft (R., O.) and Westbrook Pegler put it?

Actually, it will cost the American taxpayers no more than the original investment in the Bank and in the Fund—a total of $5.9 billions. This money is invested, not expended. It is our share, as one of the United Nations in the whole enterprise. Other nations share also, in proportion to their wealth.

If we don't have world trade and stability after the war, the cost to the American people and to the taxpayers will be infinitely greater. It will be the cost of millions of lost jobs, of relief, a return to the mass misery that went with the Hoover administration.

Action on Plan Up to Congress

The groundwork for a great expansion of world trade has been laid. It is now up to Congress to pass bills authorizing the U. S. to take its place in the new world economic setup, and appropriating the money for the original investment.

Conceived and carried out by the FDR Administration, Bretton Woods meets with the approval of the United Nations and of American labor and industry. What do the Republicans have to say on the subject?

Two who attended as U. S. delegates—Sen. Tobey of N. H. and Rep. Wolcott of Michigan—went along with the conference, raising no objections. That was left to Taft, who tried to blast it as a burden on the taxpayers. Dewey, as usual, has said nothing—despite the five million jobs at stake.

Republican strategy seems to be to lie low, except for the more irresponsible reactionaries like Taft, in the hope that Congress won't act until after the election.

After all, a plan that makes five million jobs in export trades a postwar reality would be a powerful argument for the re-election of the man whose leadership made it possible—President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

FM—Future Voice Of the People?

This is the third of a series of articles on a new development in radio—FM, or Frequency Modulation broadcasting—that offers labor the chance to take its rightful place on the air waves.

Labor unions have been shut out of AM (amplitude modulation) broadcasting because big commercial interests have secured a monopoly on the 900 odd AM stations now operating. Getting in to AM broadcasting is a mighty expensive business, with small stations selling for as much as half a million dollars.

The main feature of FM broadcasting is that it is new enough for labor to get in on the ground floor—if unions act NOW! The need for speed is shown in a quote from a bulletin circulated by FM Broadcasters Inc., which said:

"The first and most important reason for doing it now (filing an application with the Federal Communications Commission for an FM license) is that the most ideal sites for FM transmitter locations are not going to last forever.

"In Los Angeles, for instance, there are 17 applications for the best site to cover that area. In Chicago, practically every important site already has been leased."

While there is no charge made by the FCC for filing an application, competent authorities estimate that the legal and engineering expenses involved will run somewhere between $2,000 and $2,500.

Limited Applications

At least until the end of the war, the FCC is allowing limited applications to be filed, so that the engineering costs might be dispensed with if the minimum necessary information could be obtained from an experienced salesman of an FM equipment company—RCA, GE and Radio Engineering Laboratories, Inc., are the main outfits in the field.

Aside from engineering information, FM applicants must show that they are financially capable of operating a station and that they are legally qualified. These are details that would offer no difficulty to any large union.

What would it cost to operate an FM station? FM Broadcasters made an estimate, assuming that the operation is to start from "scratch," for the annual operating cost of a 1,000-watt FM station, broadcasting six hours daily. Here are the figures:

Rent	$ 6,000

Keep Your Eye On Congress

Reconversion is still the hottest issue before Congress and the country this week, though a vote on the inadequate George (polltaxer, Ga.) bill (S 2051) was expected as The CIO NEWS went to press.

Even with a favorable vote on the George bill and an attempt to shelve the Kilgore-Murray-Truman bill (S 2061) the issue is still very much alive. After Senate action, it will come up in the House.

The bill labor wants now is the Kilgore-Murray-Truman measure (S 2061) which contains the "human side" features of the original Kilgore bill (S 1893) as well as the provisions for an orderly planning of re-conversion from war to peace production.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Kilgore - Murray-Truman (S 2061)	Aids workers and veterans in re-conversion from war to peace jobs; provides orderly process for industry as well.	Early vote expected in Senate on George bill (S 2051) which does nothing for workers and veterans.	If Senate vote has been taken on George bill, wire Representative to support House version of Kilgore-Murray-Truman bill (S 2061),
Green-Lucas amendment (S 2050)	Amends soldiers' vote law to remove ban on political news to troops; ban put in law by Sen. Taft (R., O.) forbids men to buy newspapers, even British ones.	To Senate committee on Privileges and Elections (Sen. Green, D., R. I., chmn.)	Write your Senators to support.
FEPC bills Permanent (series)	A series of bills making anti-bias agency (FEPC) permanent.	Held up in House Labor Committee.	Urge action by your Representative to get them out of Committee and on floor.

Parley On Problems

Working Mothers Have Tough Time

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12—While their children played happily under the supervision of the Georgetown Children's House staff, a large group of working mothers met here this week in a day-long session under the sponsorship of the CIO United Federal Workers Union to discuss their common problems and make plans to overcome them.

The need for more government recognition of the plight of the working mother was brought out in the discussion—her need for shorter working hours in order to spend more time with her children in their formative years, and the need for more adequate nursery facilities, transportation to the schools, and better trained nursery school staffs.

The delegates from New York, Baltimore, Philadelphia, and Washington, as well as representatives from several government agencies were addressed by Dr. Arnold Gesell of Yale University, authority on child care, and UFW Sec.-Treas. Eleanor Nelson.

GENERAL CONCERN

The difficulties of these mothers are not merely their problems nor are they merely wartime problems. The turnover of working mothers in Federal service is estimated to be almost 100% a year.

Miss Nelson said that "in the post war economy envisaged by the CIO, there will be plenty of room in industry for the skilled women workers who have been trained during the war."

"The utilization of these skills will be both desired only under enlightened governmental assistance in solving the problems of protecting the American family and the development of the American child.

The conference brought out many of the sacrifices made by working mothers which could be avoided with recognition of the situation, proper planning and adequate nursery facilities.

WANT SHORTER HOURS

Most of the mothers, all employed by the Federal Government in navy yards, offices, and government factories, felt that a shorter work week would go a long way toward the solution of their problem in giving them more time with their children. Some preferred a five-day week which would make it possible for them to spend Saturday and Sunday with their children, while others wanted part-time work with a shorter work day.

The special hours for mothers working in the War Monpower Commission were cited as an example of what can be done. Through the Mothers Club there, arrangements were made for the WMC working mothers who wish to come to work early and leave early.

Many mothers, however, especially the wives of servicemen, cannot afford a pay cut which comes with shorter hours. A proposal urging higher government allowances for children of servicemen was adopted as a solution to this problem.

It was agreed that working mothers should have an optional shorter work week and that part-time workers should receive sick and annual leave which they do not get now.

SICK CHILDREN

The problem of the sick child was met with a resolution asking that mothers might use sick leave privileges when a child is sick. At present the time taken to care for a sick child is deducted from annual leave.

Special leave provisions for maternity and confinement cases, including daily rest periods, were urged.

The faults of the federally financed nursery schools were generally blamed on low pay and long hours of the teachers. The reports of the delegates showed that nursery and after school facilities are far from adequate and standards of care are low. Transportation to and from nurseries for children living far from the schools is needed.

NMU Pledges Full Aid to Auxiliary

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Womens Auxiliaries

Joe Curran's speech at the third NMU auxiliary conference marks a very significant advance in union thinking on the whole question of auxiliaries. As president of the National Maritime Union, he told the delegates that the auxiliary is to be an "integral part of the union, not a subsidiary."

This is the first time that a national CIO union has gone all the way in following the suggestion of CIO Pres. Philip Murray, made a year ago in a letter to all CIO unions, that "our auxiliaries should become an established part of our union machinery."

Delegates from 11 ports in 10 states, including San Francisco and San Pedro on the West Coast, Galveston and New Orleans in the south, Duluth, Minn., and Boston, Mass., heard the president of their union stress political action as the major auxiliary activity.

"There is a big job ahead of the auxiliary to see that Roosevelt is reelected and with him a win-the-war Congress," Curran pointed out. "The Women's Auxiliary must do the door-bell ringing. They must go back from the conference and bring the message of the CIO right into their communities."

Ferdinand Smith, NMU national secretary, emphasized particularly the part that must be played by Negro women in carrying out the political action program of the union and the auxiliary. "Negro women in ever-increasing numbers must be brought into this work, he said. "They have an especially large stake in seeing that President Roosevelt is re-elected, along with a progressive Congress. Greater progress for the Negro people will be assured as a result in our economic, social and political life."

The decision of the NMU National Council that the auxiliary was an integral part of the union means, President Curran said, that the auxiliaries need not spend time raising funds by raffles or in any other way that would divert their time and energy from organization. The union itself, he told the delegates, is willing and able to spend the necessary money to subsidize the valuable work of the auxiliary.

Pres. Faye Stephenson of the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries and Mrs. Louise McLaren of the CIO Political Action Committee also addressed the delegates. They stressed the important role women must play in the 1944 election campaign and the heavy responsibility falling on the CIO auxiliaries to help get out the women's vote.

Auxiliary resolutions endorsing President Roosevelt for a fourth term, exposing Thomas E. Dewey, and pledging "constant, continuous, and unceasing political activity" showed that the delegates agreed with the speakers that political action comes first on their program.

World Roundup

Give Labor Seat at Postwar Peace Table, Aussie Urges

World labor's presence at United Nations' talks on postwar problems is more than ever urgent, Ernie Thornton, head of the Australian Ironworkers and Munitions Workers Union, said this week in an interview with Allied Labor News.

The Bretton Wood foreign trade conferen ce, the food, relief, oil, and aviation conferences and the forthcoming United Nations meeting to plan postwar security, are examples of meetings that greatly concern the future of world labor, he said. He suggested that a "skeleton committee" of American, British and Soviet trade unions be formed to meet here in time for the security meeting now scheduled for mid-August.

Thornton, who was a delegate to the London World Labor Parley which was set for June 5 but was indefinitely postponed because of D day, visited CIO Pres. Philip Murray and the CIO Executive Board during his stay in this country. Of American labor's war production record he said:

"Labor has a fine record during the war, and that fine record has not been seriously marred by the few examples of labor leaders who put their own personal positions of power above the needs of the nation.

"The very fine policy of most American unions during the war is now being followed up by very clear thinking about postwar problems, and the statesmanship of leaders such as Philip Murray in this respect is very impressive."

Thornton urged close postwar cooperation between U. S. and Australian workers, "not merely as a sentimental matter, but because it is necessary for the economic well-being of our two peoples."

Praise Clerks in Bombings

High tribute is paid by the Natl. Union of Shop Assistants to the courage of union retail clerks carrying on under the robot bombings.

"We realize that many work in shops with glass windows, fronts, ceilings, shelves and display cases," the union's paper says. "We pay tribute to those who have risen from the floors of their devastated shops and proceeded to prepare the shops for further action."

At the same time, ALN reports that the union is seeking an eight-point charter for its members, including higher standard wage rates, equal pay for women, a 40-hour week and two weeks' vacation.

Like Their Good Neighbor

Latin-American workers are pleased that their "Good Neighbor," President Roosevelt, has been re-nominated for a fourth term, according to an editorial in El Popular, daily paper of the Confederation of Mexican Workers (CTM) in Mexico City.

In a lengthy editorial sentence, Popular said: "Roosevelt personifies in his 11 years of office a majority of the American people, a good neighbor policy for the rest of the world, and particularly for Latin-America . . . and what interests us above all, a clear, realistic and constructive spirit for the realization of a lasting and solid peace among freedom-loving nations along the lines of the Atlantic Charter and the Moscow and Teheran conferences."

Equal Pay for Women

British women workers came a step closer to the goal of equal pay for equal work with a Natl. Arbitration Tribunal proposal to pay them 56 shillings ($11.20) a week. Engineering trades are affected, including nearly one million women members. The union had asked for a minimum of 60 shillings ($12) which is the same rate men workers receive.

Hatch Act Suit To Go To Supreme Court

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12—The CIO United Federal Workers will carry its fight against the Hatch Act to the U. S. Supreme Court.

The constitutionality of the act was upheld recently by the U. S. District Court here.

The only section of the act objected to by the union is that preventing Government workers from taking active part in political campaigns. The union claims this section is contrary to the constitutional guarantee of free speech and free press.

The claims made by the Dept. of Justice that there was no basis for a suit by Federal workers against the act and that the Civil Service Commission was not the proper agency to be sued were both rejected by the District Court, Eleanor Nelson, sec.-treas. of the union, pointed out.

On both these issues, the court upheld the contentions of the union.

Gandhi Tells Lowdown On What India Wants

BOMBAY, August 12 (ALN)—Acceptance by the British government of his latest proposals for solving the political deadlock in India would "take the wind out of the Axis sails" and help bring the war to a speedy conclusion, Mohandas K. Gandhi, head of the Indian National Congress, told Allied Labor News in an exclusive interview July 28. The interview took place at Panohgani Hill Station, near Poona, where Gandhi has been resting and working since his release from confinement.

Gandhi was hard at work when this correspondent met him, surrounded by papers and files. Since getting out of jail, he has evidently been getting down to serious study of the many difficult problems facing India.

The first question to Gandhi was: "You promise all aid to the Allied war effort. How concretely will the character and quantity of the war effort in India and other countries be changed through establishment of national government in India?"

Gandhi replied that the question required a detailed answer, whereas the basis of his offer to the British was to give moral weight to the Allied cause, which the Allied cause now lacked.

Describing what he meant by adding "moral weight to the Allied cause," he said:

"The Allies are today making brave declarations about democracy and liberty, which to me—or, to put it plainly, to exploited nations—mean nothing. Mere declarations pleasing to the ear do not give satisfaction to sufferers. By 'exploited nations' I mean Asiatics and Africans.

"If the Allies are fighting for democracy, their democracy should include all the exploited races of the earth. The facts as I see them prove the contrary. Almost all if not all parties agree that India was never so much under foreign domination as it is today.

ASK INDEPENDENCE

"Clear acceptance of the Indian demand for independence and consequent establishment of national responsible government, subject to the limitations I have previously mentioned, would immediately change the character of the Allied cause. It would be immediately differentiated from the cause of the Axis powers—if the latter's fight can be described as a cause."

Gandhi was asked to "go into details and say what material gain will accrue to the Allies from recognition of India as an independent country, subject to the proviso accepted by you."

Gandhi replied: "Surely, if the character of the Allied cause is so radically altered, as I claim it must be by acceptance of my offer, all else must follow as a matter of course.

"But whether it does or not, I want acceptance of my offer to be on an unadulterated moral basis. It should be enough for the Allies to have the guarantee that their military operations will not in any way be adversely affected by India being counted as an independent nation—not merely in word but in fact.

"I hold that the effect of a declaration of India's independence, accompanied by simultaneous and sincere action, should by itself take the wind out of the sails of the Axis powers. And I should be surprised if they do not capitulate almost immediately after the declaration."

Millionth U.S. Security

Guild Backs FDR, Truman; Poll OKs Political Action

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 12—Delegates to the 11th convention of the American Newspaper Guild in session here this week voted to support President Roosevelt and Sen. Harry S. Truman following an advisory poll of the members showing that the majority favored endorsement of candidates in the presidential election.

The poll showed that the Guild membership voted 2,750 to 2,105 in favor of such an endorsement. The resolution calling for the endorsement was presented by William Davy of Cleveland.

Commenting on the passing of the resolution, Guild President Milton Murray told the convention: "Personally, I am glad that the delegates voted this way. This will allow the working newspapermen of the country to speak with some authority and to make a counterblast to the blasts of reactionary publishers.

"It is not the intent, the desire or purpose of the Guild as an organization to bind its members to any Presidential candidate. No matter whom we endorse, our members will retain their freedom of political thought, their right to vote as American citizens, regardless of any recommendation by this convention."

Murray called Dewey "The Little Sir Echo of the Republican party" who speaks for the Hooverism of the past."

CIO Secretary Treasurer James Carey, who represented the national organization at the convention, stressed the importance of labor's political activity. "We are in politics for keeps and must regard the political front as a year around job," he said.

The convention voted to reaffirm the no-strike pledge for the duration of the war and approved a postwar program keyed to the National CIO's plans. Assessments for an organizing and defense fund were approved.

Mid-West Parley Backs FDR

WATERLOO, Ia., Aug. 12—Some 200 delegates representing a membership of 75,000 CIO members in two states, attended the convention of the Iowa-Nebraska CIO Council held here last week, with Council Pres. Ben Henry in the chair.

The convention endorsed the program of the CIO Political Action Committee, which calls for the re-election of Pres. Roosevelt and the election of Harry Truman for Vice-President, and voted for voluntary political contributions.

John Jacobson, regional director of the PAC in this area, presented the program to the delegates and called upon the convention to take the necessary steps to make it effective. He pointed out that the CIO Committee had already aided in defeating some reactionaries who are not contributing to the full prosecution of the war.

Adolph Germer, who represented the Natl. CIO at the convention, warned that labor must be vigilant if the democratic principles of our American way of life are to be preserved.

Samuel Jacobs, liaison officer between the CIO and the OPA, praised organized labor for its help to the OPA and stressed the need for price control even in the postwar period.

John C. Pierce of the Natl. CIO War Relief Committee, told the delegates of the fine job labor has done in supporting the war.

The convention went on record in favor of various progressive legislation now before Congress, including the Kilgore reconversion bill, the Warner-Murray-Dingell social security bill, and the anti-poll tax bill; urged the various government agencies concerned to act favorably upon the demand for a 17c-an-hour wage increase, and reaffirmed labor's no-strike pledge.

ACA Signs Big Western Union Local

New York, Aug. 12—The AFL Commercial Telegraphers' largest local, comprising nearly 1,000 West- [illegible] has voted to leave the AFL and join the CIO American Communications Assn., the ACA announced here this week. The action came on the eve of a Natl. Labor Relations Board election involving some 60,000 employes of the Telegraph Co.

The recommendation to withdraw from the AFL and ask for an ACA charter was adopted with but two dissenting votes at the largest membership meeting ever held by the local.

"It is expected that this switch by an entire AFL local, the largest in the country, will materially influence the outcome of the Labor Board election soon to be held when all 60,000 Western Union workers will choose their collective bargaining agent," the ACA stated.

UAW Hits Radio Gag In Code

cize any religion, or incite to breach of the peace, or use indecent language, etc. It will further qualify its position on controversial broadcasts at the FCC hearing.

Meanwhile, in a deposition given at the UAW-CIO by Willard D. Egolf, NAB official, Egolf admitted that, although the NAB code is observed by about 600 of the 900 regular broadcasting stations, the NAB has made no survey of the extent of station cooperation—or lack of it—in connection with the basic prin- [illegible] Law.

While Egolf said that the NAB operates to make sure that its member stations will act in the public interest, he admitted that the NAB makes no attempt to police its members and that it will not issue an opinion on a violation of its code unless the member station involved in the violation requests the opinion.

COMPLAINTS SLOWED UP

This, plus the fact that the FCC does not give hearings on specific complaints against stations but only considers the over-all operation "in the public interest" once every three years, makes it difficult for those discriminated against by radio to get successful action on their complaints, Goodman pointed out.

In advance of the August 15 FCC hearing, the UAW-CIO this week asked the FCC to subpena radio scripts of Boake Carter, Upton Close, Fulton Lewis, Jr., and several other commentators who have broadcast over the Mutual Network, which uses WHKC as an outlet.

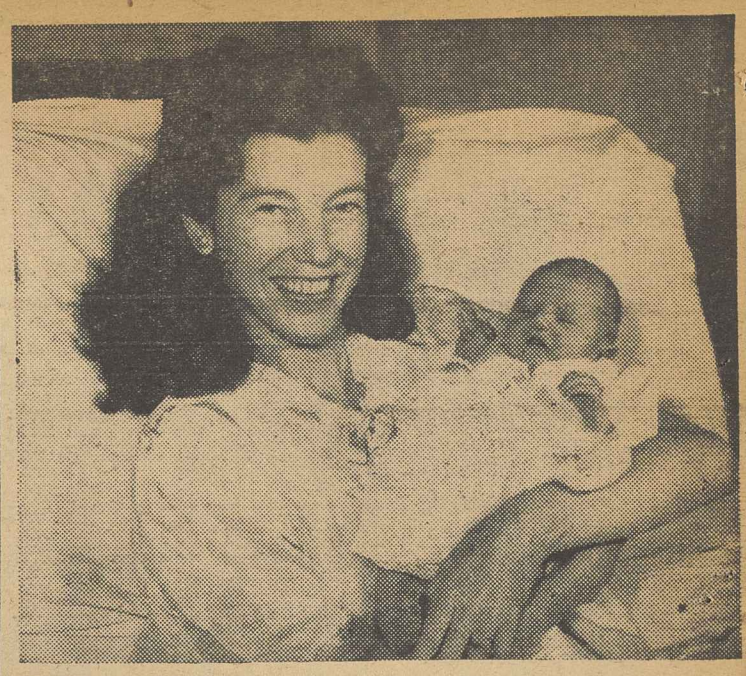
In filing the request for the subpena, UAW-CIO President R. J. Thomas and Vice President Richard T. Frankensteen said:

"The action of Station WHKC in permitting these one-sided commentators to present their biased views over the air contrasts strongly with the refusal of the same station to accept the uncensored views of the UAW-CIO on these same issues.

"It is no wonder so many people have a distorted view of labor's policies and objectives. What else can one expect when they are permitted to hear only the other side on the radio?"

British Women Take Men's Jobs Too

Washington, Aug. 12—Women in England, as in America, during the war have invaded the most exclusive "strictly male" industries and entered, at least for the duration, the English unions, according to a bulletin on British women in wartime just released by the Women's Bureau of the U. S. Dept. of Labor.



EMIC At Work

GI Mother, Babe Doing Swell

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12—Last Thursday was 10 days after "D-Day" for Mrs. William J. Gerrish.

For her "D-Day" meant delivery day, and 10 days after D-Day was the day she was leaving the Providence Hospital here to return with her baby, Mary Patricia, to her home. Her husband is a corporal with the Fifth Army in Italy.

D-day was made much easier for Mrs. Gerrish because of the Emergency Maternity and Infant Care Program, which, free of charge, had furnished her with pre-natal care, physician's and hospital care, and would provide for sickness cost of little Mary Patricia during the first year of her life.

GI WIVES ELIGIBLE

The wife of any serviceman is eligible for the benefits of the EMIC program. All she needs to do is to ask her doctor, or the Red Cross, or the local health department for an application to par- [illegible] the program.

Mrs. Gerrish's radiant, carefree face showed that, thanks to the EMIC program, the anxiety of having the baby had been reduced to a minimum. Under the program she had been able even to select her physician.

"The EMIC program," she said, "relieves the worry as well as the financial strain of having a baby."

CABLED HUSBAND

On her D-day she had cabled her husband to tell him of the arrival of the brand-new Gerrish. She was sure that he knew of the baby's arrival, but was anxiously awaiting a letter from him.

To date, approximately half a million mothers and babies have benefited by the program, one-tenth of these cases being sickness care of babies in their first year, according to the Children's Bureau of the Dept. of Labor, administrator of the program. CIO and CIO women's auxiliaries were largely instrumental in getting the program through Congress this year.

To maintain the program from July, this year, to July, next year, Congress has appropriated $42,000,000, which should relieve the anxiety of thousands of servicemen and their wives.

PRAISES PROGRAM

Warm in his praise of the EMIC program is Vice Adm. McIntire, Navy surgeon general and personal physician to President Roosevelt, who told the Pepper subcommittee on Wartime Health and Education:

"I wish to comment briefly on this splendid program. During this war thousands of enlisted men's wives and children have benefited tremendously by this constructive program.

"In my opinion it should be expanded and made a very permanent affair throughout the entire nation. Should a health program ever be organized this should be included in it, and can be used now as a fine example of where the Government can be of great help without upsetting medical practice."

CIO Leads Fight For Negroes In Transit

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19—With the destructive race-hate strike broken at the Philadelphia Transportation Co., seven of the eight Negroes who had been instructed to report for training prior to the strike, this week resumed training and three of them went out on trial runs, it was reported by the Fair Employment Practice Committee.

The eighth trainee resigned and the trial runs were made without incident, the FEPC, which had issued the non-discriminatory order, stated.

As Philadelphia returned to normalcy, it became the tenth American city to proceed to integrate and upgrade Negroes into the important job brackets of the transit industry. The employment of Negroes in significant occupations in the transit industry is by no means new. Since Pearl Harbor, the solution of this problem has met with some success in several American cities. Today 3,879 Negroes are now operating street cars, buses and other public conveyances in nine cities.

NEW YORK IN LEAD

New York City leads in the employment of 1,836 Negroes in the operating job brackets of its transit system, organized by the Transport Workers Union, CIO. The New York Board of Transportation employs 1,079 Negro motormen, conductors, bus and streetcar operators. In addition, 702 are employed in other significant occupations such as clerks, inspectors, station supervisors, train dispatchers, clerical workers, collecting agents, car and structure maintainers.

The New York Omnibus Corporation employs 20 bus operators and seven mechanics. The Third Ave. Transit Corporation has on its payroll 14 busmen and trolley car drivers and the Madison Ave. Coach Corporation employs four Negro bus drivers and four mechanics.

Detroit is second with the employment of 1,200 Negroes as conductors, motormen, bus operators and other significant occupations by its Department of Street Railways. Of this number, 150 are Negro women. San Francisco's Market St. Railway employs 78 Negro motormen and coach operators and 145 conductors. Its Municipal Railway system has 10 motormen and 27 conductorettes.

In Chicago 104 Negroes are operating street cars, 30 are driving buses and 23 are serving as trainmen on its elevated system. Buffalo's International Railway Co. employs 16 bus and streetcar operators. At Cleveland 319 Negroes are employed as bus drivers, platform operators and in other significant occupations. Tulsa, Okla., employs 23 bus drivers and Winston-Salem, N. C., employs 40 bus drivers and 25 mechanics and clerical workers. Flushing, Long Island, employs one Negro bus driver.

CIO Executive Board Plans Political Action Fund Drive

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—The CIO Executive Board meeting here this week adopted a PAC fund raising plan, details of which are as follows:

The membership of the CIO, together with all other Americans who are determined to elect President Roosevelt, Harry S. Truman as Vice-President, and a progressive Congress, are now engaged in a campaign to obtain voluntary $1.00 contributions to the Political Action Committee of the CIO to assure the accomplishment of this task.

The importance of the issues and the outcome of the national elections demand that this campaign now be prosecuted with the utmost vigor and through the contributing effort of the entire membership and all the officials of the affiliated CIO unions.

The International Executive Board of the CIO hereby recommends the following program to effectuate this result:

1. Four weeks, commencing Labor Day, September 4th, shall be specifically designated as the period during which every effort will be made by the entire CIO to obtain the voluntary contribution of $1.00 from every single member of the CIO and all other progressive citizens who seek the election of President Roosevelt, Harry S. Truman as Vice-President and a Congress which will provide President Roosevelt with the fullest support.

2. During this period, mass meetings and particularly meetings of shop stewards should be convened in every single industrial center throughout the nation where the CIO has members, to assure the successful prosecution of this program.

3. In all the industrial centers where such meetings are to be held, the Regional Directors of the CIO, the State and City CIO Councils and the officials of the various CIO unions shall meet for the purpose of designating a committee that woud have as its major and prime task the calling of such meetings and the formulation of necessary plans and programs to obtain the maximum voluntary contributions and the registration of every single eligible voter within their area.

Victory in the November elections now depends upon the active support of the entire CIO membership. With this assured, nothing can stop the victorious march of the people behind our Commander-in-Chief, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Jobs For All Includes Women

Washington, Aug. 19—The most pressing problem now facing the United States Department of Labor Women's Bureau is how to guarantee women workers sound levels of employment and labor standards in tomorrow's industry, according to Frieda S. Miller, newly sworn in director of the bureau.

Miss Miller, who succeeds Mary Anderson, the retiring director, served a number of years in the New York State Department of Labor, first as director of the Women in Industry and Minimum Wage Division and later as the Industrial Commissioner. She went to London in 1943 to serve until last April as special assistant to Ambassador Winant and to study British labor conditions.

RECONVERSION—NO. 1 PROBLEM OF WAR AND POSTWAR AMERICA

Showing they "either do not care for the welfare of the people of this country or are perfectly willing to wreck our economic system for an illusory partisan advantage," a combination of Republicans and polltaxers has defeated the Kilgore reconversion bill in the Senate and passed the utterly inadequate George bill.

The George bill, the CIO says, is "one of the most unprincipled fakes ever attempted on the American people." It now goes to the House Ways and Means Committee, where a companion bill to the Kilgore bill, offered by Rep. Emmanuel Celler (D, N. Y.) will be brought up, either as an amendment to the George bill or by itself.

THE REASONS

CIO is asking all members of the House of Representatives to defeat the George bill and pass the Kilgore-Celler bill. Here is why:

1. The George bill gives no protection to workers and servicemen in the way of unemployment compensation. The Kilgore-Celler bill does, up to $35 a week for a period of two years after the war.

2. The George bill gives an inadequate allowance for workers moving to new jobs; the Kilgore-Celler bill pays all moving expenses. This is especially important for millions of patriotic Americans who have moved far away from their homes to take war jobs.

3. The George bill does not set up a planned approach to reconversion. The machinery it provides is given wide powers without responsibility. The Kilgore bill provides for authority with responsibility.

In a word, the difference between the George bill and the Kilgore-Celler bill is the difference between chaos and common sense.

II

This difference means a great deal to the workers, to the servicemen and to the entire country. To workers, it means the difference between jobs and unemployment, between adequate protection if you are out of a job and the present meager "states' rights" system of unemployment benefits.

LIFE ON $13.84 A WEEK

Nowhere do states benefits under the present system, perpetuated by the George bill, exceed $22 a week. In some states the payment is as low as $5 a week; the national average in 1943 was $13.84.

Have you thought about living at present prices on $13.84 a week?

The refusal to plan in the George bill means chaos when the time comes to change over from war to peace production. It also means a serious blow to war production right now, even before Germany is defeated.

A sane, rational approach to reconversion is thus not merely a postwar issue. It is an issue of winning the war first and then of creating a stable peace after the war is won.

The entire country is affected by what Congress does now on reconversion. With the George bill, workers will be unemployed, struggling on meager social security benefits.

Farmers will not be able to sell their produce to workers. Merchants will not be able to sell their goods—if they have them to sell. A wild, unplanned scramble to get into civilian production now and after the war will mean chaotic supply conditions.

These will be the fruits of the George bill, if the reactionary Republican-polltaxer conspiracy is successful in the House as it was in the Senate.

Why was this reactionary alliance permitted to pass the George bill in defiance of the welfare of the entire nation—workers, farmers, businessmen?

It was permitted to do so because the American people have not been sufficiently aware of the issues at stake. The newspapers, with their campaign pitched against the Kilgore bill entirely on the unemployment compensation provisions, created a smokescreen behind which reactionary Senators of both parties operated.

THE REAL ISSUE

The real issue of the George bill versus the Kilgore-Celler bill is not unemployment compensation but jobs—jobs for the 55 million workers and the 11 million servicemen and women.

Without the planning and the responsibilities outlined in the Kilgore bill, we will slide into another Hoover depression many times more terrible than the first one.

It is doubtful if our economic system could endure another round of unemployment, starvation, mass misery. Certainly we cannot create the kind of stable economy that the needs of the peace will demand.

The men in the Senate who have foisted the George bill on the country have given us the most vital of all the campaign issues for the November election. The choice they present is a choice between stability and security or economic collapse.

Their tactics, and the tactics of Dewey and his advisers, have been to make demagogic use of the need for haste in passing reconversion legislation. Under this barrage of demagogy, they passed the George bill, using a polltax Democrat as their front man.

We have an uphill fight ahead to get a decent, rational reconversion bill out of the House. On this fight depends our future welfare and the welfare of the nation.

The CIO has called on every Representative to be in Congress and to vote against the George bill, for the Kilgore-Celler bill.

Have you written or wired to your Representative yet?

JOBS FOR ALL is one of the main reasons why we fight this war. Planned, rational reconversion as outlined in the Kilgore-Celler bill (HR 5126) now before the House in Congress will set us on the track to full production. Unplanned, chaotic approach of the George bill (S 2051), which ignores "human side" of reconversion can land us back in the breadline days we knew under Hoover. Today, the Republican-polltax alliance in the Senate wants to land us there. The answer to these forces of reaction is the Kilgore-Celler bill now up in the House.

THEIR FUTURE too is affected by what's going on in Congress right now. Planned reconversion as a war and peace measure will help your kids to good housing, playgrounds, fun and a decent start in life. The Republican brand of reconversion chaos will take us back to Hoover housing—slums, dirt and disease.

FM—Future Voice Of The People?

This is he final article of a series on a new development in radio—FM or Frequency Modulation broadcasting—that offers labor the chance to take its rightful place on the air waves.

Income Problem

Various ways have been tried to meet operating costs of public-service stations. One is to sell a limited amount of advertising. Cornell University, which finances its radio station in this way, has found that by selling 20 per cent of its time commercially, it can program the remaining 80 per cent in the public interest.

To avoid the worst evils of over-commercialization, a community-service station can (a) sell advertising only between programs, so that advertising control over the programs themselves is minimized; (b) accept advertising only from reputable firms handling reliable merchandise, and (c) limit the length of commercial announcements, the extreme claims made in them, and the bad taste usually displayed.

A second way to meet operating costs is through contributions from participatnig organizations. A union or industrial union council, for example, which is now publishing a weekly newspaper, may find it worthwhile also to help support a community-service station over which it can reach its members and the public weekly or daily.

Contributions

Still a third source of revenue is by contribution directly from listeners. Various estimates place the cost of supplying public service radio at from 25 cents per family of listeners per year to as high as $1 per family per year—a fraction of the cost of a magazine subscription.

Station WRUL in Boston, for a time, supported itself in considerable part by contributions solicited directly from listeners; and Station WQXR in New York at one time achieved a considerable income from selling its monthly program logs to the public at $1 per year.

Radio, which has proved its ability to sell billions of dollars worth of everything from breakfast foods to motor cars, can also sell its own services; there is no reason why a station cannot support itself in whole or in part simply by using its own facilities to ask listeners for the funds needed.

More probably a combination of the above techniques, and of others which can be developed, will together place community FM stations on a sound economic basis.

Labor participation in FM need not be limited to labor's own stations. In some communities radio councils can be formed, composed of all the interested organizations in the community, to operate a non-profit FM station. Elsewhere public-spirited individuals or groups may take the lead, and receive full labor support.

Union leaders in every community can survey their local situation to make sure that at least one FM station is being planned which will pledge itself to free speech, fair play, and better programs.

Reconversion, Political Action Head Up CIO Board Discussion

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19—Reconversion and political action were the two main subjects at the CIO Executive Board meeting here this week. On reconversion, the board denounced the George bill as an "unprincipled fake," and on political action, took steps to prevent similar fakes in the future—by sharpening up plans to make sure of electing a progressive Congress with FDR next November.

The George bill, the board said, must be defeated in the House after its passage last week by a Republican-poltax conspiracy in the Senate. Every member of the House, the board, urged, should be in his seat and vote against the George bill and for the Kilgore-Celler bill (HR 5261) when it comes up.

Indications are that the issue will be on the floor this week, and the Board's call on Congressmen must therefore be backed up by letters and wires from the voters.

FUND PLAN

On political action, the Board laid out plans for collecting a minimum of $1 from "every single member of the CIO and all other progressive citizens who seek the election of President Roosevelt, Harry S. Truman as vice-president and a Congress which will provide President Roosevelt with the fullest support."

Mass meetings, particularly of shop stewards, are urged in the plan for "every single industrial center throughout the nation where the CIO has members, to assure the successful prosecution of this program."

The money, it was explained, will go to the CIO Political Action Committee, which is to receive all donations from CIO members. The National Citizens Political Action Committee, formed some weeks ago to mobilize board liberal groups for the FDR-Truman ticket, will seek funds from the general public.

HEAR TRANSPORT UNION

In addition to the main business on reconversion and political action, the Board heard Douglas McMahon, vice-president of the Transport Workers Union, describe the conspiracy behind the recent Philadelphia Transit Co. strike.

After thanking President Murray and the CIO for support during the efforts of the TWU to get the men back to work, McMahon pointed out that the whole affair was the result of a plot by the reactionary Republican Pew-Grundy machine to discredit FDR and to block war production.

The only successful way to handle such a situation, McMahon said, was "to meet the race issue, when it is raised, head-on." This the TWU was doing, and would do even more vigorously in the future.

"This whole thing was a monstrous plot to create tension among Negroes and whites," President Murray said. "The CIO must continue to meet such issues squarely. We cannot compromise or indulge in double dealing in such situations."

In its final action, the Board expressed approval of a Natl. Maritime Union proposal for an international shipping conference to prepare the way for full use of the merchant marine after the war.

Ickes Blasts Dewey At NY ALP Meet

NEW YORK, Aug. 19—Apparently the right to contribute to campaign funds seems to be regarded by the "Deweyites" as the inherent and exclusive right of the very rich who have interests to protect, Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes told the American Labor Party State Committee meeting here this week.

"The working man may not chip in his dollar along with those who contribute their thousands," he said. "The very thought is so 'un-American' as to inspire the egregious Martin Dies to appoint a subcommittee to inquire into such activities."

The State Committee meeting, which was the most enthusiastic in ALP history, nominated, as official candidates of the ALP in New York State, President Roosevelt, Senator Harry Truman and U. S. Senator Robert F. Wagner.

In another leading address at the meeting, Senator Wagner stressed the importance of a strong labor movement in preserving democracy in America. "In the perspective of history, the voice of labor in America has been a voice of progress," he said.

"For labor, when true to its own interests, is not a narrow group or class or faction. Labor represents the masses of the workers who represent the masses of the common people.

BENEFIT TO NATION

"Every gain that labor has sought for and helped to win has been correspondingly of benefit to the people of America as a hole." The world will never forget the example Hitler gave of this fact, Senator Wagner pointed out.

"He and his gangsters rose to power by a triumph over the labor movement of Germany. Their enslavement of the German workers was the first step toward the enslavement and ruination of the German people."

Secretary Ickes, after slapping at the attacks made on labor's political contributions, went on in his speech to point out by contrast some of the contributions made by the rich, as, for example, "the Old Faithful performances of the duPont family," who, he said, "tossed $600,000 into the fight to defeat President Roosevelt in 1936."

In 1940, Ickes declared, "the duPonts raised an ante of $186,780. Two lessons are taught by scrutiny of the list of the duPonters," he added. "One is that the women of the tribe are apparently as able to earn money with their calloused hands as are the men; and the second is that the women equal, if they do not excel, their cavemen in their selfless interest in political campaigns."

DUPONT PIGGY BANKS

Listing 29 women of the duPont clam who had contributed money for political purposes, Ickes said that "even little A. Felix duPont, III, probably opened his piggy bank and poured its generous contents into the hands of the hungry Republicans."

With biting satire, Ickes recalled the state the country was in when the Republicans relinquished their administration in 1933, with the millions of unemployed, the "Hoover hotels" and the failures of small businessmen.

FOR PROGRAM

Concluding a blistering examination of Republican policies and Dewey statements, Ickes turned to the Roosevelt-Truman program.

"The liberals of the United States, with courageous Henry Wallace carrying the flag," he said, "are for Roosevelt and Truman enthusiastically and without reservation.

"Too, those of them who live in this Empire State will line up, without the loss of a vote, behind that gallant veteran, Bob Wagner.

Planning Or Chaos?

A momentous decision confronts your Congressman in the very near future.

He must decide whether American industry is to be reconverted in a planned and orderly fashion to peacetime production, as and when war contracts end; or whether plants are to be closed down right and left at the whim of their owners without any program for continuing production and employment.

He must decide whether workers and ex-servicemen, as well as business interests, are to be protected by adequate emergency unemployment benefits against such dislocations as are inevitable; or whether only profits are to be guaranteed, without any similiar protection for human beings.

He must decide whether we are to start planning now for jobs for all and expanded production after the war; or whether we are to plunge blindly ahead into postwar depression and mass unemployment.

For orderly reconversion, protection of human interests and planning for jobs for all, only one effective measure has been presented to Congress.

It is the Kilgore-Murray-Truman bill, rejected in the Senate by a combination of reactionary Republicans and polltax Democrats, but still in the running if the House will adopt its counterpart, the Celler bill (HR 5126).

The George bill adopted by the Senate is no more than a feeble attempt to gloss over the bleak prospects of industrial chaos, mass misery and postwar depression, which it does little or nothing to avert.

Urge your Congressman to make the right decision by rejecting the George bill and securing the adoption of the Celler bill.

Labor's Fight For Free Speech

The UAW-CIO is to be congratulated on carrying the ball for all of labor and for freedom of speech for all Americans in the effective and far-reaching case it has presented before the Federal Communications Commission, in respect to Station WHKC of Columbus.

Every radio listener must be aware that labor does not get a fair break over the air, that the air waves are monopolized by big business interests, and that the sum total of radio propaganda is one-sided, reactionary and anti-labor.

Every labor organization has also had experience with the many restrictions imposed on its access to radio broadcasting, while corporations can buy all the time they want for their chosen commentators and other purposes.

But the UAW-CIO case against WHKC is the first specific and documented test case presented by a labor union against a particular station, to challenge discriminations against labor and restrictions of free speech which are common throughout the industry.

The union charges that this station, in claimed observance of the code of the Natl. Assn. of Broadcasters, censored its radio scripts and refused to allow it to give the answers to anti-labor, anti-New Deal, and other reactionary propaganda which it allowed others to brodacast without restriction.

To prove this point, the UAW-CIO has presented many quotations of one-sided radio propaganda by Fulton Lewis, Upton Close, Boake Carter, Col. R. McCormick of the Chicago Tribune and others, challenging the station to present any script it has ever broadcast which would serve to balance or counterbalance this propaganda.

UAW Vice Pres. Richard Frankensteen has also submitted evidence of the undue influence exerted by the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, through the huge amounts spent by its members on radio advertising, to induce radio stations to broadcast its reactionary propaganda.

He charges that the NAM radio program, "Businessmen Look to the Future," is designed to "influence the listening audience . . . in favor of the Republican candidate for President and against Pres. Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Every American concerned with our constitutional rights of freedom of speech should applaud and support—as do Pres. Murray and the whole CIO—the efforts of the UAW-CIO to break down the present restrictions which prevent progressive viewpoints from being as freely expressed over the air as are reactionary viewpoints.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

WHAT happens to a person who can be out of a job without starving to death?

According to opponents of the Kilgore-Murray-Truman bill, he will become a lazy bum.

They express great moral indignation at the idea that a jobless war worker or ex-serviceman, with a wife and three children to support, might get as much as $25 a week under this bill.

This, they say, would "encourage idleness," remove "incentive," demoralize the workers, etc., etc.

An interesting feature of this line of argument is that if you follow it through, the folks who advance it must be the biggest and laziest bums in the country.

For there isn't a rich coupon-clipper, a millionaire publisher, a high-paid columnist or radio commentator, nor even a $10,000 Senate opponent of the Kilgore-Murray-Truman bill, who would starve if he quit working. Their investments, savings, etc., guarantee them, without working, far more than this bill provides.

★ ★ ★

This argument is as old as it is phoney. It has been used against every attempt to provide the slightest measure of security for working people—against higher wages, against unemployment relief, against WPA, against old age pensions, and against all forms of social security.

It is particularly phoney as used against the Kilgore-Murray-Truman bill. For the chief purpose of this bill is to prevent idleness by providing jobs for all.

Furthermore, the bill's opponents, who express such horror at the idea of "encouraging idleness," favor full compensation for the owners of plants who may close them down at the conclusion of war contracts; they object only to similar compensation for the workers who may thus be thrown out on the street.

The George bill, adopted by the Senate in place of the Kilgore-Murray-Truman bill, adds nothing to the present state unemployment benefits, which average only $13.84 a week.

However, the unemployment compensation against which most of the propaganda has been directed is only one small part of the Kilgore-Murray-Truman bill.

The bill as a whole is designed to plan reconversion from war to peacetime production in such a way as to make it unnecessary to pay unemployment compensation to large numbers of people.

For this purpose, it provides for cooperation of industry, labor, agriculture and the public with government, through a National Production-Employment Board, working with the Director of War Mobilization and Postwar Adjustment.

The bill also provides for a Bureau of Programs to review all reconversion plans, and for advisory councils for each industry and area, representing industry, labor and agriculture.

All these features are omitted from the George bill, which would in effect leave reconversion to planless business-as-usual.

★ ★ ★

The House counterpart of the Kilgore-Murray-Truman bill is the Celler bill ((HR 5126), which labor and all progressives are now seeking to substitute for the George bill by House action.

The conflict between these two bills is the biggest domestic issue before the country in this election campaign.

The George bill supporters include most of the Republicans and the reactionary polltax Democrats.

They stand for the Dewey policies of letting big business run things as it chooses, without planning or proper protection for labor, farm and small business interests.

This Dewey-Hoover program points straight to curtailed production, mass unemployment and the breadline and apple selling era which Hooverism brought before.

★ ★ ★

The supporters of the Kilgore-Celler bill, on the other hand, include all progressive Democrats and a few progressive Republicans.

These are the true supporters of Roosevelt's policies, whose goal is planned reconversion, with adequate protection for war workers and ex-servicemen as well as for farm and business interests, looking toward full postwar production and jobs for all.

It is not surprising that all of labor, including AFL and railroad brotherhoods as well as CIO, unanimously supports the Kilgore-Celler bill, as do also many farm, church and business representatives.

What is surprising is that all these groups have not also come out for the re-election of Roosevelt, as has the CIO.

For his program and policies are those which these organizations advocate and for which their membership will assuredly vote once the real issues are made clear to them.

National PAC Aid Sought

Los Angeles, Aug. 19 (FP)—National CIO Political Action Committee officials will be asked to help California CIO political action forces fight Proposition 12, the union-busting right-to-work State constitutional amendment, which appears on the ballot November 7.

This was assured at a conference of State CIO political action personnel held here recently. CIO, AFL and railroad unions alike are mobilizing forces to beat down Proposition 12, the greatest legislative threat in Western organized labor's history.

The anti-amendment fight, however, will not divert CIO political forces from the main tasks of helping to elect indorsed candidates from Roosevelt and Truman down to okayed State Assembly aspirants. If the battle against Proposition 12 served to weaken organized labor support of progressive candidates it would be one of the hopes of the amendment's reactionary Republican backers, even if the amendment itself were defeated, the CIO officials maintained.

Senate Vote For 'Unprincipled Fake' George Bill

This is the record vote in the Senate that dumped the Kilgore-Murray-Truman bill and paved the way for passage of the utterly inadequate George bill. The vote was taken on motion of Sen. George (polltaxer, Ga.) to amend the Kilgore bill by substituting his bill.

Note that all the Republicans except three voted against the Kilgore bill and for the George bill, and that all the polltaxers except one (Hill of Ala.) voted similarly.

A plus (+) sign indicates a vote against the George bill and for the interests of the workers, the servicemen and all the nation. A minus sign (—) indicates a vote for the George blll and against the Kilgore bill. A zero (0) indicates that the Senator was an absentee. (There were 22 absentees.) A P plus (P+) means that the Senator was paired for the motion; a P minus (P—) that he was paired against it.

Study this record carefully. The Republicans and their polltax allies show in this vote exactly what they think of the workers and the returning servicemen, and how little they care for their welfare or the welfare of the nation.

'Unprincipled Fake' Says CIO Board Of George Bill

Following is the full text of the resolution adopted by the CIO Executive Board Aug. 16. The resolution calls on the House of Representatives to defeat the inadequate George reconversion bill (S 2051) and to pass the Kilgore-Celler Bill (HR 5126).

The fight for an orderly and decent approach to the problem of reconversion has just began. The temporary success of the great majority of the Senate Republicans and their polltax allies in the Senate must not be allowed to stand, but must be reversed in the House by defeat of the George bill and passage of the Celler bill (HR 5126) which is the House counterpart of the Kilgore-Murray-Truman bill.

The Kilgore-Murray-Truman bill was designed to plan for and accomplish a coordination of our war production and reconversion to peacetime production in order to assure continued maximum production and full employment. It also provided for Federal supplementary unemployment compensation benefits and restraining facilities to prevent the hardships which will otherwise have to be borne by the workers during the reconversion period.

LABOR UNITED

The labor movement has been united throughout the campaign for the Kilgore-Murray-Truman bill. Farmers, church organizations and some businessmen have stood with labor on this issue. They have done so because they realize that the interest of labor is not all that is at stake. The prosperity and the welfare of the entire nation are involved.

Without planned, orderly reconversion from war to peace production, now and after we have defeated our enemies, we can have a second Hoover depression that will make the first one look mild in comparison. We have a working force of nearly 55 million people in the country today. We have 11 million men in the armed forces who will be looking for jobs tomorrow.

GOP WRECKERS

The Congressional opponents of this legislation, including the polltaxers and their political allies, either do not care for the welfare of the people of this country or are perfectly willing to wreck our economic system for an illusory partisan advantage.

Their role in passing the George bill over the Kilgore-Murray-Truman bill shows them to be utterly callous to the human needs of the workers and of the returning servicemen, as well as careless of the welfare of farmers and businessmen.

It should be noted that the same reactionary alliance in the Senate produced the recent tax law, which provides for huge guaranteed profits in the form of tax returns to corporations while laying the heaviest burden on the low-income groups. Now that the corporations have been guaranteed their post-war profits at pre-war rates for a period of two years, an ounce of protection is denied to workers and servicemen.

The war now being won by our men and by our allies is being fought for freedom from want and insecurity. Under this scheme, our men will return to a world of depression, unemployment and breadlines.

"UNPRINCIPLED FAKE"

The George bill is one of the most unprincipled fakes ever attempted on the American people. It does nothing for the workers and the servicemen. It fails to create the central planning agency with responsibility and authority that is needed to protect business from chaos and bankruptcy.

The reactionary bloc which backs the George bill has indicated that it intends to make reconversion a campaign issue. The workers, the farmers and all the American people will most certainly oblige them by making their record on this issue a campaign test.

In order to avoid the chaos and misery into which these enemies of progress seek to plunge the people of this nation, in order to provide jobs for all workers and servicemen, in order to prevent another era of Hoovervilles and apple selling,

BE IT RESOLVED:

That the Congress of Industrial Organizations calls on every member of the House of Representatives to be present in the House and to vote against the George bill and for the Celler bill (HR 5126).

Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 5—Vol. 1, No. 1, of "Steel," "The Voice of the United Steelworkers in Western Canada," newsy eight page monthly paper of the Vancouver district USA, was issued last month.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

As predicted last week in The CIO NEWS, the Senate junked the Kilgore-Murray-Truman reconversion bill and voted the completely phoney George bill (S 2051).

The fight now goes to the House, where the Celler Bill (HR 5126) will be offered either as amendments to the Senate passed George bill or as a separate bill.

Whatever the parliamentary situation is, we want the House to defeat the George bill, vote for the points in the Kilgore-Cellar bill. The George bill fails to plan reconversion, completely ignores the "human needs" of the workers and ex-servicemen for jobs and security.

The vote on this bill will become a major campaign issue. Note the Senate voting record on page 5 of this issue of The CIO NEWS, and watch for the House vote.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION

CIO Asks Subpenas For Big Shots In U. S. Probe Of Radio Gag On Labor

By FRED ROSS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19—Richard T. Frankensteen, CIO United Auto Workers vice president, threw consternation into the ranks of the broadcasting industry this week when he asked the Federal Communications Commission to subpena Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., James S. Adams and William S. Rainey, three top-flight officials of the Natl. Manufacturers Association.

The request was made during the hearing on the petition by UAW to cancel the license of Station WHKC, Columbus, Ohio, because the station refused to let Local 927, UAW, present its views on current problems on a paid series of broadcasts.

Although Commissioner Wakefield, who conducted the hearing, refused the request for the subpenas, the concern of the broadcasters was reflected by Lewis C. Caldwell, attorney for WGN, Chicago Tribune station, and the Mutual Broadcasting Company.

Caldwell told Wakefield that the FCC had not been granted censorship power and referred to the freedom of the press clause in the Constitution.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, Chicago Tribune publisher, is among those whose scripts have been subpenaed by the FCC at the request of UAW.

Scripts of McCormick, Fulton Lewis, Jr., Boake Carter, his sister, Sheelah; DeWitt Emory, president of the Natl. Small Businessmen's Assoc., and Upton Close also were subpenaed.

Frankensteen, in a petition, asked that Sloan, Adams and Rainey be subpenaed to show that they attempted to coerce WHKC and other radio stations to present gratis a program opposing the election of President Roosevelt. Maurice Sugar and Ernest Goodman, UAW attorneys, presented Frankensteen's petition.

Sloan, Adams and Rainey are chairman, program committee chairman and radio director, respectively, of the Natl. Industrial Information Committee, a creature of the NAM. Sloan is board chairman of General Motors Corp. and a director of E. I. duPont DeNemours. Adams is Standard Brands, Inc., president.

Frankensteen, in the petition, said that Sloan and Adams recently sent a letter to every radio station requesting the stations to carry NAM series of 13 broadcasts, "Businessmen Look to the Future," free of charge.

Frankensteen pointed to the more than three million dollars spent each year on radio advertising by duPont, GM and Standard Brands as "inducements" to the station.

The UAW leader charged NAM is again using its economic power to compel WHKC and other radio stations to present its "one-sided picture to the American public."

The vice-president of the largest CIO union linked the NAM radio program with the 1944 political campaign.

Frankensteen alleged that the radio program, "Businessmen Look to the Future," is designed to "influence the listening audience of Station WHKC and other radio stations in favor of the Republican candidate for President and against President Roosevelt."

Frankensteen said that the largest contributors in the 1940 national election campaign to the Republican campaign funds, as reported in the United States Senate, were the duPont group (including GM) in the amount of $310,280.

LARGEST CONTRIBUTOR

"The largest contributor," he added, "to the NAM was the same group of corporate interest, namely, the duPont-GM group, whose contributions totaled $185,120.

"The political literature and the radio broadcasts of the NAM and its affiliates, including the series of radio broadcasts referred to, coincide with the program and slogans contained in the Republican platform for 1944," Frankensteen said.

He said that the source of his statements concerning the contributions of the duPont-GM group to the NAM was the report of the Senate Committee on Education, Subcommittee on Civil Liberties, covering the period 1932-37.

Indiana Women In Political Drive

By LOUISE ZINN

Field Representative, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

The Indiana CIO is celebrating this month the first anniversary of its political action campaign. In August, 1943, a statewide education conference launched a drive to educate members on the records of Congressmen and the importance of legislation.

That drive is bearing fruit today in an active state PAC in which the CIO auxiliaries as well as the unions are playing an important part. Regular discussion at auxiliary meetings of how bills before Congress will affect the people has done a lot to stimulate active participation of the members in political action.

Our experience in Indiana during the past year has shown the great value of auxiliary assistance in political work. The women served on the "registration committees" set up before primary day to furnish the county clerks with names and addresses of persons willing to serve as registrars and to get them appointed as soon as possible.

PHONE COMMITTEE

On primary day one political action committee had a phoning committee, the chairman of which was an auxiliary member. A crew of 13 women (CIO and AFL) divided the list of the voters and called one after another, making sure they were voting, making arrangements for transportation to the polls, and at the same time plugging the labor-endorsed candidate. This will be done again on November 7.

One of the essential campaign activities is distribution of literature at plant gates and house to house. The unions find auxiliary women always ready to help. The women know, too, that keeping children busy and happy lowers delinquency, so many a youngster is found helping mother on distribution. Plans are being made to use many more teen-agers in the coming months.

A really interested auxiliary member makes a fine precinct captain. She has many friends in the precinct; knows the problems of every housewife; the needs of the women war-workers; can poll the precinct and see that everyone is registered. It is no task for her to plan a block tea where she discusses with neighbors the OPA, child care, how to get the streets fixed, and, of course, the win-the-war candidates.

If the auxiliary captain feels she cannot lead such a discussion herself, she invites a member of the PAC to explain the issues clearly and simply. As a result of such gatherings she enlists the aid of other women in her community.

Union and auxiliary members appointed registers before the primary were urged to keep a list of homes with boys in the armed forces. Now they are returning with ballot application cards, thus insuring servicemen a chance to vote in November.

CREDIT TO PAC

A lot of credit for these activities should go to the Indiana State PAC. Realizing the importance of women in the election, they asked a representative of the auxiliaries to be a member of the State Steering Committee and the State Executive Board, thereby making the fullest cooperation of the women's organization possible.

As yet, no facts or figures can be quoted on how successful these activities have been, but I am sure if every auxiliary planned a similar program we would be instrumental in stacking up a large vote for President Roosevelt and the election of a win-the-war Congress.

Congress Lifts Gag On GI Reading

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19—Congress this week unanimously and hastily passed amendents liberalizing the restrictions on reading matter and movies made available to servicemen—a signal victory for the CIO.

The amendments are to the soldier vote law in which the restrictions were placed by Sen. Taft (R., Ohio), who became alarmed over the prohibitions on dissemination of Republican propaganda that he aided Sen. Green (D., R.I.), sponsor of the amendments, in hastening their passage by the Senate on Tuesday.

The next day the House, like the Senate, unanimously passed the amendments and sent them to the White House. Senator Lucas (D., Ill.) also led in the fight for the changes.

Spearheading the CIO drive for the amendments, the United Electrical Workers Tuesday sent a delegation to praise Sen. Green for his part in obtaining quick action of the measure and to point out to Sen. Taft that he had done a right-about face on restrictions.

Taft said that he didn't think he had changed his mind, although he would have to read what he had said at the time he proposed the restrictions to "make sure."

The UE delegation, representing servicemen and veterans in the union, recommended in a statement by James McLeish that Congress immediately launch "a most thorough and comprehensive program to bring political and legislative information to men and women in the armed forces."

Other members of the delegation were Clifford T. McAvoy, UE Washington representative; A. A. Hartwell, director of Public Affairs; Bill Cahn, publicity director, and Tom Wright, editor of UE News.

Sens. Green and Taft were presented with copies of the "UE Guide to Political Action," a nonpartisan publication, which was rejected by the Editions for Armed Services, which reprints books for use by the Army.

The amendments state that partisan discussions in servicemen's publications, radio programs, films and educational courses must give equal space to both sides and that there shall be no restrictions on sales of publications at Army post exchanges or ships' stores.

To Mobilize Spanish Vote For FDR

New York, Aug. 19—Leaders of Spanish-speaking people of New York City, representing 30 organizations with some 100,000 members, started the ball rolling this week on a campaign to swing the estimated Spanish vote of two million to the support of the Roosevelt-Truman ticket.

At a conference held at headquarters of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union, NMU President Joseph Curran told the group that the invitation to the meeting came properly from the NMU because it had some 12,000 Spanish-speaking members.

The policy of the union, Curran said, had always been one of complete unity of all nationalities and this unity was best served today by bringing out the vote for President Roosevelt.

A subcommittee of 15 was elected to draw up a program of action to be widely distributed.

Poll Shows Dewey Talks Aiding FDR

New York, Aug. 19—The more speeches Dewey makes, the better are FDR's chances for re-election.

Fortune's magazine's latest survey discloses that Roosevelt's lead rose to 8.6 points from 6.5 points in the four weeks between July 8 and August 8. The public is now 52.5 per cent in favor of a fourth term, as against 43.9 per cent for Dewey.

As of July 8, the Fortune survey reported 49.2 per cent favoring Roosevelt and 42.7 per cent for Dewey. Regardless of personal wishes, 72.4 per cent of the public now expects Roosevelt to win in November, compared to 66.4 per cent who felt that way early in July.

Roosevelt's strongest support lies in the 21-to-34 age group, a further break-down in the survey showed, despite Dewey's thesis that youth vs. old age is one of the main issues in the campaign.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

Reports from all over the field indicate great enthusiasm for the ACA-CIO and its drive among the Western Union employes. Regional offices of the CIO, in many places, are acting as clearing houses and coordinating the work in this drive. We cannot too strongly emphasize that all representatives, both of CIO and those of our affiliated National and international unions, render every support they can in working through and with the one in charge in their territories and bringing the message of CIO to Western Union workers.

The hounds bark but the caravan moves on. Statements against the CIO Political Action Committee are more numerous and more exaggerated and also more humorous. These reactionary die-hards little realize that with proper leadership and the issues thoroughly explained to them that the working men and women of the nation will become active in politics in order to see to it that we have a win-the-war Congress; one that will put human rights above property rights; one that will restore the spirit of our forefathers—Jefferson and Lincoln—into the affairs of Government.

Martin Dies was too sick to run and is well enough to seek to attack again and is on the rampage. Like all poor sports, Martin started something, then he got hit and he howls, but who cares for Martin anyway?

Dies Again

The CIO-PAC and the National Citizens PAC are determined to bring the issues squarely before the American people. What they call us, it matters not, if we are right and we are right.

LITTLE LUTHER

"Well, I see Congress isn't going to tolerate loafers in the postwar period," announced Mr. Dilworth with considerable satisfaction.

"That's swell," said Little Luther. "I wondered when they were going to put some of those fat slobs to work. I suppose it's better late than never."

"I didn't mean congressmen," Dr. Dilworth said acidly. "I mean those workers who want the government to buy them caviar and champagne while they and their families rest in idleness."

"Caviar and champagne?" said his son. "I'll admit my life's been shorter than yours, but I never yet heard a working man order fish eggs and sour cider. They'd prefer beefsteak and beer if they could get them."

"Caviar and champagne is what it says here," insisted Mr. Dilworth, pointing to the New York Times. "Arthur Krock, their chief Washington correspondent, says the New Dealers wanted workers to have caviar and champagne while they're out of work. But a plucky band of southern Democrats and all the Republicans voted the plot down."

"Strikes me it was a fine idea," said Little Luther. "I can't imagine anything that would drive a man to work faster than being forced on a diet of caviar while he was unemployed. What did the New Deal plan to do, deliver a package of fish eggs and a bottle of wine every morning with the milk?"

Why no, son. They wanted to give the jobless idlers 75% of their regular pay for maybe as long as two years while our industrial leaders were getting plants reconverted and depressions liquidated. The rates went away up to $35 a week. Now they'll get what the states give them—averaging $13 a week, and that's too much."

"Yes," said Little Luther, "$35 a week IS a lot for a man, his wife and four kids. Why, it's almost enough to pay their taxes. I don't see how the country could afford it, after paying corporations back the $78,000,000,000 in taxes they'll have returned after the war if they can't make big enough profits themselves."

"What I say is, thank God for the Republican congressmen."

"That's what I say, too, Pop. They're sure building up a wonderful record for Mr. Dewey to point to with pride. I don't know what we Democrats would do without them."

'Eagles' For Jobs For All

Cincinnati, Aug. 19—Full employment and the guaranteed annual wage—two objectives of the CIO—were approved by the Fraternal Order of Eagles at its national convention here this month.

The Eagles have a membership of 800,000, mostly workers and middle-class groups.

"The social, economic and political fabric of America cannot endure another long continued depression," the resolution said. "The future of 'our way of life'; the democratic institutions which we revere rest upon our will and ability to provide postwar full employment for American workers."

ANNUAL WAGE

Pointing out that the guaranteed annual wage will encourage employment and provide security, the resolution urges early "action by labor, industry and government to the end that plans and legislation may be formulated to achieve this goal."

Warns of $80,000,000 Rent Gouge

New York, Aug. 19—Tenants' rent bills here would be increased by a total of $80,000,000 if the request of the "Metropolitan Fair Rent Committee" for a 10 per cent or more boost in rentals is granted, City Councilman Michael J. Quill charged this week.

In introducing a resolution into the New York City Council opposing the increase, Councilman Quill, who is president of the CIO Transport Workers Union, said:

"Thousands of families would be forced to look for cheaper housing, especially the families of servicemen whose allotments cannot stand 10 per cent increases. With occupancy levels at unprecedented heights, vacant, habitable apartments are practically impossible to find."

HOOVERISM OR JOBS:

This was the keynote of the labor traveling institute sponsored by the United Furniture Workers and the Highlander Folk School which visited 16 locals in Virginia, North and South Carolina. The institute group above are, left to right: Myles Horton, chairman of Highlander; Mrs. Horton, director of music; Catherine Winston, executive secretary; Ruth Netzorg, director of public speaking, and Bernard Hiatt, intl. representative, United Furniture Workers.

CIO 'Road Show' In Southern Circuit

MONTEAGLE, Tenn., Aug. 19—A 10-day traveling institute sponsored by the CIO United Furniture Workers and presented by the staff of Highlander Folk School here visited 16 local unions in Virginia, North and South Carolina during the period from July 29 to August 7 with a lively program that met with hearty response at all stops.

In song, posters and speeches the institute brought the urgency of postwar planning and political action closer to hundreds of Southern CIO members. The unions visited took part in lively discussions on grievance procedure, parliamentary law, public speaking, political action, the annual wage, international labor cooperation and other vital subjects.

CIO COOPERATION

Much of the success of the programs, the institute leaders said, was due to the cooperation of the various CIO unions in the sections visited, including the Textile Workers Union, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, the United Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers and the Tobacco Workers Organizing Committee.

War Contracts

New York, Aug. 19—War contracts awarded in 33 major industrial areas have totaled $120 billion through May, 1944, or over $2,500 per capita, according to figures compiled by the National Industrial Conference Board.

October 'Earliest' Date For World Labor Meet—Citrine

October is the earliest date "that the military situation will have cleared sufficiently to enable us to judge as to when the World Trade Union Conference should be held," Sir Walter Citrine, general secretary of the British Trades Union Congress, has informed all unions invited to the meeting originally set for June 6 in London.

This is due, Citrine's letter says, entirely to the restrictions on travel in Britain that began some time before D-Day and still continue. As a coincidence, D-Day actually came on June 6, the day set for the conference to be attended by CIO and all other United Nations labor, including Latin-America.

An alternative proposal, Citrine says, was to hold the meeting in Canada, but this was ruled out again by travel restrictions within Britain, which would have prevented TUC delegates from leaving their country.

In addition, the Citrine letter adds, the British government has asked all organizations either to cancel or postpone conventions scheduled for this year. TUC's own meeting, he said, is being put off until October.

Discussing the letter and the whole proposal for an international labor unity meeting, CIO President Murray pointed out that the CIO was still anxious for a world labor conference as early as possible.

The recent series of United Nations meetings on aviation, oil, foreign trade and exchange (Bretton Woods) and the Postwar Security Conference in Washington opening August 21 are bringing the need for world labor working unity more and more sharply to the fore.

In this connection, trade union leaders of India, Latin-America and the Soviet Union have expressed approval of Australian Steelworkers head Ernie Thornston's proposal for a "skeleton committee" of United Nations union leaders to be formed now in order to bring international labor into the conference rooms of the United Nations.

Italians Urge Early Meeting

In Italy, Pietro Nenni, general secretary of the Italian Socialist Party, has urged the British Labor Party to call a congress "to bring before the world the ideas and proposals of the international working class on the problems of peace," according to Allied Labor News.

George Baldanzi, executive vice president of the Textile Workers Union, CIO, has left on his trip to Italy as official delegate from the CIO. Baldanzi will investigate conditions of the workers and their unions there, and will return to report to the CIO.

Announcing his trip two weeks ago, Baldanzi said that he was not going to offer the Italians "gratuitous advice" on how to run their own affairs. Luigi Antonini, vice president of the AFL's Ladies Garment Workers, has talked loud and long about the advice he will give when he gets over.

'Big Three' Of CIO Meet On Wages

NEW YORK, Aug. 19—A comprehensive program to obtain a guaranteed annual wage and favorable action by the War Labor Board on the demand for 17-cent basic wage adjustment was adopted by 800 shop stewards and officers of New Jersey and New York locals of the three largest CIO unions at a conference here recently.

Unions represented were United Auto Workers, United Steelworkers and United Electrical Workers.

Besides mapping the campaign to obtain wage increases and the guaranteed annual wage, the conference sent wires to the Senate and House demanding favorable action on the Kilgore-Truman-Murray reconversion bill. The Senate defeated the bill, and CIO is pressing for an open hearing on the measure before the House Ways and Means Committee, which as this paper went to press was holding closed hearings on the George bill.

The conference declared in a resolution addressed to WLB that granting labor's request for wage relief was "a vital war necessity," and an inescapable factor in making the period of economic transition and industrial reconversion to peacetime production one that will provide full buying power and full employment."

Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, who represented President Murray, outlined the arguments presented to the War Labor Board steel panel. Julius Emspak, UE secretary-treasurer, and Richard T. Frankensteen, UAW vice-president, related the fight for the 17-cent increase to the postwar picture of reconversion and full employment.

Political Unity In Action

Rochester, Aug. 19—Labor history was made in Rochester last week when the AFL Central Trades and Labor Council sent its president, Anthony A. Capone, on an official harmony visit to the CIO Industrial Union Council.

Although a friendly spirit has been developing between the two bodies for some months, this was the first time ranking members of the AFL council had brought greetings to a CIO body.

Pres. John H. Cooper of the CIO Council, in welcoming the AFL leader, emphasized the need of labor solidarity in the coming political struggle and the wisdom of the two bodies working together on labor's problems. Cooper has been invited by the AFL body to speak at its meeting.

In response to the proposals for greater co-operation between the two labor bodies, the AFL spokesman cited the recent organization of a Joint Legislative committee in Rochester composed of AFL, CIO and Railroad Brotherhood representatives as evidence of the determination of all local labor groups to pull together.

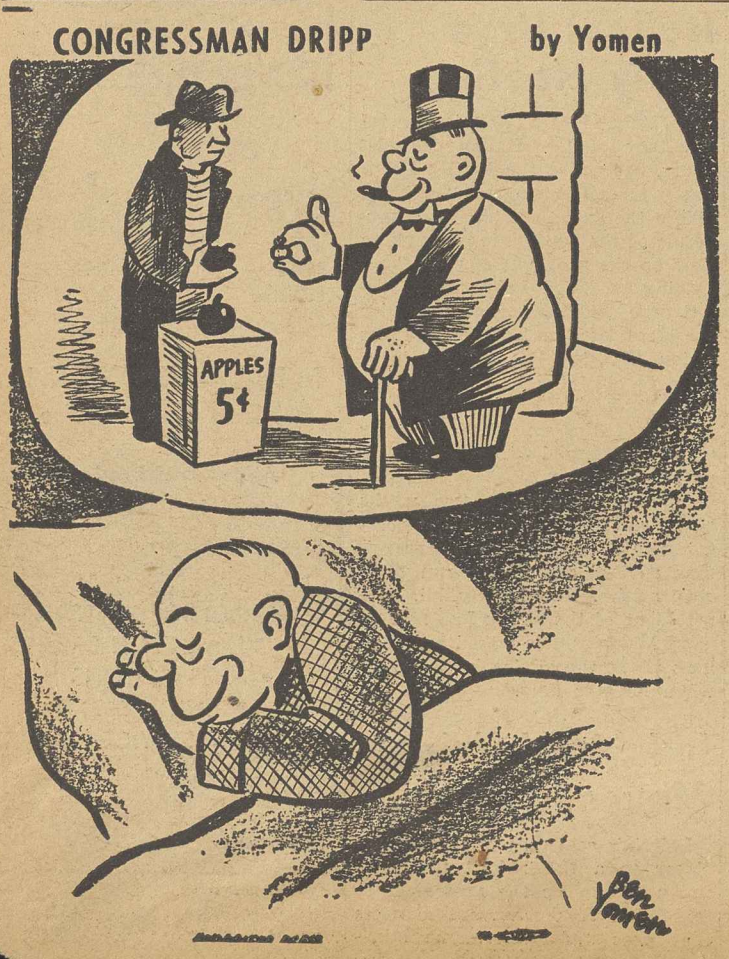
Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 19—Mrs. Rhoda Barefoot, agent of the Pennsylvania Mutual Life Insurance Co., was awarded $156 in adjusted wages recently as the result of the intervention of Local 65, United Office & Professional Workers in her behalf.

Citizens Committee Adds Negro Leaders

New York, Aug. 19—The National Citizens Political Committee this week at its first meeting added Pres. Willard S. Townsend of the CIO Transport Service Employes Union to its executive committee. Chairman Sidney Hillman also announced the appointment of Dr. E. Franklin Frazier and Dr. Ira Reid, sociologists, and Metz T. Lochard, editor-in-chief of the Chicago Defender, to the committee.

The meeting also voted to name Miss Freda Kirchwey, publisher of the Nation, as vice chairman, and to add ex-Gov. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania, Mrs. Verda Barnes, director, Women's Division, and Lucy Randolph Mason, long active in consumer groups and a noted southern liberal, to the executive committee.

Washington, Aug. 19—Renegotiations of contracts by the Maritime Commission Price Adjustment Board has saved the government more than $200,000,000 during the past two years, the Maritime Commission has announced.



Tell All About Avery

Chicago, Aug. 19—The facts and the man behind the Montgomery-Ward case—Sewell Lee Avery—have been documented in a pamphlet, called "The Avery Formula," just published here by the Education Dept. of the CIO Mail Order, Warehouse & Retail Employes Union.

The union, an affiliate of the CIO Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes, has been engaged for many months in a bitter struggle with Avery to get the company to bargain in good faith and sign a new contract.

Here are some of the things this interesting pamphlet reveals about Avery, whom it describes as a "businessman with an outlook so bleakly reactionary that sometimes he scares other businessmen." He is:

Chief executive and the biggest stockholder of two of the 200 biggest non-banking corporations —U. S. Gypsum and Montgomery-Ward.

A director of U. S. Steel, Armour, People's Gas, Pure Oil, Pullman and Northern Trust.

A trustee of the University of Chicago—which is one of the biggest stockholders in both U. S. Gypsum and Wards.

Just how rich Avery is today, says the pamphlet, no one but himself knows, but from such figures about his income as have been made public, it can be estimated that he has an income of $570,000 a year—plus.

Examining the "Avery Formula" in action, the pamphlet says its main features are: Delay, Defiance, Demogogy, Deception, and Defamation.

The alarming thing about this formula, the union declares, is that "there have been ominous signs in the last few months" that it "is spreading widely throughout the great Chicago industrial area."

Pullman-Standard Mfg. Co., and Armour & Co., it points out, have taken action "suspiciously like the recent behavior of U. S. Gypsum and Montgomery-Ward."

The Avery Formula, published by the Education Dept., CIO Mail Order, Warehouse & Retail Employes Union, Local 20; 518 West Chicago Ave., Chicago, Ill.; 15 cents a copy; 25 to 100 copies, 10 cents each; 100 to 1000 copies, 8 cents each.

Union-busting Preachers Hired By Ford

Detroit, Aug. 19 — Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO United Auto Workers Union spoke the truth when he declared that the Ford Motor Co. had hired a thousand preachers as plant employes in order to destroy the union, the Rev. Claude Williams declared recently in an open letter to Harry Bennett, vice-president of the firm.

Mr. Williams is industrial chaplain of the Detroit Presbytery and director of the People's Institute of Applied Religion.

Thomas had made his charge as leading speaker at the closing session of the Institute Congress held recently in St. Paul's Cathedral (Episcopal) and was later publicly challenged by Bennett.

"Mr. Thomas did not say that the Ford Motor Co. would be able to destroy the union through the preacher-employes," Williams said in his letter to Bennett.

"Thomas is aware that most of these preachers will remain loyal to the union, to their families and the people. But he made it perfectly plain what the purpose was."

More than 200 delegates from the U. S. and Canada attended the congress, which was endorsed by the UAW and other CIO unions, Williams said.

"The congress resolved that religion must take an uncompromising stand against fascism, including the American varieties of fascism, in which it included the Ford organization by name as well as Henry Ford himself," Williams declared.

Policing Prices Job For All Americans

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19—Housewife, doctor, store-keeper, union shop steward, Negro teacher, businessman and minister—Centerville's OPA price panel was again in session for its weekly Friday evening meeting.

As the price clerk read the list of price ceiling violations and the reports of the voluntary price panel assistants who had made the regular check of stores in the community, the home front war against inflation was showing again how democracy works among the grass roots of America.

Thus OPA, with its 325,000 volunteer workers as ration board members, price panel assistants and those volunteers who aid in issuing ration books, represents one of the most forward steps in bringing government to the front porches and backyards of America.

NEIGHBORS AT WORK

Centerville's price panel of neighbors followed OPA administrative order No. 4 to the letter. This order sought community-wide representation and forbade the selection of members from the same political party, sex, religious faith, race, economic level, social or occupation. The order suggested that each board should include a housewife, trade unionist, farmer (where possible) and a representative from various minority and racial groups.

Such varied and community-wide representation formed the "front line" trenches in the people's fight against inflation.

For example, the CIO shop steward knew that this was his biggest battle. With his wages frozen by the Little Steel formula and a 45 per cent rise in the cost of living that played havoc with the family bread-box, he knew that he and millions of other war workers were in a tight spot keeping war production up and making ends meet at home.

The women's auxiliary of his union had made this their most important work and many of them were serving as price panel assistants where they checked stores for violations as well as aiding store-keepers in understanding OPA regulations.

HOUSEWIVES TOO

The housewife, in guarding the family's pocketbook, was highly sensitive to every shift in the cost of a can of tomatoes or a quality change in every can of peas. She knew that the price panel's first service to the community was to make it possible for each housewife and consumer to know ceiling prices each time a purchase was made. She also knew that the entire community was harmed by every price violation, and that each violation brought inflation closer.

Down here on the local level understanding of inflation is running higher each day. In the course of the fight to control it, the people are grasping the new meaning of the responsibility that must exist between government and themselves. The expansion of community participation in this present crisis is a healthy guide for post-war America and a free democratic society.

CIO Workers Win Praise of Soviets

Washington, Aug. 19—Members of Local 131, CIO United Auto Workers, at Autocar Company, Ardmore, Pa., chopped off several months to complete an order for half-track vehicles and won a letter of appreciation from a Soviet Union official.

The letter, addressed to the Ordnance Dept., Army Service Forces, was from Lt. Col. I. D. Poulnikov, a member of the Soviet Government Purchasing Commission, and expressed "deep gratitude" for the speed with which the shipment of half-tracks and spare parts was delivered.

The workers made in 45 days an order for half-tracks which normally would have required six to eight months to produce. Speed was necessary in completing the order to have it ready for a certain Russia-bound convoy.

Down the Drain, Or The End of W. Pegler

NEW YORK, Aug. 26—Westbrook Pegler, America's No. 1 smear artist, has become too much even for Roy Howard, head of the Scripps-Howard newspaper chain, to swallow.

Howard has announced that by "mutual consent" the contract between The World-Telegram, Scripps-Howard paper here, and Pegler will not be renewed.

Westbrook will then work for William Randolph Hearst, known colloquially as "Dirty Willie." He should feel at home.

Although he professes to be a "friend" of labor, his technique is to smear all labor through exposure of a handful of discredited leaders.

He recently condoned the wildcat strike at the Philadelphia Transit Co., caused by the decision to employ eight Negroes as motormen, most of them old employes of the company.

Judging from his statement, Howard must have been under tremendous pressure to drop Pegler. Labor helped in Howard's decision not to renew Pegler's contract, because many complaints against the columnist have come from the labor movement.

The World-Telegram building here was picketed by members of the CIO National Maritime Union when during a period when hundreds of a seamen were going down with their torpedoed ships he launched virulent attacks on them in his column.

Other groups, including Catholics and Negroes, have complained bitterly of his stand on other subjects. Pegler also attacked the idea of a port of entry for European refugees, many of whom were Jews.

In announcing failure to renew the columnist's contract, Howard said:

The impact of Mr. Pegler's writing on the opinion content of any newspaper is very great—so far in fact that the editorial voice of Scripps-Howard could only continue audible by resort to a stridency which we do not care to employ.

"Scripps-Howard has never exercised control over the subject matter or the opinions of Mr. Pegler as they appear in his column, but we have been unable to satisfy many of our readers on this point, or convince them that Pegler has always expressed Pegler without regard to the opinions or policy of Scripps-Howard."

Labor In Politics On Air

Washington, Aug. 26 — "Labor in Politics" will be the subject of the American Forum of the Air broadcast, Tuesday, August 29 from 9:30 to 10:15 P. M., EWT.

Participants will include CIO Sec'y-Treas. James B. Carey, Congressman Joe Starnes of Alabama, Congressman Warren G. Magnuson of Washington and Robert J. Watt of the American Federation of Labor.

The program will originate from the Shoreham Hotel and will be carried over the coast-to-coast Mutual Network.

Pay Boost for 3,000

Washington, Aug. 26—Some 3,000 workers in two plants of the Pullman Standard Car Mfg. Co. at Hammond, Ind., represented by locals of the CIO United Steelworkers, have been granted a 5 cents an hour general wage increase by the War Labor Board.

Open Hearings On UAW-CIO Pay Raise At General Motors

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26—General Motors is looking to the future to protect the investment of stockholders with its contingency fund of $150,000,000, Walter P. Reuther, vice-president of the CIO United Auto Workers declared this week before the War Labor Board in its hearing on union demands for cost of living adjustment, industry-wide wage stabilization, a post-war security fund, full employment and guaranteed annual wage, night shift differential and maintenance of membership.

Reuther, director of the union's General Motors division, told the board that at least a part of this $150,000,000 should be ear-marked as a post war security employment fund. "These payments," he said, "would supplement the unemployment compensation GM workers would receive."

The UAW's demand for a post-war security fund to match the corporation's contingency fund calls for a jointly administered union-corporation fund, during the period of reconversion. GM workers on seniority lists and those who have returned from the armed services who do not receive a full week's work of 40 hours would receive supplementary allowances from the security fund in addition to the unemployment compensation. The amount would equal 40 hours pay.

PROFITS GUARANTEED

Reuther called attention to the fact that under the Revenue Act of 1942, GM was insured against any profit loses during the post war period since $156,000,000 of excess profit taxes will be returned to the company if profits in 1945 and 1946 fall below their 1936-39 average of $220,800,000.

"Workers who made these profits possible," Reuther declared, "are entitled to some cushioning when this boom folds up in the post war period."

The union's demand for industry-wide wage stabilization seeks to create tripartite wage commissions in the automobile and allied war industries to administer a master wage agreement calling for equal pay for equal work regardless of the geographical location of the plant or product manufactured.

In its demand for cost of living adjustments, the UAW asks that the new wage contract contain a wage escalator clause which would provide for automatic wage adjustments equal to new increases in living costs at the time such increased living costs occur. Basic wage rates of GM employees, the union stated, have stood without change or adjustment since April 28, 1942.

PRICES UP

In April 1943, the union conducted a study of food prices in Flint, Mich., a GM town, as compared to advertised prices in that city Jan. 1941. They survey showed price increases of from 101 per cent to 460 per cent. The Union asks revision of the present wage policies so as to bring them in line with the fundamental objectives of a National stabilization program in order to maintain the wage standards established.

The union presented a "Wartime Balance Sheet" in a comparison of GM profits with depressed earnings of GM profits before the war averaged $224,557,000 campared with employee earnings of an annual average of $1,503.

GM profits before taxes in 1943 were $437,339,000 and $185,999,000 after normal and excess profits taxes. GM workers earnings in 1943 averaged $2,985 (including overtime) which was reduced to $1,540 after war time income taxes and cost of living increases took their share.

$3,000,000 Back Pay

Memphis, Tenn., Aug. 26—Retroactive pay raises amounting to $3,000,000 will be received by workers at the General Motors Fisher Aircraft plant. The raises were approved by Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson on recommendation of the National War Labor Board.

Chicago Stewards Pledge Political Action Drive

CHICAGO, Aug. 26—More than 3,000 shop stewards and other CIO officials jammed the Ashland Auditorium here last week at the mobilization rally called by the Chicago CIO Council in support of labor's political action drive, the Kilgore reconversion bill and revision of the wage-freezing Little Steel formula.

CIO General Counsel Lee Pressman and Raymond S. McKeough, regional political action director, were the main speakers. Albert Towers, president of the Chicago Council presided, and Council Secretary Michael Mann presented the issues to the meeting for action.

McKeough urged that efforts to get voters to register be speeded up. He told the delegates that solution of the issues before the meeting could be obtained only through a realistic political action program.

WAGE CASE

Pressman outlined the case of the CIO unions for a 17 cents hourly pay increase now before the War Labor Board, pointing out that industrial workers have been discriminated against while corporations have been making large profits. "All we ask is that wages be raised to meet the increase in the cost of living," he said.

Taking up the Kilgore Bill which has been backed by the CIO, Pressman explained that the George bill recently passed by the Senate was a totally inadequate substitute.

HIT McCORMICK

Jack Spiegel, a member of the Council's executive board, spoke on the disloyal and disruptive attitude of the Chicago Tribune, which he called "Hitler's bridgehead on the Chicago River."

Three resolutions were passed unanimously by the delegates to the meeting. One on reconversion attacked the George Bill "as totally inadequate for economic stabilization in the reconversion and post-war period" and called for full support for the Kilgore Bill.

Another on the CIO's wage demands, wholeheartedly endorsed the CIO's program for stabilization and called for a general wage increase of 17 cents an hour and a guaranteed annual wage.

A resolution on Political Action recommended a voluntary minimum contribution of $1 from all CIO members and pledged to aid officers of all affiliated unions in securing such contributions.

After a stormy crossing and three enemy attacks the William M. Meredith delivered her cargo and returned to the torpedoed ship, the Thomas G. Masaryk, where the men worked constantly in the intense heat under the worst conditions to salvage the precious cargo.

CIO-Aided Kids Center Booming In Detroit

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26—The "defeat" of well meaning CIO and YWCA women in Detroit has caused juvenile crime in southwestern Detroit to drop to the lowest point in twenty years.

The story of how the Detroit teen agers deposed women war workers from their carefully planned and decorated recreation center and made such good use of it that even the dispossessed war workers didn't object, is told by Vera Connolly in the September issue of the Woman's Home Companion.

Invited to attend a "small" dance held in the teen age lounge (seating 26) at the back of the center, 800 fun hungry kids of all races, backgrounds and behavior records literally stormed the building and took it over.

Efforts of the directors to salvage even a corner for the war workers were useless against the hundreds of kids eager for a hangout of their own. The women charged admission of one coathanger and enterprising kids set up business outside the door at five cents a coathanger.

A little desperately the directors charged 11 cents admission and as a receipt stamped the date on the entress hand. Some one secured a stamping outfit and broke that scheme. Kids piled in all the doors and pulled their friends in the windows.

Called a great pioneering experiement by Dr. Fritz Redl, Associate Professor in the School of Public Affairs at Wayne University, the center, now after a year, accepted as belonging to the teen agers, is outstanding in that its members come from every type of home background from the "nice" school kids to the "trouble making" types and are of every race, creed and color.

GOP, Polltaxers Plan Feast For Monopoly On U. S. Property

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26—As quietly as they can, and without a roll call vote, the reactionary Republican-polltax Democrat alliance in Congress is trying to slip through a surplus U. S. property bill that has all the makings of one of the biggest steals in history.

This is the Colmer bill (HR 5125) offered by Rep. Colmer, a polltaxer from Mississippi and a member of the Rules Committee and chairman of the House Postwar Committee, and passed by the House late this week.

At the same time, the same combination in the Senate is trying to sit out the Stewart bill (S 2065) which does protect the public's interest in some $100 billion worth of surplus property that authorities expect to have on hand after the war.

WIDE OPEN

The Colmer bill leaves the disposition of public property wide open not only to possible graft but also to serious abuse by monopolies, who would be able to grab up U. S. owned lands, supplies and plants in order to keep them from small business and the consumer.

This is made easy in the Colmer bill by its grant of absolute authority to one man, the Surplus Property Administrator, and by its failure to limit his powers by any sort of advisory board.

This administrator and the heads of government agencies can delegate authority to dispose of U. S. property to anyone they please. This authority can then be redelegated still further down the line, making control by the Administrator still more remote and difficult.

Here's what the Colmer bill says—in the section that opens the door to all sorts of unhealthy possibilities. It's in section 18 (B) of the bill:

"The head of any government agency may delegate, and authorize successive redelegations of, any authority and discretion conferred upon him or his agency by or pursuant to this Act to any officer, agent, or employe of such agency or, with the approval of the Administrator, to any other government agency."

AIDS CORPORATIONS

Under this system, authority to sell things belonging to the people of the U. S. can be so shuffled around that all track of the people responsible will be lost. The basic idea, of course, is to make it easy for corporation stooges within the agencies to get the inside track on juicy U. S. properties.

The Colmer bill completely lacks any plan for stockpiling vital materials against a future emergency. It has no controls over the sale of U. S. owned lands, which can be sold to monopoly interests in complete disregard of the needs of farmers or returning veterans.

STEWART BILL BETTER

In contrast, the Stewart bill just out of the Senate Military Affairs Committee surrounds the Surplus Property Administrator with a controlling board of representatives from labor, management, farmers and the consumer.

This board makes policies and delegates authority, rather than a single man or a government agency. In fact, under the Stewart bill no agency can dispose of property under its control without permission of the board or without sticking to the policies it lays down.

In addition, the Stewart bill requires U. S. agencies to report on their property holdings, which prevents them from holding things off the market in the interest of monopoly. It also requires the administrator to check with the Attorney-General before selling a war plant worth more than $1,000,000, again as a curb on sales to monopolies which would dismantle the plant and deny jobs and products to the people from their own investment.

The Colmer bill (HR 5125) is headed for the Senate. CIO favors the Stewart bill (S 2065) just reported out of the Senate Military Affairs Committee. Wire your Senators to support S 2065, work and vote against the Colmer steal.

House Gets New Labor Backed Conversion Bill; Rushes George 'Fake'

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26—In an apparent effort to make the original George bill look "liberal" by comparison, the House Ways and Means Committee this week was busy producing a reconversion measure even worse than the Senate Republicans and polltaxers passed three weeks ago.

This strategy, intended to make a return to the original George bill seem almost welcome, was clearly shown in the Committee's whittling down of the already totally inadequate protec-tions for workers and veterans in the George bill, and most sharply seen in the junking of the George provisions to put Federal employes under some kind of unemployment benefit system, however faulty.

In addition, the Committee goes even further in the direction of business and social chaos than the GOP-George team dared to go by deleting any mention of a War Mobilization Office. All that's left of even the futile George bill setup are some pious wishes and promises to lend money to the states if they go broke paying unemployment compensation.

Labor is countering this slashing attack with a new version (HR 5227) of the original Kilgore bill, just offered in the House by Rep. Dingell (D. Mich.) and sent to the same committee—Ways and Means.

Dingell's bill keeps the Office of War Mobilization and gives it a four-party advisory board with three representatives each from labor, management and agriculture and a chairman representing the public.

On unemployment compensation for war workers and veterans, it provides a maximum of $20 a week for a single worker without dependents, with a top for one with dependents. In no case, however, can benefits go over 75 percent of the last wage earned. The minimum payment is set at $8.00 a week. Duration of benefits is 52 weeks in any two-year period. Veterans at a base of $20 can get up to $35 a week according to the number of dependents.

The Dingell bill contrasts sharply with the George bill, under which benefits are simply continued at present state levels. Payments in some states under the present Social Security Act go as low as $3 a week for a period of 16 weeks. Under the Kilgore bill, top payment was $35.

In addition, the Dingell bill retains the moving costs payments of the original Kilgore bill, though it deletes the allowances for retraining of demobilized war workers and veterans.

The Dingell bill makes the chairman of the War Production Board responsible for industrial demobilization and reconversion.

The George bill is set to go through the House Ways and means Committee early this week. The Dingell bill has just started on the route to the floor through the same Committee.

Send wires to Chairman Robt. L. Doughton (D., N.C.) of the Ways and Means Committee and to your own Representative, urging quick and favorable action on the Dingell bill. Wire your Representative again urging a vote against the House version of the George bill.

It's your job and the job of your son, your brother or your husband in the armed forces that's at stake.

'INEVITABLE' drop in national income is cheerfully predicted by Sen. Taft (R., O.) who seems to relish the thought of millions of jobless war workers and veterans—at least judging by recent speeches in the Senate on reconversion. Taft opposed the Kilgore bill, led in fight for George starvation and chaos bill.

CIO Technicians Seek US Pay Raise

New York, Aug. 26.—The CIO Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians geared itself this week for a legislative fight in behalf of the Klein Bill (H. R. 4272) which would permit wage increases for federal white collar workers at the rate of either $400 per year or 20 per cent. of their basic annual compensation. The bill is before the House Civil Service Committee.

Federal employes have not had a base pay increase for 16 years, the FAECT says.

Jobs For All Key To Security, Murray Tells Veterans

CHICAGO, Aug. 26—Servicemen and workers are together in the "battle for plenty, the battle for freedom from want and fear," CIO Pres. Philip Murray told the 45th national encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars here this week.

"I feel that this challenge is best expressed by two words—full employment," he said. "Full employment means an expanding America with more jobs than there are people to fill them. I am not one who would say that the nation has stopped growing and that we have reached the point where so little needs to be done that we have too many people to share in the doing."

Turning to the subject of seniority, both for workers now employed and for the returning veterans, Murray declared:

"Seniority means a lot to the working man, and is always one of the important points in a labor union contract. We of labor, therefore, wanted to share some of the advantages of seniority with our veteran brothers and sisters.

"The operation of absolute priority," he warned, "would set veteran against industrial worker and veteran against employer. There are those who would be pleased to create chasms and differences between veterans and unionized industrial workers.

"It is not new for certain employers to use a 'divide and conquer rule.' That is why the CIO stands for organization on the industrial pattern, without regard to skill, sex, race, creed, color or origin. We do not allow anyone to weaken us by playing us off against veterans, against Negroes, against Jews, against people with foreign names."

JOBS FOR ALL THE ANSWER

Full employment is the answer to all problems of seniority, Murray reiterated, saying, "Seniority as a principle of labor union protection will become less important as the time comes when there are continued jobs for all who desire to work. The best assurance for preference of veterans is the assurance of work for all veterans and all industrial workers."

Murray hailed the growing unity of veterans and labor as shown in the invitation to speak at the VFW convention. "I look forward to a continuing and growing friendship with your organization and I want this friendship to infiltrate down to every community where you have a post and we have a local union, so that our unity for the common good may really be good for all of us."

Keep Your Eye On Congress

Here's the parliamentary situation on reconversion, now entering the final stages of the present campaign in the House.

The George bill, described by the CIO Executive Board as "an unprincipled fake," has passed the Senate and is now in the House Ways and Means Committee, which is whittling it down even further than the original.

Rep. Dingell (D., Mich.) has put a new bill (HR 5227) into the Ways and Means Committee which CIO and AFL are supporting. (See analysis above) This bill retains many of the original provisions in the Kilgore-Murray-Truman bill that the Republicans and the polltaxers sidetracked in the Senate.

The House Ways and Means Committee is expected to report out what remains of the George bill as The CIO NEWS goes to press. Wires are needed to build up support for the Dingell bill, which has a chance of passage.

If the Dingell bill passes the House, the whole issue goes to a House-Senate conference, where further chances for improvement exist.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Dingell reconversion. (HR 5227)	Retains much of Kilgore protection for workers, veterans. Is acceptable substitute for George bill.	House Ways and Means Committee, which is expected to report 'fake' George bill.	Wire Representative to support; vote against George bill.

Up To Their Old Tricks Again

Most of the big newspaper publishers are not waiting for X-Day, V-Day or any other day to reconvert to a pre-war basis so far as their editorial attitudes are concerned.

The Twohey Analysis of Newspaper Opinion reports that the editorial positions of daily newspapers on the Kilgore-Murray-Truman bill and the George bill are "in line with prewar press division on economic lines."

Seventy-one percent of the press opposed the Kilgore bill as doing too much for working people, as "making unemployment attractive," as New Deal extravagance, and as increasing federal control, etc., etc.

Only twelve percent supported the Kilgore bill, exposed the starvation character of the George bill, and noted that the phoney "states' rights" argument is a cover for selfish industrial and financial interests.

The Twohey Analysis notes that "this type of division constantly recurred on prewar issues," with similar percentages.

The election campaign and most labor issues reveal a similar division in the press between profit-motivated reaction and liberalism.

The popular demand for national unity for winning the war and winning the peace finds less and less reflection in most of the big-business press, which is reviving all its old divisive anti-New Deal and anti-labor propaganda with hardly a new wrinkle.

The editorial surveys show that 80 or 90% of the press is campaigning against Roosevelt, just as it did before the war, accusing him of favoring labor, red-baiting his administration and his supporters, attacking the CIO with every possible weapon for supporting him, and attempting to build up Tom Dewey as the perfect "Little Sir Echo" for the reactionary big-business interests for which these papers speak.

It is discouraging to find that the lessons of the war have made so little impression on most of the big newspaper publishers.

For America badly needs some assurance that the wartime spirit of national unity, cooperation and concern for the common interest, shall continue not only to the day of final victory but also into the postwar years.

We need this spirit and this enthusiasm for complete victory and for the tremendous task of rebuilding America on a prosperous postwar basis, with full production and full employment, and without the depression and insecurity that followed the last war.

But there is some consolation in the knowledge that, of all minorities in the United States, the reactionary newspaper publishers are one of the least representative.

Every time they have gone all-out to defeat Roosevelt, he has been elected by an overwhelming majority of the American people.

And today, such publishers do not even truly represent all the business and employing interests for which they assume to speak. There are many forward-looking and patriotic businessmen who want to see the wartime spirit of unity and cooperation continued for the great tasks ahead.

We do not therefore need to be unduly disturbed by the brickbats which this selfish and shortsighted minority daily hurl at labor and all progressives.

It is evidence of their fear and a tribute to the growing strength of labor and progressive political action.

The American people will have their say, not through a press which is so largely monopolized by one small financial group, but at the ballot box.

On Property Rights

We were on the point of writing that many Congressmen are showing a shocking disregard for human rights, in contrast to their tender concern for property rights, so far as reconversion is concerned — until the Colmer bill was brought to our attention.

This bill, sponsored by the same group that is trying to deprive war workers of even the meager protections of the Senate-passed let-'em-starve George bill, shows an equally shocking disregard for property rights—in this case, the property rights of the whole American people.

It would leave us wide open to be gypped by private monopolies in the disposition of $100 billion worth of so-called surplus U. S. property.

Read the story in this issue about the House-passed Colmer bill, and then urge your members of Congress to substitute for it the Stewart bill (S.2065) to protect our property rights.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

AT THE RISK of being called an AFL stooge, we rise to defend that organization's good name.

Anti-labor propagandists have begun using the AFL clipsheet as a means of attributing to a labor source their own slanders against labor political action.

It is true a writer for this clipsheet painstakingly compiles all such slanders and presents a weekly digest of them under his own name.

But, in fairness to all concerned, these slanders should be traced to their original anti-labor sources and so attributed, with due credit of course to Philip Pearl for his research services.

★ ★ ★

For instance, instead of using phrases like "the AFL charged," etc., editors might use this material in some such ways as the following:

"Martin Dies' charges that CIO political action is a 'communist conspiracy' were today repeated by Philip Pearl . . . "

"Members of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers who are fearful of a large labor vote drew comfort today from a column by P. P. . . . . "

"Republican efforts to divide labor supporters of Pres. Roosevelt today received the backing of . . . . "

"Contentions of the Hearst and Scripps-Howard press that political campaigning should be financed only by wealthy interests, and not by small contributions from working people, received support from an unexpected quarter today . . . . "

"Charges of the Chicago Tribune that CIO is seeking to buy up the Democratic Party and Roosevelt were today reprinted without credit by . . . . "

"Anti-union employers seeking support for a postwar open-shop drive today found their arguments that the unions will be 'easy meat' reiterated by P. P. . . . . "

"Conservative Republicans and polltax Democrats, who have consistently opposed all labor-backed measures in the present Congress, today found their latest excuses for this stand repeated by . . . . "

★ ★ ★

But it is unlikely busy editors will make such scrupulous efforts to be fair to the AFL, when the mud with which it is now being smeared is furnished by one of its own writers.

As a result, hasty readers draw the false conclusion that the AFL is opposed to labor unionists using their democratic rights to elect progressive candidates; and that it is a sucker for anti-labor propaganda.

They also get the false impression that the AFL is in league with the anti-Roosevelt forces; and that it is more interested in knifing other labor organizations than in promoting labor's common interests.

★ ★ ★

To support our defense of the AFL against such false impressions, we can cite no less an authority than Pres. Wm. Green.

The same AFL clipsheet that carried a recent widely publicized attack on labor political action, also carried a much less reprinted appeal by Green for more labor political action.

In language very similar to that of the CIO, Green called upon the AFL membership to establish state and local non-partisan political committees in every part of the country to see that workers register and go to the polls.

He urged full labor participation in the election, and support for or opposition to candidates on their labor record, regardless of party affiliation.

This corresponds closely to the political position of the CIO. The main difference is that CIO draws the logical conclusion that Roosevelt is one of the candidates who should be supported on his record; and that it has been earlier and more active in setting up committees to get workers registered and to the polls.

★ ★ ★

Further evidence that the above-mentioned impressions of the AFL are false may be found in statements of AFL leaders that a great majority of AFL members will vote for Roosevelt; in Roosevelt endorsements by many AFL unions and state federations; and in the further fact, which anyone can verify, that AFL members nearly everywhere are working side by side with CIO members (and often in joint committees) to get out the vote for Roosevelt and for progressive candidates for Congress.

The CIO sincerely tries to keep all organizational rivalry with the AFL out of this campaign, and seeks no narrow partisan advantage. On the contrary, it has from the first sought the closest working unity with the AFL, the Rail Brotherhoods and all other progressive organizations and voters for common political purposes.

P.S. for Pearl: Don't let any tory Republican or polltax Democrat kid you that he voted against the Kilgore bill on account of the CIO Political Action Committee. These lads were in cahoots to control Congress, and were voting for the Smith-Connally bill and against all labor-backed measures, long before there was any PAC.

CIO Show Aids Wounded

New York, Aug. 26 — A benefit show for wounded servicemen will be sponsored by the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers Saturday evening, September 23, at Madison Square Garden. Funds raised at a four-hour all-star performance of "Salute to the Wounded," will be contributed to the Chaplains' fund for the aid of convalescent and wounded servicemen in five big service hospitals.

Expenses of the production are being paid by the union and all talent is donated. The show committee is headed by Ed Sullivan, columnist, and Bob Weitman, managing director of New York Paramount.

SENATOR CLAUDE A. PEPPER

Need National Approach To Conversion To Avoid National Crisis—Pepper

The following article on reconversion was specially written for The CIO NEWS by the Hon. Claude A. Pepper, member of the U. S. Senate.

By CLAUDE A. PEPPER
U. S. Senator from Florida

In the first test which we have had in the Senate about an adequate reconversion program, those who do not believe in doing the job adequately have won. I speak, of course, of the passage of the George bill instead of the Murray-Kilgore bill in the Senate.

On the clear-cut issue of whether the principal responsibility for the national economy after the war shall be taken by the Federal as opposed to the state governments, or private enterprise, also the conservative group which believes in a minor and a limited approach to such problems by the federal government won out.

In short, this first real effort on the part of the federal government to assure decent subsistence to our millions who will lose their war jobs and will not readily be able to find peace jobs failed.

Our effort to give consideration to the dependents of war veterans in respect to the veterans unemployment compensation, too, failed.

Our first determined effort to provide vocational training for peace to the workers of the nation also failed.

Our first effort to prescribe standards as to what unemployed workers should get in the transition period also failed.

Our effort to set up general and effective Federal organization, aided by representative groups of labor,- agriculture, and industry repsentative groups of labor, the country and its opinion also failed.

These efforts failed because of the combination of Republican and Democratic forces which do not believe in those things. They attach, I am afraid I have to say, more significance to state's rights than they do to human rights.

I am afraid also that they have been willing to make better provision for the property rights of those who have been engaged in war contracts than they have for the jobs and for unemployment compensation and for vocational training, yes, even for the health and education of the workers who are the masses of the nation's people.

These groups didn't oppose 90% parity for agriculture. They advocated strenously adequate provision for the protection of industry respecting the termination of contracts. They vigorously sponsored legislation protecting the corporations against losses which they might sustain in bad times. But if the workers lost their jobs due to the termination of the war, they didn't provide for them getting back any of the withholding taxes that they paid on high wages.

The nation, therefore, is threatened with another depression and disaster because we again come with too little and too late.

If we try to do this job piecemeal, we will fail. If we try to do it with the states, we will fail. If we try just to help part of the people, we will fail in keeping the prosperity of the nation.

All the Republican Senators but five, and a considerable number of Democrats, in my opinion, have led the way for another depression, for more billions of investors' loss, more billions of lost purchasing power, innumerable tragedies and heartaches.

For like President Hoover and his government, who saw depression coming without putting the federal government fairly in the breach and saying it should not pass, this Republican-Democratic combination in the Senate says that only the states shall stand in its way.

This is a matter too big for the states. We must mobilize the might of the nation in peace as we have in war to protect the security, the health and the happiness of our people. Any effort less grand will fail.

CIO-PAC Exposes Newspaper Lies On 'Resignations'

NEW YORK, Aug. 26—Statements attributed by the Scripps-Howard press to CIO Locals 65 and 72 in Utah were "planted by enemies of the CIO Political Action Committee," C. B. Baldwin, assistant director of CIO-PAC, charged this week.

Henry J. Taylor, Scripps-Howard staff writer, in a story from Salt Lake City reported that "CIO Locals Nos. 65 and 72" had passed resolutions resigning from PAC because they were being "coerced" to vote a straight ticket.

"These statements are in direct contradiction to establish principles and purposes of PAC," Baldwin said.

DELIBERATE LIE

"PAC asks no commitment on candidates it sponsors," he added. "Any statement that CIO-PAC has told union members that they must vote a straight Democratic ticket or any other ticket, for that matter, or resign, is a deliberate falsehood, unquestionably planted by enemies of PAC.

"Fortunately, the secret ballot is still supreme in the United States and no organization respects the ballot more than PAC. No statement has ever been issued from this office which can in any way be construed to support the statements made in Utah."

A more definite story on what happened was carried by the Associated Press from Salt Lake City which stated that the Political Action Committee of three Tooele County, Utah, locals of the CIO International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers they had resigned. They were identified as Locals 55, 376 and 65.

The dispatch quoted letters from the local union heads as follows:

"The local union did not and does not approve the action taken by these individuals (committee members who resigned).

"We merely advised and pointed out the records of various candidates running for election . . . and at no time endeavored to compel the membership of this union to vote for any candidate.

"We, therefore, reaffirm our position which is complete participation in political action work."

'Political Distrust' New Screen For Radio Gag

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26—"Inspiring political distrust" is the neat little screen behind which the broadcasting industry tries to hide its censorship of radio copy submitted by unions in their efforts to present labor's position on public issues with the same freedom given to the Nat'l Ass'n. of Manufacturers and other special interest representatives.

This was made clear at hearings this week before the Federal Communications Commis-sion on the petition of the CIO United Auto Workers to cancel the license of station WHKC, Columbus, Ohio for its refusal to permit UAW Local 927 to present its views on current issues on a commercial broadcast.

UAW Attorney Ernest Goodman in cross-examining Carl Everson, general manager of station WHKC sought to have the witness explain by what standards "political distrust" is determined. The witness gave several broad generalizations as examples of inspiring political distrust.

The radio station executive in reviewing the various commentators who were carried over his station declared that he felt that most of them were neutral in their discussion of public issues, and the matter of "inspiring political distrust" did not enter in any of these cases. When the name of Boake Carter was presented—"I'm out to lunch when he is on" Everson said.

In discussing the anti-labor, anti-New Deal tirades of Fulton Lewis, Jr. Everson said he was not aware this commentator had been sponsored by the Nat'l Ass'n of Manufacturers or maintained any particular bias on questions of labor and politics. However, he felt that Upton Close may have some anti-administration bias.

In an examination of a series of programs sponsored by the NAM, under the title "Businessmen Look to the Future," Everson admitted that no announcement had been made over the station identifying the sponsor, which was in violation of Section 317 of the Federal Communications Act covering radio broadcasts. He said that labor sponsors were always identified.

Everson pointed out that his station had instituted a new policy and that it was not bound by the code of the National Association of Broadcasters (used to restrict the right of free speech of labor and other groups over the air). He said that the code of the NAB did not permit freedom of discussion, and that was one of the reasons why the station was giving it up.

CIO Schools Fill Summer Terms

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 26—Labor schools sponsored by the CIO United Automobile Workers were held this summer at Highlander Folk School, Indiana University, Hudson Shore Labor School, the University of Michigan and the Workers Educational Assn. Labour School in Canada. More than 300 members from 90 UAW locals attended.

The students represented all types of union members, from those who had just joined the UAW and wanted to learn what the movement was all about, to seasoned officials looking for new ideas to help them function more effectively.

Subjects studied covered a wide field—economics of the auto industry, union publicity, parliamentary procedure. Most popular were those dealing with pressing issues of the day—political action, problems of discrimination and labor law and collective bargaining.

"Every effort was made in the summer sessions to aid the tradition of democracy that is identified with the Intl. UAW-CIO," stated the union's Education Dept. "The schools became small functioning unions in many of their patterns. A union member could feel at home. There was a steering committee that closely resembled the executive board back home.

"It had actual power in setting up and in operating the session. The grievance procedure, so important in the shop, was enacted in these schools, self discipline was instituted, and it worked."

Washnigton, Aug. 26—"Best buy" in a Christmas gift for servicemen and women overseas is a book, according to the Red Cross. Pocket editions are preferable and mystery and adventure stories the most popular. A windproof cigarette lighter would also be a good choice.

Army Lifts Ban On GI Reading Choice

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26—Any books, magazines or newspapers "may be sold through post exchanges and purchased with company or other non-appropriated funds," the War Department announced this week.

It was simultaneously announced that revised instructions covering publications, radio, magazines and movies have been issued by the adjutant general to commanders as a result of the unanimous passage by Congress of a CIO-backed amendment liberalizing the Servicemen's Voting law.

"There is no restriction on the domestic sale or distribution of books, magazines or newspapers of general circulation within the United States," the War Dept. announcement continued.

"Overseas, books, magazines and newspapers of general circulation within the United States and also those of general circulation within an overseas command, may be made available without restriction in the absence of a selection by the Army necessitated by the exigencies of war," the announcement says.

The War Dept. will send overseas "kits" containing magazines for which "soldiers have expressed a preference, or which are non-political." Soldiers will continue to receive publication for which they subscribe.

The only restriction on radio broadcasts is that if the Army rebroadcasts a political address, equal time must be given to each political party having a presidential candidate in at least six states, if requested.

Where war emergencies curtail the amount of material sent overseas, the War Department says that selection will be determined by the Council on Books in War time and the Special Services Division. In the case of magazines containing political matter, the choice is to be based on soldier preference.

The theater commander overseas will use soldier preference or the recommendations of a committee to determine what newspapers the troops under him shall receive.

Liberals Tell Why They Back Political Action

NEW YORK, Aug. 26—Leaders of three broad groups in the Natl. Citizens Political Action Committee told the CIO NEWS here this week of their reasons for joining the new pro-FDR-Truman organization.

Dr. Robert C. Weaver, of the Chicago Committee on Racial Relations, said: "It is most desirable for the Negro voter to join such a movement as this, which is larger than any one racial group and is concerned with the problems of all people of low incomes.

"CIO's economic and social leadership has brought great gains to the Negro people, and their cooperation in political action is a hopeful sign to all minorities."

Miss Freda Kirchwey, publisher of the liberal weekly The Nation, told the NEWS: "It is essential that the liberal vote be cast for the Roosevelt-Truman ticket and not merely withheld from the Dewey-Bricker ticket.

"It is essential that the liberal vote be cast for progressive candidates for Congress. The main job of the NCPAC is to provide liberal independent voters with the stimulus they need to bring them to the polls."

SPEAKING FOR WOMEN

Speaking for women voters, Mrs. Verda Barnes, head of the Women's Division of the CIO-PAC, said: "Women throughout the country are saying: 'This year—1944—is our big year in politics.'

"Women are determined that their vote shall count, that their vote shall speak for their soldier husbands, brothers and sweethearts whose right to vote was denied by Dewey and his political party.

"American women understand that their hopes for peace and full employment can be realized only by the election of Roosevelt. In the NCPAC, American women have the means through which they can accomplish this goal."

In a letter to the NCPAC meeting, honorary chairman George W. Norris, veteran liberal, regretted that he could not attend the first executive committee conference, and said:

"Now when the prospect of victory on the battlefield is daily growing brighter, the importance of a just and lasting peace becomes more apparent.

"It seems to me that our patriotic people, regardless of party, will not turn their backs on our Commander-in-Chief, who has so admirably led us in this world fight for freedom and liberty, and will not turn that important job over to untried and inexperienced men who are trying their best to deceive the American people as to the real facts."

THE NEW SOUTH

As a representative of the liberal South, NCPAC Secretary Clark Foreman, former head of the Southern Conference on Human Welfare, told The CIO NEWS:

"As the nation's number one economic problem, the South, more than any other part of the country, is in a position to profit from this progressive movement.

"The support we have received from the businessmen and publishers of the South is particularly welcome. It is striking evidence that in the South, as elsewhere in the nation, leaders from all walks of life are demanding independent progressive action."

Entertain GIs at Front

Washington, Aug. 26 — Cinemobiles, theaters on wheels, have been taken to the battle areas in France for the entertainment of soldiers near the front and four recreational centers have already been set up in Normandy the Red Cross announced yesterday.

Politics Set To Music

New York—The CIO political Action Committee has enlisted music to aid in the re-election of Pres. Roosevelt.

An album of six records containing vocal renditions by six outstanding folk singers is available at the Asch Recording Co., 117 West 46th St., New York City, N. Y.

The songs which were chosen for their political significance by PAC, include UAW-CIO, Sally, Don't You Grieve, A Dollar Bill, Hold on FD; WC, CK, JS; Hold the Fort, We Shall Not Be Moved and Jim Crow. The price per album is $2.89, tax included.

Murray Broadcasts To Warsaw

Washington, Aug. 26—A message of encouragement in their battle against the Nazi tyrants was sent by shortwave broadcast this week to the people of Warsaw by CIO Pres. Philip Murray. He said in part:

"I would also like to inform you that the workers of America are well informed of your bitter struggle and are watching with great admiration your heroism and devotion to the common cause of the United Nations.

"I am convinced that the day of victory is at hand when all nations, great and small, will be able to enjoy freedom and independence, and that you will have a free and democratic Poland."

Calif. Unions Double In Year

San Francisco, Aug. 26—Membership of California labor unions more than doubled during the war, it was disclosed this week in a report made public by John F. Dalton, state labor commissioner.

A total of 895,834 members was reported by the 1,621 locals which replied to the questionnaire for 1943. It is estimated that if all local unions had responded, the total number would have exceeded one million. In 1940 local unions reported a membership of 350,402.

Women Of United Nations At Work

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

This week has made us feel very close to the women of the United Nations. We have had detailed accounts of the wonderful reception accorded to Faye Stephenson, national president of the CIO auxiliaries, on her recent tour of the auxiliaries of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers in Canada.

Starting at Sudbury, Ontario, where the tea in their honor was one of the social events of the season, according to the papers, she, Mary Orlich, president of the Mine, Mill Auxiliaries and Kay Carlin, auxiliary vice-president for that area, visited Kirkland Lake, Rouyn, Val d'Or and Timmins.

Everywhere the American visitors found all-out effort by the Canadian women to speed the final victory over the fascist axis and a determination that victory should bring a better life for them, neighbors and their children. And they feel there, as we do here, that political action—electing to office men who will truly represent the people—will bring that to pass.

They are getting results, too. At Rouyn, for instance, the meeting was held the night before the first election in which the women of Quebec province have had a chance to vote. Thanks to the active work of the auxiliary they used their votes to elect one of the international represetatives of their union to office.

Soviet women have been meeting this week in Moscow at the Fourth Antifascist Meeting of Soviet Women. They, like our sisters in Canada, discussed their the victories over the Axis, and the part which women must play in guaranteeing a war-free world once victory is won.

The CIO auxiliaries are proud to have sent a greeting to those heroic Soviet women who have suffered so cruelly from the brutality of the Nazi invaders.

AUSTRALIAN PLANS

Women in Australia, too, are concerned about speedy victory and lasting peace. A letter from Pearl Hickey, Secretary of the Women's Auxiliary of the Australian Railway Union received this week says in part:

"We are asking our governments to set up constructive post-war planning to ensure constant employment. As women we not only wish to win the war but let us be sure we win the peace.

"Our Australian Labor Government is conducting a referendum on August 19 to obtain certain powers for a constructive five year plan after the war. Our union and our auxiliaries are working to have this referendum carried, as it will mean a great deal to the workers of this country in the post war years.

Those activities of the women of our allies make us realize the international importance of our political action campaign to elect President Roosevelt and a Congress that will support him. Under his guidance we can be assured that our country will continue to build the close collaboration of the United Nations which will make possible the realization of the goal of women everywhere—peace in the world and a better life for all of us.

CIO 'Charm School' Trains Canteen Aides

NEW YORK, Aug. 26—Servicemen who have a chance to go to the CIO-AFL Canteen opening here in September should have an extra special good time—their hostesses will be graduates of a CIO hostess training course, complete with diplomas.

The training course idea began with the Activities Department of District 4 of the UE in Newark, N. J. Eighty-five girls, many of whom had never been to a union meeting before, attended the union's hostess courses at the YWCA. The sessions overcome much of their feeling of strangeness toward the union and in many cases interested them in other union work.

Make-up problems, fashion budgets, and the responsibilites of a hostess are some to the subjects discussed in the four session course. During the first session the girl's individual make up problems are taken up and a demonstration of the proper methods of leg make up application is presented.

The intricacies of fashion are discussed in the second session, often attended by Powers models. This class covers the problems of budgeting wardrobes, use of accessories, practical styles and materials for work clothes, etc.

The third session takes up general hostess behavior and responsibilities and the fourth consists of an informal discussion on the responsibility of union women to the men in the service. The union program for servicemen and vetertans and post war employment is discussed as well as the opportunity for the girls to have a part in pushing the program through political action.

At this final session FEM (Friends of Enlisted Men and Officers) Clubs are formed to write regularly to servicemen, send them union papers, provide social and recreational activities, send soldier vote appications, etc.

Five hundred UE girls have already attended these courses and three more classes are scheduled to start in Newark in September.

Uses Freedom To Help Others

Los Angeles, Aug. 26—The first of the Sleepy Lagoon boys to be paroled from prison, Manuel Delgado, spent his first free day holding his wife's hand and stuffing envelopes for the Sleepy Lagoon Defense Committee.

Convicted 18 months ago along with 17 other Mexican youths Delgado was convicted on a conspiracy charge of murder 18 months ago in the now famous Sleepy Lagoon trial.

Defense attorneys appealed on the ground that the evidence was insufficient; that the judge was discriminatory in his conduct of the trial; that the defendants were denied their constitutional rights; and that there was an appeal to anti-Mexican prejudice by the district attorney.

Required Reading For Union Speakers

Those unhappy souls who grow red and tongue-tied at the very thought of making a speech should get a copy of the 48-page illustrated "Speakers Manual" just published by the CIO Political Action Committee.

The manual gives much sane advice both to inexperienced speakers and to those who love to take the platform whenever they get a chance and ramble on until the audience is bored stiff.

"Public speaking courses do not make good speakers, but strong convictions do," says the Manual, and lists some tests by which an individual may decide whether to make a stab at a speech. "To convince others, you must be convinced yourself," it warns.

Remember to keep to the point, to convince with facts, to sell ideas not prejudices, to talk in terms of your listeners' experience, to sum up arguments and present conclusions, are some of the suggestions made.

The last section gives 10 suggested topics for talks, with basic facts and figures on the various subjects. Included is the outline for a talk on the CIO Political Action Committee's Program for 1944.

The Speakers' Manual is the second of three 48-page pamphlets prepared by the PAC. The first of these, the Radio Handbook, deals with the freedom of the air and tells how workers can get their side of an issue presented on the radio. The third, A Woman's Guide to Political Action, takes up problems affecting the woman worker.

These pamphlets may be obtained by writing to the CIO Political Action Committee, 205 East 42nd St., New York 17, N. Y.

The PAC has also issued a 40-page illustrated pamphlet, The People's Program for 1944, which gives the CIO Political Action Program, outlines issues in the coming campaign and tells what kinds of domectic and foreign policies must be followed to assure victory and secure the peace.

* * *

Now rolling off the presses, says the CIO United Automobile Workers, is a handbook called UAW-CIO Policy Manual which gives a digest of laws, official procedures and regulations vital to labor. Made up in loose-leaf, ready reference form, the manual is aimed as guide to union officials in their discussions with government officials and in negotiations with employers.

Inquiries about the manual should be sent to the United Automobile Workers, 411 West Milwaukee, Detroit, Mich.

British Labor Urges Public Own Basic Industry

LONDON, Aug. 26 (ALN)—A detailed program for the public ownership of coal mines and railways immediately after the war has been outlined by the Economic Committee of the British Trades Union Congress and will be considered by the TUC general council this week prior to submission to the full congress in October.

The plan advocates public ownership and control of basic industries, the establishment of a national "Economic Advisory Council" and industry-wide "Industrial Boards." These bodies would develop universal systems of standardization, encourage research and the pooling of new techniques and establish universal standards of welfare.

Terming a controlled economic system a "modern necessity," the report argues that the choice is between control "by a public authority responsible to the community or by private groups owing final responsibility to themselves alone."

Public ownership of "the industries upon which all others depend —fuel and power, including coal, gas and electricity; and transport, including railways, canals, roads, shipping and internal airways—is not only desirable for their own development but is essential for effective planning nationally," the report asserts. The iron and steel industries are listed as the next most urgently requiring nationalization.

A similar plan for the nationalization of transport was also put forth recently by the British Labor party. The general council of the TUC, in discussing the government white paper on employment policy in June, expressed its dissatisfaction with the government's aim of a "high, stable level of employment." It urged that the government work toward the goal of full employment and argued then that this could only be achieved by nationalizing basic industries.

'MUST CONTROL'

The program declares that the government must control: land and other natural resources; the supply and availability of cash, credit and money; the rate of gross investment and the supply of capital; the location of industry and general physical planning; foreign trade and foreign lending and investment.

Pending complete public ownership of industry, the report continues, the government can participate in its control by the direct acquisition of a "key section" of an industry or by acquiring a financial interest in particularly important companies.

Government wholesaling is also recommended as a method of "exercising public control over one complete industry." The government would institute public bodies in certain industries, empowered to buy quantities of standard products to supply to consumers. This is especially recommended for the building industry.

Expressing confidence that the meeting of the TUC general council this week will endorse the proposal to nationalize Britain's coal mines, Will Lawther, president of the Miners Federation of Great Britain, declared today:

"The experience of two wars has proved that the mines could not meet the nation's demands as long as the mine owners were allowed to do as they wished.

"Nationalization is essential to avoid repetition of the sad and sorry plight of the British miners in 1919. Nobody would be so foolish as to say that what could be done by Russian miners could not be done by British miners and technicians."

British Hit Lewis

London, Aug. 26 (ALN)—British miners this week expressed bitter resentment over what they termed an "unfounded attack" in the current issue of the official journal of the United Mine Workers, President John L. Lewis.

Demanding to know "what right Lewis has to lecture his British comrades," Will Lawther, president of the Mineworkers Federation of Great Britain, declared that "it ill becomes an avowed isolationist like Lewis to intrude in our domestic affairs, particularly when he shows such flagrant misunderstanding of the British coal trade."

Replying to Lewis' article, Lawther called it "plain nonsense," and pointed out that "there have been machines in British mines since mechanization began and the number is increasing.

"We must remind Lewis that when the miners of Britain were struggling not only for the improvement of their own conditions, but were fighting for all their comrades in the European coal fields, they never had one word of encouragement from those American scribes and pharisees. We suggest it might be worth Lewis' while to examine our miners' welfare schemes to see how they compare with his own."

United Nations Meet On Peace Program

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26—In a stately old Georgetown house crammed with museum piece antiques, 40 men sat down this week to start the first United Nations talks on the kind of peace we shall have after the war is won.

The opening day was hot. Ranged formally around three tables, civilian and military representatives of three of the great anti-Axis powers, the U.S., the Soviet Union and Britain, sat listening intently to the speeches of their delegation's leaders—Secretary of State Cordell Hull, USSR Ambassador Andrei A. Gromyko and Sir Alexander Cadogan, chairman of the British group. China will join the talks later.

All three men stressed the need for a firm structure underneath the peace that will be imposed on the Axis powers after their defeat. Though the opening speeches were necessarily general, the idea of force applied to keep the peace came through clearly.

PLAN STABILITY

Together with force, the conference leaders stressed the need for economic stability and a raising of world standards of living to make the peace a lasting one.

"These foundations must support arrangements for peaceful settlement of international disputes and for the joint use of force, if necessary, to prevent or suppress threats to the peace or breeches of the peace," Hull said.

"They must also support arrangements for promoting, by cooperative effort, the development of conditions of stability and well-being necessary for peaceful and friendly relations among nations and essential to the maintenance of security and peace. These are basic problems of international organization."

Also stressed was the need to maintain the unity of the United Nations after the war is over—a point made at the meeting by the USSR's Gromyko and later in a reception to the delegates by President Roosevelt.

This conference, officially titled "Washington Conversations on International Organization," a rather stuffy State Department formalism already shortened to the name of the mansion where it is being held, Dumbarton Oaks, is the latest in a series of United Nations talks on postwar problems.

Preceding it were such meetings as Bretton Woods, where the foundation for stable world trade were laid, the United Nations Food Conference, the Relief and Rehabilitation meeting, and talks of postwar oil, aviation, rubber and the like.

To a labor reporter, one of the striking things of the meeting was the absence of labor delegates. The future of millions of people is being decided at such meetings. Jobs, security and the peace under which the world's working people will live are affected by the decisions and plans made at them.

CIO President Philip Murray has indicated repeatedly that labor should have a place at the peace conference. The London United Nations labor meeting, originally scheduled for June 6, was called off due to the preparations for the liberation of Europe.

Perhaps future meetings at which peace and world rehabilitation plans are laid out will have labor delegates sitting down with the government and military authorities.

See Trade Expansion

Washington, Aug. 26—America's investment in the world bank for Reconstruction and Development planned at the Bretton Woods conference will come back to us many times over in world trade and jobs for U. S. workers, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau said here this week in an American Forum of the Air broadcast.

"To date this war has cost the American people over $200 billion," Morgenthan said. "In order to set up the Bank and the Fund, this country is asked to invest $6 billion, which is less than the war costs us each month.

"The investment should be returned many times over in a revival of trade. The Bank and the Fund will help preserve the peace for years to come, and for that reason alone they are well worth our investment in them."

Morgenthau explained that the Bank and the Fund set up at the United Nations Monetary talks at Bretton Woods, N. H., a month ago would not operate as anti-FDR newspapermen have charged as "an international WPA."

On the contrary, he said, they would operate to enable the peoples of Axis ravaged countries to buy our goods. Full employment, which will depend heavily on the export trades, will be given a big impetus by the working out of the Bretton Woods plans.

Union Leaders Get War Front Reports

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Aug. 26—From production line to battlefield in an effort to get a first-hand picture of what our soldiers need, and to see to it that they get it, is the job of six U. S. labor leaders now touring the European theater of operations.

CIO representatives in this delegation are: R. J. Thomas, pres. United Auto Workers; Sherman Dalrymple, pres. United Rubber Workers and David J. McDonald, sec'y-treas. United Steelworkers Union.

The trade union leaders were told by Lt. Gen. John C. H. Lee, Services of Supply, that American workers have done a splendid job of supplying troops with the equipment they need, but that critical shortages remain on some items, notably heavy trucks and tires.

The six trade union leaders talked with scores of other high ranking officers at supply depots, repair and construction shops, ports and other installations in various parts of England. They talked with enlisted men, a large number of them members of the CIO or AFL.

The party took off from an eastern airport on a giant C-54 cargo plane Aug. 10. The unionists were seated like paratroopers on beaches along the walls of the plane, and at night wrapped themselves in blankets and stretched out on the floor to sleep. The following day they landed at a Scottish Air Terminal and proceed to London, where they underwent their first robot bomb alert at 11 p. m. One robot hit a few hundred yards from their hotel.

Here, Pres. R. J. Thomas found Sgt. Richard Roberts of Detroit, a member of Tool and Die Local 157, working on a lathe making firing pins for 155 mm. howitzers. In the tire repair shops where thousands of tires were being recapped and retreaded, President Dalyrymple held an impromptu reunion with four Rubber Workers now in the service.

They told Dalrymple that the work of reclaiming tires went on three shifts a day and that they were repairing tires with as many as 15 and 20 breaks in them. "The Army must need tires badly if they repair them with that many breaks," the URW-CIO leader commented.

At the close of the visit to the repair depot, the labor leaders talked informally with a group of GIs in a recreation hunt. They asked the soldiers whether there were any questions they could answer for them.

Almost in chorus, the men said that was one questions uppermost in their minds: "When do we go home."

"We hope it will be soon and we'll do our darndest to make it soon," David J. McDonald, steelworkers sec'y-treas. replied.

Women Work, Women Vote

Detroit, Aug. 26 — The problems of working women are discussed in "Women Work, Women Vote," in the special August Supplemental Edition to Ammunition, the official publication of the education department of the United Automobile Workers.

2nd Slav Congress Called

Pittsburgh, Aug. 26.—The second national American Slav Congress will be held Sept. 23 and 24 in Pittsburgh's Soldiers and Sailors Memorial Hall, it was announced this week by the Western Pennsylvania committee of the Congress.

The call to is addressed to "all Americans of Czech, Polish, Croatian, Slovak, Russian, Serbian, Ukranian, Carpatho-Russian, Slovenian, Bulgarian and Macedonian origin and descent."

Leo Krzycki, vice-president of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers is president of the Congress, which seeks to mobilize the 15 million Americans of Slav descent in the winning of the war and peace and the "re-election of Roosevelt and those candidates for Congress who will support his general policies for victory, security and peace."

Case Proves Political Action Need

Washington, Aug. 26—The need for political as well as legislative action is highlighted by the R. J. Thomas case that the U. S. Supreme Court is scheduled to decide during its October term, it was pointed out this week by Martin Raphael, assistant to General CIO Counsel Lee Pressman.

Thomas, president of the CIO United Auto Workers Union, was arrested near Houston, Texas, for attempting to enroll as a member of the CIO Oil Workers Union a man in an audience that Thomas was addressing. Thomas had refused to secure from the State of Texas a license which they require of union organizers. Several other states have similar restrictions. This is the first such case to be taken to the Supreme Court.

Raphael pointed out that there are two methods of remedying such a situation:

1. Carrying the issue to the Supreme Court to prove that the law is unconstitutional.

2. Electing men to state legislatures who will refuse to vote for such legislation.

"The latter is by far the better solution," Raphael declared, "for such laws not only hamper labor seriously and cause it considerable legal expense, but also damage the spirit of cooperation needed on the part of both unions and industry for solution of postwar problems."

The State maintains that unions are like businesses, and hence are subject to similar regulations.

The UAW-CIO, however, points out that asking a man to join a union comes under the heading of "free discussion," protected from restrictions by the U. S. Supreme Court.

SIGHT for sore eyes is movie actress Adele Jerens who looks like she might be posing for an opticians' convention.

Monty-Ward Still Defies Government

Washington, Aug. 26 — Montgomery Ward continues to defy the Government.

The mail order house this week was ordered by the War Labor Board in a unanimous opinion to recognize the authority of the board-appointed abitrator, Judge William L. Knous, to act on 41 grievances under the old contract with Local 20, CIO United Mail Order, Warehouse and Retail Employes.

The board on July 29 appointed Judge Knous, public member of the Ninth Regional WLB at Denver and Colorado Supreme Court judge. The company on August 10 informed the board that it rejected as illegal the order of June 6 under which Judge Rouse was appointed and "does not propose to enter into any arbitration under its provisions."

The 41 grievances involved include 26 discharges, five wage cut cases and 10 miscelleaneous cases.

Following the refusal of Montgomery Ward to allow the National Labor Relations Board to hold an election at its Chicago plants, the President seized the plant. When Sewell Avery, chairman of the Montgomery Ward board, refused to cooperate with Attorney General Biddle, he was carried bodily from his office by two Army sergeants.

The election giving Local 20 a victory was subsequently held, and the plant was restored to the company under the provision that the old contract remain in operation until a new one was signed through negotiation with the union or through a board order.

What's Security Worth To You?

Washington, Sept. 2—Is your security, your job and your country's welfare worth a buck to you?

If it is, you've got your chance to show it now that the CIO Political Action Fund Drive opens officially on Labor Day.

The drive has opened. Our $1 bills have to counter the millions put into Dewey by GOP supporters like the duPonts, the Pews, the Mellons and their like.

Just as a reminder, here's the way the CIO Executive Board put it two weeks ago, when Labor Day was selected for the opening of the drive:

1. Four weeks, commencing Labor Day, September 4th, shall be specifically designated as the period during which every effort will be made by the entire CIO to obtain the voluntary contribution of $1.00 from every single member of the CIO and all other progressive citizens who seek the election of President Roosevelt, Harry S. Truman as Vice-President, and a Congress which will provide President Roosevelt with the fullest support.

2. During this period, mass meetings and particularly meetings of shop stewards should be convened in every single industrial center throughout the nation where the CIO has members, to assure the successful prosecution of this program.

3. In all the industrial centers where such meetings are to be held, the Regional Directors of the CIO, the State and City CIO Councils and the officials of the various CIO unions shall meet for the purpose of designating a committee that would have as its major and prime task the calling of such meetings and the formulation of necessary plans and programs to obtain the maximum voluntary contributions and the registration of every single eligible voter within their area.

Victory in the November elections now depends upon the active support of the entire CIO membership. With this assured, nothing can stop the victorious march of the people behind our Commander-in-Chief, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Accent On Youth In Political Action

NEW YORK, Sept. 2—The CIO Political Action Committee put the accent on youth this week when Mrs. Gertrude Behrle began mapping plans to rally college students behind the Roosevelt-Truman ticket at the PAC headquarters.

Mrs. Behrle will seek the active cooperation of local unions when she begins her country-wide tour shortly.

"Whenever students are informed on the issues and candidates, you will find overwhelming sentiment for Pres. Roosevelt," Mrs. Behrle said.

"In college students, labor has a lasting friend. Their youthful zeal, if given proper guidance by union officials, will greatly aid labor's program. All of our youth, as does labor, looks toward the future. They know they can only accomplish their aims through united action."

"It is tremendously important," Mrs. Verda Barnes, director of the Women's Division of PAC, pointed out, "that the gap between the factory worker and the college student be bridged. There need not be any barrier between the two groups. Each is looking for the same thing—jobs, opportunities, security and progress. I feel sure that by bringing the message of PAC to the campus, a great educational advance will have been won."

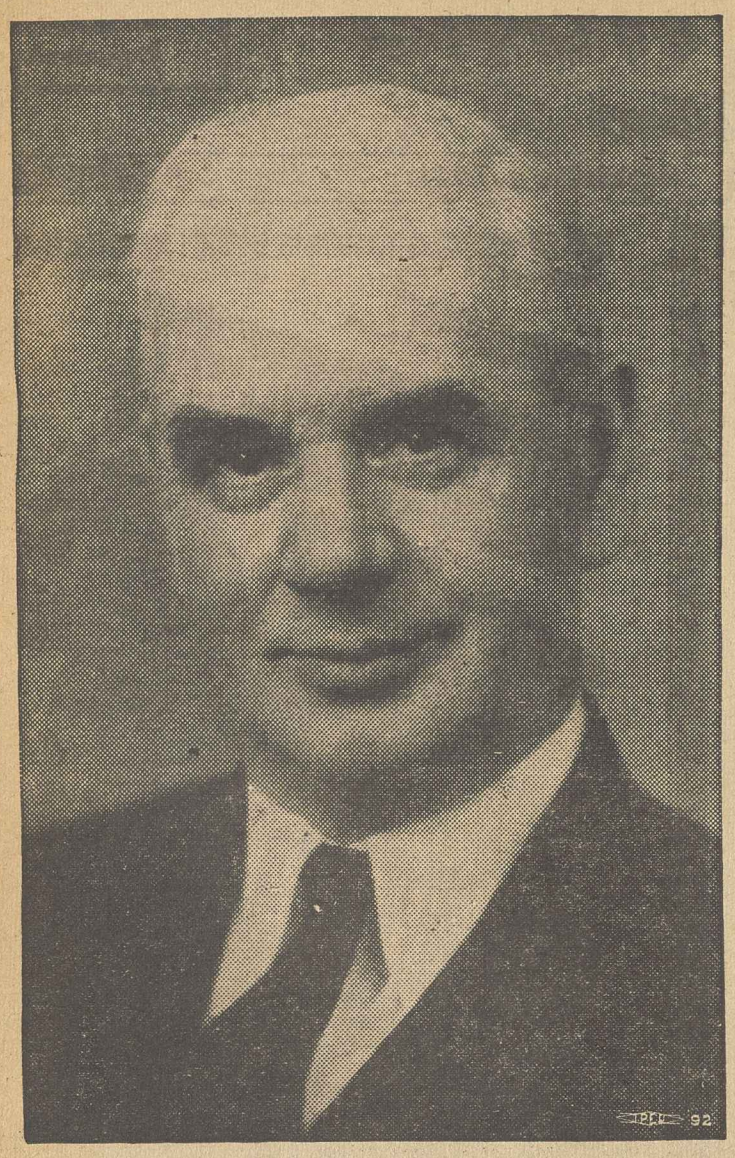
Mrs. Behrle will work through the 35 chapters of the United States Student Assembly, organizations of college youths and through non-partisan committees to press the drive to rally the servicemen's vote in spite of the restrictions now in effect.

Another idea, still in the hopper, calls for a pre-election "Youth-For-Roosevelt" rally to be held near the end of the campaign. "Every Youth a Politically Active Citizen" is the PAC slogan for the American campus.

Launch Campaign

St. Louis, Sept. 4—Members of Local 285, United Electrical Workers, CIO, have launched their political action campaign. A large chart has been hung in the union headquarters which shows the progress of the campaign and serves to remind stewards of the position of their own buildings in the plant-wide picture.

VICTORY AND JOBS FOR ALL



Philip Murray

Labor Day Statement

By FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

American workers can observe this Labor Day in the proud knowledge that in the battle of production their free labor is triumphing over slave labor. It was their determination to safeguard liberty and to preserve their American heritage for coming generations that made possible the greatest production achievement in the world's history.

Our soldiers, sailors and marines are carrying on an amazing offensive all over the world. They are doing it with the finest weapons in the world—weapons which have been made possible only by the unwavering loyalty and unflagging resolution of the workers and managers of our industries.

The position of our battle lines in Italy, in France and in the Pacific zone today is greatly dependent on the production miracle which labor and management and farms have accomplished.

We now have the enemy on the run. Yet we must face the prospect that the hardest fighting and the biggest job of supply are still ahead of us. Our needs for the products of our industries, mines and farms—weapons, raw materials, transportation and food—are as urgent as ever.

Our immediate job is victory. To attain it quickly will require the fullest utilization of our man power and woman power in the production of the necessary weapons of war. American labor can be depended on, I know, to continue to devote itself primarily to that task.

Once the forces of tyranny have been overcome, we shall be faced with difficult problems of transition from war to peace. There will be matters of international arrangements as well as questions of internal economic policy. What we do in both spheres will affect our success in attaining a durable world peace—a peace which will contribute to the progress of mankind, and will give to all who work and produce, an opportunity constantly to better their own lives.

In the solution of these problems we will need the cooperation of free American workers, free American employers and free American farmers. I am confident that we shall have it in days of peace as we have had it in days of war.

Election Of FDR And People's Congress Key To U. S. Security

By PHILIP MURRAY

President, Congress of Industrial Organizations

This Labor Day finds our country and the other United Nations near the crest of the great offensive for final and total victory over the Axis.

Now, least of all, can we afford to lag in our efforts, through complacency or over-optimism on account of military success. For the war's demands on our home front increase with every advance and every expansion of our offensive. The lives of our fighting men, and the speeding of their victorious return, depend on our meeting their every need for supplies full and promptly.

At the same time, our duty to our country and to our fighting men demands that we prepare and plan now for the day of victory and the days that follow. We must not win the war and lose the peace. We must not allow America to bog down in depression and mass unemployment as war orders are discontinued. We must not let our servicemen return to find no jobs awaiting them.

Planned reconversion of our industrial life, as and when cutbacks occur, is a first essential for maximum war production now and for continued production and employment through the months of transition from a war to peacetime economy.

This planning calls for close cooperation between government, industry and labor under coordinated and purposeful direction. It also demands adequate provision of emergency unemployment compensation for war workers and ex-servicemen who may be jobless in the transition period.

Our object now must be to prepare for full production and full employment after the war. For this purpose, one of the first steps must be to remedy the grievous injustice from which war workers are suffering, through the freezing of wage rates far below the level of soaring living costs, under the so-called Little Steel Formula.

The wage adjustments demanded by labor are necessary for economic stabilization and for an adequate livelihood for our workers, so they may be able to produce at maximum efficiency. But, more than this, they are necessary to provide the purchasing power upon which production will depend in the transition and postwar periods.

This Labor Day falls in the midst of an election campaign whose results will be of crucial importance both for victory and the postwar period.

The President and the Congress that we elect will either speed or delay the day of victory.

Their decisions will determine whether we are to go forward to full production, with jobs for all, and to lasting peace through international collaboration; or whether we shall go back to another postwar apple-selling era and to isolationist or imperialist policies that will sow the seeds of future wars.

The Congress of Industrial Organization is working for the re-election of President Roosevelt, because we believe he is the candidate best fitted on his record and his experience to lead America through speedy victory to lasting peace and postwar prosperity.

We are engaged in the most intensive political activity ever undertaken by labor to secure the President's re-election and to elect a progressive Congress.

In this campaign we seek no selfish, partisan advantage but desire only to play our part, along with all other patriotic and progressive Americans, in promoting the welfare of our whole country, and the cause of victory, freedom prosperity and lasting peace throughout the world.

Labor Day Greetings

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Vice President and Director of Organization

On this Labor Day we can look to the future with hope. Our armed forces and those of aur allies are on the offensive everywhere. Italy has almost entirely been freed; our armies have invaded northern and southern France successfully, along with the great offensive of the Russian fighting forces on the Eastern front, the forces of Nazism are about to be crushed.

In the Pacific, our Navy controls the wide span of that ocean, and the stepping stones to Japan are mostly in the hands of the forces of Democracy.

American workers, particularly those of the CIO, can feel proud of their production record which has made it possible to turn defeat and despair into hope and victory. It has again been demonstrated that free labor can and has outproduced slave labor. Our CIO movement has grown considerably in the past year and is making itself felt in the affairs of the nation more and more.

Organizing the unorganized continues on everywhere. The Political Action Committee of the CIO has brought matters of importance forcibly to the attention of our members and other progressive citizens throughout the nation. Certain well-known reactionaries have been retired from public life.

We are now confronted with the great task of giving to our Commander-in-Chief and through him to our armed forces every support of which we are capable. The CIO has declared for the re-election of Franklin D. Roosevelt and a progressive Congress. With other conscientious progressive groups, we are determined this be brought about; that the war is brought to a victorious conclusion at the earliest date possible; the forces of tyranny crushed and liberty and freedom brought to millions of human beings throughout the world.

The period of reconversion will require our minute attention. Men and women in the armed forces upon return to civilian life must have jobs and the men and women engaged on the home front, producing the sinews of war, too, must have jobs. Our efforts must be united in support of the United Steelworkers of America's demand that the Little Steel Formula be changed. We must provide in this period of economic transition and reconversion full employment and full purchasing power.

With the leadership of President Murray, we will go forward supporting our armed forces to win the war and to win the peace; establishing industrial democracy as the greatest safeguard for the preservation of our cherished political democracy, bringing to all our people a securer, happier life. Our task is clear. We must and shall Organize! Educate! Activize!

LABOR DAY, 1944

By JAMES B. CAREY

Secretary-Treasurer

This is no usual Labor Day. This is a day which finds the liberating armies of the United Nations nearing victory. And Labor can be justifiably proud of the significant part it has played in this great triumph.

A few years ago there rose up Hitler and his satellites to challenge progress in the world. They marched up to country after country and shouted: Surrender, and the Fuehrer will let you live; resist, and you die!

This choice was given to the freedom-loving people of Poland, of France, Denmark, Italy and all over the world. We have deep and lasting admiration and respect for those that chose to fight rather than appease and live a life of the living dead-subjugation. Now come the military victories against the oppressor, bringing liberation to those courageous heroes who chose to fight rather than submit, and by so doing gave the rest of the world hope and solace.

But in this fight, the conclusion of the military phase of the war does not mean the end of the struggle for our objectives. The conditions which produced the war are rooted deep in our society and the defeat of the enemy armies will not erase them. Hitler will win, even though German military might is crushed, if his ideas are permitted to triumph and the social unrest in which reaction breeds continues to exist.

We are still confronted with the same old choice: surrender, and live (but in slavery); resist, and die. We do not accept such a choice, presented to us by reaction. We know that only through resistance will we have the chance to live.

The struggle is not an easy one. But since when has the struggle for freedom been easy. The fight for the peace, as much as the fight to win the war, is fraught with dangers. The attacks on us are constant. There are many who believe in the right of privilege, many who insist that the Negro must be "kept in his place," who seek a scapegoat in the Jew, who challenge labor's right to organize and speak in the interest of the exploited.

The future holds forth many challenges. We have yet to plan reconversion to peacetime production. Full production, full employment and a guaranteed decent annual living must be assured. This is certainly not too wild a dream. If we can make expenditures in terms of human and material resources for war, we should be willing and able to do the same to prevent future wars by eliminating the causes and to preserve our human resources.

Human rights throughout the world must be made the standard by which we measure success. The security of peoples, not profits, must be the highest aim of our civilization. The benefits we demand must be ours as a matter of right, not sufferance. We are tired of being told that labor should keep out of politics, that we must not speak out lest we arouse our enemies. The time has come to rally our friends and to challenge our enemies.

So American labor's message to all those who believe in the brotherhood of man is this: Now is no time to stand on the sidelines. The greatest decisions of history are being made. We are deciding the future of our sons, deciding whether peace shall come at the end of this greatest of wars, deciding if the productive capacity of nations shall be used to build homes and hospitals and schools or to continue building cannon.

The fires of the labor movement on the economic front were banked during the period of the war—not put out in a blaze of sacrificial glory. This labor day should bring a pointing up of the decision of those who are tired of the struggle and want to rest, as against those who want to accept the challenge. We invite those who share our ideals to march side by side with us.

Labor's Foes Pray For 'Another '42'

NEW YORK, Sept. 2—CIO President Philip Murray and PAC Chairman Sidney Hillman, in an urgent appeal this week to all CIO members, called for all-out political action—"the highway to victory, to full employment and a durable peace".

"We need to focus attention once again on making every worker and every member of his family a registered voter," de-declared Murray and Hillman. "Secondly, we need to organize our strength on a ward and precinct basis in order that the vote can be turned out on November 7.

"The CIO has grown strong through bitter years of struggle. Its great contributions to American life you know in your daily lives. Yet through neglect of our right to vote in 1942, we brought upon ourselves hostile attacks, which continue even now unabated.

"Those who seek the destruction of the CIO are praying for another 1942. For they know that the failure to register and vote on our part already lays the basis for the ultimate destruction by them of our democratic rights and privileges.

LIFE BLOOD OF CIO

"That is why the very words 'political action' have moved every reactionary to attack us. And this is why 'political action' has become the very life blood of the CIO.

"Our heroic fighting men with our gallant allies are advancing upon the homelands of Hitler and Hirohito. With the prospect of victory bright before us, it behooves us to renew with the utmost vigor our effort to return to national office a progressive Administration and to elect a progressive Congress.

"If the millions of American workers and their families register and vote November 7, a smashing victory will be won.

"Every worker a registered worker. All out on political action; all out on November 7. This is the highway to victory, to full employment and a durable peace. "This is your fight."

Auto Workers Win

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 2—A 20 to 1 victory in an NLRB election was won by the United Automobile Workers-CIO at the Firestone Aircraft Plant here.

BEWARE this man and his friends like Sen. Taft (R.O.) who said: "I do not see how we can possibly employ all the people who want to work . . . Obviously we cannot employ them at the present day take-home wage."

The Dewey-Eyed Little Man Who Wasn't There

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2—When the "big three" of the United Nations sat down at Dumbarton Oaks to plan the shape of the peace to come, there was one man missing—not that the representatives of the U. S., the U. S. S. R. and Britain noticed it.

That man was Tom Dewey, the little fellow who wants to be President, and so determined to be a statesman that he demanded to sit in, if only by proxy, on a meeting of three governments outlining the future security of the world.

So the little man sent his agent down to Washington to do a job of gate-crashing and picking up whatever political advantage might be lying around.

This agent is one John F. Dulles, and here are a few facts about him: first, an illustrating quote from the diary of the late William E. Dodd, American Ambassador to Berlin during Hitler's early years. Wrote Ambassador on a visit in Berlin from Dulles, whom he quotes:

"My sister lives here. She is an enthusiastic Hitlerite and anxious to show me the German attitude for peace."

Dulles, who works for big utility companies and banks, is also a remarkably bad prophet, according to the columnist Drew Pearson in a radio broadcast this week. Said Pearson, also quoting Dulles, in a speech in 1939:

"There's no reason to believe that any totalitarian states, separately or collectively, would attempt to attack the U. S. Only hysteria entertains the idea that Germany, Italy or Japan contemplate war upon us."

Dulles said that in 1939, when World War II was breaking out—and remember, he's the man Dewey will make Secretary of State if he wins in November.

More than that, Dulles has a curious attitude to democracy—the thing the United Nations are fighting for. According to Pearson, he said in the same speech: "Democracy is a luxury.

"Is it surprising that there occurred what did occur in Germany, Italy and Japan?" Dulles said. "These dynamic peoples determined to mold their state into a form which would permit them to take destiny in their own hands."

Remember, this is the man Dewey would place in charge of our nation's relations with the rest of the world—if he wins in November.

Slav Leaders Join NCPAC

New York, Sept. 2—American Slav leaders, representing millions of Americans of Slav extraction, recently joined the Foreign Language Division of the National Citizens Political Action Committee and unanimously pledged their personal cooperation to mobilize their membership behind the election of the Roosevelt-Truman ticket and a progressive Congress.

Pres. Sidney Hillman of the NCPAC, principal speaker, urged the American Slavic leaders to take up the fight for a united democratic America.

Education for GI's

Washington—A program of general education to "serve as an effective bridge between military activities and the return of men and women to civilian life" has been outlined by the American Council on Education at the request of the United States Armed Forces Institute. The materials prepared by the Institute will be used in correspondence study and group instruction.

Political Action Is Key To Jobs For All, Future Prosperity—Murray

By PHILIP MURRAY

America is at the crossroads today. It can either go downhill, as war contracts come to an end, to deflation, idle plants, low wages, mass unemployment and general postwar depression; or it can choose the road which the CIO points out in its political program, to higher wages, full production and full employment.

The war has demonstrated the tremendous productive capacity of American industry and the possibility of keeping everyone employed at useful work. Some 50 million men and women are now employed in industry and some 10 million men are in the armed forces. What is going to happen to all these people when the war conditions which have kept them employed come to an end?

If we are to accept the Hoover philosophy to which so many of the supporters of Thomas Dewey subscribe, production will be immediately curtailed at the end of the war; most of the plants and equipment used for war production will be scrapped or closed down; millions will be thrown out of employment; and the resumption of peacetime production will be left to the whim of financiers and industrialists who are already counting on deflation, and hoping to make their profits from reduced production and lowered wages.

CRISIS NOT INEVITABLE

The CIO, on the other hand, and most of the forward looking progressives supporting President Roosevelt, hold that the deflation and depression which followed the last war are not inevitable. We believe that the kind of planning and cooperation between government, labor, industry and agriculture which have made possible miracles of production during the war can also make possible expanded production and employment for peacetime purposes.

The needs of the American people for goods and service which have been curtailed during the war, create a tremendous demand for production which can and must be met after the war. In addition to this, there are the requirements of countless devastated and war-torn countries for the goods and services necessary for their rebuilding.

If President Roosevelt is reelected, we can look forward to intelligent collaboration between the nations of the world for the interchange of goods, which will mean a great expansion of American of American export trade.

If we plan properly for higher living standards in our own country and throughout the world, there will be an ever-increasing demand for food, clothing, housing, education, medical care, recreation and countless other things that go to make a good life for all the people.

To meet all these needs, we cannot only until utilize to the full all our present productive capacity, but will have to expand it more and more, thus providing employment for every American who is able and willing to work.

One of the first essentials for making the demands of the people for goods and services effective in increasing production is a progressive peacetime rise in the purchasing power of the American people.

END LITTLE STEEL

Revision of the "Little Steel Formula" to adjust present wages to increased living costs is not only necessary as a wartime measure, but is also necessary to provide increased purchasing power for prosperity in the transition and postwar periods.

One of the most important suggestions of the CIO for increasing and maintaining purchasing power is the establishment of a guaranteed annual wage throughout American industry. The owners of industry are already guaranteed under the tax laws a "normal" rate of profit for two years following the war, but American working people have no similar guarantee of postwar security.

If the Federal Government will endorse the principle of the guaranteed annual wage and encourage its incorporation in collective bargaining agreements, not only will working people have more assurance that their families will be properly fed, clothed and housed throughout the year, but businessmen, professional people and all others who supply their needs will have assurance of steadier demand for the goods and services which they supply. Every community and the whole nation will benefit from the increased prosperity resulting from this measure of security for the working people.

JOB FOR PRIVATE INDUSTRY

In calling for a program of full production and full employment, the CIO does not envisage gigantic relief projects or the government taking over and running industry, as our critics falsely claim. On the contrary, we recognize that the task of providing full employment is primarily that of private industry.

We believe, as we state in our program, that "given adequate planning, with the participation and assistance of government, private industry can do the job." We also believe that there is sufficient useful work in providing for the needs of our people to make unnecessary purely relief projects as such.

This is not to say, however, that a number of important public works of a national and community character should not be undertaken by the government, when private industry is not properly equipped to undertake them, to provide community services and improvements which are needed by all the people.

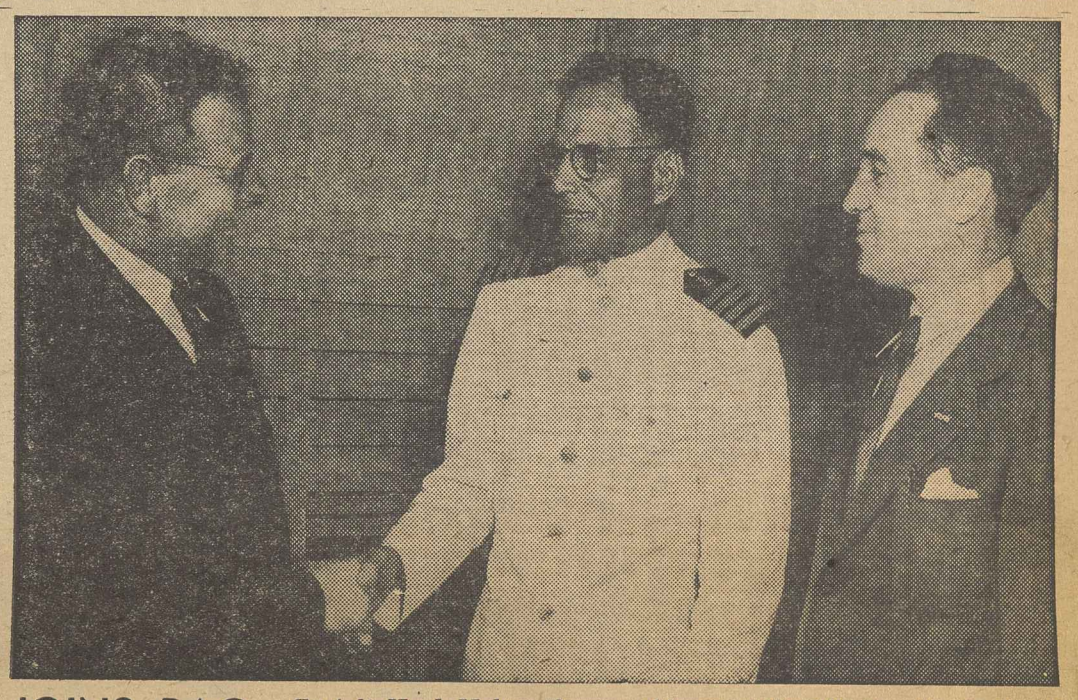
But we do believe that planning for full production and jobs for all cannot be left solely to the profit instincts of the private owners of industry. A program of production and employment must be worked out by the government, in cooperation with industry, labor, agriculture and all other affected groups, and the necessary machineery for the planning and direction of such a program must be established at once, before the war is over, if war production is to be reconverted in a planned and orderly fashion to the needs of full production and employment in peace.

AMERICA MUST CHOOSE

While private industry has the primary responsibility for providing full employment, we cannot afford to take any chances on its failure to do so. Social security legislation must be so expanded as to guarantee a livelihood to all who are unemployed or incapacitated from working, and the government must be prepared to take up any lag in employment through a prepared program of jobs at useful work, with standard wages and working conditions if and to the extent that private industry falls short of the goal.

America must choose in the present election campaign between the two roads which I have indicated—between the program of Dewey and Hoover, leading to the results which we saw after the last war, or the program of expanding production and employment of which President Roosevelt is a foremost exponent.

Political action is the key to this all important decision which confronts America this year. Every American who wants to see America advance after the war to a period of expanded production and full employment, should do his level best to get out the vote for the reelection of President Roosevelt and for the election of a progressive Congress which will support his policies.



JOINS PAC: Captain Hugh Mulzac, famous skipper of the Liberty ship Booker T. Washington, shakes hands with Sidney Hillman on joining the National Citizens Political Action Committee. Captain Mulzac won his command with the help of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union, which urged the Maritime Commission to give him a ship Since then, he has had high official praise for the way he handled his ship through bombing and U-boat attacks, and for the complete unity of his white and Negro NMU crew.

People Not Money Power Behind PAC

Following are excerpts from the testimony of Sidney Hillman before the House Campaign-Expenditures Investigating Committee, presented this week:

Today all thinking Americans recognize that we stand at a crossroads in history. One road leads forward to the extermination of fascism and all its evils; to an era of international cooperation that can give us an enduring peace; to the utilization of our rich resources for the benefit of all our people, giving them full employment, real security and a more abundant life.

The other road leads backward along the way we have come. It leads to renewed international rivalry and conflict, inevitably ending in war; to unemployment, insecurity and misery here at home. The road that we take will be largely determined by the character, the program and the policies of our national government and of the men and women who compose it.

The choice is not a partisan choice. This is not a contest between Republicans and Democrats. Nor is it a contest between workers and farmers or businessmen. This is an issue which should unite—not divide—the American people, whatever their party affiliation and whatever their station in life.

We conceive of our task as that of political education in the deepest and most practical sense of that word—education in the full and enlightened exercise of the responsibilities of citizenship.

We have no illusions that we can "control" the vote of a single American—within or without the CIO. We are neither so arrogant nor so foolish as to make that attempt. Like all Americans, we take pride in the stubborn independence which is one of the happiest characteristics of our people.

We know that when enough Americans vote, they will vote right; that their collective judgment will prove to be a sound judgment. We believe that on those occasions when the democratic process failed to return a progressive verdict, it was because too few Americans participated in rendering that verdict. Therefore, we are concerned in doing what we can to insure the exercise of their franchise by the greatest possible number of our citizens.

FINANCES

I now turn to the finances of the two committees. I should like first to submit a financial statement of each committee for the period ending August 15, 1944 so that you may have them before you as I discuss them.

The original funds of the CIO Political Action Committee were derived exclusively from contributions from the treasuries of CIO unions. Prior to the CIO convention in November, each of the international unions made its pledge. Those pledges were publicly announced at the convention. In addition, a few local CIO unions have made unsolicited contributions. Union contributions aggregate $671,214.11.

The total disbursements from this fund as of August 15, 1944 aggregated $371,086.56. Of that amount, more than 76% was spent for salaries and travel; office rent, equipment and maintenance; and publicity. Only $67,320.48 has been expended or contributed in primary campaigns and state elections. Attached to the statement is a schedule of the Committee's contributions and expenditures in Congressional primaries.

We were advised that the expenditure of funds, derived from trade union contributions, prior to the inception of the election campaign was unquestionably legal. We were further advised, however, that the use of these funds for operating expenses after the parties had nominated their presidential candidates might raise debatable questions of law.

We therefore froze our Trade Union Contributions Account immediately after the conclusion of the Democratic convention. No funds will be expended from that account except for contributions to or on behalf of candidates in primaries or state elections or for such other purposes as are unquestionably permitted under the terms of the Corrupt Practices Act. All other expenditures will be made from the Committee's Individual Contributions Account.

ASK $1 CONTRIBUTIONS

To finance the work of the Committee, we are requesting voluntary contributions in the sum of one dollar from the members of the CIO. I want to emphasize here, as we have repeatedly emphasized to our members, that these contributions are entirely voluntary on the part of the individuals whom we solicit.

We are asking that 50c of each dollar be retained in the state or locality.

The statement entitled "Individual Contributions Account" indicates the receipts and disbursements of that account from July 23 to August 15. You will note that the total amount received is $5,922.50, of which a part has been loaned and the balance contributed by CIO members, members of the CIO staff and a few outsiders. Disbursements—all for operating expenses—for the period from July 23 to August 15 aggregate $36,983.50.

I now turn to the financial statement of the National Citizens Political Action Committee. That committee is seeking contributions from those members of the general public who support its objectives. The Executive Committee, at its meeting on August 5, 1944, set a ceiling of $1,500,000 on the amount of money it would seek. You will note from the statement that we are still far short of that goal. Loans and contributions aggregate $78,569.06. Expenses, all for salaries, publicity and other operating costs, total $20,328.64.

I think it apparent from these financial statements that the real asset of the two committees is not the money in their treasuries. If that were so, we would be poor indeed and would hardly have merited the interest and attention which our work has aroused throughout the country.

We cannot hope to compete in the collection and expenditure of funds with the representatives of those groups who have made us the target of their abuse. If we relied on money to do our work, we would have scant hope of success.

Rubber Workers Vote

Washington, Sept. 4—An NLRB election will be held for or against representation by the United Rubber Workers CIO among the employes of the Norwalk Tire and Rubber Co., Norwalk, Conn., within 30 days of Aug. 23.

Probe 'America First,' NAM In Politics, CIO-PAC Head Asks

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2—Labor political action depends on people, not money, for its strength, Sidney Hillman, PAC chairman, told Republicans, Democrats and polltaxers on the House Compaign Investigating Committee here this week.

Backing up this statement with a complete financial accounting of PAC income and outgo, Hillman said: "I think it apparent from these financial statements that the real asset of the two committees (CIO-PAC and Natl. Citizens PAC) is not the money in their treasuries.

"If that were so, we would be poor indeed and would hardly have merited the interest and attention which our work has aroused throughout the country. We cannot hope to compete in the collection and expenditure of funds with the representatives of those groups who have made us the target of their abuse."

ASK PROBE OF SMITH

Turning to other political groups which have not been "the target of abuse," Hillman asked the investigating committee to turn a little light on such outfits as Gerald L. K. Smith's native-fascist America First Party, the NAM, and others.

This was promised by the committee, whose chairman, Rep. Anderson (D. N.M.) admitted that they had not thought of Smith, but said that the NAM had been invited to appear. (The NAM appeared later in the week, piously denied any intention of "going into politics.")

Hillman also revealed that Dewey, when he was running for district attorney in New York, had begged for CIO help through the Amalgamated and other unions, and had received it.

"We still believe he'd make a good district attorney," Hillman commented, adding that no union had supported him when he ran for Governor of New York.

Questioning by some of the more reactionary members of the investigating committee showed both an astonishing lack of knowledge of the facts of the two political action groups and a frantic desire to attempt a smear job on them and on labor generally.

This reached a new low when Rep. Church, a Chicago Tribune stooge from the Republican side, tried to make a point of the fact that Hillman had been born in Lithuania and followed this up with some of the crudest red-baiting yet seen in a Congress not noted for subtlety.

Rep. Brown, an Ohio Republican, was much smoother than Church. His approach was more on the "we're both reasonable men" line, but his intended effect was the same—to make labor political action seem somehow criminal.

Hillman lashed back sharply at Church and other labor-baiters, particularly in newspapers, when he said in discussing the phony Utah "resignation" stories:

"The more the papers do such things the more they destroy what little influence they have. It is a scandalous thing for such publications to try to poison the minds of the American people against labor."

He also threw a few needles into the unAmerican Dies Committee, whose lame-duck sub-group has yet to make good its threats to "expose" PAC.

"We're still waiting for the Dies Committee to ask us to appear," he said. "Possibly they're afraid—but in any event, all they can do so far is make charges in the newspapers which they seem unable to follow up."

Pamphlet Tells Of 'Forgotten Workers'

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

The Story of the Cotton Textile Workers, the half million "forgotten people" of American industry, as told in an illustrated pamphlet just issued by the CIO Textile Workers Union of America, packs a wallop into every page that shatters general misconceptions about this important basic industry. It is must reading for everyone concerned about labor's right to a decent standard of living.

The pamphlet is crammed with important and little known or understood facts and figures, given not in dry statistical form, but told with an intelligent feeling of what they mean in terms of the lives of the poverty-ridden cotton mill workers who outnumber any other kind of industrial workers.

One of the things the cotton textile workers resent most today is the lack of recognition of the fact that they, too, are war workers, along with steel, ship and plane builders.

"Their product—yarn and fabric—are the raw materials for uniforms, tire fabric, ammunition bags, hospital sheets, work clothes and thousands of other essentials for the war and the home front," the pamphlet points out. "And yet throughout the war period to date they have continued to exist on substandard wages at the very bottom of the national economy."

Here are some the facts the pamphlet gives about the wages of the cotton textile workers:

1. Average hourly pay is very nearly the lowest in American industry, averaging 59.4 cents an hour in December, 1943. Only three others were lower—workshirts, handkerchiefs and cottonseed.

2. The differential between their average weekly wages and those of all manufacturing employes stands at $19.90 a week, which is greater than it has been in 20 years.

3. They get fewer hours per week and fewer weeks per year than other industries. In December, 1943, the average work-week was 41.7 hours as against a national average in manufacturing of 45 hours.

4. In 1940, when the war boom began, their average weekly earnings were $15.18, as against $25.31 for all manufacturing industries combined. By December, 1943, weekly earnings had risen to $24.78 a week, but all manufacturing industries together had shot up to $44.68.

5. In the South today, textile workers are earning little more than they did in 1920. The figures show that in 1920 they averaged $22.56 a week and in 1943, $23.16.

Taking up the problem of what is to be done, the pamphlet tells of the hope the CIO and the founding of the Textile Workers has given to the half-million cotton textile workers of the nation. The TWUA today has contracts covering some 450,000 workers, 160,000 of whom are in the cotton textile industry, mostly in the North. But it points out that the basic problem of substandard wages still remains, and, to meet this, the union has a long-range program calling for a floor of $2,500 income a year under every textile worker's family.

Half a Million Forgotten People, the Story of the Cotton Textile Workers; published by the Textile Workers Union of America, 15 Union Square, New York 3, N. Y. Copies of the pamphlet are available upon request.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

The House was getting set to vote this week on the "hollow shell" it has made of the already inadequate bill on reconversion. Vote was expected as The CIO NEWS went to press; will be carried in next week's issue.

Watch for this vote and make certain you check how your Congressman and your Senators stood up. A vote for the George bill S.B. 2051) is a vote for depression and Hoovervilles. A vote for the liberalizing amendments (unemployment compensation for war workers and veterans, central planning on reconversion, etc.) is a vote for jobs and prosperity.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Reconversion. (S 2051)	Throws out unemployment benefits, junks planning of reconversion.	Vote expected Sept. 1. Amendments being offered.	Watch voting record as election campaign test.

Sub-Standard Pay Raise Planned In New Senate Bill

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2 — America's sub-standard wage earners—and there's millions of them, even in wartime—will get a 65-cent-an-hour minimum if the Senate and House pass a resolution just introduced this week by Sen. Claude A. Pepper (D., Fla.) and sent to the Senate Labor Committee.

The resolution calls for the 65-cent wage floor on the ground that "substandard wages not only undermine the health and strength of the nation but also curtail production."

If passed, it will instruct the War Labor Board to consider all wages below the minimum as substandard, and authorize it to allow increases up to that point.

At the present time, the WLB only allows increases that bring wages up to 50 cents an hour, and that only when they are voluntary. In a dispute case, the Board has even denied this amount, due to the "bracket" policy that uses local conditions to freeze sweatshop pay.

RAW DEAL

Low paid workers have had a raw deal under the Little Steel formula also, since even a 15 per cent increase on a substandard wage is much less than a similar increase on a higher base rate.

Thus, the only real protection low paid workers have is the 40-cent-an-hour minimum in the Wage and Hour law. The new rate will increase this by 25 cents immediately.

Under the WLB "bracket" policy, union-busting employers can deny their workers even the 50-cent rate unless they feel like giving it voluntarily—thus making even a 50-cent wage dependent on the employer's "goodwill."

The resolution, which affects lower paid workers in a number of industries and service trades, was worked out in conference by Sen. Pepper and CIO representatives here, including Elizabeth Sasuly of the Cannery and Agricultural Workers and John Edelman of the Textile Workers.

CIO unions principally affected are these two and the Furniture Workers, Woodworkers, Shoe Workers, Communications Assn., and cotton garment and laundry workers in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Text of Wage Floor Bill

Whereas pursuant to the Act of October 2, 1942, which was designed to aid in stabilizing the cost of living, the President, in Executive Orders 9250 and 9328, conferred authority upon the National War Labor Board to correct substandards of living; and

Whereas substandards not only undermine the health and strength of the nation but curtail production; and

Whereas Congress deems it desirable to determine a rate below which rates shall be considered substandard: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That it is the sense of the Congress that a straight time hourly rate of 65 cents per hour is the minimum below which the National War Labor Board shall consider any wage rate substandard.

Murray Urges Permanent Bond Check-off

Washington, Sept. 2—CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week hailed the payroll savings plan for the sale of government bonds as a means of developing thrift habits and urged the Treasury Dept. to continue it "as a permanent part of the government's financing program."

"Continuance of the program in the postwar period will be an appreciable contribution to economic stability for individuals and for the nation as a whole," he said.

GOP, Polltaxers Rush To Kill Planned Conversion

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2—In a rush job to junk even the inadequate protections of the George bill (S. 2051) on reconversion, the House was expected to reach a vote on the issue as The CIO NEWS went to press.

The majority report of the House Ways and Means Committee, headed by Rep. Robt. L. Doughton (D., N. C.) took out even the skeleton of the George bill in removing all provisions for unemployment benefits and for central planning during the reconversion period.

This action was denounced in a minority report signed by Reps. Dingell (D., Mich.), Lynch (D., Pa.), Forand (D., R. I.) and Eberharter (D., Pa.) who said:

"We think the bill is utterly inadequate to deal with the reconversion problem. "Congress has passed legislation protecting the rights of veterans and of business. This is only right and proper. But Congress must also protect the rights of the millions of men and women who have worked in war plants and have produced the munitions of war that are making our victory possible."

Commenting on the Congress action Bernard Baruch told UAW Vice-Pres. Richard T. Frankenstein:

"Unemployment compensation is first in must legislation. It has already been postponed and delayed too long.

"The most important determining factor is the cost of living as it varies in the different states. The purchasing power of unemployment compensation should be the primary concern.

"It would be obviously advantageous to the whole economy to have unemployment compensation cover as many groups as equity would permit. Legislation certainly should guard against encouraging idleness or causing hardships. The George Bill as it passed the House seems certainly inadequate."

JOBS THE ISSUE

"The American people understand that the real issue on reconversion is jobs for all after the war," CIO President Philip Murray said in a lie ahead, as America converts from war to peace.

"The refusal to make any provision for Federal workers and others not now covered who become unemployed, and the decision to leave unemployment benefits for all workers now covered at the present State levels which averaged $13.80

BAD POLITICAL LEADERSHIP CAN DESTROY THESE PLANS

final effort to persuade Congress to vote a decent bill.

"They know that the cry of 'state's rights' is merely a smokescreen to hide the efforts of certain reactionary and die-hard group to return this country to 'business-as-usual' after the war.

'NO COMPREHENSION'

"Among those who drafted the House bill, and those who voted for the Senate bill there seems to have been no comprehension of the very serious problems which nationally in 1943 (a peak year) is in line with the foregoing actions.

"Such benefits cannot fail to pauperize the unemployment and injure their home communities—and nearly 30 million people must shift jobs during the reconversion period.

"Justice Byrnes, in his testimony before the Ways and Means Committee, strongly advocated uniform Federal standards of unemployment compensation with a maximum of $20. per week for a period of 26 weeks.

"This testimony of Justice Byrnes, who certainly cannot be considered an extremist, is conclusive evidence of the inadequacy of the present system with its 52 different rates of compensation and duration of benefits.

LEGACY OF TROUBLE

"The omission in the House of any provision for transportation of war workers back to their homes, as provided in the George bill, is another instance of the failure of the Committee to understand the magnitude of the demobilization problem.

"It can be predicted now that if this bill passes in the form in which it came from Committee, the 78th Congress will have left a legacy of trouble for the 79th Congress and for the country, which will have to clear it up in 1945. Sooner or later adequate legislation on this problem of reconversion will have to be passed by Congress."

CIO Urges Anti-Bias Law On Congress

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2—Wide support for a permanent Fair Employment Practice Committee was demonstrated this week when CIO, church, welfare and community representatives appeared before a Senate Labor sub-committee to urge legislative action to curb discrimination in employment on grounds of race, religion or national origin.

The hearings were held on S2048, companion bill to the Scanlon-Dawson-LaFollette bill now in the House Labor committee. S2048 was introduced by Sen. Dennis Chavez (D., N.M.).

Appearing for the CIO, Kermit Eby told the sub-committee that in the transition period "the question of full employment will be the determining factor of discrimination.

"In the absence of full employment," he said, "discrimination will tend to become a serious problem because members of minority groups are the first to be laid off."

Urging a legislative remedy for this problem in order to strengthen the moral foundation of our democratic order, Eby said: "It is therefore not only for the protection of minorities, although common decency and ordinary American democracy would make us rebel at the thought of denying work to anyone because of his race, creed or color."

George L-P Weaver, director of the National CIO Committee to Abolish Racial Discrimination, also appeared before the committee. He pointed out the active campaign conducted by the CIO against discrimination, and said the "essential weakness of the present Fair Employment Practices Committee is its lack of enforcement powers. Having no power to enforce its orders, it can operate effectively only where the main social forces of the community favor a fair treatment of minorities."

"There will be tremendous difficulties," Weaver said, "in reconversion to peacetime production, transfer of workers from one industry to another, from one section of the country to another, in the placement of jobs of ten million determined servicemen."

"We must avoid the confusion and strife that would result from discharging workers in wholesale lots for no better reason than they are black, brown, Catholic or Jewish," he said.

Honor Eleanor Liss

New York, Sept. 2—The memory of Eleanor Liss, a Red Cross worker overseas, the first CIO woman to give her life in the service of her country, was honored last week by union, Red Cross and other officials. A memorial collection of books was donated to the New York Public Library by the State, County and Municipal Workers, for whom Miss Liss had worked, and her friends and family.

Campaign Issue—Jobs For All

Tom Dewey's followers in Congress have done some blunt talking about their opposition to the Kilgore-Murray-Truman bill and to all other attempts to protect working people in the reconversion period and plan intelligently for jobs for all.

They seem as willing as are Roosevelt's supporters to let their stand become an election campaign issue.

Why this should be, is rather hard to understand. For nothing exposes more clearly the callous, planless stupidity of Dewey-Hooverism than the openly proclaimed stand of most of the Republicans on this issue.

It is true the Republicans could not have succeeded without the aid of polltax Democrats. But these polltaxers have been as consistently anti-New Deal and anti-Roosevelt on domestic issues as most of the Republicans themselves.

The real issue on reconversion, as CIO Pres. Murray points out, is "jobs for all" after the war. In defeating the planning provisions of the Kilgore bill and raising the phoney cry of "states' rights," the Dewey crowd have publicly demonstrated their willingness to leave reconversion to the uncontrolled profit-instincts of big business, which after the last war landed us in the Hoover apple-selling era.

After guaranteeing corporations a "normal" rate of profit for two years after the war—after fully protecting business interests on termination of war contracts—they oppose as "New Deal extravagance" the least degree of protection for human beings who may be thrown on the streets through reconversion.

If the Dewey crowd are willing to let this stand of theirs become a campaign issue, so be it. There is little doubt that most American voters will prefer the planning for full production and full employment, with proper protection for displaced workers, advocated by the true supporters of Pres. Roosevelt.

Your Help Is Needed Now

An important campaign is now under way which depends upon every individual member of the CIO for its success.

Money is being spent like water by all the reactionary interests of the country to defeat President Roosevelt in this election campaign, and to elect members of Congress who will do their bidding.

In addition to the hundreds of thousands of dollars directly contributed to Dewey's campaign funds by wealthy families and anti-union corporation executives, countless other indirect means are being found to bring the power of big money to bear on his side and for the election of a reactionary Congress.

The millionaire press, for instance, with few exceptions, is using its huge resources to campaign against Roosevelt.

The Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers is spending large sums for propaganda, and many committees of all kinds with big financial resources are in the field to influence the elections.

Against all these powers of wealth and reaction, the CIO Political Action Committee is seeking to mobilize the enthusiasm and the voting power of the common people. But it has little money to work with.

Its total expenses to date have been much less than the 1940 contributions to the Republican Party of five wealthy families alone.

As a result of laws designed to prevent unions from contributing any of their funds, by democratic action of their membership, in connection with federal election campaigns, the CIO-PAC is refraining from using any union contributions in this campaign.

It has therefore to rely solely on individual voluntary contributions from CIO members and friends for its political activities, which contributions to the CIO-PAC totaled only $17,172.50 up to August 15.

Yet there is a tremendous job of political education and organization which PAC must do between now and November 7, to fulfill the mandate of the CIO membership and to get sufficient people to register and vote, so that the election of Roosevelt and a progressive Congress may be assured.

The CIO executive board therefore voted to devote four weeks following Labor Day to a special campaign to obtain voluntary contributions of $1.00 each from CIO members and all other progressive citizens, to assure a people's victory in the elections.

Every single reader of this editorial can play his part in this vital campaign by contributing himself and urging others to contribute.

The need is great. The time is short. The future welfare of ourselves, our families and the whole country is at stake in these all-important elections. Act now, before it is too late.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

WHEN Sidney Hillman was testifying before the House committee on campaign expenditures, he was photographed again and again.

Almost every time he opened his mouth, or moved his head or hands, or shifted his position, a photographer took another shot—going after him from every side and angle, too, from above and even from the ground behind him.

Yet Hillman seemed hardly aware of this continuous camera attention. For he and all others associated with CIO Political Action have long been operating under closer public scrutiny than has ever been the lot of any other American political organization.

★ ★ ★

Just as the inquisitive camera caught every detail of its Chairman's appearance, so every detail of PAC's administration, aims and activities has been recorded again and again for all who have eyes to see.

The PAC has been investigated by the FBI twice, by the Dies committee, by campaign committees of both Senate and House, and by hundreds of newspaper reporters and magazine writers. Even its telephone calls have been recorded.

The PAC has always invited inspection. It has not had a single secret from the public. It has willingly publicized every last fact about its finances and its operations.

Yet many politicians, writers and commentators stubbornly close their eyes to the known facts and repeat again and again the most grotesque fables about the PAC.

★ ★ ★

Hillman's testimony before the House committee again put on record the facts that explode these fables. Here are a few:

Is PAC "using huge slush funds to buy elections"?

Detailed financial reports submitted by Hillman showed that PAC has spent only $371,000 of the $671,000 originally contributed by CIO unions. Nearly all of this was spent on educational and organizational work, publicity and overhead; and only $67,000 was spent or contributed in primary campaigns and state elections.

Since July 23, 1944, the rest of this fund has been "frozen" until after the elections. All CIO-PAC expenses are now financed by individual voluntary contributions, which totaled only $17,000 up to August 15 (plus $39,000 in loans).

The National Citizens PAC is similarly financed exclusively by individual contributions, which totaled $34,000 up to Aug. 15, plus loans of $44,000.

These figures are a far cry from the imaginary millions still attributed to PAC by anti-CIO propaganda. They are a mere drop in the bucket compared to the huge funds available for reactionary politics.

The total expenses of the CIO-PAC to date, Hillman showed, are considerably less than the 1940 contributions to the Republican party by five wealthy families alone.

★ ★ ★

Is the PAC an appendage to one of the political parties, an effort to "capture" a party, or a third party?

These three charges are made interchangeably, despite their inconsistency, and are all false.

Hillman emphasized again that PAC is nonpartisan, seeking to unite all progressives behind a forward-looking program and supporting candidates, irrespective of party labels, who support that program.

It does not seek to "capture" either of the old parties and is opposed to forming a third party.

★ ★ ★

Does PAC seek labor domination in politics, or special CIO advantage, or work along narrow labor lines?

Hillman showed that the program of PAC is not framed in the interest of any special group; that candidates' records are not judged solely on their votes on labor issues; and that PAC works to unite all labor and all other groups behind a broad people's program in the national interest.

★ ★ ★

Does PAC seek to dictate or control the votes of CIO members or any other Americans?

"We are neither so arrogant nor so foolish as to make that attempt," Hillman said. The secret ballot would in any case make it impossible.

The national PAC has endorsed no candidates except Roosevelt and Truman, and Roosevelt was only endorsed after nearly all CIO affiliates by democratic vote had taken that action.

PAC merely makes available the voting records of candidates, and state or local CIO organizations make their own endorsements as they may democratically determine, usually in collaboration with AFL, rail brotherhoods, farm and other progressive groups.

The individual member, of course, votes according to his own judgment and conscience, and PAC shows its faith in democracy by devoting its chief efforts to getting as many citizens as possible to register and vote, regardless of how they may choose to cast their ballots.

If They Can't Stand Pegler

San Francisco, Sept. 2—A proposal to secure a berth in the merchant marine for any Hearst editor who might revolt at the signing up of Westbrook Pegler on the Hearst syndicate was adopted at a meeting of the CIO National Maritime Union branch here.

The proposal was made on the basis of press reports that the Pegler column had been dropped from Scripps-Howard papers and had been taken over by the Hearst syndicate. Part of the credit for Pegler's column being dropped by Scripps-Howard belongs to the NMU, it was said at the meeting. The union picketed in many port cities in protest against Pegler's attacks on the NMU and organized labor in general.

Union Speakers Aid GI-Labor Unity At California Camp

By RUTH MORROW

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 30—Efforts to drive a wedge between war worker and fighting man suffered a major setback last week when AFL and CIO spokesmen here discussed labor's role in the war and in the peace at a weekly orientation session of the U. S. Army Air Corps camp in Palm Springs, Calif.

On the invitation of Orientation Officer Lieut. Joe L. Brown, Albee Slade, Los Angeles CIO Council legislative director, and Edward M. Skagen, Southwestern Grand Lodge representative, AFL-International Association of Machinists, addressed three overflow sessions and answered question till far beyond expiration of time allotted.

In all three sessions, covering every GI of the 21st Ferrying Command, Lieutenant Brown introduced the novel programs by explaining that they had been arranged in the interests of making the "U. S. Soldier the Best-Informed in the World."

Slade and Skagen spoke for fifteen minutes each; remainder of the time was given over to questions.

HEAT IGNORED

The 116-degree desert temperature was completely ignored as the men and women in uniform demanded answers to:

Will women continue on their jobs after the war, and won't that deprive us of jobs?

How can we be sure of jobs when we know war industry will be shut down as soon as the peace is signed?

What do you mean by waiving of initiation fees—is that true of all unions?

How come we hear so much about strikes if the record in 99.6 per cent continuous production?

What is the PAC?

One question that brought laughter and cheers was: "Is the CIO endorsing Roosevelt for a fourth term?"

CHEERS FOR ROOSEVELT

Slade solemnly informed his questioner that he was specifically restricted from mentioning the President's name (under the Soldiers' Vote Act), but assured the GI that he personally was an enthusiastic supporter of the Commander-in-Chief and that he was certain that sentiment was shared by many in the CIO.

His listeners stood up and cheered.

Most provocative question raised was: "Why was the Kilgore Bill defeated in the Senate?"

"Which puts the finger right on home front—and labor's—chief responsibility," Slade pointed out when he reported his experience to the Los Angeles Council here.

NEED FOR LEGISLATION

"It's a forerunner of the kind of questions we in the labor movement will have to answer when our fighting men come home, if we haven't seen to it that legislation for jobs and security is adopted now.

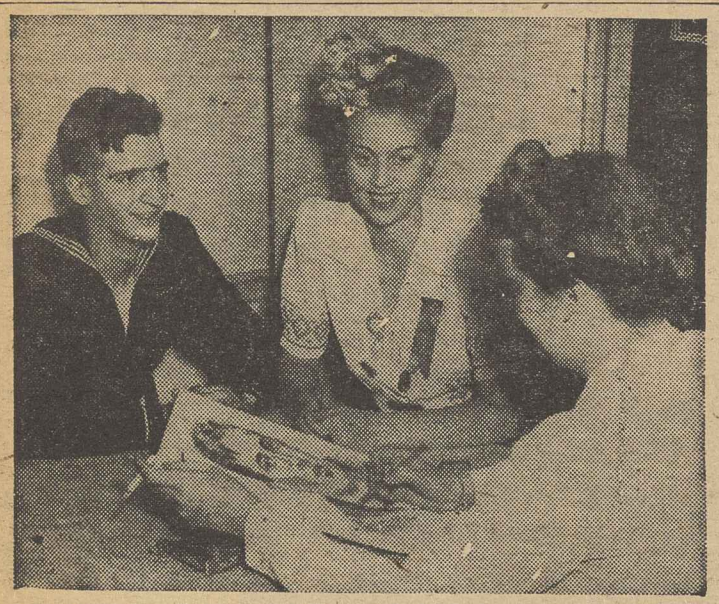
"And it'll be tough to look those soldiers in the eye if we haven't done our political action job on the home front while they were busy killing Nazis and Japs," Slade said.

Both Slade and Skagen emphasized the unity developing among the major sections of labor today around the need to maintain maximum war production and guarantee full employment after the war.

The friendly attitude of the men and their marked interest has given rise to hope that such labor talks will be incorporated in official orientation programs on a wide scale.

Commanding officer of the camp is Lieut. Col. Albert E. Higgins. Capt. Maurice H. Conn is Group Special Service officer.

Lieutenant Brown is the son of Screen Comedian Joe E. Brown.



UNITY OF CIO and AFL is demonstrated at the CIO white collar union canteen in Chicago as Seaman Frank Horvath, AFL Machinists, has his portrait done by Martha Rock of American Communications Assn., CIO. Annette van Howe of CIO-UOPWA is kibitzing.

Murray Urges World Unity in Labor Day Talk

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 4—All Americans were asked by CIO Pres. Philip Murray in a coast-to-coast broadcast today to consider "their community of interest with labor not only in winning complete and final victory, but also in working together" in the postwar period.

"The struggle that will follow this war, a struggle that is already beginning, is the battle for plenty, the battle for freedom from want and fear," he said.

"We are all in this struggle together," Murray continued. "The Congress of Industrial Organizations believes that we can and will win this struggle, as we shall win the war."

The speaker declared that jobs can be found for the serviceman as well as for the 50 million men and women now employed in industry by "the kind of cooperation between government, labor, industry and agriculture, which have made possible the high level of war production."

The CIO president addressed his plea to "forward-looking industrialists, as well as to all other sections of the population" to work with labor for postwar prosperity by raising the "levels of domestic purchasing power," and by increasing "export trade," to boost production and employment.

FIRST STEPS

Murray said that "one of the first steps . . . to increase the purchasing power" is being sidestepped by the retention of the 'Little Steel' formula," which the CIO contends must be revised.

The guaranteed annual wage, he said, is another step to increase purchasing power and provide full employment.

The CIO head pointed out: "Congress, through the tax laws, has guaranteed the owners of industry a 'normal' rate of profits for two years after the war. But their employes have no similar guarantee of security.

"A guaranteed annual wage would giving working people some assurance of livelihood throughout the year. . . .

NEED COOPERATION

"Cooperation between industry and labor is another essential for full production after this war. Only chaos and disruption of our industrial life will result if employers look to the war's end as an opportunity for a union-breaking, wage-cutting open-shop drive, and if labor unions have to resort to widespread strikes to defend their very existence and the living standards of their members.

"The Congress of Industrial Organizations offers its sincere cooperation to the many forward-looking employers who are seeking to avert such tragic industrial strike.

"If industry generally will respect the rights of organized labor, will bargain with the unions in good faith, and will recognize that postwar prosperity must be built upon increasing purchasing power and increasing production, our unions will help to preserve industrial peace and will cooperate to the limit to increase the production of good and services upon which our common prosperity depends.

CAN'T STAND ALONE

"This war has taught us that America does not and cannot stand alone, isolated from the rest of the world. Our future peace and economic welfare depend upon intelligent international collaboration with other nations. Labor looks with great hope to the outcome of such conferences as those at Bretton Woods and Dumbarton Oaks. It wishes to play its part and make its contribution to such international planning.

"That is why it asks for labor representation at such conferences and at the final peace table. We recognize that full employment after the war will depend not only on our demestic market, but also also on the increased export trade that international planning for the orderly and peaceful interchange of goods will make possible.

"National as well as international planning," he said, is necessary to accomplish this program.

Murray said that the "program for reconversion" . . . must be worked out at once by government in cooperation with industry, labor, agriculture and all other affected groups . . . "

He also called for expansion of social security legislation and said that "the government must be prepared to take up employment lags with a program of public works. . . . "

The leader of five-and-a-half million workers told the radio audience that "the political activities of the CIO are devoted solely to arousing as many people as possible to the need for making their votes count . . . for speedy and total victory, and for postwar security, with full production and jobs for all."

Locals Spike Phony 'Resignation' Yarn

TOOELE, Utah, Sept. 2—Phony stories smeared across the front pages of newspapers throughout the country ballyhooing a supposed disaffection of CIO members here from the CIO Political Action Committee have been spiked by Locals 55, 65 and 376 of the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

The wire service stories were based on statements of a few individuals who in no way represent the sentiments of the vast majority of the CIO members in this area, local union officials stated.

Local union officials denied any attempt at coercion in connection with either fund raising or rights of members to vote for whom they please. A statement was issued by the Tooele Political Action Committee and the following officers of the three local unions involved: President John L. Daly, Local 55; President Harry Park, Local 65; President George D. Nisonger, Local 376; Financial Secretary J. H. McNeil, Local 376; Recording Secretary George Bennet, Local 376; Vice-president John Davis, Local 376 and Vice-president Stanley Nielson, Local 65.

The statement said:

"Recently the newspapers of this state have been carrying articles pertaining to the action of these local unions, in regard to the CIO Political Action work.

"We wish to make the position of the union clear: there has not been at any time any effort made or any order given to the membership of this union how they must cast their ballots in any election. The local did not nor does not approve the action taken by some individuals who have caused it so much publicity in this state.

"We feel that the Political Action Committee has merely advised and pointed out the records of various candidates running for election to and has at no time endeavored to compel membership of this union to vote for any single individual candidate. We, therefore, reaffirm our position, which is complete participation in Political Action work."

Get Time For Reply

New York, Sept. 2—When Meade Davidson, anti-labor radio commentator, charged that the CIO Transport Workers Union had instigated the recent Philadelphia transit strike, he was left with his mouth standing wide open, because the TWU demanded and received a chance to reply and expose him.

DEMANDED EQUAL TIME

As part of labor's campaign to demand equal radio time to present its views and position on issues affecting the public, TWU quickly took advantage of the ruling of the Federal Communications Commission ordering both sides of a controversial issue to be given equal radio time.

The union's reply to the Davidson smear was delivered by Douglas L. McMahon, TWU secretary-treasurer. In reviewing the walkout, McMahon asked why Davidson had conveniently skipped over many of the factors which showed that the Philadelphia Transportation Company had conspired with the discredited company union leaders to break the TWU.

TWU's successful demand for radio rights proves that unions need no longer tolerate defamation by radio commentators.

Indian Union Leaders Appeal For Help In Freedom Drive

BOMBAY, Sept. 2 (ALN)—An appeal to the British Parliament, "especially the Labor Party," to "help the Indian working class not by delaying freedom for India, but by securing in the future constitution their full rights to citizenship, adult franchise and an adequate share of political power," was made here this week by N. M. Joshi, general secretary of the All-India Trade Union Congress.

Meanwhile, Joshi added, "British labor should secure immediately the release of political prisoners, among whom there are many respected trade union leaders and by initiating negotiations for political settlement.

"The Indian working class knows that with adult franchise under an Indian government it will be better able to organize and fight not only for economic demands, but also for an adequate share of political power," he said.

"To those in the British Labor party who accept the miserable condition under which the working classes of India are at present living and belittle the importance of political freedom, I say that the Indian workers have waited too long and have not yet secured from the British government even such elementary measures of social reform as health and unemployment insurance and old age pensions."

Commenting on the rejection by Field Marshal Lord Wavell, Viceroy of India, of Mohandas K. Gandhi's request for an interview and the recent discussion in the British House of Commons in which it was argued that the economic development of India must precede independence, Joshi declared that the "British government is clearly thoroughly unresponsive."

After his release, Joshi said, "Gandhi expressed his disapproval in unmistakable terms of events that had taken place after his arrest in 1942 and assured that no civil disobedience movement could or would be started.

EXPECTED RELEASE

"All of us expected that the Viceroy would release the Working Committee members and other National Congress leaders and help end the deadlock by helping effect a communal settlement and reopening negotiations for the establishment of a national government.

"On the contrary, the Viceroy, in his latest letter, introduced a new condition. Though Secretary of State for India Leopold Amery says that the Cripps offer is still open, the Viceroy says that even for any change towards a more representatve government than the present one all parties in India must now agree as to the method of settling the future constitution.

"We Indians," Joshi continued, "cannot take this challenge lying down, but must act promptly because even after the war this excuse of lack of agreement will be pleaded and the British government will continue to sit on the fence." Discussing the forthcoming meeting between Gandhi and Mohammed Ali Jinnah, president of the All-India Muslim League, Joshi stated that he was "delighted" when Gandhi "accepted the principle of Pakistan for the Muslims. The whole of India is looking forward with keen interest and great concern to the meeting.

"We know that both of them are inspired by the spirit of mutual concession and adjustment. I have no doubt that the majority of Hindus and Muslims will support mutual sacrifices which may be involved in any settlement arrived at by the two leaders."

Indian labor, the AITUC secretary said, "instinctively stands behind these efforts to bring about solidarity between the two communities and will support settlement."

"American Dilemma" Summarized

New York, Sept. 2—The Public Affairs Committee, publishers of the much discussed pamphlet, "The Races of Mankind," have done it again. Their most recent pamphlet, "The Negro in America" is a summary of the thorough two-volume study of the Negro in American society, "An American Dilemma," by the Swedish social economist, Gunnar Myrdal.

The astonishing ignorance of the Negro among the white population, Dr. Myrdal points out, may explain in part the gap between America's professed belief in equality and democracy and its manifestly unequal treatment of the members of the Negro race.

Women's Stake In Reconversion

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Every day our armies march closer to victory in Europe. When that victory comes our war production needs will be cut in half. Are we to have an orderly, planned change-over from producing bombs and guns and tanks to producing washing machines and motorcars? Are the men and women in our armed forces and our war plants to wake up from celebrating the victory to find jobs or bread lines?

That's what they're deciding in Congress right now—and so far the answer they give is bread lines.

GOP LIES

Remember how the leaders of the Republican party in July began issuing firm statements on the immediate need for Congressional action on reconversion? If you thought they meant it, think again.

In the Senate only three Republicans voted for the Kilgore Bill—the bill backed by organized labor which would really have human needs during reconversion and laid the basis for full employment.

In the House the Republicans and their poll-tax Democrat allies are backing an even worse bill than the inadequate George Bill enacted in the Senate. They have voted down unemployment benefit for Federal workers, any retraining program for war workers, any use of Federal funds to help war workers move to new jobs.

And in a final burst of frankness they voted to take out of the bill the section which said that its purpose was to assure full employment, rising standards of living and effective utilization of the nation's resources during the transition from war to peace.

ELECTION ISSUE

Here is an issue which we must carry to the people of America during the next two months—and especially to the women, for they know that their chance of having jobs after the war depends very largely on whether there are jobs for all.

The issue is not how high are unemployment benefits going to be. It is ARE WE PLANNING FOR UNEMPLOYMENT OR FULL EMPLOYMENT.

It's easy for a woman to understand what may happen. If you are worried about the future, if you're unemployed and the only help you can expect is a completely inadequate State unemployment benefit for a few weeks, you'll buy just as little as you possibly can.

On the other hand, if you're unemployed but you're sure of an adequate unemployment benefit over a fairly long period of time—and feel pretty confident of another job, because the Government has an active program of planned reconversion, you'll go on buying what you need.

Multiply yourself by 20 or 30 million—and there will be that many Americans temporarily out of work at one time or another during reconversion—and you'll see that if all of those families cut their buying almost to zero there will be no market for goods. Plants will have to close. That will mean fewer jobs and we're launched on a depression.

On the other hand, if we maintain the buying power of those families and make them feel secure, there will be a big and expanding market for goods. That will mean more jobs and more buying power and we're off on the road to full employment.

The Republicans and poll-tax Democrats are trying to force America on to the depression road. If we can't change their minds now our job is to change them for representatives who will support President Roosevelt's program of full employment in November.

See Pro-Fascist Gain In Brazil Cabinet Upset

Montevideo, Sept. 2 (ALN)—The resignation last week of Brazilian Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha and the resultant strengthening of pro-fascist elements in the government of President Getulio Vargas is due to the following four reasons, a leading Brazilian journalist who is close to democratic circles in that country and who has just arrived here told ALN:

Aranha constituted the greatest obstacle to a rapprochement between the regime of the Argentine Colonel's Lodge (GOU) and Brazil's Estado Novo. Aranha supported the establishmhent of diplomatic relations between Brazil and the Soviet Union, which War Minister Enrico Gaspar Dutra, leader of the government group close to the pro-fascist Integralistas, strongly opposed. It is also noted that Brazilian Finance Minister Souza Costa and Soviet representatives held a series of discussions at the Bretton Woods monetary conference of the United Nations.

Pro-fascists in the government wished to prevent at all costs the possibility of Aranha representing Brazil at the peace conference. They feared that in the event that elections are called after the war, Aranha, with enhanced prestige, would be a leading candidate for the presidency.

At present, the Brazilian journalist said, there are two clearly discernible groups on the country's political scene: the partisans of the Estado Novo, who sympathize with the GOU and want to insure a return to the pre-war political status quo as soon as the Axis is defeated, and the supporters of internal democratization. The latter group, he added, now feels that Aranha has come closer to them after releasing himself from surroundings which frustrated all of his democratic efforts.

Aranha's resignation has been expected for some time, the Brazilian continued. The pro-fascists disliked him because of his leading position in the conference of Pan-American foreign ministers in Rio de Janeiro in 1942, which acted to break off relations between Latin American nations and the Axis.

Aranha is also quoted as declaring on January 29, 1944, in a commemoration of Brazil's break with the Axis: "The real danger threatening Brazil is not Yankee imperialism or Russian communism, as Nazi-fascist propaganda asserts, but the fifth columnists occupying key positions in the government."

Latin-America Hears Murray And Carey

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4—Contiuuance of the unity between the CIO and the Confederation of Latin-America workers to advance living standards in the postwar world was advocated by Philip Murray and James B. Carey, pres. and sec.-treas. respectively of the CIO, in Labor Day radio broadcasts to Latin-America.

The CIO president said that under President Roosevelt workers and the people of the United States have found a common ground with the people of our Hemisphere neighbors—the common ground of unity against the Axis tryranny.

WAR WORK CITED

He said that as a result "the workers and the plain people of all the Americas" are engaged in all-out war production.

"We have it in our power to make of ourselves a living example of unity in thought, word and action," Murray said.

The CIO head said that among the six million members of the CIO are "many scores of thousands of Latin-American origin or descent," and that much of the strength of the organization is due to its insistence "upon equality of treatment and opportunity for all its members."

"The labor movements of this Hemisphere," he continued, "must unite with their brother movements in all the nations to guarantee a permanent and democratic peace."

"The day is only truly to be celebrated by all, for the workers of our Hemisphere now see the rapid fruition of their efforts to overthrow the chief bastion of Fascist tyranny," Carey said.

"The complete overthrow of the Axis," he said, "will mean . . . the revival of strong trade unions everywhere . . . and promotion of those economic conditions which are essential for the maintenance of peace and the rising living standards of all of the people."

The CIO secretary-treasurer hailed "the development of inter-American economic planning machinery and even more the recognition that labor is entitled to participate in the operation of this machinery."

Carey pledged that the CIO will continue to develop among its members an understanding of problems of Latin-American workers and asked that their unions seek to tell their members of the problems of the workers of the United States.

"The elevation of the living standards is a matter of concern for both continents," he concluded. "No better day can be choosen to rededicate ourselves to this effort than Labor Day in 1944."

CIO Trounces '50' Catch-All 3 To 1

NEW YORK, Sept. 2—The CIO Transport Workers Union administered a stinging defeat to John L. Lewis and his catch-all District 50 when 3,250 employes of the Third Avenue transit system by a three-to-one vote rejected the soured ex-leader's bid for power in the Empire State.

The election, held under the supervision of the New York State Labor Relations Board, gave the TWU-CIO 2,118 votes and Lewis' District 50 received 772 votes. There were 10 for neither, five blank, 19 void and 14 challenged.

This crushing repudiation came after an expensive high pressure campaign by Lewis' top command including John Kmetz, Michael Widman, Otto Hartman and other appointed luminaries of the appendage that has been raiding milk farmers, bricklayers, clerks and nearly every other occupation and industry.

SMEAR CAMPAIGN

An undercover campaign of distortion and belittling of TWU achievements had gone on for over two years. It was carried on by a clique that professed loyalty to the CIO but were secretly in touch with Lewis agents.

One of their chief techniques was to harp on delays in WLB action on contracts and carp over wartime restrictions.

President Michael J. Quill and other leaders of the Transport Workers Union hailed the election results as a great victory for the CIO and the President's war and peace program in a statement issued to the membership of the New York local which includes the workers of the Third Avenue System, the NYC Ommibus Corp., Fifth Avenue Coach and nearly all other privately owned bus lines in the metropolitan area as well as the vast city-owned subway and surface transit system.

VOTED ON ISSUES

The TWU said that the workers voted on the basis of the issues in the campaign. The great majority voted for the TWU on its seven year record of raising wages, improving conditions, and bringing new freedom and benefits to the 3,250 employes of the system.

They voted for the patriotic policies and democratic procedures within the TWU. They voted for the political activities of the CIO to protect labor's interests and promote the nation's security. They voted to continue the union's great contribution to the winning of the war and the establishment of lasting and secure peace.

The membership rejected Lewis' disruptive strikes to hamper the war effort. They don't want any part of his personal power policies. They repudiated his private war against President Roosevelt.

The Third Avenue System operates all trolleys in Manhattan, the Bronx, and Westchester County and all major bus routes in the Bronx and Westchester.

SERVICE OUT OF NEEDS

Behind the growth of nearly every established business institution is a need for the goods it supplies or the service it renders. You will generally find it has succeeded because it has offered things that many people need and because it has kept its products adapted to fit their changing requirements.

The history of The Prudential is no exception. Starting with Weekly Premium life insurance designed to meet the needs of those who wanted premiums collected at the home. The Prudential now has a great variety of life insurance policies on many different premium paying plans.

Each policy and each payment plan fits some special need, so that the comfort and security of life insurance protection is now within the reach of practically every American family.

They're getting the stuff and they're using it too!

It isn't steely muscles, strong backs, fighting hearts and smart heads alone that have made our fighting forces successful in this war.

Equipment has played a very vital part—equipment with which our soldiers, our sailors, and our airmen can do a job—equipment got to them in quantity and in time.

Even our boys couldn't beat the Nazis and the Japs with a few guns and a couple of bazookas. They had to have millions of guns—millions upon millions of shells, bullets, bombs and grenades—thousands of Jeeps, tanks, trucks—thousands of planes and ships.

And they are getting the most colossal volume of war equipment ever produced by any nation in the world's history, because the men and women of America's great war plants COULD and DID and WILL CONTINUE to produce it.

American production is playing an historic part in the Allied victories of this global war. England knows it, Russia knows it, China knows it—and America knows it.

The hour of the final knockout of the Axis is getting nearer. And American production will see to it that our men have the stuff of which knockouts are made—in time and in full volume—for the final victorious punch.

Unions OK By GI's, CIO Front-Line Visitors Report

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2—The GI's on the fighting lines in France are against strikes but they're strong for unions and they hate fascism worse than they fear death, R. J. Thomas and David J. McDonald told the press in their first news conference the day of their return from England and France this week.

"We met CIO and AFL men everywhere, as well as plenty of non-union members, and they feel the same," Thomas reported. "They're opposed to strikes but they have absolutely no inclination to be anti-union.

"They firmly believe that the only way they'll get a fair break when they return is by joining unions," he said. "Our GIs are thinking more about the future in this war than the soldiers in the last war thought of it. They're insistent on jobs when they come back—jobs for all who want work and can work."

Hatred of Nazism and all it stands for is uppermost in every soldier, McDonald said. "We talked with men just out from the fighting around the Falaise gap," he said. "They hate Nazis. They say over and over again, 'We've got to kill those bastards, we've got to kill them.'"

This was emphasized also by Thomas, who said: "The American people don't yet fully realize the viciousness of Nazism, but the troops do. And when they come back, they'll be plenty tough on any friends of fascism or Nasism they find still lurking around this country."

Asked if the average soldier was interested and anxious to vote in the election, Thomas said:

"They're not too busy to want to vote, despite the difficulties that Dewey's agents in Congress have placed in their way. The Army is doing an excellent job in getting voting information to them. Lots of them asked us why Congress was allowed to pass the lousy bill that did become law."

McDonald, who is secretary-treasurer of the United Steelworkers, CIO, was strongly impressed with the way he saw steel in action everywhere the three CIO delegates went in France and in England.

"We saw that CIO-made steel in action," he said. "We saw how American steel is winning this war, as all wars are won by steel. And we found that the Army, from Generals to GIs, recognizes the workers' role in making it the best equipped army in the world.

It's untrue, despite newspaper propaganda, that the GIs damn labor. Maybe a few minor officers do, but the GIs and the top generals don't. They know what U. S. labor has done—which is an added reason why we have to keep on doing it."

Both Thomas and McDonald praised the work of the French unions in fighting the Nazis, both during the liberation battles and all during the four-year occupation.

"The underground in France put up a marvelous fight," Thomas said, "and the fight was led by the unions. You should see how tough they are on the traitors, the collaborationists and the Vichyites. We saw FFI (French Forces of the Interior) men and women march the Vichyites to the Prisoner of War camps and heard them tell U. S. officers that they'd better take them in, or the patriots would shoot them."

"And speaking of prisoners, we saw thousands and thousands of Nazi POWs in these camps, and we talked to them. Most said Germany is defeated, only a few SS men still try to say that Germany can win."

"The backbone of the French resistance was the unions," McDonald said. "Both American and British officials told me that the unions never stopped fighting for one day. They fought with guns when they had them, with strikes, slowdowns and sabotage when they didn't. The French workers were magnificent."

TRIBUTE TO WOMEN

Thomas paid special tribute to the women, both of France and of England, and their contribution to the victory. "Women made the British war effort possible," he said, "not only in the factories but in the fighting forces—especially in anti-aircraft—as well."

There is no question, he added in discussing the future of France, that De Gaulle has the leadership of the French people.

"We saw him getting wonderful receptions everywhere," Thomas said. "One place we reached within 50 miles of Paris we saw a tremendous turnout of people, shouting welcomes and waving flags.

"Feeling pretty set up with this, we went into the town under the illusion the welcome was maybe for us. It wasn't—it was for De Gaulle, who happened to be behind us."

Both men returned looking fit after their gruelling three weeks' trip, despite the risks from snipers in the fighting lines and the ever-present "buzz-bombs" they experienced in England.

British Workers Want Int'l Labor Unity—Thomas

Washington, Sept. 2 — British trade union officials met in London during the CIO-AFL war front trip are strong for world labor unity, R. J. Thomas reported in his first press conference after returning to this country.

Telling about a lunch that he, David J. McDonald and Sherman H. Dalrymple had with Sir Walter Citrien and other British Trades Union Congress officials, Thomas also said that their AFL colleagues on the trip hadn't changed their minds one iota.

"Though only half the TUC Board was at lunch, they're in line with CIO's position in trying to get a world labor congress called as soon as possible," he said. "They say that it must include the principal United Nations labor organizations at the very least.

AFL 'LINE'

"Unfortunately, our AFL fellow-travellers took the same old position of Bill Green and Matty Woll at the lunch—that they couldn't meet with Soviet trade unions because they aren't 'free'.

"We have no argument with whoever the USSR designates at such a meeting. If we do have any disagreements with them, the time to have them is at the meeting, not before.

"We were agreeably surprised to see the TUC closer to us than to the AFL. That's because the plain people of Britain realize that this war must be the last one—and that one of the best ways to guarantee that is to have unity of all world labor."

THESE ARE AMERICAN SOLDIERS GOING INTO ACTION. You need not worry about their flinching or failing—no matter what tough going they may meet. You can count on them to do what we're asking of them—to pay, with their lives if need be, the price of victory. But victory cannot be bought by these men alone. We've got to pay our share of the cost too. This month, that share is at least $100 EXTRA—over and above all other buying—in U. S. War Bonds, for every man and woman in this country. Invest your share—today!

The Well Dressed Patriot

Washington, Sept. 2—One of the things that surprised the three CIO visitors to the battlefronts was the fact that French women seemed to be fairly well dressed when their towns were liberated, and that the patriots wore good, high leather boots, R. J. Thomas tells.

The reason for the good dresses, he said, was that the French women laid away their best dress when the Nazis came in four years ago, saving it for just the occasion of their liberation.

The reason for the good boots on the patriots was even simpler: "They just went out at night and separated a Nazi from his boots and also his life when they needed a pair," he said.

American Slav Week

Pittsburgh, Sept. 4—The city of Pittsburgh, which will be host to the second National American Slav Congress, gave official recognition to the "outstanding contributions" made by Slavic Americans "to the development of our nation and its efforts in the war for survival" in a proclamation, by Mayor Cornelius D. Scully declaring Sept. 23 to 24 American Slav Week.

GI's Want Tough Peace On Nazis

Washington, Sept. 2—The American soldier wants a tough peace imposed on the Nazis after the war is won, and they're seriously afraid that the peace won't be tough enough, both R. J. Thomas and David J. McDonald reported on their return from a three weeks trip to France and England.

"All the GI's are anti-Nazi," Thomas said. "They agree with the Russians that Germany must be crushed. They want to get home, of course, but first they want to finish up the job over there, so their sons won't have to do it again 25 years from now.

"They feel so strongly about this that many of them actually hope the Red Army will get to Berlin first, because they feel sure they'd be tougher on the Nazis. The Nazi prisoners confirm this, because they hope the U. S. and Britain will be first in Berlin, for exactly the opposite reason."

U. S. Officials Pay Labor Day Tribute To War Workers

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2—Praise for the magnificent production job done to help win the war was heaped upon American labor this week by a number of government leaders in statements made in honor of Labor Day.

Pres. Roosevelt told the nation's workers that they could observe the day "in the proud knowledge that in the battle of production their free labor is triumphing over slave labor."

"It was their determination to safeguard liberty and to preserve their American heritage for coming generations that made possible the greatest production achievement in the world's history," the President said. (Complete text of message reprinted on another page.)

James Forrestal, Secretary of the Navy recalled that on Labor Day, a year ago, he had stated that "the outcome of the war would depend in large measure on the loyal efforts of the men and women of the production line."

BIG CAMPAIGNS AHEAD

"The good news from every battle front today, therefore, is a tribute to the achievement of American labor over the past year," he declared. Warning that great campaigns still lie ahead, he called upon labor to keep the flow of supplies maintained.

Robert P. Patterson, Under Secretary of War, said that the splendid progress made in the war "was made possible in a large measure by the enormous quantities of weapons and war materials produced by the workers here at home. The men and women in our war plants have done a job worthy of the highest commendation."

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins pointed out that the nation's wage earners "are not only working day in and day out to help win the war, but are also buying $300,000,000 of war bonds a month out of the union treasuries and by individual subscriptions.

"They are giving their sons and brothers to the armed forces," she said, having "some two million gallant trade union members who are fighting our fight on land, sea and in the air in all parts of the world."

Chairman Paul V. McNutt of the War Manpower Commission, after reviewing briefly the continuing need for war supplies on the battle fronts and the serious problems of reconversion still to be faced, concluded:

"Labor Day, 1945, may well see the world at peace. The strength, the intelligence, the loyalty of American labor which has smashed production records in wartime will in peacetime, I am sure, also solve the next problem of labor's agenda and democracy's agenda: Jobs for all Americans, for war workers, for soldiers, for women, for the handicapped, for the minority groups, for all Americans who want jobs."

Rear Admiral C. H. Woodward, chief of the Navy Dept.'s Industrial Incentive Division, said that "American labor has written an epic of accomplishment into history." A "production miracle" has been performed which has staggered the enemy, he declared. "The courage and patience and quiet strength of every worker in every plant are the simple things which made up this miracle."

Rear Admiral G. F. Hussey, Jr., chief of the Bureau of Ordnance, commended labor for the way it had met its responsibility in war production. "The successes of our Armed Forces to date reflect the degree to which labor has discharged this obligation."

Rear Admiral E. L. Cochrane, chief of the Navy Dept.'s Bureau of Ships, praised "the men and women of American industry" for having built and equipped "the largest and most powerful Navy the world has ever known."

Director of War Mobilization James F. Byrnes said that Labor Day, 1944, "finds the enemy on the ropes" and called upon labor to finish off "by staying on the job." When peace comes, he declared, "a grateful nation must be prepared to give to all no less an opportunity to work and produce for peace, than has been given to work and produce for war."

Speaking in the name of the Maritime Commission and the War Shipping Administration, Chairman Emory S. Land hailed particularly "the men of the merchant marine and their brothers in arms in our shipyards and inland factories."

Stating that he knew at first hand what they have done and the difficulties they have encountered, Vice Admiral Land said: "The performance by our unbeatable team of shipbuilders and seamen has won the confidence of our front commanders, our fighting men, and the American public and our Allies, and the fear of our enemies."

The contribution made to war production by the nation's women workers was lauded by Frieda S. Miller, new director of the Women's Bureau, U. S. Dept. of Labor, in a special message. Pointing out that more than 18 million women now at work form one-third of the total civilian labor force, Miss Miller stated:

"Women, when called upon by the critical need, have proved their ability in hundreds of occupations. Today, they must dedicate themselves to the consolidation of these gains. Tomorrow, with the hope of a world at peace, we must see that these skills and opportunities which have developed for the new world we fight for are used in peacetime."

Praises CIO For Race Job

CHICAGO, Sept. 2 — "The most extensive propaganda job being done in this country . . . aimed against race discrimination and religious prejudice is found in the publications of the CIO," Carl Sandburg, poet and biographer of Lincoln, declared last week in his Chicago Sunday Times column.

ON CIO CREDIT SIDE

Sandburg said that those who blame the CIO for this and that "must, to be fair and equitable, put on the credit side the job it has done in this time of crisis against religious prejudice and racial discrimination."

"It is one of the nicest things to look at in the present American scene," he writes, and compares the work of the CIO in this field with the progressive American traditions of Roger Williams, Charles Carrol, Thomas Jefferson, Lincoln "and that majestic old hobo, Walt Whitman."

Labor's Contributions To War Will Go Down In History, Say Officials

Washington, Sept. 2 — When history writes the dates of the decisive battles of this global war, labor will share in the praise for the victories which enable the United Nations to show that free men are stronger than slaves in times of war as well as in peace, Clinton S. Golden and Joseph D. Keenan, vice chairmen of the War Production Board's labor division, said in a Labor Day statement.

"It has been estimated that workers' productivity from 1939 to 1943 has increased 20 per cent per hour," they stated. "In the month before Pearl Harbor, for example, U. S. factories produced 2,138 airplanes with an average airframe weight per plane of two tons. Two years later, 8,000 planes were rolling out per month, with an average weight of more than four tons.

"Similarly, merchant vessels delivered the month before Pearl Harbor totaled 12, with a deadweight tonnage of 138,000. In December, a total of 182 ships weighing 2,000,000 tons were delivered. In 1941, the U. S. produced 375,000,000 pounds of powder and explosives, while in the first four months of this year, production was more than double that for all of 1941.

"The American people have answered the call to arms in the factories. In the past three years, millions of persons have left their peacetime jobs, businesses and homes to migrate into war production centers to find war jobs.

"The number of women at work increased by something over four million; older workers, part time workers and school graduates have also entered the labor marker, eager to contribute to the war effort."

The WPB labor representatives pointed out that 85 per cent of our war production is carried on in factories that have union agreements.

CIO Women's Labor Day Pledge

Washington, Sept. 2—Labor Day this year has a very special significance for the women in CIO families, Mrs. Faye Stephenson, president, Congress of CIO Women's Auxiliaries, declared in a special Labor Day message issued here this week.

"It is a day of great rejoicing because we see the end of the war and the return of our boys approaching," she said. The Auxliaries have observed it by pledging to intensify activities to speed V-Day and to triple political action work for the re-election of President Roosevelt and a Congress which will support him.

Politics On Air

Washington, Sept. 2—"We are going to do it as citizens. Our people are members of this community and they are going to work breakfast, dinner and supper to get progressive candidates elected."

That is the answer CIO Secy.-Treas. James B. Carey returned to Republican Congressman Clarence J. Brown on this week's American Forum of the Air who raised objections to unions participating in politics to the extent of organized campaigning and raising funds to assist their chosen candidates.

"The Political Action Committee has an assignment to carry out," Carey said. "We recognize that in 1940 50 million people voted in this country. In 1942 only 28 million people cast ballots in this country."

"We are anxious to see more people registered and able to vote. The PAC is trying to carry the issues to the people of this country, so they can vote intelligently," Carey said.

Message From Church Council

New York, Sept. 2 — Organized labor should be encouraged to maintain and strengthen its recent great gains which have already helped to raise the general level of living, the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America states in its Labor Sunday message.

"The economic goal of tomorrow's world will be the production of more goods at lower prices for more people," the message says. "Modern society has never been confronted by the problem of overproduction but of under-consumption, largely through lack of purchasing power.

"Basic human needs in terms of food, clothing and adequate housing have never fully been met even in prosperous America. The task of providing for such human needs will require an industrial effort sufficient to give an adequate return to labor, management and capital. An important part of this task will be the relief and rehabilitation of the world's stricken areas."

Red Cross Hails Labor's Support

Washington, Sept. 2—Continua- of labor's "wholehearted cooperation" with the Red Cross was urged in a Labor Day statement released here by Basil D. O'Connor, chairman of the American Natl. Red Cross.

"The record of labor's support of the Red Cross is one of which the working men and women are justly proud," he said.

"Through the Red Cross, they have helped provide comfort, surgical dressings and life-saving plasma to our men in uniform. From labor's ranks have come many of our overseas workers, giving direct assistance to the armed forces."

Fund Drive Starts For Political Dollars

NEW YORK, Sept. 9—Launching the greatest voluntary contribution campaign in the history of the organized labor movement, the CIO Political Action Committee, under the slogan of "A Buck for Roosevelt," is asking 5,000,000 CIO members to dig down in their jeans and come up with the dollar bill which will protect their hard-won gains of the past 12 years and insure post-war employment and security for all.

During the four weeks beginning Labor Day, shop stewards, organizers, business agents, executive board members, shop chairmen and just plain rank-and-filers will say, gently:

"Brother, how much is a buck worth in terms of social security, collective bargaining rights, improved wage and working conditions, dignity and self-respect on the job and a world rid of fascists and Nazis?

"And we know exactly what that answer will be," Sidney Hillman, CIO-PAC chairman, said. "It will be the easiest, the best, the most grateful, the grandest dollar ever given and spent. Because it will be the smallest, the most painless token of our affection for a great and good man we are determined to reelect to office.

"It also will be the most enlightened self-insurance against poverty, bread-lines, Hoovervilles, apple-vending, bonus marches and the ghost factories of the Hoover period.

FIVE MILLION CAN WIN

The dollar will be a guarantee that the five million can win against the five, the Pews, the Sloans, the Queenys, the Rockefellers and the duPonts, because, though we are little, our numbers are great."

FREDA S. MILLER

'Equal Rights' Cry A Phony To Cover Attacks On Labor

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9—The innocent-sounding "Equal Rights" amendment now pending in the Senate is "a wicked thing to propose," Freda S. Miller, newly sworn in director of the Women's Bureau of the U. S. Dept. of Labor, told The CIO NEWS here this week.

The amendment, backed by the outdated crusaders of the Woman's Party, is a legal wolf in sheep's clothing, which under the guise of establishing equal rights for men and women would completely destroy all protective legislative for women.

Not only would the amendment wipe out all the hard-won legislation protecting women from exploitation and fatigue, but also all laws regulating hours, establishing minimum wages, requiring seating and sanitary facilities, and safeguarding against lifting and carrying heavy weights.

It would do away with laws providing widows' pensions, alimony, maternity aid, aid to dependent children and other laws recognizing the fact that men and women are different and that it would take more than an amendment to make them alike.

MAKES LAWS UNENFORCEABLE

Emphasizing that ever since the amendment was first proposed the Women's Bureau has been concerned about its effect on protective standards, Miss Miller pointed out that the result of the vaguely-worded amendment "would be confusion.

"No department of labor could enforce these laws. The problem," she said, "is whether what you really want is equality or whether there are grounds for differentiation."

Miss Miller illustrated the difference between discrimination and distinction with the example of the common practice of awarding the custody of children to the mother in a divorce. "This is not equality," she pointed out. The Women's Party in defending the amendment uses examples of women who are discriminated against in their professions and jobs. "This inequality of treatment is due to the prejudices of society. Just as what happens to women's jobs after the war depends on the mores of society which can't be changed by law." Clients will not be more apt to go to a woman lawyer because the law says she is equal, Miss Miller added.

The way to give women the few real rights that have not yet been granted to them in some states, such as the right to jury duty, property rights, etc., is not to wipe out the entire body of protective legislation but to direct specific legislation toward these specific situations.

Many uninformed Congressmen believe that they can get the women's vote in the coming election by voting for the amendment. Women in the labor movement should write to their Congressman and let him know that they are united in their opposition to the bill.

Labor For FDR

Washington, Sept. 9 — Fortune Magazine—$1 a copy organ of big business—has just emerged from a study of the labor press with the somewhat less than startling fact that union papers are for FDR and against Dewey.

According to the latest poll, using the method called "content analysis," CIO papers, including this one, are 95 percent favorable in their references to FDR and 100 percent unfavorable in those to Dewey.

CIO papers are also ahead of the AFL on items dealing with political action, showing 23 percent in CIO national organs and 18 percent in local publications, to AFL's eight and seven percent.

As the poll points out a masterpiece of understatement: "The build-up for Dewey in any branch of the labor press has been scanty."

Jobs For All—No. 1 Election Issue

Jobs Now—And After Victory

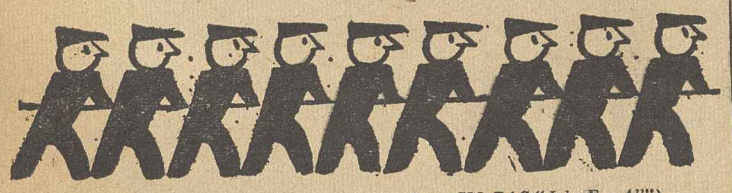
Jobs for all both now and after the war is the biggest issue before the American people, and the No. 1 issue in the election campaign.

The Republicans and their polltax allies in both House and Senate have shown their reckless disregard for the welfare and future security of the people by their refusal to pass a reconversion bill.

Only the election of Roosevelt, Truman and a progressive Congress can prevent a return to Hoovervilles and mass misery in America. Labor political action is the key to security and jobs, the answer to the Dewey-eyed men who want to turn us back to the hungry 30's.

The following excerpts from CIO-PAC's newest pamphlet, "Jobs For All" are printed as an aid to understanding the No. 1 issue before us today.

PEACE TIME PRODUCTION



(from CIO-PAC "Jobs For All")

BEFORE THE WAR
THERE WERE 45 MILLION WORKERS

Our Postwar Problem No. 1

President Roosevelt has said "Freedom from want is eternally linked with freedom from fear." We cannot have peace without economic security. A world haunted by hunger and unemployment will generate international rivalry that will inevitably lead to war.

We must plan now to make [illegible] will be a job at fair wages for everyone who can and wants to work.

If we fail to solve this problem we will fail to win the peace.

Then we will only be marking time until the next war. And it will not be a pleasant time, either. For unemployment will be accompanied by fear and distrust, which in turn will breed panic and hatred.

We can then expect groups to be incited against groups, whites against Negroes, farmers against factory workers, southerners against northerners, women workers against men workers, and all of them against organized labor.

That is why we think it is the duty of every worker, farmer and businessman to grasp the meaning of these dangers, to study the facts, and above all, to learn well what each can do to avoid these dangers.

The Great War Lesson

The war is teaching us all many lessons.

The one lesson that we can all learn from the war is this:

We need never again have unemployment in our land.

Here are the facts:

In 1939, before we entered the war, we had LESS than 45 million workers in industry, on the farms, and in the army. By now (May, 1944) nearly 11 million men have been drafted into the armed forces. Yet our army of workers in the factories and on the farms has increased to 55 million.

The great needs of the war gave us full employment almost overnight.

That is only half of the story.

In 1939 all of our youngest and ablest workers were in the factories and on the farms. But in 1943 most of them were in the armed services. The need of war workers brought millions of untrained women into the factories.

Nearly five million youngsters took part-time employment. Most of them had to be trained hastily. In many areas workers came hundreds of miles to their place of work. There was no housing for them. There were insufficient shopping facilities for them.

They could get no medical care. And in many places working conditions were not very good. All of these circumstances were not favorable to the highest and best production.

Yet, our total production in goods and services rose from less than 100 billion dollars in 1939 to well over 188 billion dollars in 1943.

From 1939 to 1943 our total employment rose by about 20%. Our output rose by almost double.

Read that last paragraph over again. It is almost unbelievable. But it is true as two-times-two-makes-four. About 1/5 more workers nearly doubled the national output.

The war proved what we can do. The workers, industrialists, and farmers of America, determined to win the war, put their shoulders to the wheel and performed, what is often described as, "a miracle of production."

The war has taught us that we can perform a "miracle of production." The war has taught us that when we are determined to fill a great national need, we can have full employment.

Our New Frontiers

We shall need more and better food.

In 1942 Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, estimated that 40 million people in America lived on a diet dangerous to their health.

Even today, with all our money-prosperity, 21,500,000 workers earn less than $1,000 a year, which means that they and their families cannot possibly have a good diet with food prices what they are.

MORE MORE MORE MORE

When the war is over, we will need more and better food. If we are to produce enough food to give every citizen an adequate diet, we must guarantee our farmers an adequate income and we shall need more workers to produce farm machinery, more cannery workers, and more workers in all the food industries.

We shall need more and better houses.

About one-half of all the dwellings in the United States are in need of major repairs, or have no bath, or are without electricity. Many are totally unfit for human habitation.

We need 16 million new dwellings. They cannot be built now. We will have to build them over a period of ten years after the war.

When the war is over, our needs in housing will be enough to keep the building industries busy and give large employment for years.

We shall need more clothing.

We shall need more and better schools.

We, the richest and most advanced nation on earth have over ten million illiterates in our country. The majority of these are not aliens. They are not Negroes. They are native whites.

Nearly 60% of all our adults have never attended high school.

Over one-half of all our public school buildings are one-room schools. We need more schools.

Our teachers in many parts of the country are miserably underpaid. And as a result our children receive a miserable education. We need better paid teachers, and more of them.

After the war, we should have enough schools and enough schooling so that every adult American should be at least a high school graduate. This will give employment to more builders, more teachers, and more text book printers.

We shall need more medical and dental care.

Of the first 2,000,000 men examined for the army in 1940-41 nearly one million were rejected because they could not meet physical requirements.

To take proper care of our health, we need three times as many dentists and doctors as we had before the war. We need 500 new hospitals and 500,000 hospital beds. We need hundreds of thousands of nurses, research workers, laboratory workers, X-ray operators, and other personnel in hospitals and clinics.

We shall need more autos, more roads, more paved streets, more railroads, more airplanes, and more of every type of transportation and communication.

We shall need more and longer vacations.

If all who are willing to work are working, they will need proper rest and recreation periods. They will need more tennis courts, more baseball diamonds, more playgrounds of every kind.

We shall need more, and more, of everything.

Our needs—and the needs of other nations for our products—will be our new frontier to a better life.

IN CIVILIAN PRODUCTION 30 MILLIONS

The New Bill Of Rights

President Roosevelt, in his message to Congress in January, 1944, blazed a trail to freedom and security in America after the war, by enumerating eight rights, which have since become known as "The New Bill of Rights." They are:

1. "The right to a useful and remunerative job in the industries, or shops or farms or mines of the nation;
2. "The right to earn enough to provide adequate food and clothing and recreation;
3. "The right of every farmer to raise and sell his produce at a return which will give him and his family a decent living;
4. "The right of every business man, large and small, to trade in an atmosphere of freedom from unfair competition and domination by monopolies at home or abroad;
5. "The right of every family to a decent home;
6. "The right to adequate medical care and the opportunity to achieve and enjoy good health;
7. "The right to adequate protection from the economic fears of old age, sickness, accident and unemployment;
8. "The right to a good education.

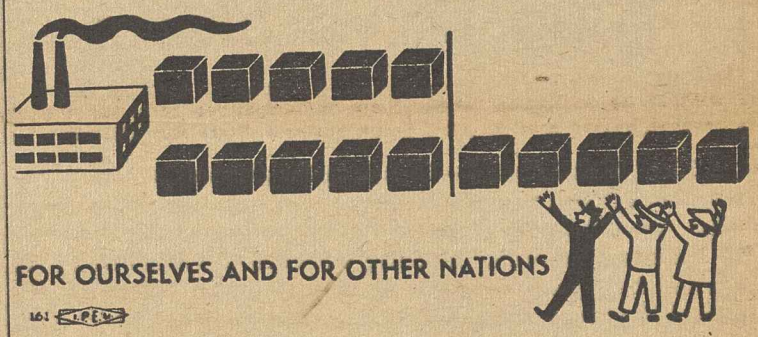
"All of these rights spell security."

If we have the right kind of President and the right kind of Congress (as well as the right kind of State governments), we can attain our objectives.

AFTER THE WAR WE MUST PRODUCE TWICE AS MUCH AS WE PRODUCED BEFORE THE WAR



FOR OURSELVES AND FOR OTHER NATIONS

[illegible] CIO-PAC

We shall attain our objectives, if the people understand the issues clearly, realize the gains made in the last 12 years under the leadership of Franklin Delano Roosevelt and vote him into office, and if we support the President with a Congress which will work not against the President but with him—for the good of all the people.

What You Can Do About It

And so we see that the fear in men's hearts about unemployment after the war is not unfounded. For if we do not plan well and take action now, we may face a more disastrous depression that ever plagued this Nation. And behind it will rise the spectre of another world war.

But we can avoid such disaster. We have the means and we have the determination.

Quite clearly, our entire future now rests with the voters of America. For just as a victory over the Axis powers will be won in the battlefields, full employment and a lasting peace will be won through political action this year.

Urges Local Conversion Plans

Buffalo, Sept. 9.—Hugh Thompson, Regional CIO director and member of the Area Manpower Committee, advocates that the area committee be transformed into the Niagara Frontier Reconversion Committee.

"In Washington," Thompson said, "plans are being formulated for reconversion on a national basis but locally we seem to be sitting idly while valuable time is passing."

"The complaint that war workers are running to peacetime jobs . . . because of their fear of being thrown out of work when Germany quits, could be reasonably taken care of by undertaking a reconversion program locally."

Ask for Million Votes

New York, Sept. 9—"One million votes for Roosevelt and Truman in the elections on November 7th" is the call sent out to the entire Fur and Leather Workers Union by the union's Political Action Committee.

The call said that the "reelection of President Roosevelt is a win-the-war, win-the-peace task for our union" and cited the fact that the entire membership has approved the unanimous decision of the 15th biennial convention endorsing FDR for reelection.

CIO Man Gets Jap

New York, Sept. 9—Staff Sgt. Werner Katz, of Local 64, CIO Fur and Leather Workers, is back in New York City on furlough—living proof that he was not killed in action as the War Dept. once reported.

The first soldier to kill a Jap in the drive on Myitkyna in Burma, Katz said that his comrades did not fall for phoney newspaper stories about labor because "we know that the war material we used in Guadalcanal and Burma was not made by the strikers."

Wounded in action, he was awarded two Presidential citations and the Purple Heart.

GOP Injects Politics In Anti-Bias Fight

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9—Making the FEPC—emergency agency that fights Jim Crow in war jobs—a permanent government outfit has been under consideration in a Senate subcommittee for two weeks now.

Several CIO witnesses have appeared, all urging support for the bill (S 2048) not only "as a matter of simple justice" but also as a practical step toward national unity needed not only during the war but in the postwar period as well.

"Now that military victory is approaching rapidly, we come closer to new problems that will require ever greater national unity for their solution," James B. Carey, CIO secretary-treasurer, told the sub-committee this week.

"The role of our Negro citizens, of citizens of other minorities and origins in the solution of these problems becomes even greater than before."

Keeping Jim Crow and other discriminations beaten back ties in with reconversion, Carey pointed out. CIO's program of full employment, he said, "means exactly what it says—jobs for all, barring none for reasons of race, color or origin."

UAW AGREEMENT

Implementing this, the UAW-CIO announced this week, through its War Policy Division headed by Walter Reuther, that it had signed an agreement with the FEPC to work together on eliminating discrimination in its industries.

The agreement "will speed the elimination of un-American discrimination which is undeniably harmful to the war effort and to the labor movement," R. J. Thomas, UAW head, said in releasing it.

REPUBLICAN DEMAGOGY

The Republicans in Congress, who work well with the polltaxers, have been trying to squeeze every possible demagogic advantage out of the FEPC, while at the same time working to stymie the bill to make it permanent.

Thus, while publicly praising the bill in the Senate, they have let it be pigeonholed in a House committee, though they have much closer to a majority in the House than they have in the Senate.

At the same time, the Republican record on knifing polltax repeal in the Senate, where again they worked with the polltaxers, should not be forgotten.

House Conceals Vote In Wrecking Job On Conversion Bill

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9—Hiding behind a voice vote, which doesn't show in the printed record, the House last week passed the emasculated version of the George bill (S 2051) and immediately started looking forward to a recess.

Then, to clinch matters, the House appointed a conference committee to meet with the Senate that contains only one backer of real reconversion—Rep. Dingell (D. Mich.), taking the rest from the Republicans and the polltaxers.

As the bill passed the House, it killed even the minor concessions to planning and aid to war workers and veterans in the Senate version of the George bill. Thrown out were all references to unemployment and compensation and even to central planning.

MURRAY LISTS POINTS

Writing to the House and Senate conference committee, CIO Pres. Murray urged them to put the George bill clauses on planning and unemployment aid back in the bill as a minimum.

"As a matter of fact, the House version of the bill, if adopted by your committee, would in no way aid war mobilization or reconversion. In our judgment, the House has completely failed to provide for the human side of the demobilization and reconversion program.

"The failure of the House to guarantee national purchasing power through uniform interim compensation benefits during the transition period will, we fear, result in still more unemployment and an inevitable trend toward economic depression."

SOME OF THE VOTES

Here are a few of the voice votes by which the Republican-polltaxer alliance knocked down strengthening amendments to the bill as reported by the Ways and Means Committee:

The Dingell bill, a substitute for the Committee bill which would have provided uniform employment benefits up to $25 a week for war workers and $35 a week for veterans was defeated by 188 to 54.

An amendment providing unemployment benefits at Federal standards with a top of $20 a week for 26 weeks was defeated by 113 to 41.

Another one to provide payment for transportation of workers to new jobs (millions of people have moved to new war industry areas) was defeated by 113 to 43.

And the final vote itself was 162 to 39 for the Committee bill—which means that less than half of the 435 members bothered to vote.

RECESS PLANNED

A Congressional recess is coming up soon, probably before the end of the month. Every Congressman and Senator should be asked how he voted. Ask the House Members how they voted on the Ways and Means Committee bill. Ask the Senators how they voted on the George bill as against their vote on the original Kilgore bill.

Remember what they say when you go to the polling booths on November 7.

Cheap At Twice The Price

Chicago—It costs a worker earning $35 a week just $10.50 to keep an anti-labor Congressman in office, according to Ralph Helstein, general counsel for United Packinghouse Workers (CIO).

Congress let prices go up that much by hamstringing price control. According to Helstein, a worker earning $40 weekly pays $12 to an anti-labor Congressman; at $50 a week, the reactionary's kick-back through letting prices soar is $15; at $60 it is $18.

"Is it worth a buck, brother?" Helstein asked packinghouse workers in an appeal to join the millions of American workers who are tossing in dollar bills to elect a better Congress.

Millions Get Less Than 40c Minimum, U. S. Shows

According to the Wage and Hour Division, which administers the Wage Hour Law, more than 4,000,000 U. S. workers still get less than the 40 cent minimum, because they're outside the law's benefits.

"Actually, there are more workers without its protection than are covered by the act," L. Metcalfe Walling, wage hour administrator, said.

Then, taking a crack at "state's rights" advocates, he added: "Parallel state legislation is needed to provide a similar bulwark against postwar wage slashing, deflation and consequent unemployment.

"Here is an opportunity for those who advocate state, rather than Federal, action to demonstrate the sincerity of their stand."

The Senate Resolution (S Con Res 48), sponsored by Sen. Claude A. Pepper (D. Fla.) would cut across these artificial state's rights" limits that now deny even the 40 cent minimum to millions.

Hearings on the resolution are set to begin toward the end of September in a sub-committee of the Senate Labor Committee, where it should get a sympathetic audition. Meantime, write your Senators to support it now.

Hit N. Y. Milk Trust

New York, Sept. 9—The American Labor Party will introduce legislation authorizing New York State municipalities to enter the milk business, State Executive Secretary Fielding, of the ALP, announced recently.

Reason for the action is the threatened shortage of from 90,000 to 150,000 quarts of milk daily here this fall, which will endanger the health of a million school children, the ALP said.

The ALP blamed the milk monopoly for this threatened shortage.

The ALP will introduce legislation before the State Legislature and New York City Council granting authority to municipalities to enter the milk busiess, thus breaking the grip of the monopoly and assuring a flow of milk at reasonable prices, it was announced.

The proposed measure will assure the farmers additional markets for their milk, the ALP points out. The ALP also indicated that it will seek remedial legislation to curb "disproportionate" diversion of milk to milk by-products.

Anti-Discrimination Drive Planned

New York, Sept. 9—An all-out drive by Greater New York and northern New Jersey branches of the United Federal Workers to keep racial and religious discrimination out of war and post-war employment was launched at a Job Rights Rally held September 3.

Approve PAC

Portland, Ore., Sept. 9—"Labor must participate in politics" was the unanimous opinion of Oregon CIO leaders who met here to map a concerted election drive by all local unions in the State.

ART WORLD FOR FDR:

Jo Davidson, world famous sculptor and P. Jay Sidney of the hit show "Carmen Jones" agree that its FDR and Truman in November. Both are members of the Independent Voters Committee of the Arts and Sciences for FDR.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

As was expected, the House this week passed the emasculated version of the George bill (S 2051) that omits all aid to demobilized war workers and veterans, drops central planning and generally ignores the need for planning of reconversion.

The bill now goes to House and Senate conference, where some minor changes may be made.

House members did not have the courage to hold a rollcall so that their votes would be recorded by name. This makes it a little more difficult to call your Congressman on his vote; but it should be done and the vote should be made an election test.

Congress is planning to recess soon to get down to work on the election campaign. Watch for your Congressman's return and ask him about reconversion.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Reconversion (S 2051)	Fails to aid workers, veterans or industry. Fails to plan reconversion, jobs.	Passed House and Senate, now in conference to iron out differences.	Make your Congressman's vote an election test.
Permanent FEPC (S 2048)	Makes Fair Employment Practice Committee permanent U. S. agency.	Sub-committee of Senate Labor Committee holding hearings.	Write your Senators to support.
Substandard Wages (S Con Res 48)	Sets 65c an hour as wage floor.	Senate Labor Committee; hearings end of September.	Write your Senators to support.
Equal Rights Amendment	Wipes out all labor laws under guise of "equal rights" for women.	Can be called up in Senate any time.	Write your Senators against.

Campaign Talk vs. The Record

It should not be hard to make up your mind how to vote in the coming elections.

There is no need to be confused by campaign oratory. For a record has been written in Congress that draws the line clearly on every domestic issue between the supporters of Pres. Roosevelt's policies, on one hand, and the Dewey-Republicans and anti-FDR Democrats, on the other.

A glance at this record indicates what we can expect from a victory for Dewey and a tory Congress or from a victory for Roosevelt and a progressive Congress.

The Democratic party majority in the past Congress has been an optical illusion. Actually Congress has been dominated by a coalition of Republicans and anti-FDR polltax Democrats, which has outvoted the progressive supporters of Roosevelt on practically every domestic issue.

★ ★ ★

This anti-FDR majority has just defeated proposals for intelligently planned reconversion to full peacetime production and employment.

It has rejected decent compensation for unemployed workers and ex-servicemen, and all other steps to make it a little easier for the human victims of plant shutdowns during reconversion.

★ ★ ★

The Fair Employment Practice Committee, established by Pres. Roosevelt, has done great work in checking job discriminations against Negroes nad other minorities.

But the Dewey-Republicans, who have it in their power to line up with the progressive Democrats for a permanent FEPC, have instead ganged up with the anti-FDR polltax Democrats to sidetrack such action in this Congress.

When the Dewey crowd speak of their platform pledge for a permanent FEPC, refer to the record and ask them why they didn't make it permanent when they could.

★ ★ ★

The polltax could have been abolished by Congress, if the Dewey-Republicans had joined with progressive Democrats to kill the filibuster and pass the anti-polltax bill in the Senate, after it had been passed by the House.

Instead, most of them joined with the polltax Democrats in opposing cloture to end the filibuster.

When Dewey and his crowd talk about the polltax, refer to the record and ask them why they didn't pass the anti-polltax bill when they had the chance.

★ ★ ★

American servicemen have been largely disfranchised by rejection of the federal soldiers' ballot bill demanded by FDR.

When the Deweyites appeal for service votes, check the record and ask why they were so afraid to let all servicemen have a real chance to vote.

The anti-labor Smith-Connally act was passed, over Roosevelt's veto, by the combination of Dewey-Republicans and anti-FDR polltax Democrats.

If the Deweyites now try to make campaign capital out of this unpopular act, refer to the record and ask them why they joined other Roosevelt foes in passing it over his veto.

★ ★ ★

The wartime cost of living has caused widespread discontent. Roosevelt and his administration tried to check it and roll back prices. But all their efforts were obstructed by the Dewey-Republicans ganging up with the anti-FDR Democratic minority.

When the Dewey crowd talk of high living costs, check the record on every price control bill and confront them with their responsibility for runaway prices.

Taxes have been most unfairly levied, placing impossible burdens on the lower-income groups and allowing the wealthy to escape paying their full and fair share.

President Roosevelt and his supporters repeatedly tried to improve the tax system and to base it more on ability to pay. But every time they were defeated by the Dewey-Republicans ganging up with other opponents of FDR's policies.

If the Deweyites talk of taxes, refer to the record and ask them why they established the present unfair tax system.

The record of this Congress on domestic issues clearly shows that if Dewey and his tory supporters are elected we can expect no real planning for jobs for all; no mercy for the unemployed; only lip-service to the right to vote and the rights of minorities; more anti-labor legislation; higher living costs, and soak-the-poor-to-spare-the-rich taxation.

On the other hand, the election of Roosevelt and a progressive Congress, as shown by the record, is the best assurance of real steps for full production and jobs for all, with fair treatment of labor, for ex-servicemen, for minorities and for all the common people.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

ONE little swallow doesn't make a swig. But the anti-Roosevelt press is so desperate for some sign of labor affection it can get drunk at the faintest suggestion that somewhere, somehow, some kind of a labor man is opposed to labor political action.

When one or two individuals at Tooele, Utah, resigned from a local political action committee, this was splashed over the front pages of half the press—although their local unions emphatically repudiated their action.

When a few members of an independent union at Woonsocket, R. I., resigned from a local "political educational committee" of their organization, editorials about the "revolt against PAC" blossomed out all over—despite an Associated Press retraction pointing out that neither the CIO nor the PAC was involved.

★ ★ ★

If all the articles in the anti-labor press advising labor to stay away from politics "in its own best interests," were laid end to end, they'd provide the raw material for everyone who ever sung about wanting "a paper doll that I can call my own."

For the fact of the matter is that the anti-FDR crowd have given up hope of any real backing among the rank and file of labor voters.

So they'll settle for almost anything—like the lady of Naples, who advertised in the personal column of a newspaper, reproaching a lover who had left her and asking him to show some sign at least that he remembered their great love, "if only by blowing your nose when you next pass under my balcony."

★ ★ ★

The tory press is so convinced the labor vote will go to FDR and progressive candidates for Congress, that it directs nearly all its propaganda to reducing this vote, by seeking to discredit PAC and all other efforts to get workers to register and go to the polls.

A recent analysis of the labor press by Fortune magazine confirms such tory fears. Covering all sections of labor—AFL, CIO, railroad and independent unions—it reveals that 86% of the references to Roosevelt in labor publications are favorable, and only six per cent unfavorable.

As to Dewey, only five per cent of the labor references are favorable, and 88% are unfavorable.

The only support Dewey gets, in fact, is in the so-called independent group, which includes company union papers and John L. Lewis's United Mine Workers' Journal.

The reference to Dewey in CIO papers of all kinds are 100% unfavorable, and even in AFL publications he draws no favorable mention whatever.

★ ★ ★

The reasons why labor is, and should be, politically active are also revealed in this Fortune survey.

It shows that the labor press as a whole devotes most of its attention on national affairs to "labor's causes before top federal agencies or Congress" and to "election activity."

Fortune comments: "The No. 1 fact of politics today, so far as U. S. labor is concerned, is that the worker's destiny is controlled in Washington."

As to labor's economic problems, the survey shows the labor press focusing 40% of its complaints on "groups and individuals in Congress," and 14% on "Congress as a whole or its committee," with smaller percentages of complaint directed against government agencies and four per cent against organized employers.

While the CIO press is most active in promoting political action, "the idea is being promoted in all of the labor press," the survey notes. Substantial space is devoted to political action in AFL and independent, as well as CIO papers.

All such evidence of the overwhelming preponderance of pro-FDR and progressive sentiment in all labor groups should not, however, lead to over-confidence about the election results.

For all surveys indicate that the older, richer, more conservative stay-at-home groups which tend to support Dewey are much more likely to cast a full vote than are the lower-income and labor folks (many of them moved from their homes by war work) and the servicemen, who chiefly favor Roosevelt.

A recent Gallup poll shows a majority for Dewey among those who say they are "absolutely certain" to vote, while those who are only "fairly certain" they will vote or do not plan to vote at all favor Roosevelt by an overwhelming majority.

That's why more and more labor political activity to get out the vote is so urgently necessary in this election campaign.

Spanish Aid Maquis In France

Havana, Sept. 9 (ALN) — More than 40,000 Spanish guerrilleros fought with the Maquis for the liberation of France, the British Broadcasting Company revealed this week in reporting a meeting of celebration in Paris on August 30. The broadcast was monitored here by the newspaper Hoy.

Speakers, including Izose Ensena, a representative of the Spanish underground Junta Supreme Union Nacional, paid tribute to the heroism of the partisans in the fight for the liberation of France and Spain.

British Ask Labor Meeting

London, Sept. 9 (ALN)—Following urgent requests from many countries that the opening of the world labor conference be expedited, the general council of the British Trades Union Congress is expected to consider the question at a special meeting here this week.

Declaring that the voice of labor "must not be silenced by further delay," Bryn Roberts, secretary of the National Union of Public Employes, asserted today that the difficulties which caused postponement of the conference last June "no longer obtain."

Trade union leaders in many countries, Roberts said, "have their traveling bags packed and are awaiting the signal from the British TUC."

Emphasizing the urgency of the conference, Roberts said: "As the victorious armies are racing to their final objectives, it is imperative that representatives of the trade union movement throughout the world get together to determine international policy and implementation in respect to the peace settlement and economic and social post-war plans of the United Nations.

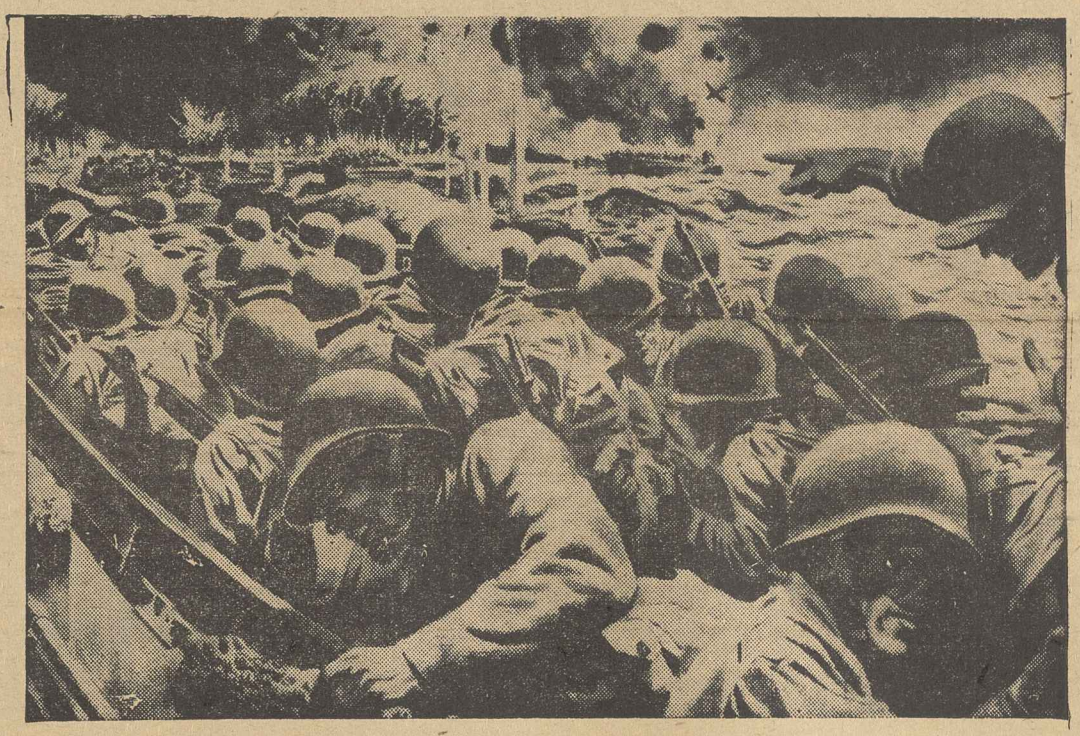
"Only through a world trade union conference can the voice of millions of trade unionists be heard."

Biddle Asked To Indict 'America 1st'

Washington, Sept. 9—Gerald L. K. Smith's "America First" should be investigated and indicted for sedition, Attorney-General Francis Biddle was told this week by Richard T. Frankensteen, UAW vice-president.

"'America' First' can't be laughed off," Frankensteen said. "A deliberate attempt in time of war to spread the most vicious propaganda lies of the nation's enemies is something other than funny."

Freedom of speech—which Biddle worries about a lot—must be upheld, he was reminded, "but words of sedition—words intended to cost the lives of our brothers in the armed forces—cannot be so protected."



Will they invade your sleep tonight?

The bloodiest, costliest hours of the war are upon us.

And they expect us to wage the same kind of fight with our dollars!

You won't sleep well tonight—if you let them down. The only way to rest easy is to do your duty to the full.

Buy War Bonds. More than you ever bought before. Enough so that you can look every returning soldier in the eye and say: "I did my share!"

Buy your Invasion Bonds today!

And Here Are 5 More Reasons For Buying Extra War Bonds!

1. War Bonds are the best, the safest investment in the world!
2. War Bonds return you $4 for every 3 in 10 years.
3. War Bonds help keep prices down.
4. War Bonds will help win the Peace by increasing purchasing power after the war.
5. War Bonds mean education for your children, security for you, funds for retirement.

Veterans And Workers—One Team Together For Unity

By Albert J. Fitzgerald
President, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers

When organized labor in America says it is deeply concerned with the present and future security of our war veterans it is simply saying that we are all vitally concerned with the welfare of our husbands, brothers, sons and friends.

Our men and women in the armed forces are, for the most part, working men and women. They come from the ranks of workers and farmers, and their friends and families on the home front are, for the most part, workers in one sphere or another. Therefore, those who plot to destroy national unity by pitting veterans against civilians will never succeed.

When organized labor speaks out for full employment, it speaks out for jobs for all ex-servicemen as well as all people able and willing to work.

SECURITY FOR ALL

The veterans themseves have indicated that they do not want to be considered as a special section of the population. They realize that security and full employment for them, if it is to be permanent, depends on security and employment for all.

Full employment can be achieved —our war economy has proven this —but it is a job which requires the combined and earnest efforts of all sections of the population—veterans, labor, business, government, farmers and all other groups.

Proof of labor's sincere desire to aid veterans is found in the CIO Political Action Committee program for 1944, which sponsors a specific platform of action to meet the special problems facing returning service men and women. The program includes:

CIO PROGRAM

1. Hospitalization for the wounded and disabled, with physical and occupation therapy.

2. Government-paid tuition and subsistence for the completion of education interrupted by the war, and for advanced or vocational training for those who desire it.

3. Adequate demobilization pay.

4. Loans for the improvement or purchase of homes, farms or businesses without interest for the first five years.

5. Special provision to expedite the placement of veterans in jobs for which they are qualified.

6. Federal unemployment benefits to begin four weeks after demobilization, protection to continue for a period up to two years.

When the serviceman returns, he will find that the end of the shooting has not ended the fight. His struggle for security will continue on the political front until those agents of reaction who seek to block the road of progress are defeated.

The soldier learns in his military training, as he did in his union, the extreme value of organization. Individually, he can do little. Working together with his fellow soldiers or fellow citizens, he can do a great deal.

On the political action road, as paved by the CIO-PAC, lies assurance that the provisions won in the "GI Bill of Rights" will be implemented. It is only by political action that the bill may be strengthened to provide for increased benefits for veterans and their dependents.

Along that same political action road lies the enactment of such liberal reconversion legislation as proposed by Senator Kilgore, which would give security to all people in the trying period of reconversion.

The Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill, which provides health security for the American people, is another example of the kind of legislation which is needed but which can only be won by a people who are united for political action.

JOB GUARANTEES

Already our unions are giving serious thought to implementing existing legislation so that labor can guarantee returning veterans decent jobs. The United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, representing 700,000 men and women in America, has launched a campaign to guarantee by contract that all returning veterans, including those disabled in war, will receive their former rate of pay plus any general accrued increase when they return to their jobs.

This means that if a veteran is placed in a lower-rated job because of a physical disability, he will still be entitled to no less than his former earnings plus any general increases that have been given during the time he served in the armed forces.

This is but one example of how seriously American labor is taking its responsibility to those who have served in the armed forces.

Working together, civilian and ex-serviceman can solve the many serious problems that threaten the security of our nation.

Unity of the American people and of the United Nations is helping us batter the fascist enemy and achieve victory.

This same unity, nation-wide and world-wide, can build a peace in which the security promised by President Roosevelt in his historic Bill of Economic Rights can be achieved.

USA-CIO Upsets 'Labor-License' Law In Georgia Test

By LEE PRESSMAN
General Counsel, CIO

Another attempt by anti-union forces to deprive workers of their right to organize into labor unions of their own choosing has been defeated by the United Steelworkers of America, with the upsetting of a 'labor-license' ordinance in Georgia.

Sponsored undoubtedly by the Christian Americans organization which succeeded in having enacted in several states about a year and a half ago anti-labor measures now being tested in the courts, ordinances have been adopted recently by a number of municipalities in Georgia and Arkansas designed to prevent union organization.

These new ordinances require any labor organizer to obtain a license, the issuance of which is at the discretion of the local officials, and for which the fee is several thousand dollars. Further, only residents of the particular locality can obtain such a license.

The United Steelworkers of America has been engaged in an organizing campaign at the plant of the Reynolds Corporation in Milledgville, Georgia. In an attempt to prevent the successful outcome of this campaign, the city of Milledgeville enacted the ordinance requiring licensing of labor organizers.

R. E. Starnes, a representative of the United Steelworkers of America who is in charge of the organizing campaign, continued to solicit employes of the Reynolds plant into the union without obtaining the license or paying the fee of $5,000. He was arrested and charged with violating the ordinance and fined accordingly.

The proceeding afforded the union an opportunity to test the ordinance on the ground that it clearly abridged the constitutional right of freedom of speech as guaranteed in recent decisions of the United States Supreme Court.

A local judge in Georgia has recently dismissed the case against Starnes on the ground that the ordinance clearly was unconstitutional.

This decision should put a halt to the enactment of similar ordinances and should definitely establish that there simply is no way in which employes can be denied their constitutional and federal rights to organize into labor unions of their own choosing, free from interference of employers or any public officials.

USSR, China Greet CIO

Washington, Sept. 9 — Delayed Labor Day greetings from the unions of the USSR and of China arrived by wireless this week addressed to President Murray.

"American workers will celebrate this year their national holiday in the midst of the great offensive of the gallant armies of the USSR, the U. S. A. and Great Britain," said the Soviet cable, signed by V. Kuznetzov, president of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions.

"The trade unions of democratic countries have to solve important problems concerning the liquidation of the results of the war and the establishment of close friendship between the nations on the basis of understanding and joint efforts of the workers of all countries."

"By this time Allied victory is in sight," the Chinese Association of Labor said. "We believe you will continue to give us your hand in totally pushing the aggressor out of China and building a progressive world for mankind."

Register Voters No. 1 Job Of CIO Women

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Womens Auxiliaries

All the talk about two months to November 7, 60 more days to get out the vote, is a little misleading. It's later than you think.

Registration closes in most states several weeks before No-vember 7—and people who don't register can't vote. The deadline in California is September 30, in Minnesota, October 7, in Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, October 9, in Massachusetts and Michigan, October 18.

In England and Australia people don't face this registration problem. The government there takes care of it. In England they go house to house before a general election, registering everyone who is eligible. In Australia voters are registered when they reach the age of 21 and anyone who doesn't use his vote is fined two pounds—eight dollars in our money.

NOT SO EASY HERE

We don't make democracy so easy here. In some places it is possible to have deputy registrars appointed who can go to people's homes or to the plants, but in most places we have to persuade people to make a special trip to the county clerk's office or to a registration booth to sign up to use their ballot.

Our CIO Political Action Committee has been hammering away on the urgency of the registration drive. But we can't leave the tremendous job of getting the eligible voters among 135,000,000 people registered to a committee. Don't be lulled into a false security by columnists like Mark Sullivan, who write constantly about the super-efficiency and effectiveness of the CIO political action organization at the local level.

We can be proud of the work that has been done, but at the same time unless each one of us is doing our share of the work in our union and our neighborhood we have no right to feel that all is well.

AUXILIARIES HELP

The women's auxiliaries of our unions can make a tremendous contribution to this election work. Like the UE auxiliary in Hopkins, Minn., they can undertake to visit every house in their community.

And remember, one visit is not enough. People may promise to register and forget. You can go to the registered voters' lists and find out whether they really did register, and if not, you can call again.

If the registration hours are inconvenient for the housewife, perhaps you can help by staying with the baby. Maybe one of your members has a little extra gas which she can use to take carloads to the registration point.

Every CIO auxiliary has been urged to make political action the one big activity from now until November. The job is not only to get every member and her family registered and alive to the importance of November 7, but also to get every member out ringing doorbells in her neighborhood.

Don't wait to be asked to help. Don't stand on ceremony. The active doorbell ringing help of every union and auxiliary member is needed to insure the reelection of President Roosevelt and a Congress which will support his program of guaranteed peace in the world and jobs and security for our people.

Negro Women's Vote Decisive, PAC Leader Says

New York, Sept. 9—"Negro women may play a decisive role in the November elections," said Mrs. Verda Barnes, CIO Political Action Committee Women's Division director, here this week.

"With many of the men overseas and some of these finding it difficult to exercise their constitutional right to vote, the importance of the women's vote is greater this year than ever before." She said before the war there were 10 per cent more registered Negro women voters than men.

The PAC leader said that Negro women, "serving in the Women's Army Corps, working in war industries and government agencies," are "politically wide-awake."

"They are political action-minded," she stated, "because they realize the all-important part they can play in assuring that their loved ones return from the war to a country of equal opportunity and full employment."

"Women have a great stake in the subject of full employment after the war," Mrs. Barnes declared. "Whether they are the bread-winners or not, they will suffer if there are not jobs for all. It is to their interest to see that the Fair Employment Practice Committee, established by President Roosevelt, continues as a vital force in American life—providing fair play for Negro men and women workers."

Anna Mason, PAC Women's Division field representative, declared, "We, as Negroes, must exercise our full rights as citizens in the intelligent use of our right to vote. We believe each man and woman owes it to himself and family, his race, his country and Divine Creator to become politically active to preserve the rights of the common man."

Clothing to Refugees

New York, Sept. 9—A cargo of 11,782 pounds of new and used clothing was shipped last week to El Shatt, Egypt, where approximately 25,000 Yugoslav refugees have found refuge from Nazi brutality, the United Yugoslav Relief Fund announced.

Win In Nebraska

URWA Rep. Frederick W. Knight reports that the CIO Rubber Workers were victorious in beating the AFL in an election at the Goodyear Plant in Lincoln, Nebraska. This is the first CIO local in a town of over 90,000 population. CIO Reg. Dir. Frank Cronin rendered support and assistance in this drive.

CIO Transport Workers were victorious in the election held among the employes of the Third Avenue Bus Line in New York City by a vote of 2100 for CIO as against 700 for District 50.

The writer addressed the Fifth Convention of the United Office and Professional Workers of America, meeting in Philadelphia this week. It was a splendid gathering and the CIO pledged its support to the white collar union's organizational efforts and urged its members to build the CIO Political Action Committee to reelect President Franklin D. Roosevelt, Harry S. Truman as Vice-President and a progressive Congress.

The UOPWA delegates represented insurance, financial, publishing, social service, industrial office and other white collar employes in 33 states.

Ask Italian Lend-Lease

London, Sept. 9 (ALN)—Discussing Italian problems in an interview with Il Popolo, organ of the Christian Democratic Party, George Baldanzi, vice-president of the Textile Workers Union who is now visiting Italy as CIO representative, declared this week: "This war which has cost so many millions of human lives will have been useless unless it brings about democracy and liberty for all countries of the world."

Baldanzi told the Italian people that the CIO fully supports lend-lease shipments to Italy, and stated that "petitions with thousands of signatures have been collected and presented to the proper authorities."

California All-Out For Political Action

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 9—Plans for organizing, political action and post-war reconversion were carried back to virtually every CIO union in the state of California, following the 7th annual convention of the California CIO Council held here recently.

More than 500 delegates attended the meetings, which re-corded the steady growth of CIO in the state by increasing the size of its executive board by two, and adopting a full, thorough-going program to chart the course of the organization for the coming year.

Among the outstanding guests who addressed the convention were Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida, who sounded the opening gun of the Democratic Party election campaign for California, and James B. Carey, Sec.-Treas. of the National CIO.

Both speakers aroused enthusiastic response from the delegates when they called for the re-election of President Franklin D. Roosevelt and pro-administration Congress on Nov. 7.

To PAC Chairman Sidney Hillman went a special commendation unanimously approved by the leaders and officials assembled.

Pledging themselves to work harder than ever to help achieve the objective of the PAC, the California unionists said:

"Starting from scratch, Sidney Hillman has directed and led the political action program from infancy to maturity, in time to register as a major force for the re-election of President Roosevelt and the election of a worthy congress to cooperate with the President.

"The leadership that Sidney Hillman is giving millions of CIO members and millions of patriotic Americans outside the CIO is fundamentally democratic and completely in accord with the best traditions of American political life."

Elect FDR, Stand By No-Strike Pledge Thomas Urges UAW

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Sept. 9—President Roosevelt's re-election and the continued observance of labor's no-strike pledge are the two major responsibilities of the CIO United Automobile Workers, UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas said in his report to the union's annual convention which opens here Monday, September 11.

Labeling the candidacy of Gov. Dewey as "preposterous" from the point of view of workers, Thomas called upon the UAW-CIO membership "to leave no stone unturned in the fight for the reelection of Pres. Roosevelt."

NO STRIKE PLEDGE

In a strong plea for the continuance of the no-strike pledge, Thomas expressed the belief that the union could not survive the public and legislative attacks which would follow repudiation of the pledge.

"Every labor-hater in and out of Congress would whet his knife and go to work on the labor movement to dismember and destroy it," he said.

The report showed that during the year ending June, 1944, the UAW's membership had been increased by 300,000 workers, with the average monthly paid-up membership for that period reaching 1,051,455.

More than 1,000 plants have been covered by UAW contracts since 1940, when the union had 636 plants under agreement.

In addition to the million UAW members working in arms plants, Thomas reported that a quarter of a million others are serving in the armed forces.

He's Worried

They say Dewey is so worried about foreign affairs that he spends night after night pacing up and down under the bed.

NICE BACKGROUND for Faye Emerson is the barracks background, if anybody's interested in backgrounds. She had so many requests from GI's to have her picture as decoration for their barracks that she decided to have the 100 per cent GI background.

Analyze Anti-CIO Radio

Washington, Sept. 9—Labor is not getting a fair deal on the radio, if the broadcasts of Fulton Lewis, Jr., are taken as a sample.

A careful analysis of this commentator's scripts made by the CIO United Automobile Workers and presented at a hearing before the Federal Communications Commission showed that out of 37 broadcasts dealing with labor, 21 or 57 percent were unfavorable.

The analysis showed that in May, June and July this year, more than a third of the Lewis broadcasts dealt with labor, with the CIO Political Action Committee and the Montgomery Ward case the most frequently discussed subjects.

Of the 55 paragraphs Lewis devoted to the PAC, 57 percent were unfavorable. The record shows that on 15 different broadcasts he stated that the PAC is illegal, and that on 11 broadcasts he called the seizure of Montgomery Ward by the government illegal and a threat to all business enterprise.

His favorite trick, the UAW shows, is to attribute the opinions he gives to somebody else, the great majority of them unfriendly to labor.

Unions Bringing 'New South'

Washington, Sept. 9—Unions have given Southern workers a greater sense of belonging to the nation, reports Lucy Mason, CIO public relations representative in the South.

Writing in the Intercollegian, Miss Mason says that today there are hundreds of thousands of CIO members in the South and some of the largest industrial concerns have signed CIO contracts.

"Six years ago," she points out, "it was practically impossible for a union representative to appear on a college campus, before a civic association or ministerial union. Today, invitations for unon speakers in colleges are a common occurrence.

"In a number of cities ministers' associations have listened with sympathetic interest, discovering that the church and labor movement have much in common."

CIO Organizer Dies In Service

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 9—Lieut. Bernard Borah, former Southern director for the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers, died in the Army Hospital at Kirtland Field, Albuquerque, N. M., Aug. 29, after an operation for the removal of part of a thyroid gland. His wife, Mae Borah, was with him when he died.

News of Lieut. Borah's death was received here by Lucy Mason, CIO public relations representive in the South, through the Red Cross.

After his graduation from the University of Tennessee, Borah went to work in the research department of the Tennessee Valley Authority, where he joined the United Office & Professional Workers and became an active leader in the union.

Bricker Blunder Backfires

Columbus, Sept. 9—Gov. "Honest" John Bricker is going to try to erase his "black lead pencil blunder" after all.

The Ohio law requires that ballots be marked with a black lead pencil.

Bricker, running mate of Dewey, was requested by the Ohio State CIO Council to ask the State Legislature, which is meeting this month anyway, to change the law so that servicemen would not have to search the ruins of France and the jungles of Burma for black lead pencils.

Without deigning to reply directly to the CIO Council, "Honest" John told the press that he thought the servicemen's voting law was "adequate" and that he did not intend to do anything about the black lead pencil requirement.

The council sent an indignant letter to CIO unions throughout the State. The letter was printed in Columbus newspapers and the council contacted other organizations which poured protests into Bricker's office.

"Honest" John announced a change of mind.

In Memoriam

Washington, Sept. 9—Nathan E. Cowan, CIO legislative director, has received the U. S. War Dept's certificate acknowledging the supreme sacrifice for freedom paid by his son, Master Sergeant James K. Cowan, killed in action in the Middle Eastern Area last September 15.

Signed by President Roosevelt, the citation reads: "He stands in the unbroken line of patriots who have dared to die that freedom might live and grow and increase its blessings.

"Freedom lives, and through it, he lives—in a way that humbles the undertakings of men." men."

NY CIO Blasts Dewey 'Insults'

SARATOGA SPRINGS, Sept. 9—Thomas E. Dewey's attempt to frighten American labor from participation in the political life of the nation was rebuffed at the sixth annual convention of the New York State CIO held here, and his record as governor assailed by the 1,000 delegates present who expressed their determination to elect Roosevelt, Truman and a progressive Congress.

A message from Dewey construed as an attack upon the CIO Political Action Committee was booed by the delegates, while U. S. Senator Robert F. Wagner, convention speaker, denounced as an impertinence the inference in Dewey's message that, by reelecting Roosevelt, labor would be going back to the dole.

"No thoughtful American could suggest that we go back to the dole of the Hoover period," Senator Wagner said. "We abolished that when Roosevelt took hold as President and we will not permit it to return. Our working people are first and foremost interested in the welfare of their country."

"No greater insult could be cast upon the worker than to suggest that his vote can be delivered to anyone. I know the American worker — my father was one of them. The worker votes as his conscience dictates."

Attacks upon Gov. Dewey and his record came from other quarters during the course of the convention. Sidney Hillman, chairman of CIO Political Action Committee, criticized Dewey's double-talk on foreign policy, as well as his two years in office as governor of the Empire state.

DEWEY'S MINUS RECORD

Hillman pointed out that Dewey has defaulted on appropriate health legislation, anti-discrimination legislation, adequate pay for teachers and a host of other social welfare issues.

Louis Hollander, president of the New York State CIO, not only justified labor's political activities in outlining how CIO Political Action came into existence but also attacked Dewey for his presumption in lecturing a labor convention. Hollander declared:

"When Gov. Dewey questions, directly or indirectly, the propriety of labor's political activities, we sharply disagree with his viewpoint, as we do all who question labor's legitimate aspiration in the political life of our nation.

"Our answer to those 'friends of labor who are concerned about labor's future' is that we have full confidence in the American people and that, therefore, we are certain that President Roosevelt, Senator Truman and all the progressive candidates supported by CIO-PAC will be elected in November.

"They will be elected because the American people want peace in the world and full employment at home and abroad and that is why our candidates will be triumphant in November."

CIO's 'White Collars' Pass 55,000 Mark; All-Out For FDR

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 9—Hundreds of thousands of white collar workers in America today don't earn enough to feed, clothe and house themselves decently, Pres. Lewis Merrill said in his opening speech at the fifth convention of the United Office & Professional Workers here this week.

Prospects for a lasting and durable peace depend upon the nation's ability to meet and solve such internal problems as this, the UOPWA president told the delegates to the CIO's white collar union which represents more than 55,000 employes in the offices of insurance, publishing, social service, and industrial concerns.

"It did not require war to prove to the American people that our national well-being depends on men and women in offices as well as those in factories and on farms," President Roosevelt said in his message to the convention.

"Every effort must be made to strengthen national unity for a speedy victory, a durable peace, full production and full employment.

Willkie's message said that the well-being of America's salaried workers "serves as a barometer to show what is happening in our country," because these workers represent "a cross-section of our population economically, politically and socially."

On the second day of the convention, delegates unanimously went on record for the election of the Roosevelt-Truman ticket and for the election of other political candidates who support the Administration's program.

Under the leadership of Roosevelt, it added, and through the "Economic Bill of Rights he promulgated, the office and professional workers of our country can secure the fullest opportunity for themselves and find solutions to their economic problems in harmony with the entire nation."

Haywood, in his address to the delegates, pledged support to the white collar union's organizational efforts and urged its members to strengthen the CIO's Political Action Committee, and to regard the attacks of the vested interests against the PAC as "a badge of honor."

NMU Pres. Curran, who spoke to the convention in a Labor Day broadcast, said that the lasting peace the American people want is possible only in a world of security and plenty, with "jobs for every man and woman who wants to work."

The failure of Congress to put into effect the economic stabilization program has endangered the health and efficiency of the white collar workers, it asserted, and has compelled them to live on pre-war salaries in a perlod of rapidly rising living costs.

It called for at least a 35 percent general increase and for the encouragement of industry-wide classification systems providing uniform pay for work in the same category, particularly in banking, insurance and social service.

'Ring Those Doorbells'

Chicago, Sept. 16—Importance of doorbell ringing to get people registered to vote was stressed by Raymond S. McKeough, regional director of the CIO Political Action Committee, at a meeting here of more than 400 ward committeemen and supervisors.

McKeough was wildly applauded when he asked the audience to "take off their coats and go to work for the election of Roosevelt and a progressive Congress."

The following political action representatives of CIO unions also attended the meeting: Sam Levin and William Rocco, Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Harry Mays and Paul Russo, Auto Workers; Seymour Siporin, Farm Equipment Workers; Herbert March, Packinghouse Workers; Frank Annunzio, United Steelworkers, and Ted Gianopoulos, United Electrical Workers.

Unions Reborn

London, Sept. 16—Holland's trade unions will begin to function again immediately after the system instituted by the Germans to control labor has been liquidated, the Netherlands Government in London announced on the eve of its return to its liberated country. Premier Pieter S. Gerbrandy stated that "this has been laid down by law."

Dutch underground forces, he said, are now collaborating with the allied offensive in Holland under the supreme command of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

ONE REASON why we need to pass that Senate resolution for a 65 cents an hour floor on wages (S. Con. Res. 48) is this woman worker in a tomato cannery at Elwood, Ind. CIO-PAC To Watch Radio Commentators

NEW YORW, Sept. 16—Labor will be kept informed of what the radio networks and local stations are saying right around the clock under a system announced this week by the CIO Political Action Committee's radio division.

Network commentators and newscasters as well as local news programs in PAC's 14 regional areas will be checked for their coverage of labor news and developments under a national radio monitoring system, says PAC Assistant Director C. B. Baldwin.

The networks will be monitored from PAC's national headquarters by Miss Leila Sussman, content analysis expert, while regional directors will set up monitoring committees. Forms instructing labor's monitors how to judge programs will be sent to the directors, but all analysis will be done by Miss Sussman, Badwin said.

This is the PAC radio division's latest endeavor to let labor know that it has certain rights on the air. At a recent hearing before the Federal Communications Commission it was revealed that some stations have been censoring labor programs in violation of the FCC ruling that both sides in a controversial issue must receive equal time on the air.

Tells Clergy Of CIO Program

Washington, Sept. 16—Why labor insists on planning for reconversion is explained by Kermit Eby, assistant director, CIO Dept. of research and education, in an article entitled "Jobs for All" in a recent issue of the undenominational religious weekly, "The Christian Century."

Eby tells of the threat of mass unemployment and points out the tremendous stake of the government in war plants and in war industry investments.

His article declares that institutional advertisements proclaim the many improvements to be available after the war without telling where the money is coming from to buy them.

Tobin To Work With All For FDR

New York, Sept. 16—His intention to cooperate with CIO Political Action Committee for the reelection of Pres. Roosevelt was announced this week by Pres. Daniel J. Tobin of the Teamsters Union, largest AFL union, after his acceptance of the chairmanship of the labor division of the Democratic national campaign committee.

"I'll work with every group that has the reelection of Pres. Roosevelt as its objective," Tobin said. "I've had no disagreements with any branch of labor. My job is to organize the workers and there will be no confusion. I have always been quite friendly with the leaders of the CIO.

"We will emphasize the fact that in our judgment it is more necessary to elect Mr. Roosevelt at this particular time than at any other previous time. We'll appeal to all workers, male and female, organized and unorganized."

1,000,000 Strong UAW-CIO All Out For FDR, Truman

By LEN DE CAUX

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Sept. 16—Meeting in the home town of Senator Vandenberg, in the native state of Thomas Dewey, America's No. 1 union, the million-strong CIO United Auto Workers, gave no honor, aid or comfort to these and other foes of Pres. Roosevelt and labor political action.

Agitated by looming cutbacks by frozen wages and by the provocations of employers who take advantage of their no-strike pledge, the 2300 delegates were in a scrappy mood. They were ready to argue about nearly everything—except the need for more political activity and for the re-election of FDR, which won their complete and unanimous support.

Referring to Dewey as "the candidate of big business," Pres. R. J. Thomas advised against "changing a horse for a pony in the middle of a stream." But more rollicking and songful delegates made the welkin ring all over town with a famous song about his being "a horsethief, who shall be removed."

Vandenberg was referred to by Secretary of Interior Ickes as one of the "genuine antiques" for which Grand Rapids is famous. And even Republican Mayor George W. Welsh called for more CIO political action to eliminate the tory members of Congress from his territory.

The delegates were also agreed that the chief target of their militancy should be Hitler and Hirohito. Determined efforts of a minority to rescind the union's no strike pledge were defeated two to one in a roll call vote.

Two days were spent in debating and voting down a series of alternative formulations of the unions position on the burning no-strike issue, until finally a brief resolution reaffirming the no-strike pledge for the duration of the war won convention approval.

It was then decided, by roll call vote, to hold a referendum of the entire membership 90 days following the convention, so every member may have a say on the conventions action.

Previous factional lines became somewhat scrambled on the major issues dividing the convention—the no-strike pledge, the question of creating a third vice-presidency, and the vice-presidential candidacy of Richard T. Leonard.

While caucusing and controversy were as vigorous as ever, there appeared to be less personal bitterness, more disposition to divide on issues and programs rather than on hard-and-fast factional lines, and increasing emphasis on the basic unity of progressive purpose of this most successful of labor unions.

300,000 NEW MEMBERS

Pres. Thomas and Sec.-Treas. George F. Addes were able to report an influx of 300,000 new members in a year, an average monthly dues-paying membership of 1,051,455, union contracts with 1,671 plants, and nearly a million-dollar increase in union assets to a total of $2,512,000.

The drive to rescind the no-strike pledge was spectacularly advertised, with banners, signs, stickers, leaflets and convention-floor demonstrations—but proved to have more bark than bite to it.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray devoted much of his convention address to warning against such action, as dangerous to the war effort and contrary to national CIO policy.

"Let us not become overly complacent about the war," he said. "It is not won, it is not over. The European phase of the war is not over. God only knows how many lives may yet be lost before Germany is finally defeated. There are still grueling fights ahead.

"You have made a commitment to every boy and every girl in the armed services—to every man, woman and child in your own country. I hope you will maintain it for your own good and for the good of your country."

Three reports on the no-strike pledge were presented to the convention:

(1) A majority report reaffirming the no-strike pledge for the duration of the war, and calling for consultation with the national CIO and other labor bodies who joined in the pledge, in regard to further policy following the defeat of Germany.

(2) A minority report reaffirming the no-strike pledge, but making it not binding in civilian production after Germany's defeat, and condemning proposals to extend it in time of peace.

(3) A so-called "super-minority" report rescinding the no-strike pledge by convention action and calling for a subsequent referendum on the subject.

The majority report was supported by Thomas, Addes, Vice-Pres. Richard Frankensteen and Richard Leonard. Vice-Pres. Walter Reuther advocated the minority report.

The "super-minority" report to rescind the no-strike pledge was defeated by a roll call vote of 3750 to 6617. The minority report to end the no-strike pledge in civilian production was then defeated by a standing vote which appeared to be about two to one.

The majority report then came up only to be defeated also in a closely contested roll call vote of 4,988 to 5,232.

The delegates left no doubt of their majority support for continuing the no-strike pledge, however, by finally adopting a brief resolution declaring that the convention "reaffirms for the duration of the war our no-strike pledge to the commander-in-chief of our armed forces and to our country."

The movers of the resolution interpreted "duration of the war" to mean until both Germany and Japan are finally defeated.

The conventions action will be submitted to a mail referendum of the membership 90 days following convention adjournment, with stipulations that international officers and represetatives may not use union money or facilities to propagate their position on the issue.

The proposal for an additional vice president was advocated by Pres. Thomas, who in his opening speech said he would like to see Leonard put in that job. No decision on this proposed change had been made when the CIO News went to press, however, and election of officers still remained to be held.

One of the most debated convention actions related to seniority and re-employment rights of returning servicemen. The resolution adopted criticized Maj.-Gen. Hershey, Director of Selective Service, for "distorting the meaning of the Selective Service Act," by declaring that non-veterans with greater seniority may be discharged to make room for returning veterans.

The resolution declared that this would "completely destroy the seniority system," thus harming the interests of veterans as well as non-veterans, and that in any case the present law and this interpretation give insufficient job protection to veterans.

The convention therefore called for full seniority rights for all veterans, including in accumulated seniority the period of service in the armed forces, and applying also to "probationary" and "temporary" employes; seniority credit for service in the armed forces for veterans not employed at the time of entering service, and other additional job protections for veterans.

Convention approval was voted to the new system of "union counselors" developed by the UAW. These union counselors are specially trained union representatives whose duties consist in advising and helping workers in regard to countless problems arising outside the shop—such as housing, child care, medical care, rationing, legal aid and other personal and family problems.

World labor unity received special attention in a resolution calling for the earliest possible convening of an international labor conference, and close contacts with auto and aircraft unions in the various United Nations.

A number of servicemen returned from the fighting fronts gave the delegates vivid pictures of battle conditions. Among them was Sergeant Meyer Bernstein, former researcher of the United Steelworkers, who served at Guadalcanal and the Solomons.

Little Steel To Go Murray Tells UAW

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Sept. 16—Upward revision of the Little Steel formula was confidently predicted by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, in a speech to the UAW-CIO convention, in which he also presented the outlines of an over-all CIO post-war planning program.

Referring to a forthcoming report of the War Labor Board panel on the Steelworkers wage case, which he said would recognize the need for revision of the wage-freeze formula, Murray declared:

"I am just as sure as I am living that the Little Steel formula is going to be revised. It has to be revised in the interest of our country and all its people."

Noting that there is some question whether the WLB has the power to make necessary changes without the sanctions of President Roosevelt, Murray said the problem would be presented in due course to the President.

He urged "tolerance and patience" on the part of labor, while public hearings by the WLB on the whole question of wage stabilization are under way, saying they should be concluded some time before the end of September.

Turning to reconversion and postwar problems, Murray called for higher purchasing power as the only basis for national prosperity. He urged prompt increases in wage rates, no reduction in take-home pay as overtime is eliminated, annual wage guarantees, dismissal pay, paid vacations, paid insurance, veterans funds and the elimination of geographical differentials.

A National Production Council should be set up, the CIO President declared, linked with the WPB and other agencies responsible for reconversion and composed of representatives of labor, industry, agriculture and government. Industry councils should also be created in the basic industries, composed of labor, management and government representatives.

The aircraft industry must be kept alive and developed, Murray said, with not less than 6,000 airports built suitable for personally owned planes and a vast network of airlines and ports.

Murray also called for vast housing developments, with at least 1,500,000 new homes built each year for 10 years and "teamwork between private and public initiative in the housing field.

Murray stressed expansion of foreign trade as one of the first necessities for postwar employment and prosperity, pointing out that such trade is "a two-way proposition" and that "in the last analysis we cannot be paid for exports except by imports."

Murray Scores Big Shot Politicking

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Sept. 16—Philip Murray got his dander up about tory press attacks on CIO political action, when he spoke to the UAW convention. These critics think political action is all right for wealthy interests, he said, but not for working people.

"Oh, it's all right for Hearst to do it," Murray declared. "It's all right for the Scripps-Howard newspapers to do it. It's all right for these great big newspaper corporations to spend money and use their space to propagate their own particular brand of politics.

O. K. FOR HEARST

"It's all right for them to convert those sheets into veritable scandal sheets, disseminating vicious lies designed to destroy labor organization, designed to undermine the faith of the American people in the constructive work of the labor movement, which is attempting for the first time to educate the people on questions of major moment.

Murray referred to a news item in the Chicago Tribune, reporting that "a group of 50 businessmen in a little Congressional district in Cook county had collected $50,000 within 12 hours to defeat a candidate and elect their own candidate."

WLB Sets Hearings On Little Steel

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—Here's the schedule of WLB hearings at which the full Board will take up the case for breaking the Little Steel formula, based on the arguments of the United Steelworkers before the special steel panel during the past six months.

Sept. 27 and 28 the Board will hold public hearings on the report of the steel panel. The union will comment on all the issues in the report at that time.

Following these hearings, there will be further ones Oct. 4 and 5, to give the companies additional time if they feel they need it. The union will also be heard in rebuttal, if it desires.

Sept. 29 and 30 the Board will hold public hearings on similar CIO cases put forward by the UE, the UAW, the Packinghouse Workers, the Glassworkers and some AFL unions. Biggest cases to be heard will be those involving UE's 17 cent wage increase asked from General Electric and Westinghouse and UAW's case against General Motors.

All observers confidently expect that the Little Steel formula will finally be broken, after months of patient waiting by the rank and file of the CIO and months of hard work by President Murray and all the union people who have struggled with the case.

CIO Mine, Mill Drives For FDR

By MORRIS WRIGHT

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 16—Never in its 51 years has the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers held a more intense, hard-working, forward-looking convention than the one which opened in the Fort Pitt Hotel here this week.

With enthusiasm, the delegates accepted the convention tasks outlined by President Reid Robinson in his openig adndress:

All-out support of the war, until final victory, planning for full employment after the war, including jobs for veterans, cooperation with our Allies for an enduring and prosperous peace, and re-election of President Roosevelt.

Robinson recalled the union's history of fighting fascism "to help us achieve a perspective on the transcending importance of the events we are participating in today—that we may hail today not only the glorious military victories in which our armies are fighting shoulder to shoulder with our Allies, but that we may also be aware of these events as a titanic turning point in history."

CHEER HILLMAN

Tremendous ovations were given Chairman Sidney Hillman of the National Citizens Political Action Committee and Senator Harley M. Kilgore of West Virginia, co-author of the reconversion bill which bore his name.

Gen. Jerry V. Matejka of the Army Signal Corps, CIO Organization Director Allen Haywood and President Martin Wagner of the Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers were other speakers. CIO President Philip Murray was scheduled to address the convention later in the week.

Robinson's report to the convention called for reiteration of the union's no-strike pledge, for election of the Roosevelt-Truman ticket "by the biggest majority ever," for full support to the CIO political action program. It included a carefully considered series of recommendations on reconversion and postwar full employment.

HITS DEWEY

Hillman assailed Gov. Dewey as "a man without a record," a "Charlie McCarthy for Herbert Hoover," and explained Dewey's "states' rights" program as a negation of human rights. "Election of Dewey would be a major disaster to the country," he asserted.

The PAC chairman paid warm tribute to the IUMM&SW and its leadership, concluding that "If the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers do the same wonderful job in political action that they have done in war production, victory will be sure, and it will be your victory."

Senator Kilgore also praised the war record of the union. "I know the nonferrous metals industry," he said. "I know what has been done by the members of this organization toward the remarkable war production record of the industry."

Steel Report Upholds USA-CIO Case For Pay Raise, Security

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—The "fact-finding" report of the public members on the War Labor Board steel panel "substantially supports the case" of the USA-CIO, for a break through on the Little Steel formula, the two labor members of the panel said this week.

Commenting on the public members' report, the two labor men, John Despol and Stephen Levitzky of the USA-CIO, said:

"The findings of fact justify the union's request that the WLB recommend to the President that he exercise the authority vested in him under the Price Control law to direct the WLB to order the steel companies involved in this proceeding to grant the union's request of a general wage adjustment of 17 cents an hour."

Following the "fact finding" report to the WLB, the Board will take up the case Sept. 27 and 28, and, according to Pres. Murray's statement at the UAW convention, Little Steel will finally be thrown into the discard. The USA-CIO will have done what it set out to do months ago—end the freeze on wages and give workers a chance to catch up with the cost of living.

COMPANIES CAN PAY

Both the public members and the labor members reports prove that the steel companies can easily absorb any increases in costs resulting from wage raises. In addition, the labor members pointed out, the companies can easily handle the annual wage sought by the union.

"The steel industry is peculiarly fitted for extending a guarantee because of its large resources accumulated during the war which will not be required for reconversion costs since there are no such costs for the steel industry," the labor members said.

"Thus the labor members insist that on the basis of the public members' finding that some form of security must be granted, that the board address itself to this issue and within the framework of the industry's ability to pay, a form of guarantee of employment be extended to the steelworkers."

JOBS FOR ALL

Main key to the annual wage and other forms of security for the workers and the industry alike is in a program of full production and employment, the labor members pointed out.

"Instead of accepting a prophecy of postwar depression, the union maintains that all factors, including expressions from public officials, are to the effect that the production level for the steel industry not only must but will be maintained on a basis of full production and full employment," they said.

Jobs for all and full production are dependent on a high wage level, they added, since wages control purchasing power.

"The purchasing power of the steelworkers must be maintained through such a guarantee for an annual wage in order to assure the continued demand for goods which will guarantee full production and full employment.

"Unless wage earners have purchasing power there will not be any demands for goods. Wage earners cannot have purchasing power if they are not assured of a secure income through guaranteed employment."

Minnesota CIO For FDR, New Congress

DULUTH, Minn., Sept. 16—The Minnesota State CIO convention held here September 8 and 9, ended a half-day ahead of schedule, having formulated a constructive program designed to implement the convention's two themes—full production now and in the post-war period, and direct political action to elect President Roosevelt, Senator Truman and a progressive Congress.

Keynote of the convention was set when delegates unanimously accepted their officers' report which pledged to keep the CIO's record of no strikes or stoppages of work in Minnesota since Pearl Harbor, and stressed political action as "a necessity in a society in which government will play an increasing role in the welfare of all citizens."

ACTIONS

On the production front, the convention:

Approved unanimously the legislative committee's report scoring Congressional action in accepting the inadequate George bill, and called for a planned reconversion to peacetime production as war needs diminish. The committee also pointed out that "we must enlarge and improve our working relationship with the AFL and Railroad Brotherhoods in every community to assure a more unified effort in reconversion."

Called for a permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee to end discrimination against workers on a basis of race, creed, color, or national origin.

Urged passage of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell social security bill "to prevent depression and insecurity in the post-war world."

Appealed to President Roosevelt and government officials "to take all necessary steps now to utilize the plant, manpower, and equipment of the Brewster Corp. for the prosecution of the war and for the transition to civilian production."

Concurred in the recommendation of Robert S. Mars, president of the Duluth Chamber of Commerce, and first industrialist ever to address a Minnesota CIO convention, that a "form of exchange membership" be arranged between CIO unions and Chambers of Commerce in Minnesota to strengthen labor-management relations.

On the political front, the convention:

Addressed a letter to Wendell Willkie, in which he was referred to as a "great patriot," urging him to "lend his voice to that great mass of Americans, Republican and Democrat, who are supporting Franklin D. Roosevelt."

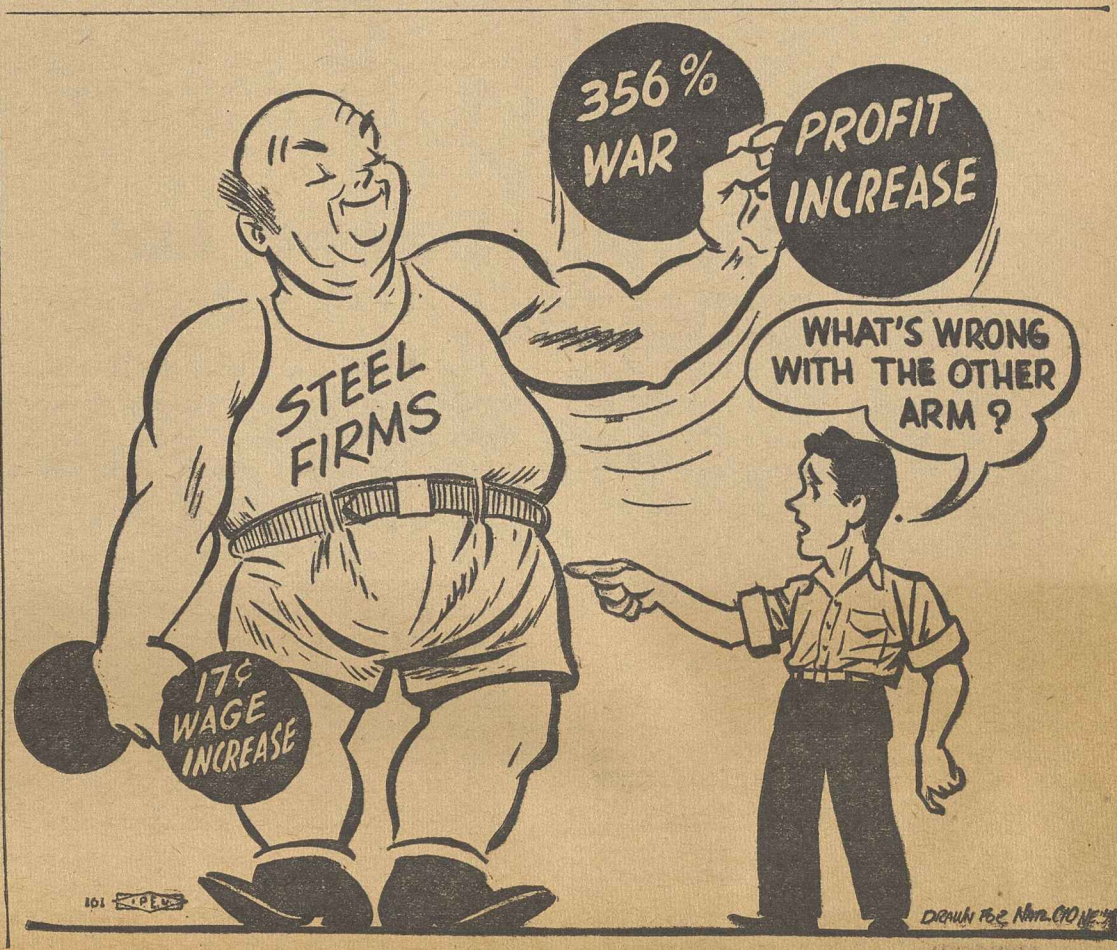
Condemned the "disruptive and seditious" activities of the Socialist Workers party, and opposed "any aid or comfort to those serving terms in the Federal Penitentiary."

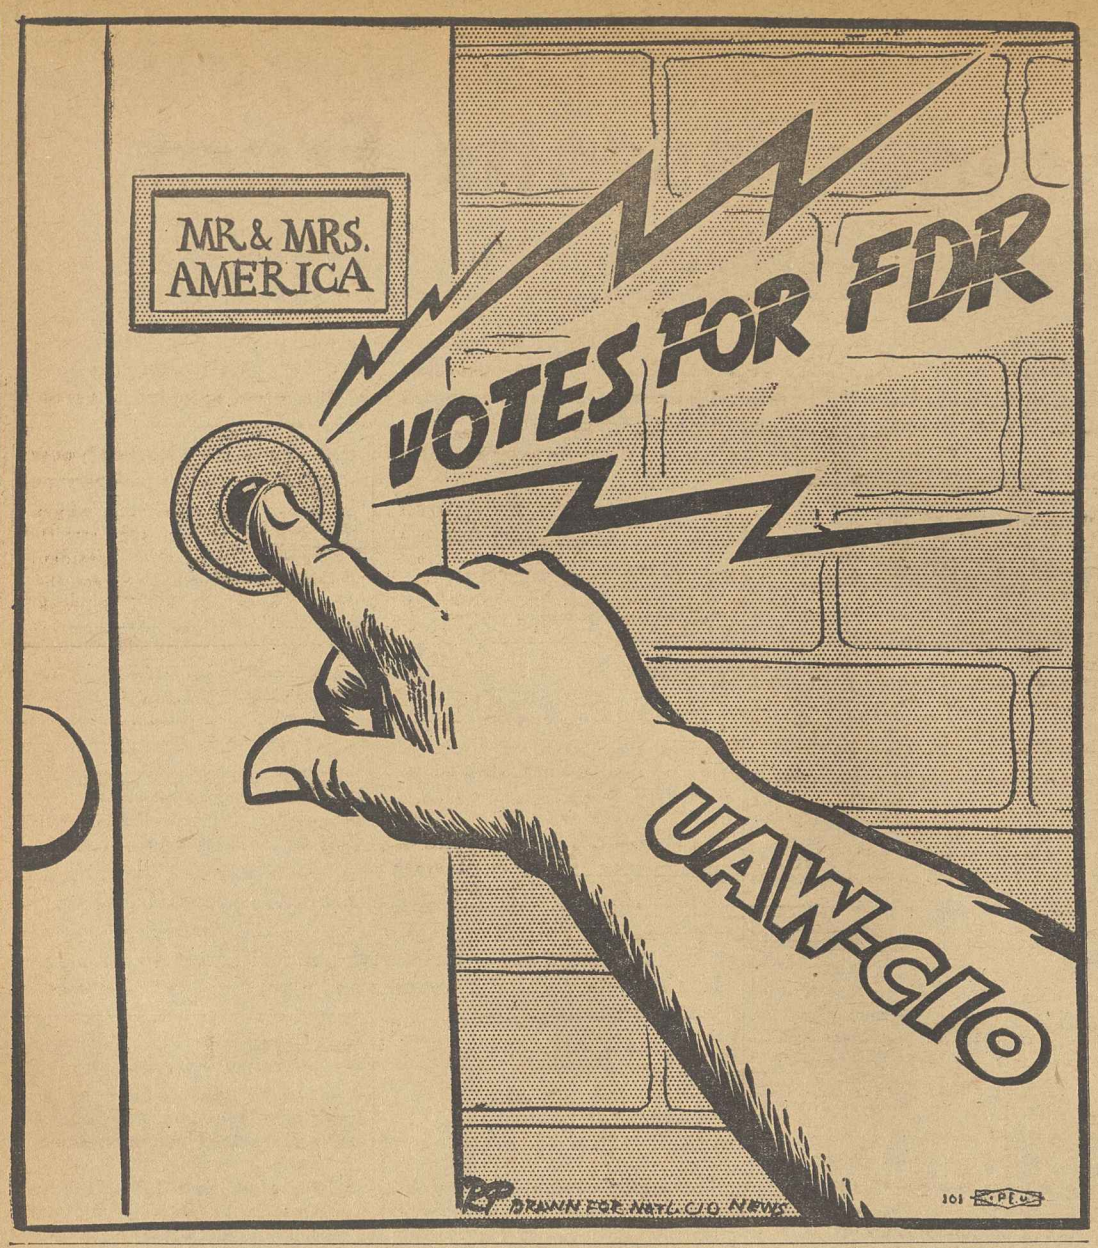
Supported "fully" President Roosevelt's foreign policy "as embodied in the agreements for coalition warfare at Teheran" and expressed "confidence in his ability to work out plans which will enable us to live in peace and prosperity."

Re-Elect NMU Heads

New York, Sept. 16—The six top officials of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union this week were announced as re-elected to office by a membership referendum, in the largest vote cast by the membership since the inception of the union in May, 1937.

Joseph Curran and Ferdinand C. Smith, president and secretary, respectively, were re-elected, together with M. Hedley Stone, treasurer, and vice-presidents Howard McKenzie, Jack Lawrenson and Frederick N. Myers, all of whom were unopposed.





Your Job and Your Pay Envelop

Today 55 million workers are employed, and 11 million are in the armed forces.

Today the gross national product is $188 billion.

We must have a national program if we are to keep full employment and at least present national income, while the boys are coming home, and after the war.

Ten Senators, led by Murray, Kilgore and Truman, had a bill (Senate Bill 2061) to do just that: help the USA carry out a national program. This bill was killed in the Senate by 27 Republicans and 22 Poll-Tax Democrats.

FROM WAR TO PEACE

When war production ends, many people will have to shift jobs. Some will be unemployed for short periods, some for long. How many will be unemployed, and for how long, depends upon YOU, upon CONGRESS, and upon WHO IS PRESIDENT.

Labor, Industry and the Farmers can only work out a healthy, prosperous postwar world if Congress and the President lend a hand. But a majority of Congress is lying down on the job.

The war has shown that America's capacity to produce is almost unlimited, is far more than anything known before the war. To harness it we need a program.

If, without a program, we have large scale unemployment as we move from war to peace, it will be hard to get back to present levels. We must keep the levels we have now.

To maintain purchasing power, we need a national standard of emergency unemployment benefits. Families must eat. Rent must be paid.

What Congressional Republicans and Poll-Tax Democrats did:

- Voted 49 to 25 in the Senate to refuse to provide for any planning in the post-war period. And in the House they refused to stand up and be counted on the issue, voted it down by voice vote.
- Refused to provide uniform national standards of unemployment benefits. Left the entire matter to each State: Alabama $15 maximum, $14 average, $2 minimum per week; Mississippi $15 maximum, $11.50 average; South Dakota $15 maximum, $12 average.
- Refuse to provide transportation from war jobs to homes or peace-time jobs.
- Refused to include 3,500,000 Federal employes (including arsenals, Navy Yards and powder plants) merchant seamen, workers in small shops.

WHAT YOU CAN DO ABOUT IT

Elect Congressmen who will plan to prevent a depression even worse than in 1932.

Your future job and size of your pay envelope depend upon planning for full employment and a high level of national income.

Hoover, Dulles, Dewey Inc.

Thomas E. Dewey, the little man who wants to be President, is trying desperately hard to steal the credit for FDR's foreign policy. After announcing that he would keep foreign policy discussions on a lofty "non-partisan" level by not dragging them into the campaign, he immediately started to try to chisel in on the President's world prestige by saying "me too" every time the U. S. took a step in its relations with other members of the United Nations.

He sent a gate-crasher down to Washington to try to get a foot in the door at Dumbarton Oaks, where the four principal United Nations—U. S., Soviet Union, China and Britain—are working out their plans for the future peace and security of the world.

This gate-crasher is named Dulles, John F. According to all the wise money, Dulles will be Dewey's secretary of state—if Dewey gets in. Dulles, it will be recalled, assured the U. S. in 1939—a matter of weeks before Hitler overran Poland — that the Axis would never attack us.

"Only hysteria entertains the idea that Germany, Italy or Japan contemplate war upon us," Dulles said.

Dulles was a bum prophet. FDR was a good one. FDR tried to prevent this war, armed and prepared us for it when it came. Dulles, Dewey and Hoover would sell us out to a third world war—because they don't believe in the unity of the United Nations, because they don't believe in democracy and because they hate and fear the plain people.

Newspapers, in their most cheerful moods of wishful thinking, have been putting Dulles in the State Department Building even before the election. To read most of them, you might think that Hull was already out and FDR only an unhappy memory.

But newspapers, like Dulles, are also bum prophets. They were wrong in 1932, in 1936 and in 1940. It's up to us to help them keep this record in 1944.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

AT A UAW-CIO convention, anything can happen—and almost everything does.

At other conventions, you can make a fair guess as to what will happen, by studying the recommendations of the executive officers and the relative strength of administrative and opposition forces.

Since most delegates thus know the lay of the land, they pay little attention to proposals that lack substantial backing—and there are few convention surprises.

But at UAW-CIO conventions, the thousands of delegates and visitors include advocates of everything under the sun. Circulate among them and you will hear dozens of different versions of what is going to happen.

In this electric atmosphere, caucuses grow, decline or change their plans almost from hour to hour—and few concede defeat for their pet projects until the final vote.

The slogan of these most vocal and self-assured delegates seems to be—"to the UAW-CIO, all things are possible."

There are grounds for this self-assurance in the fact that the UAW-CIO has done the impossible time and again.

Consider the progress reported to the Grand Rapids convention. 300,000 new members enrolled in a single year. An average monthly dues-paying membership of 1,051,455 in an industry where eight years ago there were only a few thousand unionists.

The lively democracy of this union is evident not only in its constitution and procedures, but also in the fact that its members have chosen it in the most democratic fashion possible, by secret ballot in plant elections.

In the past year, the UAW-CIO has won 297 out of 414 Labor Board elections; and since July 1, 1939, out of 957,534 votes cast, 577,971 workers have voted for the UAW-CIO.

Not only has the UAW-CIO made miraculous strides in organizing and improving conditions, but it has also pioneered in the widest variety of educational, cultural, political, legislative, consumers, housing, health, recreational, community and other activities.

A hall of exhibits, as big as the convention hall itself, was devoted to depicting a mere cross-section of the multifarious activities of this extraordinary union.

Looking over these exhibits, leafing through the convention reports, listening to the proceedings, one got the impression of a union whose horizons are as wide as society and life itself, a union that considers no door closed to it and nothing impossible that will make this a happier world.

There are other reasons why UAW-CIO conventions are so exciting and seemingly so unpredictable.

They have more delegates than other unions—as many as 2,300 at Grand Rapids. So each session has the proportions and something of the atmosphere of a mass meeting.

Yet under the patient and considerate chairmanship of Pres. R. J. Thomas, there is an extraordinary degree of rank-and-file participation in debate and the most painstaking adherence to democratic procedure.

Another reason is the very factionalism which has come close to wrecking the union at times.

The opposing factions are usually so evenly divided that comparatively few votes can throw the balance of power in either direction.

Constant maneuverings to win the in-between votes help to create the feeling that every proposition has a chance and that nothing is impossible at a UAW-CIO convention.

There are dangers, of course, in all the outstanding characteristics of UAW-CIO conventions.

Self-assurance can become rashness, high spirits can lead to disorder and indiscipline, rank-and-file assertiveness can be distorted into mob psychology, close divisions of opinion on policy and candidates can degenerate into unprincipled factionalism, and disruptive elements can sometimes play havoc by pushing healthy impulses in an unhealthy direction.

Such dangers are inherent in all democracy, but they are also subject to democratic control.

Though a hostile press may exaggerate dissension and give undue weight to the clamor of unrepresentative minorities, the most amazing fact about this most amazing union is its basic strength and unity of purpose.

Not a voice was raised or a vote cast against Roosevelt or for Dewey. On every major issue of progressive labor, social and political policy, the UAW-CIO delegates were almost unanimous. And even on the much-touted moves to rescind the no-strike pledge, the patriotic good sense of the membership prevailed overwhelmingly in the final vote.

GOP 'Humor'

Last week in the House Rep. Clare Booth Luce got up and asked the speaker for "just 10 seconds" time. When she got it, she said: "Clear everything with Sidney," and sat down again.

This wisecrack was directed at all of American labor, not at Sidney Hillman or the PAC or the CIO or the Commander-in-Chief. It was a coldly calculated insult to American workers, aimed at the people La Luce despises from her Waldorf-Astoria penthouse.

The Republicans, of course, thought it was hilariously funny. They guffawed loudly, and so did their poll-tax friends from the "majority" side.

But La Luce is more than just a buffoon. She's a very shrewd woman, who wants to get re-elected. So La Luce had the wisecrack stricken from the Congressional Record.

It had served its purpose. It made the papers. And when election time comes up, La Luce will blandly deny that she ever made it and say: "It's not in the Record."

GOP humor, like its platform, is full of anti-social content—and all of it aimed straight at the heart of labor.

CIO-PAC Farm Program Praised By Farm Leader

By James G. Patton
President, National Farmers Union

The farm plank of the CIO-PAC program is in line with principles, policies, and methods long advocated by the National Farmers Union and other organizations, such as state units of the Farm Bureau and Grange, which represent the interests of working farm families determined to maintain and improve security on the land they operate.

The fact that this program properly stresses farm problems is of great significance and encouragement to working farm families.

The PAC farm plank proposes:

1. Guaranteed fair prices for full production to meet needs for food and clothing at the present high level.

2. Parity of income and welfare between farm people and city people.

3. The family-owned and operated farm as the basic pattern for agriculture.

4. The Farm Security Administration's tenant-purchase and rehabilitation loan programs.

5. Soil conservation.

We believe that this prosperity must be safeguarded through the people's elected representatives. We are not going back from full employment for war to chronic mass unemployment in peace with accompanying "surpluses" of food, clothing, fuel, and vital materials, piled up in the midst of spreading malnutrition, sickness and premature death. We are going to learn to live with abundance and like it. And we insist that our government take a leading role in assuring such abundance.

UNDERSTAND FARMERS

Such a plank means that the CIO and other people cooperating with the Political Action Committee are developing a new understanding of the difficult problems of the farmer in wartime, and those, even more difficult, that face him in the period of transition from war to peacetime economy, and in the years that follow.

It means that the urban people will be better informed and equipped, and readier to assist working farmers in obtaining fair consideration and treatment in federal and state farm programs, in establishing some measure of fair competition between family-type and factory-type farming operations.

It means that non-farm groups realize that, if the farm market for manufactured goods is limited by insufficient income to the farmer, manufacturing and employment will be reduced, in turn cutting urban purchasing power.

BEWARE this man and his friends like Rep. Knutson (R., Minn.), who said in Congress this week about Pearl Harbor: "When the facts are known the blame will not be in Tokio but in Washington."

They see in this the unmistakable beginning of the vicious cycle that finally cuts the size of the market, shrinking prices and wages for both manufactured and farm products, and so leads inevitably to nationwide depression.

Because the National Farmers Union believes in putting first things first, we have, along with the three national labor organizations, done everything possible to promote advance planning and practical preparation for the use of all human and material resources so that full production, full employment, and fair distribution of income among all our people in the transition and post-war period may be attained.

PLANNING NEEDED

Only by such planning and preparation now to maintain and insure full employment can we, as farmers, be assured of a market at fair prices for the products of our farms.

Some Lessons From Reconversion Fight

By C. W. Fowler

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—In a final burst of "compromise" that sells the issues involved completely down the river, the House-Senate conference committee this week accepted a reconversion bill that helps no one and does nothing.

According to reports from the committee, the conferees were completely "deadlocked" over two issues; (1) unemployment benefits for Federal workers; (2) financial help to enable war workers to get back home when their jobs end.

Unfortunately, the "deadlock" was far from complete, and was easily resolved by the Senate conferees simply surrendering on the two points to the even more reactionary House measure, which omitted all mention of them.

Now the plan is to take these two points—all that's left of the original "human side" of the reconversion bill—and lay them over for consideration "after the election." This of course, means for consideration never.

The reconversion fight is far from over, as President Murray and other CIO leaders have pointed out. The Republicans and their polltax pals who want to throw the election to Dewey think and pray that it is—but labor will show them they're mistaken.

From all indications, reconversion will be a number one campaign issue, with the Republican record a complete negative. Pro-FDR people will be able to use this record to great advantage, using it as a prime example of GOP callousness to the people's needs.

The fight on reconversion in Congress involves considerably more, however, than the human needs of the war workers and the veterans—important as these are. It involves the whole issue of planning and foresight vs. deliberate recklessness not only toward labor but also toward industry as well.

The job of converting from war to peacetime production can't be left to chance and devil take the hindmost. To do so endangers the whole postwar program of stability and freedom from fear and want. Without planning, you certainly will not have full employment—jobs for all don't come by accident or get found among the cabbages.

This is where some of the tactics used in fighting for a decent reconversion bill showed weaknesses that helped the GOP. The main weakness was in the lack of stress on the jobs for all issue, and in a consequent fight over uneemployment benefits as the major issue.

This meant that the GOP and the polltaxers could unite once again and meant that the polltaxers especially would fight like tigers against the Kilgore bill. They fought it not only on principle—because they hate progress in general—but also as a matter of money.

Decent unemployment benefits are a threat to the polltax states' scale of benefits which average around $5 a week, and of course, a challenge to substandard wages.

Had the issue been kept strictly on jobs for all—as CIO President Murray tried repeatedy to keep it—even a Republican or a polltaxer would have hesitated before voting against such a program.

The nation has a chance, however, to learn a valuable lesson that will remain all the fresher because it comes so close to election time. This is the lesson of the complete recklessness and callousness of the GOP-polltax gang in both Houses.

Its a lesson that we'll all do wel to remember in November.

'Equal Rights' Up Again

Washington, Sept. 16—An attempt was made this week—and quickly withdrawn—to get that ancient phony the "Equal Rights" amendment onto the Senate floor for debate and a vote.

The attempt was made by Sen. Gillette (D., Ia.), long notorious for opposition to the progressive measures of FDR and the New Deal. It was made in the course of a lengthy, rambling and highly defensive speech in which the Senator said in effect, "we'd like to put this thing in now but we're afraid to and besides there aren't many Senators around today but we're going to get it across some day."

TRIES 'REASSURANCE'

The Senator also revealed that he'd had a great many letters from people against the amendment and tried to reassure them that it wouldn't do what everybody knows it will do, if passed—which is to junk thousands of laws now protecting women workers from the cruder forms of exploitation.

For example, there are some 200 laws protecting women workers, mothers and children in the state of Ohio along, which the "Equal Rights" amendment would wipe out.

And that's only the beginning, because the real purpose of the sinister forces behind the rich, tory old ladies who back the amendment is to use it as an opening wedge for an attack on all laws protecting workers.

GOP Aids Steal Of US Goods

Washington, Sept. 16—The tussle to see who gets $100,000,000,000 worth of U. S. property—the taxpayers who own it or the chiselers who want it—is going on this week in Congress, with the old familiar "compromise" being brought out to give the profits first crowd what they want at public expense.

Two bills have been passed, one in the House and one in the Senate. The Senate bill (S 2065) puts disposal of the surplus U. S. property expected after the war in the hands of a board with labor, government, industry and the public on it.

The House bill (HR 5125) simply hands over the disposal to one man, without controls on whatever he wants to do with it, and thus opens the door to grabs by big monopoly firms that will buy the stuff to keep it off the market.

"COMPROMISE" BEGINS

The "compromise" business is already beginning, with the announcement that conferees had agreed to put in a four man board with purely advisory functions—which means no functions at all.

This plan wipes out the whole idea of protecting the public by a supervising group representing al parts of the national interest, and means that one man control will be in effect.

Yet the Republicans—who support this "compromise"—spend a lot of their time yelling about "one-man rule."

Keep Your Eye On Congress

Within the next week or so, the title of this department could very well be changed to "Keep Your Eye On Your Congressman." Congress is going to adjourn. The Congressmen are going home to start the real work on re-election.

Every member of the House and one-third of the Senators are coming up for election Nov. 7—except those who have already been eliminated in the primaries or who, like Dies, do not choose to run.

Our job is to make sure these men run on the record. Keep your eye on your Congressman between now and election time by learning his record. Watch his vote and his behavior on win-the-war and win-the-peace issues. Remember, the voting record is only part of the story, though it is a major part. Ask him what he did to push progressive legislation in committee and in debate. Find out what he did about vital measures that didn't come to a record vote—such as reconversion.

One of the best ways to get your Congressman's record is through the Special Legislative Supplement of The CIO News, issued July 19. Order from Publicity Dept., CIO, 718 Jackson Pl., Washington 6, D. C.

And the best way to act on that record—in fact, the only way—is to register and vote.

Soviet, Catholic Leaders Demand World Labor Congress 'Without Delay'

New demands for early holding of the postponed world labor congress were made by a woman leader of the Soviet Textile Workers Union in an article in "War and the Working Class" reported by Allied Labor News this week from Moscow, and by a Catholic Czech union leader.

Pointing out that though the travel ban which prevented the meeting in London June 6, has been lifted, the meeting has still not been held, the author of the article, Tatiana Zhukova, writes:

"This is causing profound surprise among many trade unionists in the Soviet Union and, as far as one can judge from the foreign press, in Allied countries as well.

"This surprise is quite legitimate inasmuch as it is obvious to every person with common sense that such a conference could unite the forces of the working class both for expediting Hitler's final defeat and for insuring that adequate influence is exercised by the organized labor movement in the settlement of problems of the postwar order."

HITS AT CITRINE

Zhukova takes a sharp dig at Sir Walter Citrine, who recently wrote CIO that October was the "earliest possible" date for calling the conference, when he says in discussing his reasons for calling off the June meeting: "The decision to convene the conference was adopted by the TUC general council without consultation with the trade union centers in other countries. The postponement likewise was decided without consultation."

She also raps the AFL for its refusal to meet with Soviet unions on the pretense that they aren't "free" and therefore don't exist, saying that the Woll-Hutcheson policy "has come under trenchant criticism even in equally conservative American trade union circles."

Support for international labor unity also came from Monsignor Frantisek Hala, vice-chairman of the Catholic Trade Union Federation of Czechoslovakia and secretary of the Catholic Party, now on his way with seven other Czechoslovak labor leaders to his country.

Workers here should "examine carefully the events in Europe and draw lessons from what happened in Czechoslovakia," Msgr. Hala said. "The Catholic workers of America should bring into life the fundamentals advanced by the Rerum Novarum encyclical.

"They should not work alone. On the contrary, Catholic workers should collaborate with democratic organizations and workers groups without exception. American and Canadian workers should look to Russia because inspiring work is being done there and not fall prey to immoral anti-Bolshevist propaganda."

Chile for FDR

Latin-American workers know the importance of FDR's re-election, as they have shown in the past. This week, Salvador Ocampo, assistant secretary of the Chilean Confederation of Labor (CTCh), reporting on a three months' trip around the Americas, said:

"In all the countries I have visited there exists the conviction that a triumph for President Roosevelt will mean the reaffirmation of the Good Neighbor policy.

"At the same time it will mean the sustaining of the principles enunciated in the Atlantic Charter and that consequently the firm provisions of the Teheran accord will guarantee the progress and industrial and cultural development of our peoples.

"It will be a barrier to the hopes of some imperialists and a defeat for the feudal forces of our continent."

The two U. S. candidates "represent two tendencies, two purposes, two orientations," he added. "The first progressive, democratic and heralding our development, helping us to fight the remnants of absolutism and feudalism. The other tendency is contrary to the above-mentioned principles."

It ought to be easy to figure out which two people he's talking about.

Facts Help Squelch Lies About Labor

Washington, Sept. 16 — Squelching lies about labor is the purpose of "Facts of Current Interest," brand-new supplement to the August issue the CIO's "Economic Outlook." Some of the pertinent facts presented are:

"On-the-job accidents in 1943 accounted for almost 140 times as many man-days losts as CIO strikes. . . .

"Since Pearl Harbor there have been 18 times as many industrial wounded as war wounded. . . .

The Outlook said that we, the people, have the right to know of big business:

"'. . . what you are planning to do about producing civilian goods. You ought to plan for high enough production levels to give jobs to everyone.

"'You should sign an agreement with the union to pay as high wages for a 40-hour week as you are now paying for 48 hours a week. . . .

"'If you have to lay off workers, the layoff should be orderly and fair. . . .

"'If you will cooperate with the union and with other community groups in a constructive program, then the nation can indeed achieve full employment and production.'"

"These are the things the people of the United States can say to big business through their unions and their votes," the Outlook declared.

CIO Aided Powell Vote

New York, Sept. 16—Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., Congressional choice in the 22nd district, was the leading beneficiary of CIO Political Action Committee contributions in connection with the primary elections, the August 15 PAC financial statement disclosed.

PAC contributed $5000 to the Powell campaign, a larger total than that received by any other candidate supported by the committee.

Total PAC contributions and expenditures in primary and state elections were $67,320.48, the statement showed.

Win $2,500 Back Pay

Grants Pass, Ore., Sept. 16—Workers at the Pacific Wood Products Co. here were awarded back pay amounting to $2,500 in a decision by the West Coast Lumber Commission. The workers belong to Local 9-308, CIO Intl. Woodworkers.

Unions Helped In Romanian Coup

MOSCOW, Sept. 16 (ALN)—Preparations for the coup d'etat which overthrew the government of Marshal Ion Antonescu in Romania began in April with the formation of a National Democratic Bloc composed of the Social Democrats, Communist, Liberal and National Peasant parties, it was revealed here this week by Lucretiu Patrascanu, secretary of the Romanian armistice delegation to Moscow and Minister of Justice in the present Romanian cabinet.

Discussing the new cabinet, Patrascanu said that the first acts were "to cancel all repressive measures and to return all constitutional liberties to the people. All concentration camps were immediately liquidated. The Communist party, which has been illegal for 20 years, came into the open. The trade unions, suddenly thrown into the very midst of national regeneration, began to grow mightily overnight.

The foundations for the coup were laid, he continued, when early in April "General Santescu established connections with the illegal Communist party, which had already united with the Social Democratic party. At the same time, all labor and anti-Hitler organizations outside these two parties had formed an alliance. These two groups then merged in the National Democratic Bloc.

"When the National Democratic Bloc was enlarged to include King Michael and army leaders, all the foundations were laid for breaking the ties with Germany. A committee formed by representatives of the army, the King and the Bloc worked for two and a half months to organize a movement with the sole aims of removing Antonescu, and bringing Romania on the side of her traditional allies.

"The movement continued to gain both speed and adherents. Committees were created in many parts of the country. The army was prepared to give active assistance. When the Russians achieved their spectacular successes in their current offensive, we met with the King and decided to carry through the coup d'etat on August 26, when Marshal Antonescu was expected at the palace.

"But Marshal Antonescu came on August 23. The King, although caught unawares and knowing that the troops called into the city for August 26 had not yet arrived, demanded that Antonescu conclude an armistice and resign.

Antonescu refused and the King thereupon gave orders for the arrest of Antonescu, the prime minister, the Ministers of the Interior and War and the Prefect of Police. When these people were in custody, the King, the army and the opposition met and created the new cabinet, composed of representatives of all anti-Hitler groups.

"Antonescu and the other prisoners were put in the custody of the National Patriotic Army, which is formed of supporters of the Democratic Bloc, above all the workers. On the 31st, when the Red Army entered Bucharest, the armistice commission was already on its way to Moscow. The cabinet plans to confiscate all German holdings. Antonescu and his accomplices will be placed on trial."

Need Postwar Plan On Child Care

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

It's high time that we started to do some very concrete post-war planning on the care of our children. The Census Bureau reports that over 16,500,000 women were working in February of this year and only approximately seven million of those were single women. The Census figures do not tell how many of the married women have children but it is fair to assume a fairly high proportion.

The truth is that even before the war a lot of mothers worked. They had to help feed their families. After the war that number is going to be further increased by wives of servicemen who have suffered injury or death in the battle for democracy.

NEEDED IN PEACETIME

It's up to us to see that our wartime child care programs are continued and expanded when peace is reestablished.

During the war we have seen vividly in many communities how utterly inadequate a program is which provides facilities only for children of employed mothers. There's the story of the small boy in New Haven who stood with his nose to the window of a child care center and said: "Gee, I wish my mother worked."

The Federal Works Agency has recognized the need for a general children and youth recreation program in war impact areas, and has approved close to 100 such projects. Any child in the community is eligible to take part in the activities of the recreation centers established under that program.

But the community must prove an increase in employment of women or an influx of women into the area in order to be eligible. Many communities which need such centers badly, have needed them for years. The war has just intensified the problem.

HOUSEWIVES NEED HELP

Programs for younger children present the same problems. In the overcrowded areas in which most of the war nurseries have been established the children of nonworking mothers need facilities too. They have no suitable and safe place to play while mama does her work. And housework is work.

In England, where the war brought sharper care problems than here, the government rapidly expanded the nursery school program to meet the need of working mothers. They are convinced, through their experience, that the program should continue and be extended to cover all children.

The new Education Act—already adopted by Parliament and waiting only for victory to get underway—provides for a complete system of nursery schools in the public schools.

They won't be compulsory, of course, up to the age of five, but they will be available as rapidly as possible in every public school. They will be open all day for children of working mothers and for any part of the day she likes to nonworking mothers. They will be started first in slum areas, since the greatest need is there. Incidentally, all British school children will get hot lunches. That's part of the national health program.

Of course we can't follow the British pattern in detail. Our national government does not run schools. But we can start working now in our localities and in our states for the kind of program and facilities we need for our children—and we can push for making federal funds available to supplement local funds when they are needed.

Women Hit Dewey For Lies About FDR

Philadelphia, Sept. 16—No one will be fooled by Dewey's attempt to create out of thin air the threat of a "Roosevelt depression," the Women's Division of the CIO Political Education Committee said in reply to Republican Presidential nominee's campaign speech at the Convention Hall here last week.

"Every voter knows," the committee's statement said, "that it was Pres. Roosevelt who pulled us out of . . . that depression, caused by twelve years of Republican misrule."

The women said that although the "remarkable reforms which the New Deal instituted are shrugged off by Mr. Dewey . . . we needed those measures during the black years of the Hoover regime, when shots rang out over the Anacostia Flats as a dole to the veterans of the last war."

"His promise of jobs has no program whatsoever back of it," the statement continued, "it is manufactured from the same thin air as his wild story of the so-called 'Roosevelt depression.'"

The committee blamed Dewey's lack of knowledge of the "wide-ranging and carefully thought-out demobilization program" on the candidate's failure to read the papers.

"It is he who in one breath says 'of course we need' the New Deal's reforms, and in the next yells for the abolishment of all Government controls."

Greetings to Jews Extended by CIO

Washington, Sept. 16—"Hearty fraternal greetings" from the millions of CIO members "to their Jewish fellow workers, to the Jewish community of the U. S., and to Jews everywhere on the occasion of the Jewish New Year" were extended this week by CIO Pres. Philip Murray.

"The tide of the war has turned," Murray stated. "Unable to halt the victorious march of the allied armies, the Nazis are proceeding with their mad designs to exterminate the Jewish people. They must not and will not succeed.

"Nazi aggression has taken such a terrible toll of the Jewish people, that the postwar world will owe them a chance to rebuild their destroyed communities and to take their place in the family of free nations."

Warns FDR Vital to US

Mt. Vernon, O., Sept. 16—Importance of the election of President Roosevelt and a progressive Congress was stressed in a Labor Day speech here by Walter Smethurst, CIO regional director for the Ohio Valley.

He warned that a depression similar to that which followed World War I will occur unless Roosevelt is returned to office and a progressive Congress is elected.

CIO Reg. Dir. Powers Hapgood, Indianapolis, reports: Allison election resulted in 62% for UAW-CIO, 31% neither. USAPAWA won among workers at Acme Evans Milling Co., Indianapolis: CIO 113, neither 9. This victory is the culmination of four years' effort, including an appeal of the company to the U. S. Supreme Court against a Labor Board Decision and many other delays instigated by management.

CIO Reg. Dir. George Craig, Philadelphia, reports: Frankford Woolen Mills Co., Philadelphia: CIO Textile Workers 189, independent 31. Good Road Machinery Co., Kennett Square, Pa.: UERMWA-CIO 81, against 13.

CIO Reg. Dir. James Ritchie, St. Louis, reports additional UERMWA victories: Midland Products: 26 to 11; Paper Converter Co.: 46 to 18; Mining Co.: 61 to 55. UE Rep. Logsdon was in charge.

FAECT-CIO announces signing of a collective bargaining agreement with Otis Elevator Co., the world's leading manufacturers of elevators and conveyer equipment. The firm is now engaged in the design of aircraft. The pact, covering 450 engineers and draftsmen, includes among other things provisions for seniority, severance pay, vacation pay, overtime compensation, etc. Martin M. Cooper, assistant to the FAECT president, helped negotiate this agreement.

The writer attended and addressed the Annual Convention of the N. Y., State Industrial Union Council which met in Saratoga Springs, N. Y. It was a splendid gathering and the delegates left their convention with the program of the CIO uppermost in their mind: To keep on organizing workers; to make their main objective between now and November the election of our Commander-in-Chief, and to elect a progressive Congress who will support him and who will support a just peace and support the war effort.

From Saratoga the writer went to Pittsburgh on several matters and while there addressed the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers convention. The delegates were enthusiastic in their determination to further the program of CIO and pledged their continued cooperation with our great movement in our efforts to change the Little Steel Formula, activize all our people in political action and to keep on organizing the unorganized workers in their industry.

From Pittsburgh, I travelled to Grand Rapids, Michigan, to attend the United Auto Workers convention for a day. This was the largest convention ever held by this organization. They unanimously endorsed the re-election of President Roosevelt, Harry Truman for Vice President, and a progressive Congress. President Murray addressed the convention and clearly outlined the CIO's post-war program to provide work for millions for generations to come.

FAECT-CIO advises: Midvale Co., Philadelphia, technical employes in research and chemical laboratories chose CIO as their collective bargaining agency by 28 to 1. This marks the second decisive victory for this union in several weeks. It scored a 4-1 victory among engineers and draftsmen at the General Electric Co., Philadelphia, in one of the largest units of exclusively technical employes ever to participate in an NLRB election.

The Labor Reader

Urges Annual Wage System

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 16—Wide community support for the United Steelworkers stabilization program is the aim of a leaflet recently issued by union headquarters here.

Addressed to the "merchant, the farmer, the professional man, the worker and the community," the leaflet contains a large drawing showing how the cost of living has risen far above wages frozen under the "Little Steel" formula. The stabilization program is summarized.

"Just let your mind run on the necessity for a guaranteed annual wage and what a Godsend it would be to our economy—to you as business men, as professional men, as farmers, as community officials, the leaflet states.

". . . Any postwar plan worth considering must be built on bringing a degree of security for the population," the throwaway states and asks how are we going to have increased "production of civilian goods after the war unless the people are provided with money to spend?"

'That Man' For Unions

NEW YORK, Sept. 16—A special edition of Frank Kingdon's sensational "That Man in the White House" has been prepared especially for distribution by unions, and may be ordered for 25c a copy in quantity lots, from the Arco Publishing Co., 480 Lexington Ave., New York 17, N. Y.

With each copy of the book a new supplement called "The Inside Story of the Coming Election" will be sent free to unions, the publishers announce. Included in this is a revealing explanation of the events at the conventions and the inner meanings of the party platforms together with an up-to-date analysis of Dewey and Roosevelt.

Hailed as "the Bible for this campaign," states the publishers, That Man in the White House 'tells the blunt truth about the coming struggle for America, whose outcome is of the most urgent personal importance to every working man."

Guild Wins Seattle Vote

Seattle, Sept. 16—The CIO Seattle Newspaper Guild chalked up another victory recently by winning an NLRB election at the Seattle Times commercial department. Of 85 ballots cast, 57 were for the Guild. The new union members include advertising, circulation, telephone, information, library and home economics workers.

The election completes a campaign to organize the Times, a conservative sheet and no friend to organized labor in its editorial policies.

Hosiery Workers

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 16—The 33rd annual convention of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers opened September 11 in the same room in the Chelsea Hotel here that saw the historic break in the ranks of labor that resulted in the establishment of the CIO.

About 150 delegates from 63 branches in 20 States participated in five days of deliberations during which the course of the union was charted for the next year.

They endorsed President Roosevelt and Senator Harry S. Truman, as well as a resolution urging every member to contribute to the campaign fund of the Political Action Committee and to utilize his experience as an organizer and speaker in the political field.

Those actions were taken after Alexander McKeown, AFW president, and other officials, as well as Thomas Burns, of the NCPAC office, vigorously urged the election of Roosevelt and Truman, and also of a Congress opposed to emasculation of the advances made by labor during the Roosevelt administrations.

Another important resolution, passed without opposition, urged all local branches to affiliate with the CIO industrial union councils in their respective communities and States. Organizers working in the South pointed out that only in this way can the CIO present a united front to fight legislation, both local and state, requiring licenses for union organizers which are issued only under impossible conditions.

In one of a series of actions taken to ease the return of discharged service men to the industry, the national officers were instructed to explore jointly with union employers' groups the possibilities of an industry-wide rehabilitation plan, and to take whatever action the conferences indicated.

Speakers included James B. Carey, CIO secretary-treasurer; J. Raymond Walsh, CIO research director; Carl Holderman, president of the New Jersey Industrial Union Council; Emil Rieve, president, and William Pollock, secretary-treasurer of the Textile Workers Union of America; Gilbert Hyatt, of the U. S. Treasury's War Finance Division; John W. Edelman, CIO representative on the OPA Labor Policy Committee and Washington representative, of the TWUA; Dr. William Buckwalter and Warren K. Hess, impartial chairmen under union contracts; Alfred Baker Lewis, president of the Trade Union Health and Accident Insurance Association; Joseph Knapik, president of the Federation of Dyers, and Isadore Katz, general counsel for the TWUA and the AFHW.

An impressive memorial service for 21 union members killed in the service was held September 13 by Rev. Harvey Bennett, Atlantic City.

Washington State

SPOKANE, Wash., Sept. 16—The Washington State CIO Council convention here last week-end pledged support to the Roosevelt-Truman slate, endorsed the CIO-reconversion program, called for revision of the Little Steel formula and reaffirmed the no-strike pledge.

Speakers included Senator Pepper (D. Fla.), who said that the election of Dewey and Bricker would lead to another depression followed by war.

The following candidates were endorsed: For Senate, Warren G. Magnuson; for Governor, Sen. Mon C. Wallgren; for congressmen, Hugh De Lacy, Henry M. Jackson, Charles Savage, Al McCoy, Edward Reilly and John M. Coffee.

Council officers were re-elected as follows: President, C. E. McMillin, Longshoremens Union; vice-president, Oscar Rodin, Fishermens Union; executive secretary, T. Ralph Nielson, Newspaper Guild. Board members were chosen as follows: Terry Pettus, Newspaper Guild; C. T. Sorenson, Woodworkers Union; Clyde J. Miller, Longshoremens Union; W. O. Allen, United Steelworkers, all re-elected, and Paul Fread, Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

The Council also urged a State reconversion program which will mesh with the Federal reconversion program, and passage of the State Social Security measure and the public power referendum.

'White Collar'

Philadelphia, Sept. 16—Lewis Merrill was unanimously re-elected national president of the United Office and Professional Workers, CIO, during the final sessions of the white collar workers' convention last week.

Leon W. Berney and Joseph H. Levy, both of New York, were elected to newly created vice-presidential posts, while Lt. John J. Stanley, now serving in the U. S. Army overseas, was re-elected national secretary-treasurer.

The convention drew up plans to launch a nationwide organizing drive among white collar employes in insurance offices, banks, nonprofit agencies, book and magazine publishing, direct mail advertising, industrial offices and film and radio offices.

HELP TO U. S.

"Organization of the white collar workers of America," Merrill said, "will make the United States stronger by making for the salaried workers of this nation a great powerful, respected place in the affairs of the nation and thus helping to make certain national unity is really based upon the ability of all sections of the population to speak up through their own mass instrument."

Merrill lauded the CIO's efforts to lift the Little Steel formula, declaring that "it made wage stabilization a farce" and that until the Little Steel formula went no solution of the economic problems of the white collar employes was possible.

Re-election of President Roosevelt will ease the problems of the salaried employes, Merrill said, urging all members of the union to take the issues in the presidential campaign to the white collar workers as a part of their organizational efforts.

Vice President Wallace in his greeting to the convention also urged the UOPWA members to support President Roosevelt, saying that as white collar workers "search for stabilization and higher living standards . . . they can arrive at only one answer when it comes to voting."

The 400 delegates, representing 55,000 organized employes from 33 states, stated in their resolution on organization that the need for unions for white collar workers grew with the development of modern commerce and provides the individual a chance to shape his own future in the country's rapidly changing economic and political scene.

Drive For Safety

Portland, Ore., Sept. 16—A drive to make the lumber industry a safer place ot work has been announced by the CIO Intl. Woodworkers of America. At present it has the highest accident ratio of any industry in the country, IWA Pres. Worth Lowery states.

Navy OKs Review Of Bias Cases

Washington, Sept. 16—Navy Secretary Forrestal has granted permission for an impartial review of the cases of 15 Negro Seabees, all discharged from the same battalion for what they tetrm "racial discrimination on the part of their commanding officers."

Announcement of the permission for review by a Naval board was contained in a letter written by Forrestal in reply to a letter from Irving Abramson, National CIO War Relief Committee chairman, asking for prompt action.

The 15 were given discharges marking them "undesirable" and "unfit" following a discussion of segregation and discrimination to which they had been invited by their commanding officers and seven other white officers, they stated in affidavits to the Committee.

Two of the Seabees, Isaac McNatt, 27-year-old storekeeper, and Harvey Steele, 26-year-old shipfitter, have already been assured of CIO backing in their cases.

Men Behind Dewey—E. T. Weir

What does a Republican presidential candidate do with the support of America's top labor-baiter at a time when he's wooing labor's vote?

The answer is simple. He ditches labor. For the financial barons who control Thomas E. Dewey's every move would hardly permit him to snub a fellow industrialist—especially Ernest T. Weir, who has been their shining knight in the battle against labor.

Weir is a heavy contributor among the Republican dynasties throwing their bank accounts into the fight to drive Franklin D. Roosevelt from the White House, but he is also one of Dewey's chief headaches.

For there is no man, including Tory Sewell L. Avery, who has earned the comtempt of American labor more than Weir—a poor recommendation to Dewey who seeks any and all votes.

Weir's National Steel Corporation and subsidiaries, Weirton Steel Corp., Great Lakes Steel Corp., and Hanna Furnace and Oil Co., all ruthless wagers of war against organized labor are the delight of America's anti-labor crowd, which backs Dewey.

The Weirton Steel Corp., particularly, has been a storm center ever since collective bargaining was legalized, for all attempts by the National Labor Relyations Board to introduce bargaining machinery have been thwarted. Shortly after the Wagner Act was upheld by the Supreme Court, all employes and officers of CIO units were fired. More recent charges of the NLRB have accused Weir of discharging CIO employes in his tin mills when the armed forces were clamoring for increased production.

There's no finesse about Weir. He believes in direct action and will go to any length to get it. The NLRB's court bouts with him produced evidence that riot squads, trained with clubs and other weapons furnished by the company, were Weir's idea of a sane "labor relations" program. In the most recent flare-up, organizers of the United Steelworkers were beaten by company strong-arm men and local law enforcement officials, who cringe before the master of Weirton, W. Va.

State police were forced by these local thugs to help jail union members disseminating union literature at the mill gates, until Gov. Matthew Neely, the state's New Deal governor, ordered state police to intervene and protect the organizers against such violation of their civil rights.

THE EVIDENCE

No more damning evidence against Weir—the man Gov. Dewey has never repudiated—is available than in the La Follette Investigating Committee report in 1937. The committee uncovered the fact that in 1933-34 Weir shelled out over $14,000 for tear gas and revolvers and in 1935 more than $12,000 for industrial spies. Besides this, National Steel were members in good standing of the National Metal Trades Association, an organization devoted to the destruction of labor unions.

The Weir-Dewey link is cleverly shrouded, for as is the case with other Dewey money-men, there is no open association. There are no picture or statements tying the brash young man who aches to be President to the tired old man of 71. But, beneath the surface, where the public seldom looks, a firm bond has been built.

The chief thread is Mrs. Ruth Hanna Simms, former Republican national committeewoman, America Firster, and one of Dewey's earliest and most vociferous backers. Mrs. Simms, a former sister-in-law of Col. Robert McCormick, has a cousin, Howard Melville Hanna, on Weir's board.

The Hanna family owns 600,000 of National Steel's 2,200,000 shares. Other threads are Weir's steady contributions to the Republican campaign funds and his association with members of the Mellon clan, a rock-ribbed GOP family who back Herbert Hoover's protege.

Weir's connection with the National Association of Manufacturers—he served as a board member—brought him into the political scene when Dewey was still in his political swaddling clothes. But his labors are still talked about by NAM members—several of whom form Dewey's braintrust.

Faced with a fait accompli—the Wagner Act—the NAM established in 1935 the National Industrial Information Committee, whose sole purpose was to antagonize public opinion against labor. What more willing chairman could it have chosen than Ernest T. Weir? He accepted and promised to raise an annual $1,000,000 propaganda fund.

LA FOLLETTE COMMENT

"The National Association of Manufacturers has blanketed the country with propaganda which, in technique, has relied upon indirection of meaning and in presentation, secrecy and deception. Radio speeches, public meetings, news, cartoons, editorials, advertising, motion pictures and many other artifices of propaganda have not in most instances disclosed to the public their origin with the NAM."

Urges US Take Mills

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—Government operation of three Alabama cotton mills, which the owner is closing, is called for in a memorandum sent this week to the War Production Board by John W. Edelman, representative here of the Textile Workers Union of America.

The union contends that the continued operation of the plants is essential to the war effort.

900 JOBLESS

The plants located at Russellville, Haleysville and Jasper, Ala., were sold by the Alabama Mills chain to Jacob Ziskind, exported of second-hand textile machinery. Edelman said that 900 workers were told this week they would be jobless as soon work being processed is completed.

The memorandum to J. Spencer Love, director of Textiles, Clothing and Leather Bureau, said that the TWUA is the collective bargaining agent at two of the mills and "perhaps the third mill, which is non-union, was added to the 'job lot' to make the intention of the owner less obvious."

'Avery Formula' Book Sent To Congress

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—The National Committee to Protect Labor Rights of Montgomery Ward Workers this week sent out the booklet "Avery Formula" to all Congress as Montgomery Ward continued to defy the Government.

Leo Goodman, acting executive secretary of the committee and Washington representative of CIO-United Mail Order, Warehouse and Retail Employes, sent an accompanying letter which said in part:

"As long as this oppression of the workers in the Montgomery Ward Co. continues, the workers employed there will strive to secure their rights and privileges against the oppression imposed on them by Sewell Avery."

William L. Knous, War Labor Board-appointed arbitrator for 41 grievances under the old contract between Local 21 of the union and the company, this week at last started hearings in Chicago.

Still refusing to recognize Knous' authority, Montgomery Ward is participating only "to proect their rights."

The old contract is in operation until a new one is signed through negotiations with the union or through a board order.

1,600 At PAC Meet

Kansas City, Sept. 16—The CIO-Political Action Committee campaign went into high gear here at a recent meeting when 1,600 CIO members and their families attended a mass meeting at which funds were collected for PAC.

Speakers included Tilford E. Dudley, Washington representative of the Packinghouse Workers; Irwin DeShetler, CIO regional director, and W. A. Holloway, PAC regional director.

A resolution declaring "the 'Little Steel' formula must go" was adopted and sent ot William H. Davis, War Labor Board chairman. A city-wide petition against the retention of the "Llte Steel" formula was initiated.

Vets' Leader Urges Jobs For All

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—Like the CIO, Millard W. Rice, national service director, Disabled American Veterans, in an article in a recent issue of The Shipyard Worker identifies the welfare of World War II veterans with the welfare of the nation.

"The crux of the problem (the economic future of the veteran) lies in planning for an economy of abundance—a prosperous Amerlco," the veterans' organization official wrote.

It will be recalled that CIO President Philip Murray in a speech last month before the annual encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, said:

"The best assurance for the preference of veterans is the assurance of work for all veterans and all industrial workers."

To implement that policy the CIO is seeking to have adequate Federal legislation to guarantee planned reconversion with the aim of providing full employment in the postwar era.

Rice says that at the close of the war between 8 and 12 million veterans "will look to us for the way back—to a normal, productive life in the environment of peace and security.

LIKE CIVILIANS

"They will not find it a mustering-out pay check, a preferential rating for non-existent jobs, or even in generous unemployment allowances. They will find it in the same way as their civilian neighbors—in an expanding economy that provides jobs for all employables, not because they are veterans, but because they are men. . .

"The economic future of the veteran cannot be solved solely through preferential treatment and government aid. The jobs have got to be there. The crux of the problem lies in planning for an economy of abundance—a prosperous America."

Rice calls for "stimulation of small business, civic development and public works, full use of America's gigantic productive resources, incentive taxes, expansion of foreign markets, low tariffs."

The veterans' organization official attacked those who look upon "the so-called—and I mean 'so-called'—GI Bill of Rights as the solution for the economic problems of all veterans . . . And far too many imagine that we can separate a veteran's welfare from the welfare of all."

Maybe Dewey Can Explain This One

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23—The golden promises of Thomas E. Dewey took on a slight tarnish this week as three Republican henchmen of the would-be occupant of the White House tried to give labor a swift kick in the teeth. The issue was the famous Montgomery Ward case, the immediate action was a report on government seizure of the S. L. Avery property, and the decision by a House investigating committee was four to three in favor of the government's right to take over the firm's Chicago plant.

Four Democrats voted, against the three Republicans, to declare that the government's action was legal.

Comment on the action came from Pres. Samuel Wolchok of CIO's Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes, which represents the majority of the workers employed in the seized Chicago plant. Wolchok said:

"Candidate Dewey had better get together with his Republican henchmen in Congress. Their present game of issuing fine platitudes while continuing to beat the American worker with a big stick is too obvious."

The Democratic majority said in 25 pages that if the War Labor Board order requiring Montgomery Ward to deal in democratic fashion with the union had been successfully flouted, the policy would have led to chaos.

"If the order of the Board could be disregarded at pleasure by one business or one union, all could exercise the same right, and anything like a stable war labor policy would be gone," the majority declared.

"To have broken it down at the time of this controversy would have resulted immediately in confusion and bickering and lock-outs and strikes and picket lines, constituting a double threat to the war effort by retarding essential production and begetting disorder wholly inconsistent with marshalling the full power of the nation in a mighty war effort."

Chow Cost Is What Counts, Not The Formulas—UE-CIO

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23—Nothing ordered by FDR or by Congress stops the War Labor Board from junking the Little Steel formula "in light of the rise in the cost of living since May, 1942," a WLB "fact-finding" panel said this week on the UE-CIO's case with General Electric and Westinghouse.

Thus the WLB panel, repeating what a similar panel said about the steel case a week ago, gave the outworn formula another kick toward oblivion.

Declaring that the panel's unanimous report substantiates the union's case, UE Pres. Albert J. Fitzgerald and Sec.-Treas. Julius Emspak hailed it as "an important step toward guaranteeing adequate purchasing power necessary for postwar security and prosperity for all."

The report came on the eve of the 10th convention of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO's third biggest union, meeting this week in New York.

More than 1,000 delegates, representing 700,000 men and women war workers, are expected to attend.

The UE's case, main point of which is a 17-cent wage raise, fitted in with the United Steelworkers' case and with similar arguments advanced by the CIO Auto Workers.

As in the steel case, the GE-Westinghouse panel found that the Bureau of Labor Statistics "cost of living index," basis for the formula, is out of line with the facts of life on a worker's budget.

It also pointed out that CIO studies show living costs at 45.3 per cent above 1941, base date for Little Steel, while the BLS to its figure of only 25.1 per cent.

The BLS, the panel noted, omits all mention of such factors as lower quality, hidden price increases, etc. The panel shows further that the BLS admits this, quoting the foreword to the index:

"The index does not show the full wartime effect on the cost of living of such factors as lowered quality, disappearance of low-priced goods, and forced changes in housing and eating away from home.

"It does not measure changes in total 'living costs' (BLS emphasis)—that is in the total amount families spend for living."

The panel report adds a warning that cuts in weekly hours, due to cutbacks in war contracts, will bring earnings down still further below the cost of living, though it takes the position that straight-time earnings only are to be considered by the WLB.

Action of the panel, which merely "finds facts" and does not make recommendations, now goes to the full War Labor Board. Full WLB hearings on the steel case start September 27 and 28.

Hearings on the panel's findings in the UE case are set for September 29 and 30.

What Your Congressman Did

Votes For Jobs or Ballots For Chaos? The Record!

When the GOP-polltax Democrat alliance in Congress started out to wreck reconversion, one of the things they were most afraid of was rollcall votes. Rollcall votes get printed in the Congressional Record, and they have a way of haunting those Congressmen who vote wrong.

As a result, the House avoided rollcall votes on the issues of reconversion until they came to the question of unemployment benefits for Federal workers. Aid to war workers and veterans, planning for jobs and production went out the window without a record.

The rollcall vote below is therefore about the only printed guide we have to the way House members voted. It is not a complete guide on how your Representative stood on the other and bigger issues, but it is printed here in place of a more comprehensive one.

A plus sign (+) indicates a vote for unemployment benefits of the 3,000,000 Federal employes who don't get them now. A minus sign (—) is a vote against them. NV means not voting. P plus (P^+) means paired for, P minus (P^-) means paired against.

"Wonder how he stands on reconversion?"

LIVING WEALTH: 30 million school-age children are the most valuable "mine" this nation possesses. Their future—and the nation's—depend on planning that will provide aid to health and social progress, like school lunch programs (top), and that will replace slum environments, like the one below, with communities where kids have a chance to grow up as good citizens.

"We have accepted, so to speak, a second Bill of Rights under which a new basis of security and properity can be established for all—regardless of station, race or creed.

"Among these rights are:

"1. The right to adequate medical care and the opportunity to achieve and enjoy good health.

"2. The right to adequate protection from the economic fears of old age, sickness, accident and unemployment.

"3. The right to a good education."

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT
Speech on The State of the Union, Jan. 11, 1944.

Disease, Early Death Take Four Billion Man Days in U. S.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23—More than four billion man-days a year are lost in the U. S. through preventable sickness and premature death, Philip Murray told a Senate subcommittee on wartime health this week.

"At a time when the nation needs every ounce of energy, we have been supinely witnessing a drain on our productive forces aggregating more than four billion work days a year," Murray said.

"Had we been able to prevent this vast drain on the nation's manpower we could have had a larger Army and Navy, a much larger labor force, and we would not be faced with the acute manpower shortage we have been experiencing.

"It means that disease and sickness take more from our national manpower resources than the continual maintenance of our armed forces at their present strength."

A similar report came from California in testimony before the subcommittee by Albee Slade, state CIO legislative director, who said:

"The war effort has been impeded by two factors immediately related to health services and medical care. One of these has been the failure to provide adequate medical care and allied services to the congested areas of war production.

"The other and more significant factor is our appallingly unnecessary heritage of ill health and physical disability. While this has been known to organized labor for some time, recent Selective Service examinations have made the entire country aware of these tragic conditions."

Slade stressed the need for a national health program "designed to make available to all people the medical care needed to make and keep us a physically fit nation."

This is what the people need, rather than mere insurance schemes that simply cushion the economic shock of severe illness to the individual but do nothing to improve general mass health.

NATIONAL CONCERN

A national health program will obviously call for Federal funds, Murray pointed out, though he recommended that it be based on community needs.

"More important than the provision of money by the Federal government, however, is the realization that the problem of national health is a matter of national concern—to be solved by cooperative planning and action," he said.

"I can assure you that the five million organized workers I represent are eager to cooperate in a program for better medical care for all citizens of the country. They and their families experience in their daily lives the need for a readjustment of the burdens of medical costs."

THREE-POINT PROGRAM

The California health program has three main points, Albee told the subcommittee:

"The first is the provision of adequate hospital and sub-hospital facilities, properly distributed throughout the country.

"The second essential is adequate and completely accessible medical care, available to all, through systems combining group practice by physicians and group pre-payment by the consumers.

"The third essential is public subsidy for the professional education of medical students and for post-graduate study at regular intervals by physicians in practice."

Kids Community Problem No. 1

A libel against working American mothers was wiped off the books this week. Wielding the eraser was the U. S. Senate's sub-Committee on Wartime Health and Education.

The subject studied: Juvenile Delinquency.

Among the conclusions: There is no single cause of delinquency—it is a community problem. Patriotic working mothers whose labor is needed to win the war are not "guilty" of contributing to delinquency, and "it would be a poor service to the country to insist that these women go back to the kitchen and nursery."

Among the recommendations: "The proper answer to the problem of the care of children of working mothers is provision of suitable facilities for the care of these children during the working hours of their parents."

After hearing more than 50 witnesses on Juvenile delinquency, the Sub-Committee reached this conclusion:

"Where the basic needs of children are adequately met, delinquency is at a minimum. In badly congested centers, and among children who have been uprooted from their customary family and community life, failure to provide essential health, educational, recreational and social services has been accompanied by increasing conflicts between children and the law."

The Sub-Committee pointed out that every child should have love and affection; necessary shelter, food and clothing; good medical care; good schools; and easy access to "churches, community centers and youth organizations, where with other children he can share his hours of worship, play and recreational activity.

"If the child or his family suffer handicaps or face problems which they are unable to solve by themselves, experienced professional workers should be available to lend a hand," the Sub-Committee stated, adding that preventive measures such as these are the soundest approach to the problem of juvenile delinquency.

Recommended also was the establishment of a commission for children and young people in the Office of War Mobilization to help coordinate a program providing for the basic needs of all children.

"Such a program," the Sub-Committee said, "would be aimed at better housing and more adequate facilities and personnel or education, medical care, recreation, guidance and social services or children.

"Particular attention should be given to the establishment of child-guidance clinics as an integral part of school systems in key cities.

"The Committee is convinced," the report added, "that the conservation and fullest constructive utilization of its greatest human resources—30 million school-age children—is so important that it merits recognition and leadership equal to that obtained in mobilization of our physical and industrial resources."

U. S. Death Rates In Upper Brackets

Americans are accustomed to thinking of themselves as the best-off people in the world. We live in the richest country, we have the most things, and we're the best taken care of.

As far as health is concerned, this isn't so. Death rate statistics show that we're far from No. 1 on the international health list. For example:

The U. S. is 15th from the top on the childhood and adolescence death rate; 20th in the age group from 35 to 65; 5th for infant deaths (excluding Negro infants).

In 1942 we lost 40 infants in every 1,000 at birth. Half of these babies could have been saved by proper pre-natal and maternity care. This would have saved 70,000 infant American lives in 1942.

Proof that care would save these babies is seen in the comparative infant death rate of 29 per 1,000 for Connecticut and 98 per 1,000 for New Mexico—a 300 per cent spread.

Nearly every birth in Connecticut was attended by a doctor. In New Mexico, 25 per cent were born without medical attention of any kind; 60 per cent outside a hospital.

That's why we need a national health program.

Gains Already Made In Congress Primaries Show Way To More

The big job of electing a Commander-in-Chief next November has obscured somewhat the job of electing a new Congress to go with him.

Yet this job must be done. If we get a new Congress for the next two years just as negative as the present one has been, we risk losing much of the gains we shall make by re-electing FDR.

How does the score stand on this today, less than six weeks from election time? How many reactionaries will be certainly rid of next January when the new Congress comes in and how many good men are we likely to have in their places?

On the basis of an incomplete survey, our side has done moderately well in eliminating some pretty bad influences on Capitol Hill, either in the primaries or by persuading some of them not even to try.

WHO THEY ARE

In the House, 10 thoroughly anti-labor and anti-FDR members have been scratched. In the Senate, six of the leading tories have been retired to private life, and three of these were in the extreme appeasement wing.

Three of the 10 dead ducks from the House are Dies Committee members, Dies himself, Starnes (D., Ala.), and Costello (D., Calif.), which should help prove to some of the others that union-baiting and red herrings don't always pay off politically.

Newsome, of Alabama; Kennedy, of New York, and Kleberg, of Texas, were three others who could just as well have served on the Dies Committee, but who won't serve on anything after January 20.

On the Republican side, the House will have to get along without Gilchrist, of Iowa; Lambertson, of Kansas, and Douglas and Mruk, of New York. All four were distinguished for Roosevelt-baiting and union-baiting; Lambertson especially, who reached new lows even for the GOP in his attacks on the President's family.

THE SENATE SIDE

The atmosphere and the work of the Senate, particularly in its dealings with foreign relations, will be much improved by the elimination of Bennett Champ Clark (D., Mo.); D. Worth Clark (D., Idaho); Robert R. Reynolds (D., N. C.), and Rufus C. Holman (R. Ore.).

On top of that there's the fine job the voters did despite the poll-tax in ridding us of Hattie Caraway (D., Ark.), and "Cotton Ed" Smith (D., S. C.), Smith being one of the most vitriolic old tories in political creation.

Some of the new men and women that will be coming in—either dead certainties or way up in the betting odds—will add strength to Congress and to FDR in the tasks ahead.

These include such Representatives as Adam Clayton Powell of New York, minister of the largest Negro church in the world; Vito Marcantonio, due for re-election from New York; Helen Gahagan Douglas and Frank Havenner, of California, and others.

In the Senate, there's an excellent chance that the appeaser Nye, of North Dakota, and the encrusted tory Taft, of Ohio, will be defeated and that Bennett Clark's victor in the primaries, Roy McKittrick will win the election too.

These are a few of the changes that have already taken place in Congress. Many more will come—if everybody and his wife remembers to register and vote.

They show what can be done toward electing a new Congress to go with the Commander-in-Chief to final victory and a stable, peaceful future.

and Senator and asking him about it when he comes home to electioneer. (See roll-call on page 2)

If his record shows on rollcall votes, use that. If it doesn't, ask him how he voted. On reconversion, ask him how he voted on (1) security for war workers and veterans and (2) planning for jobs and production.

Then sit back and listen to his answers—and watch out for double-talk.

Congress and Us

Why Congressmen Behave Like That At Election Time

By C. W. FOWLER

Congress is going to recess for the elections this week, the majority standing firm on a record of a bad job thoroughly done.

Most conspicuous and most thoroughly bad job was done on reconversion. Here the record is a complete zero. Starting from a sound, sensible plan for speeding war production and providing jobs and security after the war outlined in the Kilgore Bill, the majority so watered it down that the end result is three nothings—nothing done, nothing planned, nothing foreseen for the future.

First the Kilgore Bill, providing for planned reconversion, for aid to war workers and veterans and business was junked by the Senate. Then the admittedly inadequate George Bill was scrapped by the House.

Finally, this week, the joint House-Senate conference committee has reported out what the lawyers like to call "the negation of a negation"—the Doughton Bill.

WHY SUCH A RECORD?

As a result, the Congressmen are going home to face the electors with a complete blank on reconversion, an issue involving the jobs, security and welfare of all the people.

How come? Why do Congressmen who have to come up for re-election chose to face the electors with such a bum score on such an issue?

The Republicans voted solidly against planned reconversion, and so did many of the polltax Democrats. The Republicans voted that way because they hope to make good on Dewey's bleatings about a "Roosevelt depression." They hope to create such a depression by fouling up reconversion and thus help their little man into the White House.

The polltax Democrats who voted against the Kilgore Bill and even the George Bill don't care what they do, so long as they can protect their low wage industries and their sacred "state's rights" to exploit as they please.

After all, unemployment benefits of $35 or even $20 a week, as proposed by the Kilgore Bill and by James F. Byrnes, might "spoil" people for 30 cents an hour wages—as more than one polltaxer admitted.

HIDING THE RECORD

The polltaxers, of course, don't have to worry about re-election—not as long as there's a polltax. The Republicans who voted to wreck reconversion hope to hide behind the voter's ignorance of the record.

For example, with one exception (unemployment benefits for Federal workers), the House refused to take rollcall votes on the issues during the reconversion debate. This is an obvious attempt to keep the truth of their stand on jobs and security from their constituents.

There's a way to pierce this fog of deception around reconversion—and that's by learning the record of each Congressman

Keep Your Eye On Congress

Apparently determined to go to the voters with as negative a record as possible, Congress is going to adjourn this week or next for the really serious business of preparing for the elections.

In their last actions this week, both House and Senate agreed to dump Federal unemployment compensation and planning out of the reconversion bill, thereby reducing the "irreducible" George bill still further.

Then they went through another spasm of "compromise" of the heads-I-win-tales-you-lose variety and knocked out all the protective features of the surplus property bill.

On only one main issue—unemployment benefits for 3,000,000 Federal workers—did the House have the nerve to give us a roll-call vote. (see page 2). The rest of the dirty work was done in committee crossroads, where the voters aren't invited in to watch the proceedings.

Congress has also left plenty of unfinished business, some of which is listed below, the rest of which will be told in this paper between now and election day.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Reconversion (S 2051)	Nothing; no planning, no aid to war workers, veterans.	Out of conference between Senate and House; now to FDR.	Make this a No. 1 election test.
Substandard wages floor (S Con Res 48)	Sets 65c an hour as wage floor.	Hearings start Sept. 26 in Senate Labor and Education subcommittee.	Urge your Senators to support.
Permanent FEPC S. 2048)	Makes Fair Employment Practice Committee a permanent U. S. agency.	Out of Senate Labor subcommittee, headed for debate and vote.	Urge early debate and favorable vote before recess.
Federal Aid to Education (HR 2849)	Provides $300,000,000 to raise substandard wages of teachers and improve school facilities.	Stalled in House Education Committee; Discharge Petition 12 on floor to get it out.	Urge your Representative to sign DP 12.

(Note: most of your urging will have to be done at home, since the Congressmen and Senators are coming back for re-election. All business unfinished at final end of this Congress next January 20 will have to be taken up all over again in the new Congress.

UAW Meet Pushes Aid To Veterans

The convention of the CIO United Auto Workers at Grand Rapids, Mich., moved on a broad front to aid American veterans who are returning in increasing numbers to civilian life.

Efforts of the National UAW Veterans' Committee, created by the National UAW Veterans' Conference in Washington last April, bore fruit at the convention in the adoption of two resolutions.

One resolution was directed at Major General Hershey, National Selective Service Director, for his interpretation of the Selective Service Act, and another provided convention approval of a comprehensive veterans' program.

The convention, in passing the latter resolution, also approved the existing Veterans' Department to be headed by a veteran as soon as possible. The department is now in operation.

The entire program was buttressed by a demand for full employment, including planning, government operation of certain plants, leasing government-owned plants to private industry with guarantees of full employment, a vast public works program and a 30-hour week.

More specifically the program proposes:

SPECIFIC PROPOSALS

Handling of employment, education, and vocational training of veterans by appropriate governmental agencies.

Expansion of the facilities of the Veterans Administration and government-provided educational and vocational opportunities to all veterans of this war.

Full employment compensation and social security credit for servicemen and women for the period of their service.

Reiteration of the policy of no initiation fees and reinstatement fees for veterans.

Cooperation with the rank and file and progressive elements in all existing veterans' organizations.

Right of a disabled veteran who worked in a UAW plant and "whose disability prevents him from working at his old job, to exercise his senority on a plant-wide basis in order to work on a job nearest his former skill and pay or any job his disability permits."

Adjusted service pay of $3 for each day of domestic service, and $4 for each day of active overseas service.

Instead of General Hershey's interpretation of the Selective Service Act, the convention urged:

Granting accumulated seniority during period in service and re-employment in accordance with seniority.

Protection by seniority clauses of the UAW contracts of employes defined by General Hershey as "probationary" and "temporary."

Seniority credit for a veteran hitherto not employed in a plant for the period in service, provided that such a veteran cannot "bump" another employe, that this provision shall be available for only a year, and that this policy is applicable only at the plant where the veteran first gets a job after discharge.

Disabled Vets' Head Hails UAW Plan

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23—Millard W. Rice, national service director of the Disabled American Veterans, in an interview with The CIO News, this week gave unstinting praise to the CIO United Auto Workers' proposal that veterans be given adjusted service pay based on length and place of service.

The proposal, contained in a resolution adopted by the UAW convention at Grand Rapids, Mich., last week, was that a veteran be given $3 for each day of domestic service and $4 for each day of active overseas service.

It was further recommended by the convention that the minimum and the maximum for domestic duty be $100 and $3,500, respectively, and for overseas duty, $500 and $4,500, respectively.

DISABILITY PLAN PRAISED

Rice said that his and several other veterans' organizations have made similar proposals which were incorporated in a number of identical bills which had been introduced in Congress.

He gave qualified praise to another UAW convention proposal providing that a disabled veteran who worked in a UAW plant and "whose disability prevents him from working at his old job" has the right "to exercise his seniority on a plant-wide basis on a job nearest his former skill and pay or any job his disability permits."

He said that this provision was not so far as his organization wanted to go, but that it marked a "distinct advance" on anything hitherto urged by unions or employers.

Rice urged that non-union veterans with disabilities which the Veterans Administration had decided were service incurred "be granted preferential seniority as to all jobs covered by their respective locals, for which they have the necessary qualications".

It's Freeze or Thaw With WLB—Which Do You Want to Do?

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23—With the filing of special War Labor Board panel reports on two of CIO's biggest wage cases, the need for revising the Little Steel formula came sharply to national attention this week.

Both reports, one covering the United Steelworkers and the other the United Electrical Workers case, were merely "findings of fact" and therefore not final or definitive pronouncements by the WLB. Both have to go to full War Labor Board hearings before they affect WLB wage policy.

Both reports, however, emphatically laid down the principle that the Little Steel formula is not sacred—that there is nothing in law or executive order that permanently freezes the outmoded formula. For example, the UE panel report says:

"The panel finds that there is no executive action restricting the Board from recommending modification of or Congressional action prohibiting or restricting the President from reconsidering and modifying the 'Little Steel' formula in the light of the rise in the cost of living since May, 1942."

KNOCKS OUT BLS

This statement alone knocks out the whole phony basis for the Little Steel formula. The formula was originally based on the Bureau of Labor Statistics' so-called "Cost of Living index." This claimed that the cost of living had risen only 26 per cent between 1941 and 1944.

This index has been proved phony, not only by the CIO's studies and by other studies, but by admission of the BLS itself, which has said: "It (the Index) does not measure total living costs—that is, in the total amount families spend for living."

In other words, the fact-finding panels of the WLB studying the Steelworkers and the UE cases have agreed that the Little Steel wage formula must be thawed out—that the wage freeze is no longer valid.

SEVEN MONTHS WAITING

The CIO's case for a thawing out of the wage freeze was first presented by Philip Murray to the WLB back in February—almost eight months ago.

The facts and figures on the increase in the cost of living were submitted at that time, have been amply reinforced since then. No one has refuted those facts—and now the "fact-finding" panels of the WLB come forward to agree that these are facts.

Yet the WLB has waited seven months to arrive at this stage in the procedure. Meanwhile, Dewey and his advisers are trying very hard to make political capital out of the delays in settling the cases.

In his "labor" speech at Seattle, Dewey tried to claim that the WLB and other government agencies were somehow holding labor down, were denying labor its full and free rights under collective bargaining.

The answer to Dewey's attempt to exploit this situation must come when the War Labor Board, acting on its panel findings, takes the final step to crack the outmoded Little Steel formula.

The final answer will come when the workers and all the people cast their votes for Roosevelt and against Dewey and Hooverism on November 7.

Defrosting Job Long Overdue

It is nearly a year now since the CIO started the present movement to defrost the Little Steel wage freeze.

In line with the wage policy adopted at the last CIO convention, the United Steelworkers of America led off with its demand for a 17c-an-hour wage increase, a guaranteed annual wage and other improvements.

The basis of the Steelworkers' case, as of similar demands of other unions, was that living costs have risen so far above the level of frozen wage rates that upward wage adjustments are clearly necessary to fulfill the intent of the Price Control Act stabilizing prices and wages at the level of Sept. 15, 1942.

To secure these adjustments, it was necessary to convince the Natl. War Labor Board of the need for revising the Little Steel formula, which limits wage increases to 15% above the level of Jan. 1, 1941—on the long outdated assumption of a 15% living cost increase since that date.

So, for many long months now, the Steelworkers and other CIO unions have been going through all the lengthy and tortuous procedures of the War Labor Board—proving again and again the most obvious facts, but still awaiting remedial action.

Voluminous studies were made by the CIO, which showed a 45.3% increase in living costs between January, 1941, and March, 1944. These had to be checked against reports of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, studies made by the employers, and finally a special study by a committee of experts appointed by the WLB.

Then the Steelworkers had to present to the Board the most elaborate and thoroughly documented case ever prepared by a labor union, in support of their case for revision of the Little Steel formula and their other demands. Half a dozen other CIO unions had also to present their cases similarly.

Then these cases were referred to special panels, and the job of preparing and presenting these cases again at panel hearings had to be gone through for weeks on end.

Finally, in September, 1944, with labor's patience almost at an end, we have the first official findings released in the form of panel reports to the War Labor Board.

These panel reports substantially support labor's arguments for revision of the Little Steel formula.

The public panel members agree that living costs are much higher than the BLS claimed, and far beyond the 15% on which the formula is based. They agree that upward wage adjustments need not have inflationary effects.

But even this is not the end. The full Board has still to pass on the panel findings, to conduct more public hearings and then to make up its mind on facts and arguments with which its members have been fully familiar for months. Then finally it must present its recommendations to Pres. Roosevelt.

There is a limit to all human patience, however. That limit will be passed, so far as labor is concerned, if Dewey-supporting industrialists make any headway with their present plot to stall off a final determination of these union cases until after the elections—in their effort to make a political football of labor's deep sense of injustice over the wage freeze and the long delays in remedying it.

The public members of the WLB should be public-spirited enough to resist such plots, and to render their final decision on the wage cases of the Steelworkers and other unions without any further delays or stalling.

Labor's case for defrosting the wage freeze is a matter of simple economic justice that should be decided NOW on its merits, without regard to selfish pressures or political calculations.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

DEWEY'S labor speech made a great hit with the toilers in Wall Street's vineyard. It went over big with the DuPonts, the Weirs, the Pews, the Sewell Averys and others who work at working the workers. The unionists of the Union League Club were enthusiastic.

"Working" newspapermen like Roy Howard, Wm. Randolph Hearst and Bertie McCormick found much to praise in it. The Scripps-Howard press for the first time in years ran an editorial giving "labor's side"—as told by Mr. Dewey!

As to the rest of the working population, the speech might have gone over with them too, but for the fact they have memories of the past and hopes for the future.

The memories that rose to razz Dewey's eloquence included the wage-cutting open-shop drive and the unchecked layoffs of the 'twenties—the "back to normalcy" of a Republican administration that limited its postwar planning to "encouraging business to create jobs and opportunity."

There were mocking echoes too from the long years of Harding, Coolidge and Hoover—when unemployment insurance, old age pensions, minimum wage legislation etc. were so bitterly opposed—and when collective bargaining was crushed by the purse-proud GOP "angels" with their private armies, their company unions and their labor spies.

When Dewey spoke of "breadlines, leaf raking, settling labor disputes with gunfire and gasbombs, wholesale farm foreclosures" and millions of unemployed, he stirred only memories of the ghastly Hoover depression, when the government lifted not a finger to provide work, social insurance or any check on the violence of anti-union employers.

This depression was the logical outcome of the policies Dewey now advocates of "letting business do it" without "government interference."

★ ★ ★

When Dewey spoke of the New Deal, it only reminded labor listeners how Roosevelt's New Deal established the right of collective bargaining through the Wagner Act; enacted old age pensions, unemployment insurance and other social security legislation; checked sweatshop exploitation and long hours through the wage-hour law; and created the Fair Employment Practice Committee to cope with job discriminations.

In fact, the only constructive note in Dewey's speech was such limited assurance as he gave that he did not intend to destroy totally all these New Deal social gains.

But even this was offset by memories of how his Republican followers in Congress joined with anti-New Deal Democrats in opposing, limiting or sabotaging all these New Deal measures.

★ ★ ★

As to Dewey's remarks on the anti-labor Smith-Connally Act, it is amazing to find so much gall in one so small!

This act, which he described as a "New Deal interference with free collective bargaining" was opposed by all true New Dealers in Congress, was vetoed by Pres. Roosevelt, and was passed over his veto by the Dewey-Republicans combining with anti-New Deal polltax Democrats.

This Republican-anti-New-Deal interference with free collective bargaining, the Smith-Connally Act, is a dead cat that Dewey can't disown. He certainly can't hang it around the neck of its chief opponent, FDR.

As to the future, Dewey's only concrete offer to labor is a strengthening of the Dept. of Labor under a Secretary "from the ranks of labor."

Since about the only prominent Dewey supporters from labor's ranks are John L. Lewis and Big Bill Hutcheson, this proposal will evoke little enthusiasm from the countless labor unionists who have suffered from the dictatorial arrogance and raiding tactics of these two individuals.

Nor will they be able to imagine such individuals conducting a Department that will "abolish privilege for one group over any other group."

American labor's hopes for the future run to an administration that will really plan for full production and jobs for all, providing adequate social protection and useful work at decent wages for any whom private industry may fail to employ.

For such hopes Dewey offers less than nothing. The record of his Republican followers in Congress in defeating the Kilgore-Murray-Truman bill, and in opposing properly planned reconversion and even the most limited protection for displaced workers, indicates more clearly than anything Dewey can say just what might be expected from an administration he would head.

EXECUTIVE 8881

To Every Member of the CIO:

November 7th, 1944, will be the most critical Election Day in American history. It will decide whether this country of ours is going to continue its forward march toward peace, progress and prosperity -- with full, stable employment and a good life for all Americans -- or whether it will sink back to the kind of country which America became after the last war.

It will decide whether we have a country in which the problem is to find men and women to do necessary jobs, or a country in which men and women, eager to work, tramp the streets in search of jobs which do not exist.

It will decide whether our sons and husbands and brothers who are now gaining glorious victories on the far-flung battlefronts will get jobs or applestands when they come home.

It will determine whether our country makes a real contribution to the establishment of lasting peace among nations -- whether our dead shall have died in order to make sure that their children and our children may live in peace -- or whether our dead shall have died in vain.

On behalf of the CIO Executive Board, we ask that you and every member of your family register to vote -- and that you do vote on NOVEMBER 7TH. We are not suggesting how you should register or how you should vote. That decision is yours to make as an American citizen in your own good time and with your own good judgment.

What we do ask of you, and of every member of the CIO, is that you regard your right to vote not merely as a right but as a duty.

It is your future, the future of your family, and your union that is at stake. This is your election.

Men Behind Dewey

DuPont Dough Fights Unions

(Second of a series on the big money boys who back Thomas E. Dewey is this article on Lammot duPont, U. S. industrialist, whose slogan is: "No unions, no taxes, sky-high profits." Others in the series will follow.)

The Dewey campaign fund is already swollen—close to $1,000,000 has been raised in New York and New Jersey alone—and millions more will roll in from the 46 states still to be heard from. With the times as they are and the past as a guide, it's safe to predict that the duPont family donation will top the list, as usual.

Take the 1940 campaign for example. The Hatch Act, limiting contribution from individuals to $5,000, was enacted to purify the election atmosphere. But the duPonts, in line with other GOP financiers, evaded this clause by crediting their $186,780 gift to 53 members of the duPont family.

In 1936, when the American Liberty League, Irenee duPont's pet, pinned their hopes on the faded Kansas sunflower, Alf Landon, Lammott duPont operated more openly. He kicked in $105,000. Irenee gave $95,000, Pierre S. $94,000 and five other duPonts $47,000. The grand total was $341,000.

TOTAL $315,280

Through the duPonts, Dewey has other rich sources to tap. The E. I. duPont de Nemours Co., headed by Lammott duPont, owns a 20 per cent interest in General Motors.

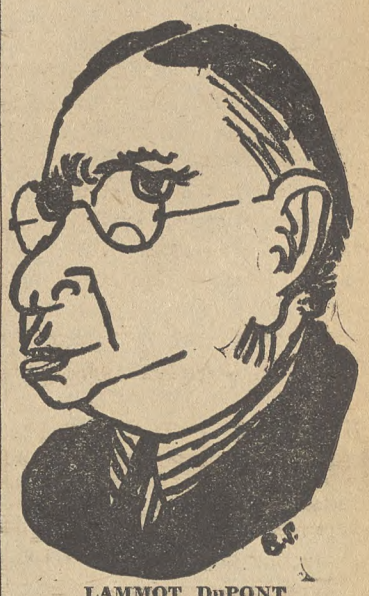
If Dewey's finance chairmen are looking for inspiration, they will find it in the 1940 report, which showed the combined contributions of the duPonts and directors of the E. I. duPont and GM totaled $315,280.

But there is more to the GM-duPont story than cold cash. There is conclusive evidence that these corporations, who heartily endorse Dewey, have been links in a continual anti-labor campaign and worse.

Dewey's statement that the world's raw materials should be made available to all nations is strictly campaign oratory, since Lammot duPont, one of his chief backers, is a principal defendant in an anti-trust suit filed by the government last January. The suit was filed against the Imperial Chemical Industries, Lt., the duPont Company and Lammot duPont in order to dissolve an international chemical cartel.

NAZI TIES

The government suit further charged that disruption of joint operation between duPont and IG, Farben-Industrie, Germany's top chemical combination, was smoothed over by duPont's assurance that it intended to use its good offices to have IG Farben participation restored.



LAMMOT DuPONT

The GOP-dominated Natl. Assoc. of Manufacturers is a secondary outlet for the duPont political philosophy. And since so many of the NAM's functions have been branded as anti-labor—a Congressional committee stated that its Natl. Industrial Information Bureau was organized to "forestall union organization"—duPont can hardly escape the anti-labor tag.

CIO-PAC Opens Books; Deweyites Need Subpena

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23—Congressmen on the House Campaign Investigating Committee got a sharp contrast between two kinds of political action—the CIO kind and the GOP kind—this week.

The contrast came when the committee called at CIO-PAC offices in New York, at PAC's invitation, and when they followed up by calling at Frank Gannett's "Constitutional Government Committee" which supports Dewey.

All books were thrown open at the PAC office, and the Congressmen invited and urged to look at everything. This followed filing of complete financial statements by PAC at a Washington hearing two weeks ago.

It is a different story at Gannett's "Committee" where the Congressmen were defied by the executive secreteary, Edward A. Rumely.

Rumely flatly refused to turn over a list of contributors, even though they are admittedly chipping in at the rate of $385,000 a year for the Dewey supporting "Committee."

The House group, which was asked earlier by PAC Chairman Sidney Hillman to probe Gannett and other pro-GOP organizations, promptly replied with a subpena of the "Committee" records, which should make interesting reading.

More defiance of the House Committee came at a hearing this week when Joseph Kamp, pro-fascist head of the "Constitutional Education League, Inc., also refused to tell where he gets his money.

Kamp ran foul of the LaFollette Committee as long ago as 1937, when Sen. Thomas (D. Utah) found by questioning that the constitutional educator didn't even know what Article I or the first 10 Amendments were about.

His latest publication, aimed at CIO-PAC and Roosevelt, is called "Vote CIO and Get a Soviet America." Seven years ago, he put one out called "Join the CIO and Build a Soviet America."

The anti-FDR, anti-labor line of red-baiting hasn't changed in all that time.

No. 1 Job Political Action, Brophy Tells CIO Councils

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y.—The No. 1 job of CIO Industrial Union Councils is political action, and it should take precedence over everything else, IUC Director John Brophy told the N. Y. State CIO convention.

"If by some mischance Roosevelt should be defeated," Brophy warned, "the reactionaries who are attacking his program will turn next against organized labor, and particularly against its most progressive wing.

"All over the country CIO must concentrate on the simple but difficult job of getting its membership registered and getting them out to the polls."

Brophy, in reviewing the work of industrial union councils, from the days when they were primarily concerned with organizing, to their present jobs with legislative and other government agencies, pointed to the need for training of new leadership to help with the extended tasks that the councils must tackle.

"We need arrangements with local school boards and state universities for the training of officers of local unions and councils in office administration, parliamentary law, public speaking and a knowledge of basic labor legislation," he delcared.

UAW Service: Your Problems Are Answered

"If I can't get somebody to keep my baby, I shall have to give up my war production job."

"I not only was wounded but suffered severe shell shock in the thrust into Normandy. I just can't stand the noise in my shop, and I'm afraid I'll have to quit."

These are just a few of the 101 problems that are presented to the union counselors of the CIO Auto Workers, whose work was praised in a resolution adopted at the recent convention of the union at Grand Rapids, Mich.

WORKERS ARE AIDED

Sometimes the answer to the problem is easy, but more often the counselor does not have the solution immediately, but knows where to send the perplexed worker, who has suffered a loss of morale because of worry.

The counselor knows what services the various social and governmental agencies offer, because officials of these organizations have explained their purposes during the six-week course the counselor took to prepare him for his work.

The UAW War Policy Division decided to start the counselling program after absenteeism and labor turnover showed that the cause was out-of-plant problems—lack of housing, transportation, child care centers and shopping facilities.

COUNSELORS STUDY

The result of meeting of the War Policy Division in cooperation with the Michigan State CIO with representatives of the Detroit Council of Social Agencies was a counselling course for a small group of men and women from UAW plants.

There are management counselors, but the union found that all too often they were untrained or tried to foster anti-union attitudes among the workers.

Another consideration of the union was that not only are the workers taxpayers, and thus entitled to the services of governmental agencies, but that through the National CIO War Relief Committee are large contributors to the war chests of the various communities. The UAW found that many of its members did not realize the services offered by these social agencies receiving their money.

WORK IN 35 SHOPS

There are counselors in about 35 shops, and experience has shown that each one can take care of the needs of between 300 and 400 workers. There is no hard and fast rule and the UAW is learning through experience. The organizational pattern of the counselling plan can follow the steward set-up in plants.

Some of the union counselling service's own problems have not been solved, and it may be necessary for the bargaining committees to ask management to allow the counselors adequate time and facilities for aiding the workers while they are on the job.

Particularly helpful in establishing the counselling system has been the Office of Labor Production, War Production Board. The War Policy Committee points out that once the counselling system is established in a plant it is important that advertising be used to acquaint the workers of the new service.

"NOT A WAR BABY"

"Union counselling is not just a war baby," the War Policy Committee says in its pamphlet.

During the reconversion period the need for union counsellors will increase with the demobilization of millions of servicemen and war workers.

With that thought, as well as the present need in mind, the UAW convention recommended that the CIO "assist other international CIO unions, city and State CIO councils in promoting the union counselling program."

(This article is based on convention action and the UAW Policy Division's pamphlet, "Union Counselling," which may be obtained at 411 W. Milwaukee St., Detroit 2, Mich.)

Co-Ops And You

Whether it's bargaining or buying, it's done collectively by Studebaker Local 5, CIO Auto Workers.

On the second floor of the modern, steel front building in South Bend, Ind., members decide the course of the local. Downstairs they conduct a credit union and one of the town's cleanest, most modern food stores—a cooperative.

Torma tells of the spacious, bank-like quarters of the credit union "to the left" on the first floor, and of the food store, located "on the right." High on the wall hangs the local's service flag.

"You see the consumer, producer and democratic interests of the melting pot of nationalities working together—side by side in the factory, in the cooperative store, in the credit union and in Local 5—an all-out effort in saving democracy," the pamphlet says.

Coming down to cases, he presents the co-op manager, the farmer who brings in a case of eggs to trade for grade-labeled co-op merchandise; the Notre Dame professor who joins the co-op; the Bendix Local attorney who volunteers his services to help solve legal problems.

Torma takes the reader on a tour of the store and introduces him to the factory worker obtaining a loan to buy coal which he purchases through the cooperative store.

"This is America working together," Torma says.

Attractive co-op display boards have been placed in a number of union halls in the Chicago, Detroit and Minneapolis areas at a cost of $15 for construction and monthly servicing with changes of photos and slogans. At one hall a cooperative wholesale paid half of the costs and the unions paid the other half.

Representatives of organized labor have been invited to participate in the Centennial Cooperative Congress to be held October 8-13 at Morrison Hotel, Chicago. The Congress will mark the hundredth anniversary of the establishment of the first modern co-op at Rochdale, England, and is sponsored by the Cooperative League of U. S. A., National Cooperative Finance Association and National Cooperatives,.

Speakers will include Murray D. Lincoln, E. R. Bowen and Dr. J. P. Warbasse, president, general secretary and president-emeritus respectively of the Cooperative League, and Leon Henderson, former OPA head, and Judge Thurman Arnold of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia and former assistant attorney general in charge of monopoly investigation.

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

A whole series of wonderful auxiliary reports and suggestions on political action work came out of the recent board meeting of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries-CIO.

Some auxiliaries have been doing a fine job on ballots for servicemen. The Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers auxiliaries in the Utah Auxiliary Council have set up booths in prominent places in their towns where boys and girls in unform can get ballot application cards and information on soldier vote laws.

As a result of the fine publicity the women got in the Salt Lake papers, the State Fair invited them to operate a similar information center during the fair—and of course the auxiliaries are doing it.

CANVASS BY TOWNS

In addition to operating booths, the Utah auxiliaries canvassed their entire towns door to door leaving ballot application cards with families of servicemen to be forwarded to them, and checking on registration.

The new auxiliary in Ottumwa, Iowa, has done a fine job. Their membership is small but they distributed door to door 8,000 leaflets on registration.

In Kokomo, Indiana, Steel auxiliary women have been appointed deputy registrars for their precincts and are planning to go right to the homes to get the women registered. They may use the Sunday mobilization plan proposed by the Los Angeles Auxiliary Council. Here it is:

Get a car, four people and the deputy registrar of the precinct, card table, and chair. Put the registrar down in the middle of the block. Have one person at each end of the street start ringing doorbells, working towards the center. When the registration is done in that street, move on to the next one.

METHOD URGED

"Some form should be worked out to jot down the street and number of houses where no one is found at home—and also have room on the form for the names of the members of the family who are not at home, the best time to find them, etc. This information to be given to the housewives in that precinct who will volunteer to follow up during the week. A card with the name and address of the registrar in that precinct to be left at every home visited."

In Covington, Kentucky, Catherine Davis of the United Transport Service auxiliaries made a name for herself when she discovered that only 11 Negroes had voted in her precinct, when she went to vote on primary day. She got to work ringing doorbells and ran the total up to 75.

Warning to OPA

High Prices Mean Horrible Headache

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—"A major depression" threatens if the Office of Price Administration gives the green light to a high-price policy during the reconversion period, the CIO Cost of Living Committee said in a report this week.

The committee's report was presented a few weeks ago to Price Administrator Bowles, who in a recent speech proposed cost-plus pricing as a protection against deflation.

"Cost plus pricing may be an excusable, though graft-ridden, expedient in wartime; it is sure-fire disaster in pricing for peacetime," the committee declared.

The committee advocated that manufacturers resume, at the 1941-42 price level, the production of articles out of production during the war. Bowles, on the other hand, wants to add increases in wages and materials to the 1941-42 price levels.

"The critical issue," says the report, "is whether the OPA can persuade industry to weather the squeeze of temporary high costs, unknown productivity and low volume during the interim period at the 1941-42 price level, with only few and temporary exceptions from that rule.

AID TO EMPLOYMENT

"If it can persuade industry to accept that level, it will stimulate productivity and hasten the trend toward capacity operation. If however, it must assure immediate profits, it will be necessary to inaugurate a price level that spells far less than full employment for the long pull, which it will not be able to roll back, and which will be deflated only when shaken out of the price structure by a catasthropic recession leading perhaps to a major depression."

President Murray delivered a very stirring address and the convention also heard a splendid address by Sidney Hillman, Chairman, PAC. The Convention went all-out for general CIO policy. This organization has grown to the highest peak ever.

The United Automobile Workers have concluded their convention held in Grand Rapids with full endorsement of the CIO policies. The top International Officers were reelected.

The writer is now in Cleveland, Ohio, attending a conference of the representatives of the United Railroad Workers and will address the United Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers who are now meeting in Convention in the City of Cleveland.

From Cleveland, the writer will journey to Birmingham to attend and address the Alabama State IUC Convention.

No-Strike Pledge Big Aid To War, Murray Tells URW

NEW YORK CITY, Sept. 23—Labor's no-strike pledge has contributed substantially to the tremendous successes of our armed forces in battlefields throughout the world and must be maintained until the war is completely won, CIO Pres. Philip Murray told delegates to the ninth convention of the United Rubber Workers in session here this week.

After two days' debate, the convention by a vote of 782 to 375 reaffirmed the no-strike pledge for the duration of the war "without qualification or reservation."

More than 400 delegates attended the convention, the largest so far held by this important CIO international union, whose members are now engaged in making some of the most strategic material needed to carry our armies to final victory.

In his opening speech, URW President Sherman H. Dalrymple reported that the union membership has grown from around 3,000 enrolled in 37 locals in 1935 to some 200,000 in 200 locals today. Pointing to the important part being played by the rubber workers as soldiers of production in winning the war, Dalrymple said:

WAC BEAUTY: Here's lovely Pvt. Kathleen McCann of Detroit, Mich., who was chosen the prettiest WAC in the country in competition with thousands of other beautiful service women at the New Jersey State Fair. (Federated Pictures)

"For that reason it becomes necessary that we, for the duration of the war, pledge ourselves to continuity of operation . . . It is necessary that we continue adherence to our pledge that there be no strikes, slowdowns, stoppages of work, or any other acts that will interfere with the manufacture of the instruments of war.

"And I want to say that the United Rubber Workers have religiously kept that pledge. There have been stoppages in our plants, but all such stoppages were vigorously opposed by the officials of the International Union and in general opposed by all of the officers of our various local unions."

Lies and distortions being spread by opponents of the CIO and the Natl. Citizens Political Action Committees were exposed in a speech by PAC Chairman Sidney Hillman at the Tuesday afternoon session. Accusing Governor Dewey of indulging in "double talk" in his labor speech made the previous day in Seattle, Hillman asserted that the Republican candidate for President was trying to "capitalize on the small grievances of labor."

"The fact is labor has far better representation today than in the last war and is making a greater contribution today than at any time in the history of the nation," Hillman said.

EVIL MEN'S LIES

CIO President Murray also derided the attacks being made on the PAC in his speech given earlier and said they were made by "evil men" bent on spreading "diabolical lies."

"There has been a lot of filth and lies by political writers in certain newspapers about PAC," Murray said. "There are evil men in the country spreading diabolical lies in an effort to sow the seeds of racial bigotry.

"It is a terrible thing for these news organs to prate about a man's racial origin. But the CIO will stop bigotry and we will stop the man who hates his fellow-man because of his race, color or creed."

Murray warned labor to beware of feeling complacent about war. "There seems to be a feeling running rampant that the war is over," he said. "Well, the war isn't over. Wars are not over until the enemy is completely and decisively defeated."

AIDED VICTORIES

Referring to labor's no-strike pledge and the importance of maintaining it, Murray said: "I am one of those who believes that the maintenance of that no-strike commitment to our President and to our country is substantially responsible for the tremendous successes that have attended the efforts of our armed forces on every battlefield throughout the world."

"Our organization has come to be regarded as the type of a union that will not break its vows, that will respect its obligations. It will support its country. It will fight for its country. It will die for its country, because it believes that its country must come first."

In a speech of welcome to the convention at the first session, Newbold Morris, president of the City Council, told the delegates that when America entered the war he said that "the final decision would not be between military forces, but between the productive forces of free labor against the productive power of slave labor."

Other speakers at the convention included Col. Warren J. Clear and Col. Kenneth Johnson, of the War Dept., and Paul Fuller, of the U. S. Dept. of Labor Conciliation Service.

Auto Workers Re-Elect Four Top Officials

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Sept. 23—The four top officers of the UAW-CIO were re-elected at the conclusion of the union's week-long convention, but several changes were made in members of the international executive board. The elections for the two vice-presidents were marked by closely fought contests.

President R. J. Thomas was opposed by Robert Carter, president of a Flint local, but won overwhelmingly. Sec.Treas. George F. Addes was re-elected unanimously and with opposition.

The convention rejected a proposal to have three instead of two vice presidents. In the first election for vice president, Richard T. Frankensteen was re-elected by a roll-call vote of 5,444, as against 4,528 for Walter P. Reuther and 385 for Richard T. Leonard.

In the election to fill the second vice presidency, Reuther won re-election with 6,176, defeating Leonard, who received 3,477 votes, and John McGill, 364 votes.

Leonard was elected a member of the executive board, displacing Wm. C. Stevenson as representative of Detroit's West Side.

Board members Leo Lamotte and Wm. Blakely were replaced by Norman Matthews, president of the Packard local, and Martin J. Gerber, of Linden, N. J., respectively.

The West Coast region, represented by Lew Michener, was placed under the administration of the executive board for 90 days, by convention action, with an election of director and board member to be held thereafter in a special regional caucus.

New York, Sept. 23—The Austro-American Trade Union Committee voted recently to rally all Americans of Austrian origin, both individually and through their organizations, into an active working group for the re-election of Pres. Roosevelt.

Oil Union's Membership At New High

Fort Worth, Tex., Sept. 23—In his keynote speech at the opening of the 15th annual convention of the Oil Workers Intl. Union meeting here, Pres. O. A. Knight told the delegates that the union's membership is at a new peak and that prospects for continued progress during the coming year are splendid.

In a 10-point program presented to the convention for action, Knight called for:

Support for the re-election of Roosevelt; all-out production and no strikes; wage increases to maintain living standards; uniform wage rates throughout the petroleum industry; national contracts; adequate representation on all government agencies concerned with labor's participation in the war; a post-war security program; backing of the CIO's program, and an increased organizing drive.

Natl. Director William B. Taylor in a report to the convention told of attacks being made on the union by the most "vicious anti-labor force in Texas," the Texas Rangers.

"We must meet this issue and bring to the attention of Texas citizens the situation with respect to this new assault on the democratic rights of the oil workers of the nation," he said.

J., September 27; Wisconsin Council, Milwaukee, September 30.

Gas, Coke Union Meeting In Cleveland

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 23—The second constitutional convention of the CIO United Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers is in session here with some 200 delegates in attendance.

The convention is working out a program on issues of vital importance to the union and all labor, including all-out support of the war, plans for full post-war employment, benefits for returning veterans and strong support for the Roosevelt-Truman ticket.

A full account of the convention will be carried in next week's issue.

WHERE WE STAND

Highlights of Some of Week's Most Significant Statements

Steel Pay Freeze Blasted By CIO Men On WLB

This week has seen the release of two War Labor Board panel reports involving the wages and living standards of hundreds of thousands of workers.

The two reports, submitted by the "fact-finding" panels appointed to study the cases presented by the United Steelworkers and the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, agree on one basic point—that the Little Steel formula is no longer adequate as a basis for trying to keep wages in line with the cost of living.

Thus, the panel report on the steel case said:

"There is no evidence that Congress in passing the Stabilization Act of October 2, 1942, meant to preclude the President, in formulating a wage program, from considering previous or subsequent increases in the cost of living, or to limit his consideration to the increase which had occurred between January, 1941, and May, 1942.

"Congress rejected an amendment to the bill which became the Stabilization Act of 1942, which was expressly designed, among other things, to incorporate the Little Steel formula into law."

And on the electric workers case, the panel said:

"The panel finds there is no executive action restricting the Board (WLB) from recommending modification of or Congressional action prohibiting or restricting the President from reconsidering or modifying the 'Little Steel' formula in the light of the rise in the cost of living since May, 1942."

The following excerpts from the statement of the labor members of the Steel panel, John Despol and Stephen Levisky of USA-CIO, comment on these and other features of the steel panel report.

The labor members contend that the findings of fact submitted by the public members of the panel justify the request of the union that the Natl. War Labor Board recommend to the President of the U. S. that he exercise the authority vested in him under the October, 1942, Price Control Law to direct the WLB to order the steel companies involved in this proceeding to grant the union's request of a general wage adjustment of 17c per hour.

This conclusion is supported by the following facts as found by the public members of the panel.

A. Economic stabilization is predicated upon the interdependence of wages, prices, and the cost of living.

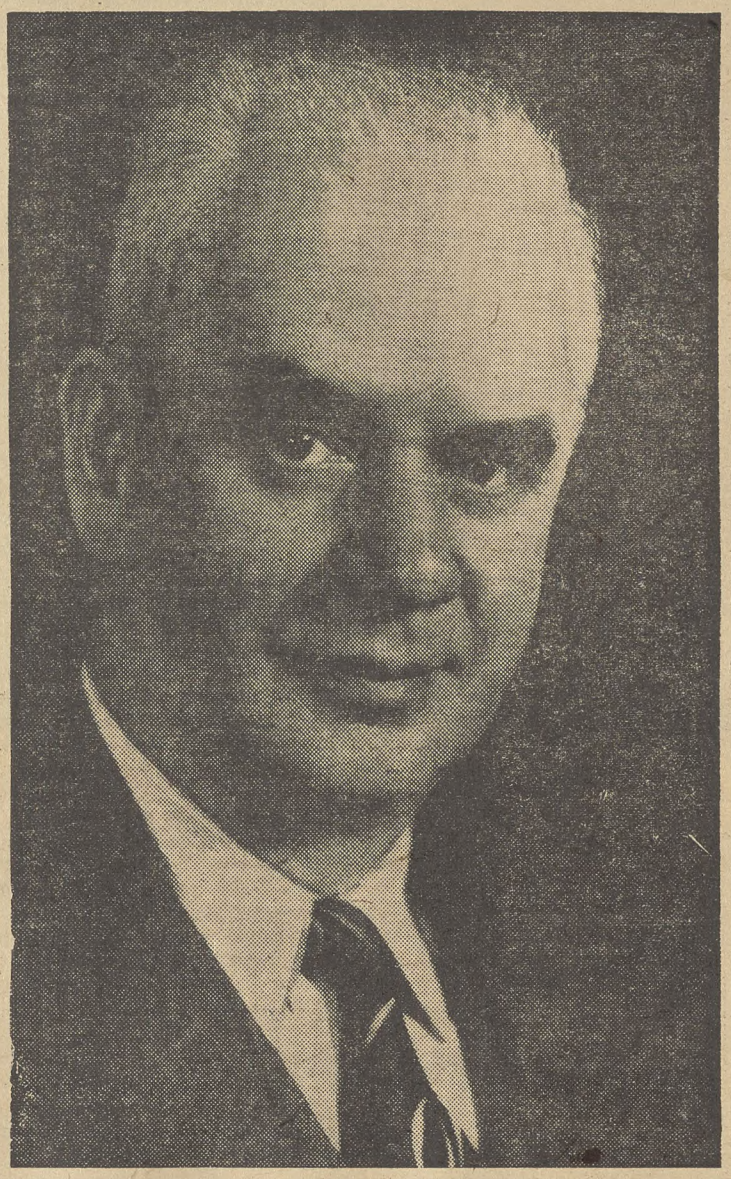
Wages cannot remain frozen at a fixed stabilized point with prices and cost of living continuing to rise.

Thus the public members point to several statements made by the President that wages and cost of living must be stabilized at the same time, and that if wages were stabilized and prices continue to rise, this would amount to a wage cut for the wage earners which could not be tolerated. The board also stated that the Little Steel formula was dependent upon the success of the Cost of Living Control Program.

Stabilization Assumed

Further, that the Price Control Law of October 2, 1942, contemplated the stabilization of wages and prices as of their relationship which prevailed on Sept. 15, 1942.

For a time the endeavor was to roll back prices so as to maintain such relationship between wages and prices, but obviously this program has not been effected. Therefore, the issue now is to raise wages to the level of prevailing prices so that the relationship between the two can actually be maintained.



PHILIP MURRAY
Leads Workers' Battle For Pay Hikes

FDR Has Power

B. The President has the legal authority under the October, 1942, Price Control Law to act in accordance with the union's request.

The public members point to the Congressional history of the Price Control Law in which Congress rejected a proposal of Senator Ball under which the President would have been prevented from revising the Little Steel Formula in the event the cost of living rose beyond the 15% allowed under such formula. From this the inference must be drawn that Congress intended that the President have the authority to revise the Little Steel Formula where the cost of living has continued to rise above the amount allowed under the Little Steel Formula.

C. The cost of living has risen since January, 1941, in an amount far in excess of the 15% upon which the Little Steel Formula is predicated.

A committee of experts, designated by the President's Committee on Cost of Living, has conceded that the bureau's figures are off from 3% to 4%. This means that the cost of living for steel towns has admittedly risen at least to 30%.

However, the Bureau of Labor Statistics and the committee of experts have also conceded that the figures showing a change in retail prices do not purport to cover the change in the cost of living of wage earners in the sense of reflecting necessary family expenditures resulting from involuntary changes in living habits. In other words, the above figures do not purport to show increased costs due to the commutation by war production workers from their homes to the plants, or the need of having to buy higher priced goods, or to the need of eating out more, etc.

The public members find that this factor, not reflected in the Index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, has increased the cost of living to some degree but they do not purport to estimate how much.

The labor members point to the fact that the only group that has made a study covering all factors has been the CIO, which claims an increase in cost of living from January, 1941, to March, 1944, of 45.3%.

Steel Pay Stabilized

D. The wage rates of the steelworkers have been completely stabilized in accordance with the Little Steel Formula.

The public members make this specific finding. They also specifically hold that the measurement of wage stabilization is not hourly earnings, weekly earnings, or annual earnings, but the stright-time average hourly rates.

The public members specically find that insofar as the steelworkers are concerned, they have suffered an inequity in that they have not enjoyed any adjustments through the elimination of wage rate inequities.

The public members also make the important finding, in the face of the approaching reconversion period and peace-time production with cut-backs, reduction in working time, and therefore loss in premium pay, that as the hours of work are contracted and wage earners return to peace-time operations in industries, gross average hourly earnings may be expected to decline.

Pay Hikes Needed

G. The income and expenditure study of the steelworkers' family reveals the imperative war need for the wage adjustment requested by the union.

This study, made by the Steelworkers Union, showed that the steelworkers, although working the longest hours and earning the highest pay than ever before, are actually running into debt. The public members find that there is no reason to doubt the statistical accuracy of the study.

It should be recalled that Mr. Hinrichs, the acting commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, when testifying before a Congressional committee, said that the CIO steelworkers study "ably demonstrates that even at the wage level of $50 a week, families have to live very narrowly and with no access to luxury goods."

Big Steel Profits

H. The steel corporations have enjoyed their share of the increased profits and have the financial ability to pay the wage adjustment requested by the union.

The public members find that if the wage adjustment is granted, the net profits of the steel industry, both before and after taxes, will be in excess of their average annual net profits during the peacetime era of 1936-39.

Further, the public members find that in view of the cutbacks under reconversion and decrease in working time, the unit costs of production for the industry will decrease so that when there is a reduction from the 48-hour week to the 40-hour week, while production will decrease 16 2/3%, labor costs will decrease 25%. The labor members added the observation that in the postwar period the industry, reaping the full benefits from the operation of newly built, modern and efficient steel facilities, will have a lower break-even point than before or during the war period.

The union had requested that each employe be guaranteed a minimum weekly wage for each week during the life of the contract.

The public members took this issue as presented by the union and accepting the prophecy of the steel companies that the postwar period will be similar to our prewar experiences, came to the conclusion that the industry did not have sufficient resources to make the guarantee requested by the union.

The labor members have taken very serious issue with the public members and have stated that the latter did not address themselves to the relevant facts presented by the union but that they actually submitted a report which reflects a distinct bias and prejudice against this just request of the union.

The points which are made by the labor members, and which are undisputed on the record, are the following:

1. Instead of accepting a prophecy of postwar depression, the union maintains that all factors, including expressions from public officials, are to the effect that the production level for the steel industry not only must but will be maintained on a basis of full production and full employment. Only in this light can the request of the union be considered.

2. The purchasing power of the steelworkers must be maintained through such a guarantee for an annual wage in order to assure the continued demand for goods which will guarantee full production and full employment. Unless wage earners have purchasing power there will not be any demand for goods. Wage earners cannot have the purchasing power if they are not assured of a security of income through guaranteed employment.

The public members refer to an OPA study of "Civilian Saving and Spending in 1941-42." This study revealed that 40.6% of the total number of families and single consumers (with incomes of $1,500 or less) were able to save only .1% of the total amount saved in 1942 while 5% of the families and single consumers (incomes $5,000 and over) saved 54.6% of the total amount saved in 1942. This study makes it unnecessary to comment further upon the imperative need of protecting the purchasing power of the mass of wage earners.

3. Farmers have a guarantee of security for two years after the war to the extent of maintenance of prices of farm products at 90% of parity.

The corporations have as a group received a form of guaranteed income for two years under outstanding tax laws. Thus the United States Steel Corporation, through the carryback provisions and the 10% refund of their excess profits taxes, while averaging net earnings after taxes during 1936-39 of $44,732,000, will receive under such tax laws, if they break even in 1944, a sum of $49,200,000. If the entire steel industry breaks even during 1944 or 1945, its refund will be $122,000,000, equal to its peacetime net profits.

The labor members pointed to a statement of Mr. Randolph Paul, former General Counsel of U. S. Treasury, that American industry should not be given this blank check through their refunds even though it promises the most circumspect postwar behavior, but that the refunds should in effect be used to afford a high level of production and employment.

Entitled to Security

4. The public members conceded that because of the guarantee that had been given to industry and agriculture, some form of postwar security should likewise be extended to labor.

The steel industry is peculiarly fitted for extending a guarantee because of its large resources accumulated during the war which will not be required for reconversion costs in that there are no such costs for the steel industry. Thus the labor members insist that on the basis of the public members' finding that some form of security be granted, that the Board address itself to this issue and within the framework of the industry's ability to pay, a form of guarantee of employment be extended to the steelworkers.

UAW Pamphlet Tells How To Reap 'Fruits of Victory'

In these days when the press is screaming for postwar tax slashes, the taxation section of the CIO United Auto Workers' pamphlet, "Fruits of Victory: Poverty or Plenty," is particularly timely.

The booklet points out that taxes may be cut on business as much as the industrialists want, yet prosperity will remain an elusive nymph. There must be purchasing power in the hands of the people, and without the people's power to buy the products of industry business continues to lack "confidence."

The pamphlet lists a number of ways to use taxation to maintain purchasing power, the advice being given not only to Congress but also to State legislatures:

1. Eliminate all sales, excise and commodity taxes.
2. Reduce, or eliminate, tariff and custom duties.
3. Place a flat ceiling on incomes.
4. Increase drastically, and then enforce, personal and intangible property taxes.
5. Abolish arbitrary limitations on the use of the tax on real property. (The owner of a home in Detroit assessed at $4,000 had to pay $129 in taxes, while the owners of $4,000 worth of General Motors stock and of a similar amount of Chrysler stock had to pay only $1.24 and nine cents, respectively.)
6. Eliminate taxes on substandard incomes.
7. Abolish the privilege of filing separate income tax return, tax-free securities and other devices for escaping taxes.
8. Treat the receipt of gifts and inheritances as current income and tax them accordingly.
9. Increase surtaxes on high personal incomes.
10. Increase excess-profit taxes and reduce the exemptions granted.

Taxation is not the only theme of the booklet. It explains why wages must be high and prices low to maintain purchasing power, which is the prerequisite of prosperity.

Credit for assistance in preparing the pamphlet is given Samuel Jacobs, UAW member. Top-notch thinkers, such as Marriner S. Eccles, Alvin H. Hansen, Harold G. Moulton and Thurman Arnold were drawn on in preparing the tract.

If you wish to know the economic time of day and what must be done to avoid another depression, you should read "Fruits of Victory: Poverty or Plenty."

The pamphlet may be ordered from the UAW-CIO Education Dept., 1324 Maccabees Bldg., Detroit 2, Mich. Price, 15 cents each, $13 per 100.

Bias Against Negroes Called U. S.'s Greatest Failure

Doors to jobs, schools, polls, and recreational facilities are closed to one out of ten persons because they are of the Negro race in a country whose citizens daily give lip service to the highest ideals of equality.

This tragic conflict between our country's professed belief in equality and democracy and the everyday practices of the citizens in their treatment of the Negro is due in a large part to the astonishing ignorance of the Negro both as an individual and as a sociological group, Maxwell S. Stewart points out in his recent booklet, "The Negro in America."

The Negro in America is a summary of Dr. Gunnar Myrdal's two-volume analysis of the Negro problem and American democracy, "An American Dilemma." Dr. Myrdal, a social economist from the University of Stockholm and economic advisor to the Swedish government, was brought to this country by the Carnegie Corp. to make this study.

He was especially chosen as a scholar free from bias or partisanship from a country with no background of imperialism which might endanger the impartiality of the study.

The Myrdal study reveals that not only do few white people realize that the Negro's so called "inferiority" is due to economic, political and social disadvantages of being a Negro rather then race inferiority, but as a result of the social taboos few know Negroes as individuals other than as servants. They think of the Negro as "different."

"A Negro is not often permitted to be an American first and a Negro second," the booklet points out. Even if he becomes prominent it is usually as a representative of his race. "A Negro economist is always expected to specialize in Negro problems; a Negro lawyer is expected to handle Negro cases; a Negro soloist is supposed to sing Negro songs; and a Negro trade union leader usually represents Negro workers. . . "

Hope for the solution of the Negro-white problem lies in the discovery that while the white Southerner objects less to citizenship and job equality for the Negro than to social equality, the Negro is primarily concerned with job and pay equality, secondly with citizenship rights and to a much less extent with social equality.

"In a way . . . " the booklet states, "the Negro problem is not only America's greatest failure, but also its greatest opportunity. It has always stood for equality, freedom and liberty. It has a great national experience in uniting racial and cultural diversities. "If it can show that justice, equality and cooperation are possible between the white and black races. . . . America would have a spiritual power many times stronger than all her financial and military resources—the power of the trust and support of all good people on earth."

NMU Pamphlet Goes to Cairo

Five hundred copies of the booklet, "Heroes in Dungarees," the picture story of the contribution of American Merchant Seamen to the war effort, have been distributed in Cairo Egypt, reports the CIO Natl. Maritime Union.

School children helped pass out the pamphlets, all of which found their way into local homes.

Murray Asks United Nations' Labor Parley Early This December

CIO President Philip Murray, initiator of the original plea for a United Nations labor meeting to deal with problems of victory and of the peace, has written to British labor head Sir Walter Citrine, asking that the conference be held "during the early part of December of this year."

This date, Murray explained in his letter to Citrine, fits into the CIO's plans which necessarily keep its delegates here until after the elections and the CIO convention.

"The approaching victory of the United Nations over Nazi Europe, the problems which have arisen as the result of the swift march of the Allied forces through Europe, and the important issues to which labor must address itself if the people are to participate in forging a unity among the nations for the peace, make it imperative that the international labor conference originally called by your organization be convened as quickly as possible," he wrote.

The conference, Murray noted, was originally called for June 6, but D-Day intervened. CIO's insistence then assured that the meeting would represent all United Nations labor, barring none and putting none in Grade B positions.

The AFL, led by Matthew Woll and Wm. Hutcheson, refused to admit that the CIO or the unions of the USSR could be allowed at such a meeting. Since then, AFL officialdom has flatly refused to go along with the idea of international labor unity.

French workers have been given wage increases retroactive to Sept. 1, 1944, according to the French Press Service. Quoting the French Minister of Social Affairs, the service says:

"The total of present wages and increase shall not increase wages to more than 30 francs per hour or 6,000 francs per month. Therefore, wages which are equal to or which exceed these figures are not subject to increase."

The franc today is worth 50 to a U. S. dollar, or 2 cents each. Top wage, then, is 60 cents an hour, $120 a month

Wages in Italy, according to the London Daily Herald, official British Labor Party paper, range from 50 cents a day to $1.50, with the top figure reserved for judges and high civil servants. Laundry workers get 35 cents. A pair of shoes costs about $28 to $40, while a suit of clothes costs more than a worker makes in a year.

Early calling of a world business conference to deal with postwar reconstruction and marketing problems was announced this week by Eric Johnston, president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

Johnston has repeatedly stated his viewpoint that world business must get together at an early date to plan international cooperation.

Fair Story on CIO-PAC Told in Survey Graphic

An article on Labor in Politics in the September issue of the Survey Graphic magazine gleams like a small bright light against the murky background of lies, distortions, prattles and cock-eyed nonsense being told by press and radio about the CIO's political activities.

There is nothing startling in the news itself. It is a factual, simply written account of the CIO Political Action Committee's aims and ways of working told with a brief preliminary review of earlier political efforts of labor, and a short explanation of the AFL's different outlook. It attempts no interpretations and makes no predictions.

The article stands out because the writer, Beulah Amidon, searched diligently at the sources for her material and tells accurately and fairly what she found out, in contrast to the mob of dishonest dopesters busily occupied in smearing the PAC in the eyes of the American people.

But labor is learning the political game in spite of them. As a PAC official quoted in the article says:

"We are learning how the game is played. Politics isn't a matter of slogans and oratory. There's nothing dramatic about it. It's dull business—files, ward and precinct organization, house-to-house canvassing, and all that.

"Liberals never have been willing to do the drudgery. And so they have gone down again and again before a 'machine.' But is there any reason why sound organization techniques always have to serve grafters and professional politicians?

"I don't see why organization can't be made to serve the ends of righteousness. Anyway, I believe that is the underpinning of the PAC. We're learning the political game, but we're setting ourselves to play it honestly, instead of dishonestly, for good ends instead of bad ends."

Thomas Slams "Labor Baron"

The true story of John L. Lewis remains to be written, says President R. J. Thomas, of the United Automobile Workers, in a review of James Wechsler's new book, "Labor Baron," in the September issue of Ammunition, UAW education monthly. "The final job on Lewis and his career has yet to be done," Thomas states.

Attacking Wechsler for his "obvious and vicious distortions" of the character of CIO President Phillip Murray, Thomas says: "Apparently the policies of Phil Murray do not meet with Mr. Wechsler's approval.

"Those of us who have worked and fought shoulder to shoulder with Phil Murray in these difficult times recognize the full depth of the slander of which Wechsler has been guilty.

"The true historian of labor will see in Murray the truest and most resolute leader which our movement has ever developed.

"Wechsler's book is filled with palace gossip—with rumors and counter-rumors circulating around the labor leaders of our time. If there had been less of this, less labor-baiting and more of the plain and simple men and women in the factories and mines of America, 'Labor Baron' would have been a better and truer book."

Debunking The Hate Peddlers

Potent weapon in Hitler's arsenal has been his power to get people to hate each other . . . Protestants vs. Jews . . . Jews vs. Catholics . . . Catholics vs. Protestants . . . until the forces that might be arrayed solidly against Nazi-ism are so split that they are helpless.

Part of the bunk in his political grab bag has been the myth that the Nazis are "supermen"—the "master race"—and that all other races must bow down before them. That there are no "master races" has long been a well known scientific fact. It is being reinforced today by the mighty American, British and Red Armies' victories.

But myths don't die easily. The truth is sometimes long in seeing the light. Hence, this week, The CIO NEWS presents the first of two pictorial explanations giving with scientific accuracy the true story about "The Races of Mankind," based on a pamphlet of that title written by Professor Ruth Benedict and Dr. Gene Welfish, of Columbia University.

This popularized digest of the pamphlet was first published by "True Comics" magazine. Look for the continuation next week.

Pegler Pegged!

Smear Story Proved Phoney

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 30 — Westbrook Pegler's latest smear of the CIO Political Action Committee, published in his Sept. 26 column, caused a storm of indignation today in the ranks of the San Francisco Ship Clerks Assn., local 34, of the CIO Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's union.

Pegler's charges concerned a probationary member, L. K. Hyde. Pegler said Hyde was ousted for refusal to contribute to the campaign to re-elect President Roosevelt.

In complete refutation of the charge, the record of Hyde was made public by Pres. Mike Johnson of local 34 and substantiated by Dispatcher Jim Roach:

Sept. 2, 1943—Hyde, who said he was 43 years old and had worked as a police reporter in Detroit, was placed on a probationary list and was dispatched to a ship clerk's job.

Dec., 1943—Hyde reported as bringing discredit on the union by remarking at Redwood City while working on a Navy ship that "This is a hell of a place. A man ought to refuse to work here." A naval officer, resenting the remark, blamed the union.

Later Hyde was reprimanded by a fellow worker for deciding without notice or attempt to replace himself, that he would not go to work one night. He changed his mind and went to the job when his fellow worker reminded him he would be ousted from the union if he refused to work. His failure to work would have resulted in a longshore gang standing idle for lack of a clerk to identify cargo.

Mar. 15, 1944—Called before union's executive board on complaint of Navy superintendent of cargo at Oakland naval supply depot. He was charged with being, "careless and inefficient." The executive board dismissed the charges with a warning that he would be dropped from the rolls if there was further complaint.

Sept. 13, 1944—Called again before executive board on complaint that he was interfering with work of longshore gang at Oakland Pier 6 by heckling about political action during working hours. At end of hearing, he laid a 50-cent piece on the table and said: "This is for your PAC fund." The money was refused. The board recommended ouster.

Sept. 18, 1944—Membership of Local 34 concurred in the action of the executive board. The question of political belief was raised, and it was made emphatic that the action was for inefficiency and interference with work. It was brought out that he had never at any time been solicited to make a donation to PAC by anyone in Local 34.

He Died at Home To Help Win Abroad

"His death is as much a casualty of war as those who die on the field of battle". That was the tribute paid this week by the Army Air Corps to John Rohm, president of Local 92, CIO United Auto Workers, who succumbed after leaving his sick bed to end a strike.

Despite his long illness, Rohm left his bed to go to a meeting where he persuaded workers at the Genesee Tool Co., Fenton, Mich., to resume production on B-29 Superfortress parts. He was fatally stricken a few minutes after the meeting.

Col. Strong, assistant supervisor of the Army Air Corps, wrote Pres. R. J. Thomas of the UAW:

"This evidences a high type of leadership that exists in your organization and we feel that his death is as much as casualty of war as those who die on the field of battle."

They Just Won't Fit!

CONGRATULATIONS to CIO's third largest Union, the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, are given by Philip Murray to UE Pres. Albert J. Fitzgerald and Secretary-Treasurer Julius Emspak, at the UE's 10th convention, which represented more than 700,000 U. S. and Canadian members.

Carpenters Local Greets Dewey With FDR Indorsement

San Francisco, Sept. 30—Bad news awaited GOP presidential candidate Thomas E. Dewey when his special train pulled into San Francisco. Pile Drivers Local 34 of United Brothers of Carperters (AFL) announced it would not go along with Intl. Pres. William L. Hucheson's support of the GOP.

The pile drivers voted overwhelmingly to indorse President Roosevelt for a fourth term and donated $1,300 for AFL and united labor political action in this area.

Columbus, Ohio—(FP)—Support for FDR and "cooperation with the CIO Political Action Committee and every other group of citizens interested in the reelection of President Roosevelt" was voted by the Ohio Conference of Teamsters.

GI'S LIKE unions, don't like John L. Lewis, Pvt. Russ Nixon, U. S. Army, former UE Washington representative, told 1,000 delegates to the 10th UE convention meeting in New York.

CIO GI Joe Gives Score on Fascism

American union members' responsibility is the preservation of democracy at home and the elimination of fascism in this country and throughout the world, says Staff Sgt. Frank L. Batterson, executive secretary of the CIO Council in Snohomish County, Washington.

When he talks of fascism, Batterson knows whereof he speaks. An assistant engineer and aerial gunner on a "Flying Fortress," he was held in a Nazi prison camp for 17 months after his plane was shot down over France. He lost his right leg.

Upon his return to the American forces he was decorated with the Purple Heart and the Air Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster.

His fight against fascism really began in this country, where many years ago he was one of the leaders of the boycott on shipments of scrap iron and war materials to Germany and Japan, according to the Labor Herald, official California CIO newspaper, which interviewed him.

"With the liquidation of fascism in Europe," he told the interviewer," must come the purging in this country of all pro-fascist elements, or all the loss of life on the European battlefields will have been in vain."

His hatred of fascism was intensified by what he saw in Germany during his imprisonment. Jew-baiting, he declared, was the backbone of Hitlerism.

"Hitler started his climb to power on the backs of the Jews, whom he murdered, tormented and slandered. He is not the madman that some would have us believe. He's a cold, calculating politician. And he has his counterpart in this country among the seditionists and political cranks who slander the Jews, Negroes and other minority people."

Women's Jobs

A new bulletin, "Changes in Women's Employment During the War," has been compiled by the Women's Bureau, Department of Labor. The report contains a statistical account of the entrance of women into the labor force since Pearl Harbor and the shifts in the employment and occupations of women during that time.

A copy of the bulletin may be obtained from the Supt. of Documents, Washington 25, D. C., for 10 cents.

10th Annual Parley

UE All-Out For FDR, Victory, Jobs

By C. W. FOWLER

NEW YORK, Sept. 30—With more than 1,000 delegates present, CIO's third largest union, the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, pledged its nearly three quarter million members to an all-out drive for FDR, to a renewed no-strike pledge and to a program of jobs for all after the war, in its 10th annual convention here this week.

The union met with the election less than six weeks ahead adding urgency to its declaration for FDR's re-election as "an essential war responsibility facing all patriotic American voters".

The UE, with its membership from all racial, national and geographic origins in the U. S. and Canada, regards the political action job "as no narrow partisan movement". as set forth in the report of Pres. Albert J. Fitzgerald, Secy.-Treas. Julius Emspak and Organization Director James J. Matles.

"The campaign to re-elect President Roosevelt is a movement based on the democratic traditions of America", the officers said. "It is a movement based on the fact that the people realize that the re-election of President Roosevelt will be a major contribution to early victory and postwar security".

PRAISE FROM MURRAY, FDR

Said FDR: "You have reason to be proud of the achievement of your 700,000 men and women in war production. I know the country can count on all of you to maintain the same high level of endeavor until this war is finally won on all fronts.

"As we work till victory, we must remember that victory can be a day of elation only as it is a beginning of an advancing American era of full production and full employment for all our people".

Similar praise came from President Murray, who told the convention: "I know of no institution connected with the CIO that has made a greater contribution to the successful prosecution of the war than has the UE".

RECORD OF GROWTH

UE's record of growth over the past year shows an increase in membership of 247,276 — over 40 percent of which are women—and a total of 686,000 members under contract. This growth, the officers report said, is at the rate of 41 percent per month between 1943 and 1944.

The political temper of the delegates was clearly shown not only in the resolution backing FDR and Truman but also in a resolution on political action, which called on all affiliates to:

". . . incorporate political action work as a permanent and stable phase of all local activities and (urged) that proper apparatus be built by each local union".

It asked every member to ". . . register to vote, to work to guarantee the election of the people's candidates for a democratic peace, and to make this possible financially by contributing at least one dollar" to political action.

REAFFIRM 'NO-STRIKE'

All the delegates but one voted with cheers for the FDR resolution. By the time the convention came to renew the no-strike pledge, this "opposition" had added the unimpressive total of three to his one negative vote.

Concern of the delegates over the Little Steel formula was shown in a resolution which urged that the War Labor Board "make a favorable recommendation to the President on an upward revision of the Little Steel formula made necessary by the 45.3 percent increase in the cost of living."

Discussion on the need to thaw out the wage freeze was highlighted by Pres. Murray's speech, when he said: "The Little Steel formula must be scrapped. I said at the Steelworkers' convention in May 1944, that I attended the birth of the formula. I was there at its sacrament of confirmation and that with the help of God I would attend its wake".

Following Murray's speech, the convention unanimously passed a resolution praising his "profound understanding of the issues facing the nation and the American people".

"All Americans owe President Murray a debt of gratitude for his patriotic adherence to the no-strike pledge, for his refusal to permit minor issues to influence his best judgement and for his understanding of the fact that victory in the war is the best guarantee of the security of the workers," the convention stated.

OTHER ACTIONS

Other major actions of the convention included a resolution urging an early conference of United Nations labor, as proposed by President Murray last week; support for the declarations of FDR, Premier Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill at Teheran; formation of a veterans' committee to aid demobilized men; condemnation of fascism in Spain and Argentina, and a request for labor representation at the peace conference.

Women, Women, Women! UE Has a Lot of 'Em

Any union that has more than 700,000 members in it is bound to have a lot of women—and UE is more than proud of the place its women take in the affairs of the organization. Eighteen of them are local presidents; 33 are vice-presidents; 165 recording secretaries, and 79 financial secretaries.

* * *

Out in Warren, Ohio, UE political action people have thought up a new twist on the apple gag. They took up stands in downtown sections one day and gave away apples, explaining to the receivers: "We can give them away now, but if Dewey's elected we'll have to charge for them."

* * *

One lone delegate out of the 1,000 voted against endorsing FDR for re-election, but he was consistent in his own way. He voted against Truman and a progressive Congress, too.

* * *

A few statistics on how UE has grown in '44: The union is now third largest in CIO, sixth largest in the U. S. Average monthly increase between '43 and '44 was 41 per cent, with a total of 247,-276 added this year. Forty per cent of the members are women.

* * *

Cold hard cash backed up the UE delegates' response to PAC Chairman Sidney Hillman's stirring election speech. At the end of his address, Pres. Fitzgerald told him: "All the applause and cheers in the world won't help you do your job. That's why the UE delegates 'put the bite' on themselves for dough while this convention has been going on—and here's the first installment—a check for $2,311 collected here in this hall."

* * *

UE's slogan, "Work, Fight Give," was translated into more than $3,-000,000 for war relief during the past year, the Natl. War Fund pointed out in awarding the union a special "Citation of Merit" for its contributions between this convention and last year's.

Stop Stalling on Steel Case, Murray Demands

More than half a million members of the CIO United Steelworkers of America expect that the Natl. War Labor Board will hand down a decision no later than Oct. 15 on the union's request for a 17 cents an hour wage increase.

That was the admonition forcefully placed before the Board this week by Philip Murray, president of USA and of CIO. He said the union has waited seven months for a decision, and has consumed only three and a half days of that time in presenting the workers' case.

Important excerpts from his prepared testimony follow:

By PHILIP MURRAY

The United Steelworkers of America presented its request to the various companies involved in this proceeding about the middle of December of last year. An impasse was reached in collective bargaining and the Natl. War Labor Board assumed jurisdiction over the disputes between the parties about the middle of February.

The fact-finding panel established by the Board submitted its report on September 15. Thus seven months were consumed for the presentation of this case.

During such period the union took three and a half days for its presentation and rebuttal. It requested no extensions of time for the preparation of such material.

Calls for Action

A few weeks ago this Board announced a schedule of hearings which are now under way and also that it would convene an executive session during the week of October 9 for the consideration of this and other cases involving similar issues.

The membership of this union assumed that such announcement evidenced a determination on the part of the Board to actually dispose of this case on its merits by October 15.

The Steelworkers have been very patient for seven long and weary months. Their case has been wending slowly—painfully so—through the cumbersome machinery established by this Board.

Speaking for several hundred thousand steelworkers, I raise the question whether we are going to obtain a decision quickly and on the merits of the case as presented to this Board; or whether this case is going to be treated as a political pawn, kicked around hither and yon, because courage is lacking to determine the issue.

It would be outrageous for this Board to suggest that the outcome of this case must be further delayed or the effective date of the directive postponed pending further developments on the military fronts. Nothing could be more disastrous to the morale of the workers who have achieved the miracles of production so highly praised by our Commander-in-Chief and the military.

The public members of the panel have found that there has been a minimum rise in the retail prices between January 1941 and July 1944 from 28.2% to 29.7%.

The only study which has been made and comprehensively covers all of the factors which affect the total living costs in wartime is that submitted by the CIO. It shows a rise of 45.3% in wartime living costs from January 1941 to March 1944.

The public members submit their finding that the wage rate of steelworkers has been completely stabilized in accordance with the Little Steel formula.

We have had two general wage increases in the steel industry since January 1941—10c an hour in April 1941 and 5½c an hour in February 1942. The union has claimed, and it has not been denied by the companies, that in the steel industry there have been no further adjustments by way of elimination of inequalities or merit increases and the like. Whatever increases have resulted over and above the general wage adjustments have been due almost entirely to increased earnings for increased production.

Frozen Wages

In addition to what has occurred during the past 2½ years in terms of freezing of wage rates, we have the situation which will shortly confront this industry with cutbacks and the reconversion period—a serious reduction in working time. The moment there is an easing of the labor market, the steel industry will depart from the 48-hour workweek to 40 or less.

The industry also urged that the requested wage adjustment if granted would necessarily cause steel prices to rise which will cause inflation. The panel answered this issue.

Accepting the figures of the companies, and allowing all of their wartime reserves and swollen depreciation accounts, the net profits of the steel companies, before taxes and after the wage adjustment is granted, will be in excess of their average annual net profits during the peacetime era of 1936-39.

Corporate profits for 1944, after taxes, increased 198% over the 1936-39 peacetime era. Corporate profits for the same year, before taxes, show an increase over the peacetime era of 449%.

During the war period special measures have been enacted to assist corporations and to make provision for the reconversion and postwar periods.

But what has happened to the wage earners and what provision has been made to protect them?

Savings? The OPA study showed that 66.4% of the spending units, which includes families and individuals, earned $2500 a year or less and this number has only 11.6% of the total savings. The study made by the Steelworkers Union of the expenditures of the average steelworker shows that he is not saving but rather is incurring a weekly loss. This in spite of the fact that the study covered the period when he was working longer and thereby earning more weekly pay.

Depreciation accounts? The steelworker has no such account although he has worked harder and longer and certainly has been severely depreciated during the war period.

Reserves? The steelworker has no swollen reserves such as one may find in the reserve accounts established by the steel corporations and others during this war period.

On the contrary, all that the steelworker has facing him is cutbacks, decreased working time, decreased weekly earnings, decreased purchasing power, and possibly unemployment.

Realistic Approach

The realistic approach must be adequate wages for the workers. This is the proposal of the union that there now be a general wage adjustment. With this assurance wage earners will be prepared to make the necessary purchases as soon as industrial reconversion makes available peacetime goods.

It has been clearly established that the President of the United States has the authority under the law of October 2, 1942, to authorize the revision of the national wage stabilization policy as requested by the union.

This present war has taught us a lesson which cannot be erased from the minds of human beings, namely, that there can and must be full production and full employment—not only in time of war but in peace.

The exuberant challenge of our President to banish fear from want and fear of unemployment and insecurity are not mere words to the American people.

We have accepted these declarations as the foundation for our economy and for the preservation of our democracy. It is within that framework that this union has requested of the steel industry that there be a guaranteed annual wage.

The question naturally arises: Is this demand visionary or is it practical?

Federal legislation has provided such a guarantee to the farmers. They are guaranteed a price of 90% of parity for whatever they may produce for two years following the end of the war.

Industry has also received its guarantee. Corporations as a group have received a form of guaranteed income for two years under outstanding tax laws.

The commitment that should be imposed upon the steel industry is a guarantee of employment to the steelworkers.

OPA Report, Kept Under Wraps, Shows Steel Firms Can Afford Wage Boost

The argument of steel firms that a 17 cents an hour wage increase would "bankrupt" them was blasted into bits this week by Philip Murray, president of CIO and of the CIO United Steelworkers.

Dramatically and forcefully, Murray presented to the Natl. War Labor Board a report, kept under wraps for more than a month by the Office of Price Administration, which showed that the steel companies are easily able to meet the union's demands and still make plenty of profit.

"For some curious reason unbeknown to the union", Murray quietly told the Board, "this study, though completed on Aug. 24, was not made available to the Board or to the (steel) panel. We therefore take the liberty of making its contents public", he declared with biting emphasis. Excerpts from the report follow:

The steel industry had made a request for a general price increase of approximately 10%. The study concludes that:

(a) "There is at the present time no ground for an overall increase in the price of steel.

(b) "Even in the event that the wage increase requested by the union were granted in full, the case for a price increase would not be persuasive. For even if the wage demand were granted in full, its effects upon average hourly earnings would be largely offset by the disappearance of overtime and the reversal of the labor upgrading process. These two factors account for 16c in average hourly earnings. As against this the wage demand comes to 17c."

These estimates are based upon data for the U. S. Steel Corp. which the report claims to be representative of the industry as a whole.

The report finds that:

"Since 1939, output per manhour has increased more that average hourly earnings. Consequently, labor costs are currently about 4 per cent. below 1939 levels and 8½ per cent below the average level for operation and those are due to two factors: the economies of capacity operation and those due to improvements in plant, equipment, and technology. These latter economies will result, even at pre-war levels of output, in labor productivity substantially higher than prevailed before the war.

"In addition average hourly earnings, even at present basic wage rates, will decline substantially below current levels as premium payments for overtime are reduced and downgrading of labor occurs in a softer labor market.

"Reductions in materials costs may likewise be expected as wartime demands slacken."

The analysis further shows that:

"On the extreme assumption that there will be no decline from the 1943 levels in average hourly earnings or in the prices paid for materials and services (the U. S. Steel Corp. has) a break-even point at 52% of capacity. At 75% of capacity earnings would be $120 million and at 90% they would be $210 million. These are to be compared with average profits of $66 million in the base period 1936-39."

"On the alternative and more realistic assumption that the wartime effects of upgrading and of premium payments will disappear from average hourly earnings and that costs of materials and services purchased will decline to 1941 levels, the break-even point is found at 35% of capacity.

"Under these conditions, earnings at 50% of capacity would be $78 million, and at 75 and 90 per cent they would be $240 million and $347 million, respectively.

"If the wage increase were granted and the price increase denied . . . and if as is . . . likely, average hourly earnings were to fall by reason of the elimination of overtime and upgrading and material prices were to decline to 1941 levels, the U S. Steel Corporation would break even at 47% of capacity. Earnings at 50% of capacity would be $13 million; at 75%—$154 million; at 90%—$250 million.

"The conclusion is clear. The wage adjustment requested by the union for this industry does not involve any increase in the price of steel. There can be no claim that the wage adjustment would have any inflationary impact. On the contrary, the wage adjustment would simply make up the loss in weekly earnings due to cutbacks in hours and down-grading."

FDR's Oral Spanking Makes Dewey Squirm

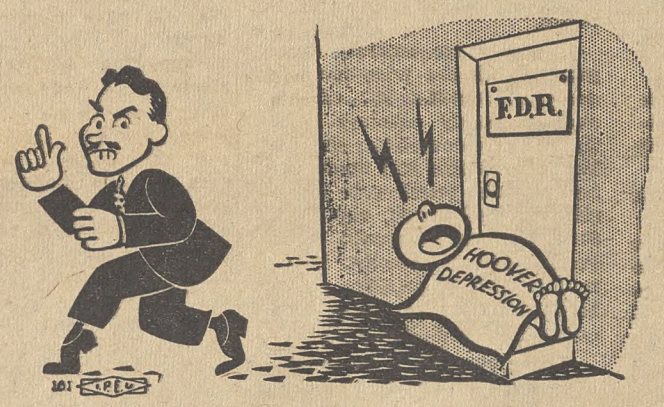
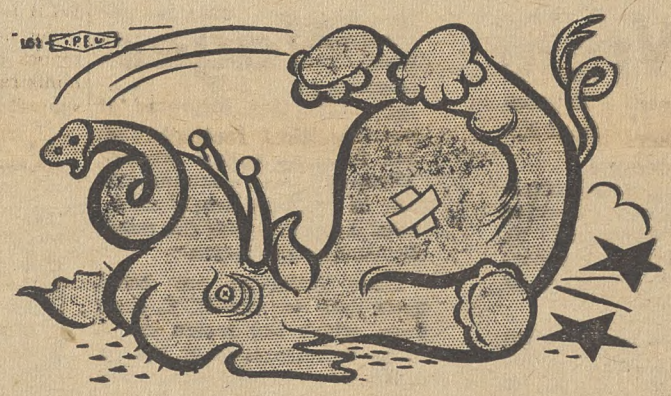
"We all know certain people will make it a practice to depreciate the accomplishments of labor—who even attack labor as unpatriotic. They keep this up usually for three years and six months. But then, for some strange reason, they change their tune—every four years—just before election day. When votes are at stake they suddenly discover that they really love labor, and are eager to protect it from its old friends."

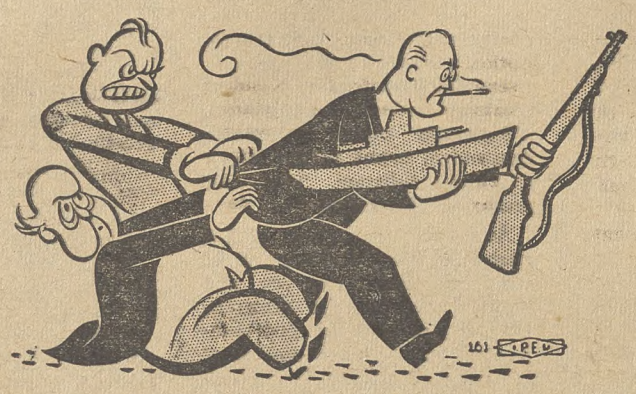
"Even those candidates who burst out in election-year affection for social legislaton and for labor in general still think you ought to be good boys and stay out of politics . . . It is all right for large financiers and industrialists and monopolists to contribute tens of thousands of dollars—but their solicitude for that dollar which the men and women in the ranks of labor contribute is always very touching."



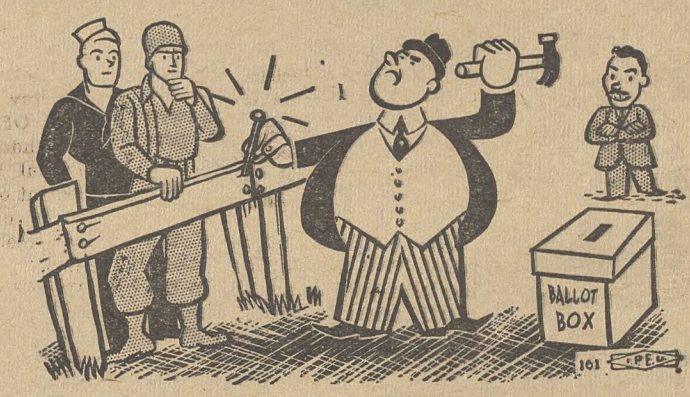
"The whole purpose of Republican oratory these days seems to be to switch labels. The object is to persuade the American people that the Democratic Party was responsible for the 1929 crash and depression, and the Republican Party was responsible for all social progress under the New Deal. Imitation may be the sincerest form of flattery—but I am afraid that in this case it is the most obvious common or garden variety of fraud."



"Liberal elements were not able to drive the old guard Republicans from their entrenched positions. Can the old guard pass itself off as the New Deal? I think not. We have all seen many marvelous stunts in the circus, but no performing elephant could turn a handspring without falling flat on his back."



"Perhaps the most ridiculous of these campaign falsifications is the one that this Administration failed to prepare for the war . . . I doubt whether even Goebbels would have tried that one. For even he would never have dared hope that the voters . . . had already forgotten that many of the Republican leaders . . . tried to thwart and block nearly every attempt which this Adminstration made to warn our people and to arm this Nation."



"They (financiers, industrialists and monopolists) are . . . perfectly willing to let you vote—unless you happen to be a soldier or a sailor overseas, or a merchant seaman carrying the munitions of war. In that case, they have made it pretty hard for you to vote—for there are some political candidates who think they may have a chance if only the total vote is small enough."

Murray to WLB

Don't Make Football Of Workers' Wages

NEW YORK, Sept. 30—The bread-and-butter interests of American workers must not be made a political football, CIO Pres. Philip Murray declared in a fighting speech before the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers convention.

Calling attention to the efforts of Dewey's supporters to postpone a decision on CIO union demands for wage increases until after the election, Murray demanded that the War Labor Board render an early decision on these cases on their merits and without regard to election politics.

Relating labor's long struggle against the Little Steel formula and for wage adjustments to meet increased living costs the CIO leader declared:

"Neither the War Labor Board nor any other agency of government should make a political football out of this national wage stabilization issue. It was primarily and still is a bread-and-butter issue.

"Is it to be said at this late date that by the use of some peculiar system of subtle reasoning the workers of the United States can't get a decision on these bread-and-butter issues because there is a national election on? God forbid that that should be the condition into which our country has gone.

"I know that many interests in this nation, particularly the big interests that are supporting Mr. Dewey, are endeavoring to make a political football out of this issue. They are pointing their finger at certain agencies of government, saying to them, 'We dare you to make a decision before the Presidential election is over.'"

Asserting that the CIO union cases should be decided upon the the economic and factual presensations made and not upon said:

"It is going to be extremely serious if these malefactors of great wealth are going to be permitted through their systems of procrastination and delay and intimidation to force the War Labor Board into a position where it might very well be recalcitrant in the performance of its own duties to the people of the United States."

Murray called attention to a recent OPA report that shows the steel industry "can bear all the financial hazards incident to the payment of our 17c-an-hour demand without need to increase prices in the steel industry one single penny."

He warned that when the war ends the weekly take-home earnings of American workers will be cut 30% through shorter hours without overtime.

Bread And Butter Of Fifty Million Workers At Stake!

By FRED d'AVILA

The bread and butter needs of more than 50 million American workers centered this week on the swanky U. S. Chamber of Commerce auditorium in the nation's capital. Gathered there to battle out the issues were representatives of CIO unions in steel, electrical and radio, textile, rubber, and aluminum industries, and the managements they bargain with.

Focal point at issue—involving directly nearly two million workers—was the outmoded Little Steel formula, which limits increases to 15 per cent over wage rates paid on Jan. 1, 1941.

Spearhead in the fight to crack the formula was the CIO United Steelworkers Union led by Pres. Philip Murray.

This week, again, he stepped personally into the battle, to lend his quiet, persuasive Scotch burr and his forceful arguments in behalf of more than half a milion steelworkers whose case is of prime concern to the members of the Natl. War Labor Board.

CASE DRAMATIC

The case was shot through with drama—millions of workers' pay checks involved, the tense conflict between steel giants that rode rough-shod for generations over workers and then were forced to bargain with their union, and over it all the political implications of a vital wage decision which may come just before the Presidential election.

A bombshell was tossed into the WLB hearing by President Murray when he introduced as evidence a report by the Office of Price Administration that had been kept suppressed since Aug. 24.

BARES OPA REPORT

Announcing with biting satire that "for some curious reason unknown to the union, this study . . . was not made available to the Board or the panel," Murray quoted the OPA as saying:

"There is at the present time no ground of for an overall increase in the price of steel," and "even in the event that the wage increase requested by the union were granted in full, the case for a price increase would not be persuasive.

"For even if the wage demand were granted in full, its effects upon average hourly earnings would be largely offset by the disappearance of overtime and the reversal of the labor upgrading process. These two factors ccount for 16 cents in average hourly earnings. As against this, the wage demand comes to 17 cents."

Murray had a perfect setting in the auditorium—a lofty room with teakwood floors, walls of French Crazanne marble and an elaborately decorated beamed ceiling—for demanding wage justice for millions of American workers who have bowed under the burden of mounting prices while their bosses have grown fat from war profits.

"SASSY, SMUG, SATISFIED"

Making a sweeping gesture toward nearly 100 management representatives gathered in last-ditch defense of their profits, Murray declared:

"They are fat and sassy, smug and satisfied. Why? They're getting a guaranteed annual wage for two years after the war. There is no fear of insecurity among them. They won't have to sell any apples on street corners—none of these boys here!"

Demanding action by the board by Oct. 15, Murray lashed out sharply at more than seven months delay in handling the case, with the steel union taking only three and a half days of this time to present its arugments.

WARNS OF DELAYS

"Procrastination in a case of this nature is extremely dangerous," Murray warned the board. "It tends to cause confusion, often misunderstanding and sometimes disruption."

Discussing by inference unsubstantiated reports that the board might consider a new wage policy which might not be put into effect until victory over Germany, Murray bluntly declared:

"In the event the board is giving serious consideration to the formulation of newer ideas with respect to national wage stabilization, the impact of which might seem to disregard the evdence produced in this case, that point of view will not be well taken by the members of the organization that I have the honor to represent!

"Who is there," Murray asked, "that can with any dgeree of certainty say when V-E day will come? Shall delay in the decision affecting the United Steelworkers therefore be occasioned by any of the unforseeable things that tie themselves into the war situation, particularly in Europe?"

Murray reviewed the documented evidence that proves the steelworkers need an increase and that the steel companies can well afford to pay it—with prices up 45.3 per cent since Jan. 1, 1941, and wages allowed to rise only 15 per cent, with management rolling in war profits and smugly safe with a postwar guarantee that protects these profits against possible future losses.

In a plea not only for justice but for common sense in connection with postwar industrial development, Murray declared:

"The maintenance of a high level of wages assures the consummation of the desire of the American people that there be an expanding economy with prosperity for all . . . A guarantee of income to American wage earners furnishes the surest prop for the continuance of a steadily expanding economy—guaranteed purchasing power . . .

"And then we are certain that for reconversion and postwar we will have improvement in our standard of life . . . We will have hope for the future instead of fear. We will have security instead of unrest."

Supporting arguments for the steelworkers' wage position and for other demands such as the annual wage, dismissal pay, sick leave, shift differentials, liberalization of vacation and holiday provisions, extended union security, group insurance and equal pay for equal work were made by Lee Pressman, general counsel of the union and of the CIO; USA Sec.-Treas. David J. McDonald; and Harold J. Ruttenberg, USA research director.

The union and the companies are scheduled to make their rebuttals before the WLB Oct. 4 and 5. The WLB, according to Chairman Davis, is scheduled to start consideration of the case by Oct. 9.

Its disposition will affect not only the wage increases of nearly a million workers in basic steel plants and subsidiaries but practically every wage earner over the nation, for it will set the pattern for pay adjustments that have been long overdue in a period when wages have been kept down while the cost of living has soared.

Murray on Radio With Steel Case

Washington, Sept. 30—Pres. Philip Murray will deliver a nationwide radio broadcast on Tuesday, Oct. 3, on CIO's wage case for upward revision of the Little Steel formula.

Murray will speak at 10:30 P. M., E. W. T. over the network of the Columbia Broadcasting System. Check with your nearest CBS station about its carrying this broadcast, and be sure to tune in.

Discuss Steel Case with FDR

Washington, Sept. 30 — Labor's case for revision of the Little Steel formula was presented to Pres. Roosevelt yesterday by the CIO-AFL labor victory committee.

CIO Pres. Murray reported the committee had gone into detail on the United Steelworkers and other CIO union wage cases, attacking the Little Steel formula as "outmoded and inadequate." The question of a guaranteed annual wage was also discussed.

The President asked a lot of questions but made no commitment, the labor men said, and it was understood the War Labor Board must make its decision before he takes any action.

CIO representatives present, besides Murray, were R. J. Thomas and Julius Emspak. The AFL was represented by Wm. Green, Geo. Meany and Daniel Tobin.

On the Table, Please!

Labor's Case Rests On Facts

The chief arguments against CIO's demand for revision of the Little Steel formula have been that increases in living costs are not sufficient to justify wage increases; and that wage adjustments would result in further price increases and thus more inflation.

Both these arguments have been knocked into a cocked hat, not only by the presentations of the United Steelworkers and other CIO unions, but also by the impartial findings of government experts.

A CIO cost-of-living study showed that wartime living costs rose 45.3% from January, 1941, to March, 1944, while the Little Steel formula allows for only a 15% increase.

Guided by the findings of an impartial committee of experts appointed by the Chairman of the War Labor Board, the public members of the WLB steel panel found there has been a minimum rise of from 28.2% to 29.7% in retail prices from January, 1941, to July, 1944, and a further but unestimated increase in total living costs.

It is therefore clearly established, even without accepting CIO estimates, that living costs have risen at least twice as much as the Little Steel formula allows for.

As to possible inflationary effects, the research department of the OPA has made a thorough study of the effects of the proposed steel wage increases and found they need not cause any price increases.

The OPA report finds the steelworkers' output per man-hour has increased more than average hourly earnings, and that despite past wage increases labor costs are 4% below 1939 levels and 8½% below the average level for 1935-39.

It concludes that "even if the wage demand were granted in full, its effect upon average hourly earnings would be largely offset by the disappearance of overtime and the reversal of the labor upgrading process. These two factors account for 16c in average hourly earnings. As against this the wage demand comes to 17c."

It is clear that if the CIO union cases are decided on their merits, the Little Steel formula will be revised in no time. The only danger is further stalling, election politics or sidetracking a decision by talk of some new post-war wage policy. That is why the CIO is so insistent on an early decision of its cases on the facts, without regard to politics.

Let's Get Together Soon

The future of the world is being shaped today not only on the battlefields but also in many international conferences between representatives of the United Nations.

Labor rightly demands due representation at the peace table. But many of the most important decisions will not wait for the peace table. They are being made now—and labor is conspicuous by its absence from all these preliminary conferences.

Part of the blame for this rests with labor itself. The leaders, the armed forces and many special interests in the respective United Nations have gotten together to work out their problems and to agree on a common plan of action. But the labor movements of these countries have yet to hold their first conference with all invited.

The CIO has been working for such a conference ever since the war began. The world labor conference called by the British Trades Union Congress had its hearty endorsement. But this was unavoidably postponed on account of military conditions.

CIO Pres. Philip Murray has now taken the initiative again by urging the British TUC to issue a new call as soon as possible, so that the international labor conference may be held not later than this December.

It is high time labor in all the United Nations and other freedom-loving countries got together to make its voice felt in decisions affecting all working people throughout the world. Let's hope there will be no further delays.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

THE political football season is in full swing. But such is the shortage of pigskin that nothing is safe from the rampaging politicoes.

Particularly disquieting are the present huddles over CIO's case against the Little Steel formula; and the whooping and hollering from Dewey's Dead-End Kids and their owners.

The bread-and-butter interests of millions of Americans are not a plaything. But they are now being booted around shamefully.

★★★

For seven long months, the United Steelworkers and other CIO unions have fought their case before the War Labor Board for wage increases to match increased living costs.

They have proved over and over again that wages are shockingly out of line with high prices; that wage adjustments can be made without further price increases or other inflationary effects; and that such adjustments are necessary for real economic stabilization.

These contentions have also been borne out by impartial government studies and by the reports of panels of the WLB itself.

Additional weight has been lent to labor's arguments by threatened wage losses through cutbacks and reduced working hours, and by the obvious need for increased labor purchasing power as a basis for full post-war production and employment.

So it seemed inevitable that the WLB must finally decide these union cases on their merits and recommend to the President a defrosting of the present Little Steel wage freeze.

★★★

But lately there have been disturbing indications that other considerations besides the merits of these cases were entering the picture.

The big employers and their representatives on the WLB have, of course, been trying to stall off any wage increase as long as possible.

Along with their Presidential candidate, Dewey, they are making a political football of this matter of simple economic justice.

To prevent any decision before the elections, they are threatening the WLB and the administration with accusations of "playing politics" if it decides the union cases now.

On the other hand, if this bluff succeeds and a decision is postponed, the Deweyites hope the resulting indignation of the workers will lead to a loss of votes for Roosevelt.

★★★

This slick and unscrupulous political game is foredoomed to failure, if the public members of the WLB refuse to be pushed around, reject political considerations as irrelevant, and decide the CIO union cases on the evidence, as is their duty, without any further stalling.

But unfortunately there is some evidence that the WLB is not entirely averse to further stalling, nor even to sidetracking altogether a decision on these long-pending union cases.

At a press conference on Sept. 15, Chairman Wm. H. Davis declared he would like a decision from the full Board within the week after October 9, "but my past experience with this 12-man Board leads me to believe that it will take longer than that."

He also hinted the WLB might come out with a new wage policy for the period following the defeat of Germany, which would in effect "eclipse the problem of the Little Steel formula," as one of his questioners put it.

★★★

Alarmed by such indications that the Board might try to sidetrack a decision on labor's present wage demands in favor of some new wage policy for after VE-Day, the labor members of the Board took action.

They introduced a resolution asking that the union cases for upward revision of the Little Steel formula be decided on their merits by October 15, and that the consideration of any policy to follow the defeat of Germany should not in any way affect this decision.

This resolution was voted down by a combination of the industry and public members of the Board.

There is therefore a grave danger that the stalling tactics and political finagling of the Deweyite industrialists may meet with success, by fitting in with the ideas of public Board members who think of dodging a decision on the long-pending wage cases through some "new wage policy."

Hence the vigor of CIO President Murray's demands that neither the Deweyites nor the WLB be allowed to make a political football of the livelihood of American workers, and that the Board have the courage to make its long-delayed decision on the union cases on their merits, without further stalling and without regard to political considerations.

POLITICAL ACTION

For Roosevelt and a Progressive Congress

Congress and Us

If Rankins Rankle, It's Up to You To Change Them!

Three kinds of Congressmen are coming back home from Washington this week to fix up their political fences for the November elections.

The three kinds exist regardless of party labels. Type 1 is the out-and-out reactionary, the kind that apparently doesn't give a damn what constructive legislation he helps wreck or what monkey wrenches he heaves into the war machinery.

Type 2 is the progressive, win-the-war Congressman that supports FDR and fights against labor-baiting, war sabotage measures put forward by Type 1. He's very much in the minority.

Type 3 is the "middle-of-the-road" Congressman, the kind that has trouble making up his mind how to act and even more trouble keeping it made up until the roll is called and the voting is over.

These three types are coming home for their election campaigns. All of them hope to be re-elected—except those that have been retired in the primaries.

QUESTION ON RECORDS

This is our opportunity to question them on the record, and to act according to their answers. Type 1 is on the whole fairly hopeless. You can't do much with a Clare Hoffman (R. Mich.) or a Harold Knutson (R. Minn.) except try to defeat them.

Type 2 takes care of itself, as far as the record is concerned. The job here is to see that as many of this kind as possible is returned for another two years of service.

Type 3 is a little more difficult to handle. To begin with, its members frequently hold the balance of power as between the extreme reactionaries and the small minority of progressives.

They need constant encouragement, education and explanation of the issues involved in a particular bill up for consideration. Their hands have to be held almost every minute during a hot debate on say price control or the tax bill. They're hard to corral in the first place and frequently they wander off the reservation if left untended.

But in the last two years Type 3 has pretty much held the balance of power. With Congressional absenteeism what it is, 100 Congressional votes that ordinarily sit on the fence can swing the count to the progressive side.

If, for example, we had had 100 wavering Congressmen firmly in line for a sound, rational reconversion bill, we would not have had the unholy mess bequeathed to us and to the next Congress by the vote on the George-Doughton bill of a few weeks ago.

The way to approach all Congressmen, and particularly Type 3, is strictly on the record. The issues have been clear over this past two years. FDR's legislative program for winning the war and establishing a people's peace has been a simple and straightforward one. No amount of fancy dodging or alibing should be allowed to cover up for a bad record on price control, taxes, soldiers' vote, reconversion.
